The Scarlet Sin.

Embezzlement.

The Devil's Printing Press.

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the fact that how like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shown of their mask, robbed of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the purulent literature of the day and painted in true colors. The life of the profligate is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a thing of death, how and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents.

Paper bound, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATION AT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for your self or for your friend. Send for it at once to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

WHAT IS NATIONAL REFORM?

A RIGHT ANSWER TO THIS LEADING QUESTION INVOLVES THE SOLUTION OF

SOCIAL, MORAL AND POLITICAL PROBLEMS.

Can the Question be Answered?

SEND $2 FOR ONE YEAR'S SUBSCRIPTION TO THE CHRISTIAN NATION.

252 BROADWAY,

NEW YORK,

AND

READ AND LEARN FOR YOURSELF.

BESIDES ITS INTELLIGENT AND POPULAR DISCUSSIONS OF THESE QUESTIONS OF INTEREST TO EVERY MAN AND WOMAN, THE CHRISTIAN NATION IS A Home Paper in the Fullest Sense.

Light and Life S. S. Supplies.

We are prepared to furnish anything in the line of Sunday-school supplies, including a choice line of reward card and tickets, which we sell at low rates. Teachers' registers, Library Registers, Bibles, Wall Motives, and Charts.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS.

It is our aim to produce papers that will not only interest the children by their attractive appearance and re-education, but by sound, evangelical and wholesome teaching to lead them to Christ. All sensational matter and worldly concerned ones are carefully avoided. Please give them a trial.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE LILY (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE SUNSHINE (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE WORDS (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

Single copy of each of the four monthlies in one address per year 75 cents. No single subscription taken for less than one year. SPECIALTY PRICE.

LIGHT AND LIFE INFANT CLASS (WEEKLY) CONTAINS Lesson Story for the next Sunday.

4 cents per quarter; 16 cents per year.

LESSON HELPS.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON CLARIFIERS CONTAINS: 1. Common version arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets; 2. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise; 3. Home Readings; 4. Introductory, including Review Questions, Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks; 5. Lesson Discussion, examining the line, places, persons and circumstances of the lesson, with the proper pronunciation of the names and places; 6. Notes and Explanations; 7. Questions; 8. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert; 9. Next Sunday's Lesson, including references to memory verses and Golden Text; 10. Review pages of instructions and suggestions, for teachers. Price per quarter 3 cents; per year, 12 cents.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF CONTAINS same as quarterly except the instructions and suggestions to teachers. PRICE 5 CENTS. Be sure and see this leaf before you order for the next quarter. Price, 47.50 per 100 copies, per year. CATALOGUE NEXT PAGE.

T. B. ANDERSON, PUBLISHER; 104 & 106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

HOME HINTS.

HOW NOT TO TRAIN A CHILD.

'What is auntie telling baby?'
'Auntie tellin' baby secrets. Baby mustn't tell.'

'Oh! baby will tell mamma!'
'No, baby mustn't tell. Auntie says baby mustn't tell.'

'What! baby won't tell mamma? Mamma give baby some sugar (coaxingly.)
But baby shakes her head and refuses the dearly loved bribe, though evidently very much disturbed in her mind between the rival attractions of sugar and loyalty to auntie.

'What you tell mamma? Poor mamma will cry.'

Then the more than foolish mother puts her handkerchief to her face, and with forced sobs and pretended tears, works on her baby's feelings. The child hesitates, the little lip quivers, the little bosom heaves; then what the bribe could not do the pretended grief accomplishes. 'Don't k'y mamma; I tell you.'

And, says Babyhood, the little one in a moment more has had stamped on her impressionable brain a lesson of bribery from her mother, to be false to her given word. Auntie laughs lightly and shakes her finger, saying, 'O baby! baby! auntie won't trust you very soon again.' And the child looks from auntie to mamma, from mamma to auntie, with a vague feeling of discomfort and wonder. She can but feel that she has betrayed her trust, and when she looks in mamma's face, she feels (though, of course, she does not form it in her mind,) that she, too, has been betrayed. She knows that mamma has shed no tears, and that all her sobs have been pretended. But, then, her mother and aunt laugh, so it must be funny, and she performs laughs too.

A HOME OF YOUR OWN.

Do not be caught in the delusion of many thousands in postponing a home until you can have an expensive one. That idea is the devil's trap that catches men and women innumerable, who will never have any home at all. Capitalists of America build plain homes for the people. Let this tenant house system, in which hundreds of thousands of people in our cities are wallowing in the mire, be broken by small homes, where people can have their own firesides and their own altar. In this great continent there is room enough for every man and woman to have a home. Morals and civilization and religion demand it. We want done all over this land what George Peabody and Lady Purdett Coutts did in England, and some of the large manufacturers of this country have done for the villages and cities, in building small houses at cheap rents, so that the middle classes can have separate homes. They are the only class not provided for. The rich have their places, and the poor have their poor-houses, and criminals have their jails, but what about the honest middle classes, who are able and willing to work, and yet have small incomes? Let the capitalists, inspired of God and pure patriotism, rise and build whole streets and small residences. The laborer may have at the close of the day to walk or ride further than is desirable to reach it, and when he gets to his destination in the eventide he will find something worthy of being called by that glorious and impassioned and heaven descended word "home."

Young married man, as soon as you can, buy such a place, even if you have to put on it a mortgage reaching from the base to the capstone. The much abused mortgage, which is ruin to a reckless man, to one prudent and provident, is the beginning of a competence and a fortune, for the reason that he will not be satisfied until he has paid it off, and all the household are put on stringent economies until then. Deny yourself all superfluities and all luxuries until you can say, "Everything in this house is mine, thank God! every timber, every brick, every foot of plumbing, every door-sill." Do not have your children born in a boarding house, and do not yourself be buried from one. Have a place where your children can shout, and sing, and romp, without being overhauled for the racket. —Talmage.

Inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating them, they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR ILLUSTRATED.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN WORK"

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

Price 25 Cents.

For Sale by NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO.

Suggestive Outline

BIBLE STUDIES

AND

BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,

Author (with S. R. Riggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are

George F. Pentecost, A. J. Gordon,
Horatius Bonar, William Lincoln,
Henry Morehouse, J. H. Vincent,
George C. Needham, Chas. M. Whittlesey,
D. L. Moody, R. C. Morse,
D. W. Whittle, J. W. Marshall,
J. H. Brookes, Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 31 pages with full index of titles and subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.

Address, W. L. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Formulated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood,
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association,

221 West Madison St., Chicago.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,

ELDER DAVID BEKNARD,

CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and

PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

MORGAN MONUMENT.

20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wives, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for by fact, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it discloses a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, everyday walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denials will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by disipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibited and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have important bearing upon current events.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and what the good men and the good men in the land can do to protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,"
AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A
"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of the Order of the United Sons of the G. W. M. T. M. (the York rite), Adaptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templars, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 200 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at head-quarters for Anti-Sec. Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chic. Geo.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the home life that are vouchsafed to it. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question, as connected with the secret unions of workmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouchsafed to us as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless, obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "balancing between two opinions." In other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Woman's Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders, Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are especially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Emancipation and Rebekah (higher) degrees, profusely illustrated, and punctuated to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, and a full and complete explanation of the order, and an analysis of each degree by J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Blue Book" of the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

HOUSE AND FARM NOTES.

Men sound in soul and limb can be bred and reared only in the exercise of plow and spade, in the free air and sunshine, with country enjoyments and amusements; never amid foul drains and smoke stacks, and the eternal clank of machinery.—Froude.

Orchards, if managed properly, will bear fruit every year. In order to have this the orchardist must manure and cultivate them constantly. This method may seem to require too much work, but is the only successful course to pursue in New England.

The book for every farmer's boy to read is the open book of nature. There was none ever written that contains one-half of the information, none other half so fascinating, none so perfect and pure. Nature teaches us to dwell as much as possible upon the beautiful and good, and to ignore at all times the evil and the false.—American Garden.

The active out door labor of the farm, with its ever changing and almost endless variety, tends to the symmetrical development of the physical man in all its organs; and the ever shifting mental work which the care and direction of his business demand of him, keeps the machinery awake and active; and proper activity of body and mind is an important condition in maintaining good health.—Indiana Farmer.

It is no wonder to us that men of great minds have loved the country, have enjoyed farm work, and this, too, not as a sentiment, but as a reality. Washington was a type of the true farmer, and called agriculture the most useful, most noble, and most healthful employment of man. Jefferson gave much time and study in evolving the philosophical principles employed in constructing the plow, and when built he took great pleasure in handling it, and in managing his farm at Monticello. Webster declared he felt more pleasure in holding his own plow, drawn by his own splendid oxen (about which he wrote such grand letters to his head farmer, John Taylor) on the plains of Marshall, than all the honors of political and public life.—Home Farm.

A NEGLECTED CROP.

It would be better for us if we considered the manure made on the farm as a crop; and it is strange that we do not do so, for it is a product of the farm and has a money value as much as corn or hay or cotton. When we once consider manure as a crop, we will take just as much pride in making a big crop of manure as of corn; and we will no more allow part of the manure crop to go to waste, than we would part of the wheat or hay crop. Generally but little can be charged against the production of the manure crop; all the cost is often the expense of harvesting (gathering and storing), this crop. On the most fertile farms this crop is worth to the farmer several times the cost of harvesting it. And it is the greatest wonder of our farming that we do not start out in the fall with a determination to make a better manure crop than our neighbor, as we start out in the spring with a determination to make a better oat, potato or tobacco crop. The cleanly man will harvest a large manure crop, because he will gather up all refuse and put it in the compost heap. He will have clean stables, clean barns, clean yards—a clean farm; and cleanliness is the preserver of health. Thus we see that while the wheat or potato crop supplies strength and energy, the manure crop, closely gathered and well kept, prevents the agents of disease from stealing away that strength. Pride in the manure crop goes both before wealth and health.—American Agriculturist for November.

OIL YOUR BOOTS AND SHOES.

The efficacy of oiling depends much upon the way in which it is done. In the evening brush the shoe clean, and then wash it with lukewarm water, rather to moisten than to clean it. Set it where it will dry slowly. It should not be perfectly dry the next morning, when the oil is applied, but feel damp, not wet, however. The best mixture for oiling shoes is made of one-half of neat's foot oil—be sure you get the genuine article—one-third beef tallow, and one-sixth castor oil. Mix thoroughly over a gentle heat. Depend upon the rubbing rather than the heat to get the oil in—to express it differently, two parts of rubbing to one of heat. If the shoes are pugged, as farmers' shoes usually are and always should be, get the oil in well between the uppers and the sole; it will prevent the sole pulling loose, or the leather breaking away from the pegs. Shoes worn at farm work should be oiled at least once a week. It requires only a few minutes to do the work, and it is decidedly profitable labor.—American Agriculturist for November.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and All Croupal Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing halim or saline on the inflamed inner coating of the nostrils, the air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalers, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

How E. L. HAZEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has given the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Catarrh and Bronchitis, accompanied with disordered Asthma. I recommend it to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

How E. L. HAZEN, 38 West 4th St., New York. Mr. H. C. TULL, 50 Bryan Bldg., Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe Catarrh of the Throat, and a Croupal Consumption. I used the PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak, and now, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO., Central Hotel Hall, Room 12, Dr. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago. MAIN OFFICE: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

The Christian's Secret OF A Happy Life. 28th THOUSAND.

Baptist Commendation.

"We are delighted with this book. It reaches to the very core of Christian experience, and is eminently experimental in its teachings. It meets the doubts and difficulties of conscientious souls after the bread and water of life, but whose effort results only in a vain and weary struggle. It does not without claiming to be a theologian, sends out the results of a happy and rich experience to help others into the Christian life."—Baptist Weekly.

Presbyterian Endorsement.

"The book is so truly and reverently devout in its spirit that it disarms criticism. It contains no dogma, no narrow sectarian prejudice. No effort is made to change the theological views of any one. The author's rich experience will tell in a plain and delightful manner."—Christian Advocate.

United Brethren's Approval.

"We have seldom met with a more interesting volume, abounding throughout with apt illustrations; we have failed to find a dry line from title-page to title."—Religious Telescope.

Congregational Comment.

"It contains much clear, pungent reasoning and interesting incident. It is a practical and experimental lesson taught out of God's word, and is worthy of universal circulation."—Church Union.

This enlarged edition is a beautiful large 12mo volume of 240 pages.

Price, in cloth, richly stamped, 75 cts.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE HISTORY OF ANTI-SLAVERY IN THE State and Nation.

By REV. AUSTIN WILLEY.

514 pp., 12 mo. With NINETEEN PORTRAITS.

Price, Postpaid, $2.00.

Mr. Willey gives the best history of the times just before the present generation, which is precisely the history least apt to be known. He gives us the surface of the sea, under the lidstone which swept off three million pairs of fetters from our national decks. His book shows more accurate insight into the causes which produced the rebellion, and gives more clearly the working of those causes than any other writer. He shows more clearly the moral force of the ballot and necessity of a new party to carry a fundamental reform than any one who has treated of it. We advise every young man and every reader of the Cynosure to read and read that history.—Pres. J. Blanchard.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Pres. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monumental quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition is fully attested by J. O. Doehring, Past Master of No. 191, Holland, Mich. and 6th rd. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of the lodge page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, dress guards, grips, etc. This revelation is so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $3.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, class and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles J. Finney, of Oberlin College. President of the "British Mason," "The True Boy" when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 38 cents; per dozen, $3.80.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. B. Borton. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work)" by a Member of the Craft. The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50; per dozen, $15.00. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. By Rev. H. L. Kellogg. Contains the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Confessed. By Rev. J. W. Burt. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister of the Gospel will find in it a powerful weapon of argument. 307 pp., postpaid, 40 cts.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhardt, Indiana, for refusing to support a revered Freemason, the clergy able to defend a president by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. Composed of three parts: "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan," "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan," "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan." 304 pages.

In the Colls; or, the Coming Conflict. By A. F. Farnie. A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammelled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing arguments on the above subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodge-ry. An Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-Freemasonry works extant, and from its exposure of Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 32 cents; per dozen, $3.20.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By F. R. Royne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago. Gives the correct "Standard" work of Blue Lodge Masonry, the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, and proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. W. Burt. A historical sketch of the institution, the anti-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

National Christian Association, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Signa of Adherence to Secret Societies," commuted to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lewis, comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wives' Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the degrees of the Knights of Templarism, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight-Templar and Knight of Malta. The book of 241 pages, in cloth, $1.00; $3.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50 cts; $4.00 per dozen.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geestlin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Temple of the Good Templars, comprising the degrees of Knight, Knight-Templar, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight-Templar and Knight of Malta. The book of 241 pages, in cloth, $1.00; $3.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50 cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated," "Old Work," "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Pastor Elder of Dakota District, Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a North-Western Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their exact character, and their influence on the progress of the student. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic. With the signs, signals, passwords and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on an Innocent? By Rev. A. L. Burt. A full and complete exposition of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Bael Worship identical. Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp. $1.00.

Freemasonry Self-Confessed. By Rev. J. W. Burt. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work, and every man and woman who will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This masterpiece contains complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp. $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES of FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees a Mason must complete a task of half-a-million horrible oaths. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims. By Rev. David McMill. Pres. J. Blanchard and Elder J. W. Burt. 15c. Per doz. $1.50.

National Christian Association, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

ELECTION RETURNS.

The returns of the vote on the constitutional amendment are now complete in the Secretary of State's office, with the exception of Cook County. The total vote of the counties now in is 477,231. The vote for the amendment of these counties is 217,057. As the amendment must have a majority of all the votes cast to carry, the amendment now lacks 21,559 votes of carrying, and unless 69,000 of the 95,000 cast on Cook County are given for the amendment it has been lost.

The official vote of the Ohio State election received at the office of the Secretary of State gives Robinson, Rep., 340,895; McBride, Dem., 329,314; Smith, Pro., 28,567; Bonnal, Greenback, 1,902.

The prohibition vote in the State elections shows a generous gain in nearly every quarter. The estimated vote in New York is 35,700; in Ohio 32,000; Indiana, 9,000 (3,014 in 1884); Illinois, nearly 20,000; Massachusetts, 8,160; Connecticut, 4,810; Nebraska, 9,000; Kansas, 7,500; Minnesota, 12,000. In several States members of the legislatures have been elected.

WASHINGTON.

Secretary Manning has issued an order that hereafter no appointments of women to positions as messengers, assistant messengers, or laborers in the treasury will be allowed. The order is intended to prevent women from being appointed to positions in those grades and detailed to other duties.

General Sheridan, in his annual report to the secretary of war, remarks that unless the state of the Oklahoma lands be fixed by legislation their advantages will prove a continued temptation to adventurers.

COUNTRY.

A boiler explosion Thursday afternoon in Henry H. Sheep & Co.'s cigar-box factory at Philadelphia blew out the rear wall and fired the building, causing a panic among the male and female employees, who were only rescued after great difficulty. One young woman is missing, and ten other persons were badly burned or maimed. The financial loss is heavy.

Upon the arrival of the mail train on the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Road at DuBois, Pa., Thursday, the car inspector found three dynamite bombs and caps attached to the springs of the rear coach, which contained thirty-four persons. It is believed that the explosives were placed under the car at Punxsatawney, and how the train ran the twenty miles between that place and DuBois without an explosion occurring excites the greatest wonder.

The appraisement of the quarantined cattle in Chicago distilleries has been ordered, and the slaughter of the animals will begin in a few days.

Drs. Murphy and Lee, of this city, last week performed a trephining operation on policeman Whitney, boring a hole through his breast bone and extracting a particle of the Haymarket shell, which was rapidly making its way toward the officer's heart. The operation was a success.

Acres of coal in the Standard Mines at Mount Pleasant, Pa., are now on fire. The flames are spreading in the direction of cells which are filled with fire-damp, and a terribly destructive explosion is feared.

Professor Foster, the Iowa meteorologist, predicts fierce storms between Dec. 4 and 17 next, during which railroads will be blocked with snow, high winds will destroy property, and electrical disturbances will affect telegraph and telephone lines.

The coroner's jury, at Rio, Wis., returned a verdict Tuesday evening, finding that the negligence of C. H. Wells, the brakeman, caused the recent disaster on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Road. Wells was arrested and bound over to appear before the Circuit Court.

Monday, at Tchula, Miss., Marshal Vantroy McBee, without provocation, shot four negroes, one of whom has since died. The Marshal and his brother, both heavily armed, have taken to the canebrakes, and declare that they will not be taken alive.

Snow fell on Friday night, throughout New York and New England, to the depth of from eight to twenty inches.

At Galesburg, Illinois, on Friday evening, Henry Arms, Jr., of Knoxville, was almost instantly killed by the explosion of a cannon during a political jubilee. The occasion was the election of Gen. Post, a G. A. R. leader, to Congress.

A boiler explosion in a mill at Sheffield, Pennsylvania, killed Milton Mapes and his son, and fatally injured three other persons.

Judge Gary has signed a bill of exceptions in the case of the Chicago anarchists. Application for a supersedeas will this week be made to the Supreme Court of Illinois.

FOREIGN.

The session of the Bulgarian Sobranje to elect a successor to Prince Alexander was held Nov. 10. M. Radoslavoff, the Prime Minister, proposed the name of Prince Waldemar. The whole assembly rose in a body and elected Waldemar by acclamation. The public in the galleries did not participate in the enthusiasm manifested by the Deputies, and exhibited no approval of the election. The King of Denmark, on behalf of his son, Prince Waldemar, has sent a telegram to Tirnova expressing thanks for the honor conferred upon his son, but declining on any condition to allow him to accept the throne.

A dispatch from Tirnova says that upon receiving the King of Denmark's telegram, the regents resigned. The Sobranje voted confidence in the regents, but they declined to withdraw their resignations. The Sobranje has adjourned, all the members going to Sofia. A deputation will visit the European courts to pray the powers to nominate a candidate for the throne.

The Trade Court at Aachen has sentenced fifty-three composers to pay damages to their employers for leaving work and joining in a strike without giving notice. The police of Bavaria have expelled State Architect Ressler from the country for assisting in the socialistic agitation.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

For teachers ordering goods, on account of the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	73
No. 3.....	67	@ 68
Winter No. 2.....	74
Corn—No. 2.....	35
Oats—No. 2.....	29
Rye—No. 2.....	52
Barley.....	10	@ 10
Flour.....	2 00	@ 5 00
Hay—Timothy.....	7 75	@ 10 00
Mess pork per bbl.....	10	@ 25
Butter, medium to best.....	10	@ 25
Cheese.....	06	@ 11 1/4
Beans.....	75	@ 1 50
Eggs.....	19
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 65	@ 1 75
Flax.....	96
Broom corn.....	30	@ 46
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	02	@ 11
Lumber—Common.....	11 00	@ 13 00
Wool.....	11	@ 33
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 45	@ 5 30
Common to good.....	1 50	@ 4 30
Hogs.....	1 50	@ 3 25
Sheep.....	2 40	@ 4 50

NEW YORK.

Flour.....	8 20	@ 5 50
Wheat—Winter.....	75	@ 35
Spring.....	84 1/2
Corn.....	44	@ 45 1/2
Oats.....	34	@ 40
Mess Pork.....	9 75	@ 10 37
Eggs.....	20
Butter.....	12	@ 28
Wool.....	13	@ 37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 50	@ 4 60
Hogs.....	3 80	@ 8 95
Sheep.....	1 50	@ 8 10

THE PHYSICIAN'S FAVORITE!

A predigested, non-irritating, easily assimilated food indicated in all weak and inflamed conditions of the digestive organs, either in infants or adults.

It has been the positive means of saving many lives, having been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

The Most Nourishing, Most Palatable, Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

150 MEALS for an Infant for $1.00. EASILY PREPARED. At Druggists, 25c., 50c., $1.00.

A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," sent free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

EMPLOYMENT GOOD SALARY AND ALL EXPENSES PAID. At home or to travel, steady work, preferred, also salary wanted. SLOAN & CO., Manufacturers and Wholesale Dealers, 241 George St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFER. Altona, Iowa.

EUTOCIA A Book for every woman.

Introductory, preface by EUGENE GUERNEY, M. D., also preface by Dr. GEO. E. SHIPMAN, and chapters on the care and management of infants by the same experienced author. Mothers, Wives and Daughters. Not a compilation of other works and clippings, but the careful, practical study of Mrs. Dr. E. G. Cook, for over a quarter of a century, is ENDORSED by the Ministers, Physicians, Daily, Weekly, Religious and Medical Press. COMPLETE LADIES GUIDE. It treats fully on easy child-bearing, and health of children. In short a complete manual for the household. Mailed free on receipt of price where we have no Agents. Alphabetical table of contents. AGENTS find a ready sale for English, Silk, Cloth, $2.00. Morocco $2.75. Address for terms ARCADE PUB. CO., 142 La Salle St., Chicago.

LADIES TO INTRODUCE our Ladies' Journal in the best homes. We make you the following Liberal Offer: We will send the paper, postpaid, from Sept. 1 to Jan. 1, 1887, on receipt of ONLY 10 CENTS.

AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING Is decidedly a ladies' journal. Published monthly, handsomely illustrated, filled with original Stories, Poems, with departments on Home Cooking, Art, Recipes, Bric-a-brac, Artistic Needle Work, Window Gardening, Flowers, Mothers' Corner, Children's Nook, Household Pets and all Home Subjects. By many of our best writers. Subscription price, 50 cents per year. Samples free.

THE P. B. Combined Tracing Wheel and Scissors. An indispensable article for every woman, made of the best English steel, hand-forged, oil-tempered. Every pair warranted. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. Or we will send the scissors to any one that will send two subscribers to AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING and $1.00 to American Housekeeping Co., 142 LaSalle street, Chicago.

Price, 75c. dispensable article for every woman, made of the best English steel, hand-forged, oil-tempered. Every pair warranted. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. Or we will send the scissors to any one that will send two subscribers to AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING and $1.00 to American Housekeeping Co., 142 LaSalle street, Chicago.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years. 100 styles, $22 to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 45 pp., 410, free.

PIANOS.

The Improved Method of Stringing, Introduced and perfected by MASON & HAMLIN, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Piano-forte construction. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO.

154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Bldg.), N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED. Ladies or Gentlemen in the United States to introduce our Chinese Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, free, agents can earn from $10 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 238 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED in every city and town for A Ladies' Favorite Tracing Wheel. Will sell in every household. Two dozen mailed on receipt of $1. Sample free. ROVELTY WHEEL CO., 24 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Clubs, Libraries, Offices, etc. Neatest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

HOMES between Atlantic Ocean and Chesapeake Bay, Mild Climate. Productions, fruit, vegetables, grain, grasses, fish and fowls. Send for circular. FLOWNE, JACOBUS AND CO., Accomack C. H., Va.

CATARRH TREATMENT FREE

Send us a card and we will cure you, dear friend, or we will mail enough to convince you. R. S. LATIMER & CO., Newark, N. J.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN GOVES

Made from Fawn Skin Kid, a very durable and hand some material, unknown East. Prices from $1 to $1.50 for Common Length; $2.50 for Button Cuff. Driving Gauntlets made to order for Ladies or Gents. Every stitch silk. Postage paid. Also Indian Tan and new Glove Moccasins, Button and Legless (fringed and plain), Leggins, Money Belts, etc. Buckskin for sale. Samples of Leather with stitching free. Also Catalogue of hundreds of styles of gloves and Leather Novelties, and directions for measurement. Send for circular. Reference, Union Bank, Denver. A. AVERY, Denver, Colorado.

FLORIDA. ACADEMY AND COLLEGE, AT DELAND, FLORIDA.

A first-class academy for both sexes. Five Courses College Preparatory. Higher English, Normal, Business, Industrial Training, First-Class Art and Music Departments. Fine new Dormitory Building, enabling us to receive board and tuition at reasonable rates. The purpose of this institution is to give, in the delightful climate of Florida, as thorough and liberal an education as can be secured in the best New England schools. DELAND COLLEGE will also receive students of both sexes, prepared to enter the Freshman Class. Send for catalogue to H. A. DeLand, Fairport, N. Y.

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS & COPYRIGHTS

Obtained, and all other business in the U. S. Patent Office attended to for MODERATE FEES. Send MODEL OR DRAWING. We advise as to patentability free of charge; and we make NO CHARGE UNLESS WE OBTAIN A PATENT. We refer here to the Postmaster, the Sup't. of Money Order Div., and to officials of the U. S. Patent Office. For circular, advice, terms and references to actual clients in your own State or county, write to

C. A. SNOW & CO., Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

$6 Library, 50 Cents

a month installments. The Literary Revolution makes a bold forward movement. Immense list to choose from—nearly 2000 AUTHORS, of all ages, nations, (and languages translated into English). At proportionate rates you can have LARGER LIBRARIES, $12, $18, $24, or more. Complete Descriptive CATALOGUE and full particulars of the great PROVIDENT BOOK CLUB on request, free.

JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl St., New York. The Alden Book Co.; Clark and Adams Sts., Chicago; 420 Yonge St., Toronto.

OUR LATEST BOOK. HARVEST FOR THE HOLIDAYS. NOW IN PRESS.

WITH PICTURES. Convener's Outfit now ready. New, original, and taking. Heavy, super-calendered paper, superb binding, new and in structural illustrations. Prices low, to meet the times. Discount large, to meet the agents. Sample page and full particulars sent free on application. Our territorial record books are now open for the assignment of exclusive territory to both general and local agents. Complete canvassers' outfit, for sale. General agents wanted in Colorado, D. C., Iowa, Kansas, Iowa, Pennsylvania, New York, and Southern States. For discount rates and full particulars, address

The J. E. WHITE PUBLISHING CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life. Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XIX., No. 10.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1886.

WHOLE No. 865.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.
SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR.....$2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.....$1.50.

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments..... 1	From the General Agent;
The Christian Congress..... 3	Southern Welcome again
False Christs..... 8	Extended; Preparations
Per-Millennialism..... 8	for the Ohio Meeting;
Coercion of Conscience..... 8	Great Encouragement
The N. C. A. Convention	from Iowa; Notes of in the South..... 8	Wisconsin Work..... 4, 5
CONTRIBUTIONS:	CORRESPONDENCE:
Is it a False Religion?..... 1	Misrepresentations in the
Mosheh..... 2	"Beacon;" Bro. Countee
SELECTED:	Beholding the Salvation
Country, Home and Lib-	of God; Plith and Point. 5, 6
erty..... 2	LECTURE LIST..... 7
Masonry and the Bible..... 2	Secret Societies Condemned
Washington's First Thanks-	THE HOME..... 12
giving Proclamation..... 2	SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES..... 12
LABOR, LODGE, AND POLI-	LITERATURE..... 12
tics..... 3	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Our American Fences..... 3	LODGE NOTES..... 13
BIBLE LESSON..... 6	HOME HINTS..... 14
Press Comment..... 9	FARM NOTES..... 15
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
THE N. C. A..... 7	BUSINESS..... 13

Thanksgiving day in New Hampshire will have a bitter taste in the seasoning of its feast of joy. The governor of the old Granite State must be an eccentric man, or have become so confused with lodge atheism, like the Freemasons of France, that he left out of his proclamation all reference to God, to whom, if to any one, his people must give thanks. Since he has taken the pains to forget God, or to say like the fool, "There is no God;" the pastors of the State will pass over his proclamation in silence, we but hope none of them or their hearers will forget to pray for him who is set over them, that he may be given another heart.

At the meeting of the New York State Woman Suffrage Association, the press report says that Mrs. Matilda Joslyn Gage delivered herself of the opinion that blood would have to flow in torrents before women could secure their rights, but when she pricked her finger with a bonnet pin, two-thirds of her audience turned pale and screamed. Will Mrs. Gage permit the humble suggestion of the Cynosure that had she followed up her able speech in the N. C. A. Syracuse convention, she might have now a following of brave women to whom she need not prophecy of sanguinary torrents, but who would not flinch should they really come.

Although numerous Masonic bodies, lodges, commanderies and consistories, in regalia, attended the funeral services of T. T. Gurney in the First Congregational church of this city last Thursday, they were not permitted to perform their lodge ceremonies in the building. Except the singing by the lodge quartette of appropriate hymns the services were conducted by Drs. Goodwin and Williams. This was evidently a disappointment to the lodge, as considerable time was taken at the grave, on a raw, chilly afternoon, for Masonic ceremonies by Grand Master A. T. Darrah and Grand Chaplain Dr. H. W. Thomas; and for speeches by high Masons, D. C. Cregier, Mayor Harrison, Grand Secretary L. L. Mun, Deputy Grand Master John C. Smith and others.

The Minneapolis Tribune of Friday last had a striking article on the arrest of H. L. Hastings of the Boston Christian, in that city last spring for holding open air services on the Common with Bro. W. F. Davis. While the Boston authorities license Buffalo Bill shows and permit them to perform on the Lord's day, it lays hand on Bro. Hastings and his companion and by a foreigner and liquor dealer it fines him $30 for simply reading three chapters of the Word of God to people who are anxious to hear it! Boston worships the shades of Warren, and Otis, and the Adamases, but it is only lip service.

But, if Boston was disgraced by her saloonist officials in that matter of street preaching, her effort to put a stop to Sabbath desecration last Lord's day was most commendable, and deserves the success it must win if followed up firmly and fairly. The barber shops, drug, cigar and fruit stores were closed quite generally, and Jews were allowed to work, but not to sell goods. The law applies to railways, horse-cars, newspapers, and some other kinds of business which were untouched. But they should follow, and we hope the authorities of Boston who are beginning this fight will have nerve enough to push it through to the end.

The real test of prohibition is just beginning in Atlanta, the most enterprising of Southern cities. The law which began its work last July, was in a sense, forced upon the city. It was a county affair; the city voted against it, but the county about carried it. But at the last election prohibition carried the city also, and with a mayor willing to enforce the law, the stories of failure will soon be heard no more. Not a drop of intoxicating liquor for drinking can be legally sold, the last place where it could be had is closed; and Mayor Hillyer vetoed an ordinance allowing the city brewery to deliver beer at residences. The law will be rigidly enforced, prohibition will have a fair trial, and a noble future is promised the Chicago of the South. Would that the Northern sponsor might learn the lesson of virtuous abstinence. Strikes, anarchists and bombs would then terrify no more.

The readiness of Dr. Richard S. Storrs of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, to give the influence of his great name for a discussion of the lodge, adds to the interest with which we read of his fortieth anniversary as pastor. Dr. Storrs, says the able organ of the Reformed church, has attracted and held together one of the most intellectual congregations of the United States, and his power with his people and among the citizens of Brooklyn was never greater than it is to-day. His services to the city have been of inestimable value. The Historical Society, the schools and academies, the public and denominational charities, the hospitals, the City Missionary Society, and nearly every institution to promote the public weal, are indebted to him for services in public addresses and private recommendations and advocacy which cannot be repaid. To probably no other citizen does Brooklyn owe so much in the acquisition of such institutions as we have named. As one of her prominent citizens said a few years ago, "When Dr. Storrs says that this or that should be done, we cannot refuse our aid." He has also been a strong fortress in the defence of evangelical belief, and a most intelligent, wise and invincible leader in the conflict with error and in the declaration of the Word of Life among all men.

Charles Francis Adams, who will always be remembered as one of America's greatest diplomatists, is dead at his home on Beacon street, Boston; and the sympathies of many will go out toward the memory of him who was known in Boston circles as the "Grand Old Man," because his eminent services for the country at the court of St. James during the trying times of the Rebellion, and later in the settlement of the Alabama claims, have never been suitably recognized. The Adams family, of which he was the representative of the third generation, is one of the most remarkable of this or any other nation. Old John Adams of Revolutionary fame, and the third occupant of the Presidential chair, and then his greater son, John Quincy, the "Old Man Eloquent," and the most remarkable patriot in our political gallery, held the highest offices in the gift of the nation, and have left the imprint of their character indelibly upon its social and public life. Charles Francis inherited the excellencies as well as the failings of his sires, in a noble spirit, unimpeached integrity, great abilities, fine culture, and a wide and useful experience. His political and Masonic enemies found nothing of which to accuse him but his stately manners, which they exaggerated into frigidity. His four sons have much ability in literature and business, but have given little attention to politics. Mr. Adams maintained the grand testimony of his father against the despotic and murderous lodge to the end. He wrote an introduction to the volume of John Quincy's letters on Freemasonry; and in 1872, when chosen to pronounce the eulogy on William H. Seward at Albany, he was faithful to the memory of his great compatriot, who began and continued his public career as an opposer of the secret lodge. His latest testimony was the letter to the Boston convention in the spring of 1880.

COUNTRY, HOME, AND LIBERTY.

To our father's God we raise
Song of honor, thanks, and praise;
Praise him for our noble land,
Founded, fostered by his hand!
Praise him for our country, bright
With the beams of freedom's light.

For the sunshine, for the rain,
Fields of waving, golden grain;
For the earth-refreshing dew,
Fragrant flowers of beauteous hue;
For our homes, with plenty stored,
Thanks we bring to thee, O Lord.

For the wealth along our shores,
For our bounteous harvest stores;
For the herds of lowing kine,
Pasture, meadow, orchard, vine;
For thy blessings full and free,
Thanks we bring, O God, to thee!

Let the rivers onward flow,
Chant, in rhythmic cadence, low;
Let the valleys voice thy praise,
Let the hills loud anthems raise!
Let the mountain echoes ring
Thanks to thee, O God, our King.

Lord, with thine own gracious hand
Shelter and protect our land!
May thy people learn thy word—
Worship, and obey thee, Lord;
Then secure shall ever be
Country, Home, and Liberty!

—E. A. Jeffery, in the Christian Advocate.

IS IT A FALSE RELIGION?

BY REV. B. A. INES.

Read the following special from Little Rock to the Memphis Appeal:

THE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS OBSERVE THE DAY OF SORROW AND OF PRAYER.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., November 10.—At the meeting of the Supreme Grand Lodge of the World, Knights of Pythias, at New Orleans, in 1884, a law was passed making it obligatory on all subordinate jurisdictions throughout the world to hold once a year a lodge of sorrow and time of prayer for the departed spirits of brothers of that benevolent order. An elaborate and appropriate ritual was promulgated on the occasion. The order in this State, while one of the strongest, numerically speaking, of any of Arkansas secret societies, has permitted the ceremony of praying for the dead to go by default until to-night, when Dannon Lodge No. 3, Bayard Lodge No. 3 and Barbarosa Lodge No. 12, of this city, united and instituted the ceremony for the district. The services were held in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows' Hall, a new and magnificently furnished temple, at the corner of Sprung and Markham streets, the commodious building being filled to suffocation with an audience of Little Rock's most prominent citizens. The proceedings, while of the most solemn order, were at the same time resplendent with beauty and pure thought for those who have gone, and for those who have yet to cross the dark river. Col. Thomas H. Gibson made the memorial address. The large room was profusely decorated with natural flowers, while the deep strains of the organ seemed to tell those who heard it that there was a Great Beyond.

It has been my custom to say that the mass of adherents to oath-bound orders, professing to teach morality and religion, founded on the Bible, etc., etc., were honestly, but ignorantly, following the teachings and leadings of a few influential minds.

After reading the above, however, let no one plead ignorance of the fact, or deny that here is a false religion, a heathenism in direct descent from Pythagoras of old, whose excellent disciple was the noble Pythias, the friend of Damon. The latter stood as hostage for the former, who, under the tyrant Dionysius was condemned to death. Pythias having been away, returned just in time to save Damon from suffering in his stead. The noble example of friendship caused the tyrant to relent. Both were spared, and the tyrant asked admission to their fellowship. So much for the tradition, coming down from four hundred years before Christ.

Pythagoras flourished about 540—510 B. C. He is reported to have been very learned, especially as a mathematician. He traveled extensively, and especially in Egypt "availed himself of all the mysterious lore which the priest could impart," doubtless finding there the chief tenet of the Pythagorean school, viz; the transmigration of souls. This system of philosophy and religion was guarded by extreme secrecy characterizing the worship of the fraternity. It seems to have been part of his aim to found an aristocracy of learning and wealth. The fraternity gained great political influence, and finally suffered from violent internal dissensions, resulting in a revolution, and as a political power the order was everywhere suppressed.

It would seem, however, that the religion of Pythias the Pythagorean still survives. The spirits of the departed are now having the benefit of the prayers of the faithful brothers, in "an elaborate and appropriate ritual," and the good people of our sister city turn out in great numbers to witness this unique performance—on the "day of sorrow and of prayer." The proceedings were "most solemn," and "yet resplendent with beauty and pure thought." We are anxious to know what kind of pure thought? Was it Egyptian, Grecian, or Christian? We are indebted, it would seem, to that organ whose deep strains revealed the fact that there is a "Great Beyond." "Little Rock's most prominent citizens" must be highly entertained, especially those of them who believe in Jesus Christ rather than Pythagoras, who would not allow the killing or eating of animals, lest the soul of some departed brother might be thus robbed of its habitation. He restrained a man from beating a dog because in its howling he detected the voice of a departed familiar friend.

Of course in this land of perfect toleration this little incident will pass along, and the strong flavor of its un-Christian, anti-Christian, that is to say heathen character, will attract no attention from our religious press and Christian pulpits generally. It will be best to say nothing. This is the religion of a secret order. Were it an "Andover heresy," we should hear about it.

Memphis, Tenn.

MOSHEH.

"And she called his name Mosheh: and she said, Because I have drawn him out of the water."

Many learned men, among whom is Josephus, have thought it not probable that Pharaoh's daughter gave to Moses a name in Hebrew. This may be so, but the Egyptian differed but little in form or meaning. If a German maid should call your little boy Yohann, or a French maid should call him Jean, you would not so write it in the family Bible, yet it would not differ essentially in English. Thus Moses: he wrote his own name in Hebrew.

In regard to the office of Moses it may not be essential whether we say he drew the people out of bondage, or brought them out, or led them out. He was only an instrument, and a humble one in his own estimation, in the hands of a greater than himself. "Who am I that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring the people out of bondage?" Who were Lincoln and Grant? Only instruments, and unwilling ones, too, until they perceived that an overruling Providence was at the helm of state.

A long while were our people plagued with the antitype of Egyptian terrors. The bitings of an evil conscience and the torments incident to the system of slavery were like the flies and the gnats from Egypt's divinity—the Nilus. The perversion of the Gospel of Christ to justify slavery was like the sacred waters turned into blood. The innumerable writers, lecturers, preachers, etc., troubled them as the sanctimonious, garrulous frogs. The plagues grew more intense with time. Devouring men in armies vast, like the locusts surrounding the coasts invaded the doomed land, and entered the houses, beds and bread-troughs of the people. The storm of shot and shell, like hail with fire intermingled, ran upon the ground, smiting the herb, the grass, and the tree. Darkness that could be felt prevailed. Among the nations no friendly land appeared for their succor, and the first-born sons of glory and strength fell fast in a sea of blood. But the oppressed people had light in their cabins—the light of approaching liberty, that gleamed through the sable night of terror and gladdened their prayerful hearts.

It would appear from the record given that Mosheh, the great leader, at the end of his career died by the hand of his Master, the Arbitrer of life and death; but Lincoln, our hero, fell by the hand of Satan ruling in secret the unholy conspirators. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," and we may not with finite wisdom judge the condition of the departed, but leave that to Him who in righteousness is able to judge. "Judge not that ye be not judged."

In the progress of our late war some negroes in Tennessee said to Andrew Johnson, "You are our Moses." This human adulation was perhaps in some degree like Aaron and the short-sighted people, who would say to the golden calf—not even a living calf—"These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee out of the land of bondage." But how many follow only a human leader and obey only human commands. Professor and reformer, who is your Moses? The Psalmist said, "He sent from above; he took me; he drew me out of many waters." Christ said, "No man cometh unto me except the Father draw him:" and again, "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

The curious Hebrew scholar will observe that the word Mosheh is in the active not the passive voice. It is drawing out not drawn out. The Omnipotent Leader is still drawing out; out from the bondage of sin; out from heathen practices; out from the rum-powder; out from tyrannical fashion; out from darkness into light; out from superstition and bigotry; out from the secret lodges of the day; out from bloody war into the pacific way of arbitration. If His magic power is hindered the people plod a tedious, dangerous, wilderness journey, and fall by hcatombs in cruel wars and through Moabite seductions, not less fatal, not less to be deplored.

QUAKER BOY.

MASONRY AND THE BIBLE.

MY FRIEND THE READER:—You believe that the Bible should be revered as the revelation of the will of Almighty God, and that any attempt to degrade it or weaken its authority over the minds of men would be an attack on true religion. All who believe in Christianity believe this. You believe, too, that to lessen the influence of the Bible would be very dangerous to our free institutions. You ought, therefore, to oppose, of course, any movement or any institution that tends to degrade the Bible.

But in my last article I showed you that Freemasonry degrades the Bible by putting it on a level with the Mohammedan Koran and other false bibles of heathen religions. Also that Freemasonry allows the Bible to be set aside in heathen lodges and the lying, counterfeit bibles of false religions to be put in its place, in order to please the enemies of Christ!

Every good citizen ought to oppose an institution that thus abuses the Word of God.

You may be a Freemason, my friend. You ought not to be offended because I call your attention to these things, of course. I have not said that all Freemasons try to degrade the Bible, but that the institution of Freemasonry is thus guilty. Many Masons believe in and reverence the Bible, and many of them do not know how Masonry regards and treats the holy book. But they ought to know; it is important that they should know; these articles are written in the hope of giving needed light.

And now, my friend, let me show you a little further how Freemasonry abuses the Bible and the God of the Bible. We'll go to Masonic authority for information as usual.

There are many books in very common use by Freemasons which contain as much of the instruction given in the lodge as is allowed to be made public, together with hymns, prayers, selections of Scripture, etc. These books are the common "Monitors," "Manuals," etc., of the order. They are all made on the same general plan, and pretty closely resemble one another. The first one that I ever had the privilege of examining closely was lent me by an intelligent Freemason, Chas. Colbath, of Strafford, N. H. It was Webb's Freemason's Monitor, edited by Rob Morris, of Kentucky. I was preaching in Strafford at the time, and Mr. Colbath lent me the book for the purpose of convincing me that Freemasonry was a good institution. In examining the book I found that some of the Scripture selections were badly mangled. I have a copy of this same book now before me. It has been long in use by the Masonic fraternity, and is accepted and used all over the country as a standard Masonic Monitor. I want to show you from it how Freemasonry mutilates the Bible. I will put some verses as the lodge quotes them in one column, and the same verses as God gave them in a second column, as follows:

SCRIPTURE AS MANGLED BY MASONRY.	SCRIPTURE AS GIVEN BY THE HOLY SPIRIT.
Now we command you, brethren, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which ye received of us.	Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly and not after the tradition which he received of us.
Now them that are such we command and exhort, that with quietness they work and eat their own bread.	Now them that are such we command and exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread.
2 Thess. 3:6, 12, as quoted in Webb's Freemason's Monitor (Morris's large edition) p. 120.	2 Thess. 3:6, 12.

The quotation from the Monitor begins with the sixth verse of the chapter, and ends with the seventeenth. Within the limits of the quotation the name of Christ occurs twice,—in the sixth and twelfth verses. In both these verses the lodge cuts entirely out the name Lord Jesus Christ. Done by mistake, perhaps? That cannot be, for all standard Masonic Monitors cut Christ's name out in the same way. Besides Mr. Morris says in the preface to this Monitor that Scripture passages incorrectly quoted in old editions "have been set right" in this. So you see, my friend, that Freemasonry holds it to be "right" to mutilate the Bible—cut Christ's name out of his own Word—and this is done for the sake of making friends with those who hate Jesus,—Jews and others.

My friend, let us do what we can, in the love and fear of God, to enlighten people on this matter, and save them from being ensnared.—J. F. Browne, in Berea Evangelist.

WASHINGTON'S FIRST THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

A day of thanksgiving and prayer for the nation was appointed by Washington for the first time after the present form of our government went into operation. The annual appointment by the President of the United States of a day of national thanksgiving has not been continuous from 1789, but only from the date when President Lincoln re-established the custom which began with Washington. Why Washington did appoint such a day is explained by the following extract from the proceedings of the first Congress:

"In the House of Representatives, Friday, Sept. 25, 1789:

"Mr. Boudinot said he could not think of letting the session pass over without offering an opportunity to all the citizens of the United States of joining, with one voice, in returning to Almighty God their sincere thanks for the many blessings he had poured down upon them. He therefore offered the following resolution:

"Resolved, That a joint committee of both Houses be directed to wait upon the President of the United States to request that he would recommend to the people of the United States a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many signal favors of Almighty God especially by affording them an opportunity peaceably to establish a constitution of government for their safety and happiness."

"Mr. Burke did not like this mimicking of European customs, where they made a mere mockery of thanksgivings. Two parties at war frequently sang a te deum for the same event, though to one it was a defeat and to the other a victory.

"Mr. Boudinot was sorry to hear arguments drawn from the abuse of a good thing against the use of it. He hoped no gentleman would make a serious opposition to a measure both prudent and just.

"Mr. Tucker thought the House had no business to interfere in a matter which did not concern them. Why should the President direct people to do what, perhaps, they have no mind to do? He said they might not be inclined to give thanks for a constitution until they have experienced that it promotes their safety and happiness. It is a business with which Congress had nothing to do; it is a religious matter, and as such is proscribed to us. If a day of thanksgiving must take place, let it be done by authority of the several States.

"Mr. Sherman justified the practice of thanksgiving on any signal event, not only as a laudable one in itself, but as warranted by a number of precedents in Holy Writ. He agreed with the gentleman who moved the resolution.

"Mr. Boudinot quoted further precedents from the practice of the late Congress and hoped the motion would meet a ready acquiescence. The resolution passed and a committee on the part of the House to wait upon the President, in connection with a committee of the Senate, was appointed as provided in the resolution."

On the following Monday, Sept. 28, a message was received from the Senate informing the House that they had agreed to the resolution desiring the President of the United States to recommend a day of general thanksgiving, and had appointed a committee on their part. In conformity with this resolution Washington issued a proclamation covering this subject on Oct. 3, 1789. This is printed in The Gazette of the United States for Oct. 7, of that year, as follows:

"By the President of the United States of America, a Proclamation:

"Whereas, It is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence for Almighty God, to obey his will, to be grateful to his benefits, and humbly to implore his protection and favor; and whereas, both Houses of Congress have, by their joint committee, requested me to recommend to the people of the United States a day of public thanksgiving and prayer to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many and signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity peaceably to establish a form of government for their safety and happiness.

"Now, therefore, I do recommend Thursday, the 26th day of November next, to be devoted by the people of these States to the service of that great and glorious Being, who is the beneficent author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be. That we may then all unite in rendering unto him all our sincere and humble thanks for his kind care and protection of the people of this country previous to their becoming a nation, for the signal and manifold mercies, and the favorable interposition of his providence in the course and conclusion of the late war, for the great degree of tranquility, union, and plenty which we have since enjoyed, for the peaceable and rational manner in which we have been enabled to establish constitutions of government for our safety and happiness, and particularly the national one now lately instituted, for the civil and religious liberty with which we are blessed and the means we have of acquiring and diffusing useful knowledge and in general for all the great and various favors which he hath been pleased to confer upon us.

"And also, that we may then unite in most humbly offering our prayers and supplications to the great Lord and Ruler of Nations and beseech him to pardon our national and other transgressions, to enable us all, whether in public or private stations, to perform our several and relative duties properly and punctually, to render our national government a blessing to all the people, by constantly being a government of wise, just, and constitutional laws, discreetly and faithfully executed and obeyed; to protect and guide all sovereigns and nations (especially such as have shown kindness unto us), and to bless them with good government, peace and concord, to promote the knowledge and practice of true religion and virtue and the increase of science among them and us, and generally to grant unto all mankind such a degree of temporal prosperity as he alone knows to be best.

"Given under my hand at the City of New York the 3d of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty nine. G. WASHINGTON."

Washington did not issue a proclamation for a national day of thanksgiving annually, but sent out but two of that nature while President, that quoted above, in October, 1789, and one in 1795, when he appointed Thursday, Feb. 19, "as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer," and recommended "all religious denominations and all persons whomsoever within the United States to meet together on that day and render their sincere and hearty thanks to the Great Ruler of Nations for the manifold and signal mercies which distinguish our lot as a nation, particularly for the possession of constitutions of government which unite, and by their union establish liberty with order; for the preservation of our peace, foreign and domestic; for the reasonable control which has been given to a spirit of disorder in the suppression of the late insurrection," etc.

The insurrection was that in "certain of the western counties of Pennsylvania," as it was expressed in a proclamation Washington issued Sept. 25, 1794.

In John Quincy Adams' diary for Nov. 16, 1825, he mentions a meeting of his cabinet, at which Mr. Clay, Secretary of State, Mr. Rush, Secretary of the Treasury, and Mr. Southard, Secretary of the Navy, were present, and that they discussed Mr. Lawrie's proposition for a day of thanksgiving and prayer within the District. All the members of the administration present were against it, objected to it as a novelty, as liable to imputations of political purposes, of introducing New England manners, of using a high authority for an inferior measure. "I acquiesced in these opinions," Adams added. This makes it evident that the practice of appointing a National Thanksgiving day by a President of the United States had not prevailed during the administration of President Monroe, when Adams was Secretary of State, nor probably when John Adams, the father of John Quincy Adams, was President, or he would have quoted the precedents in its favor.

The crowning gift of God's love to man is the Gospel of his Son. His providential gifts are numberless and great and constant, and call for unceasing and heart-felt gratitude on the part of all. But superior to them all, more precious and indispensable to us than all, is the "glorious Gospel of the blessed God." This is indeed "glad tidings of great joy to all people." Its message of love and mercy; its offer of Christ, and pardon, and life; its divine provision for justification and sanctification; its ministry, its Sabbath, its sanctuary worship, its Holy Spirit, its heaven and glory unending—oh! divine, infinite gift. Was ever angel or arch-angel so loved? Was ever angel or arch-angel so placed under obligation? How this Gospel of God's wondrous love and grace should thrill our souls! What songs of thanksgiving should it call forth from every heart! It is this Gospel which makes God's children to differ from the children of vanity and sin. It is this Gospel which makes us as a nation to differ from pagan and heathen nations. It is this Gospel which gives to human nature all its dignity and worth, to life all its sanctity and value, and to the future all that is bright and desirable. To no nation has the proclamation of this Gospel been more universally and more persistently made than to the American. Let the nation give thanks for this unspeakable gift.—Selected.

LABOR, LODGE AND POLITICS.

Something over fifteen thousand foreigners—Germans, Poles, and Bohemians—voted solidly for social anarchy—and had enough of others to make up a total of over 16,000. But the social-anarchists cast their votes for three judges who were favored by them, with the result that they are elected, and our judiciary—upon whom the fabric of society in the city [Chicago] depends—though, we trust, not tainted, is at least placed under suspicion by that fact.

But large numbers of men who voted the "Labor Party" ticket, as the new social anarchist political organization is called, said they did so, not willingly, but because they were bound by the secret oaths of the labor lodges to do so. This brings out the possibility of one further disturbing element. There is already a political organization which has for its object the forcible breaking up of conspiracies which bind men by secret oaths and penalties to obey the commands of hidden leaders. The voters of this ticket were, as we have said, nineteen-twentieths foreigners. They are in large part men who have been embittered by oppression. The Russian or Austrian or German Polack shows the effects of his hundred years of political slavery and personal degradation. He is an infidel, a desperado, and is filled with the bitterness of revenge. It is a kind of rabies which incites him to attack any organization of society. Because the laws in Poland were made for his oppression, therefore he is furious at the most beneficent laws. But this demonstration of a foreign horde against the foundations of civil liberty has already started up that which was once the most startling and powerful disturbing element that ever came into American politics—namely, Nativism. Organizations are in process of formation who will demand, and vote their demand, that this horde of anarchists be disbanded, and that the immigration of their kind be prohibited. They say that they have already had enough of European brutality—of the boycott, of the enslavement of free workmen, of the imposition by terrorism of un-American and tyrannous oaths. Before another election comes around they will be ready to see to it that no demagogue shall gain any political advantage by herding with the Bohemian and Polish anarchists. It is only necessary for the invaders to show sufficient strength to alarm the public, to produce a nativeistic uprising that will sweep all before it. The Americans are slow to start, but when they do start there is no hesitation, no relenting, till the hostile power is annihilated.

The socialistic campaign in Chicago had for its avowed object the terrorizing of the Supreme Court of the State into a reversal of the judgment against the anarchistic murderers. They demand that the bomb-throwers shall be released. The Knights of Labor in their convention in Richmond, Va., made the same demand in a modified form. If our Supreme Court should weaken, or should reverse the judgment on technicalities, then hell would be let loose in this city. A number of distinguished socialists and anarchists have come from England and Germany to aid in releasing the murderers. Great sums of money have been collected for use in this enterprise and placed at their disposal.

A gentleman who was in the South during the period of the terrorizing of negro voters, and who stood at the polls in the vicinity of the great manufacturing factories, said that the coercion of negroes was nothing to that of the white mechanics by order of the secret socialistic conclaves. Two men were sent from headquarters to each polling place. When a workman was seen approaching he was stopped, a ticket was put into his hand, and two strikers went with him to see that he deposited it. Refusal would have brought upon him expulsion from the lodge, from the workshop, and probably a personal beating. This is the new kind of liberty that foreign anarchists are bringing to us.

The same condition of things prevailed in New York, where the socialistic vote footed up sixty thousand, and in Milwaukee, and other centers of foreign population.

There are numerous immediate antidotes to this evil, before we shall come to the reserved force of the whole people rising in their might to stamp it out—and these chiefly come from the self-destructive madness of social-anarchism itself. The murder and maiming of fifty policemen in Chicago fired the hearts of the whole police force, and of every man who was not himself an anarchistic madman or a murderer at heart. They were promptly driven into cover.

The greed for power, place, leadership, among them is already opening the eyes of those not purblind to the fact that the passions of human nature are not cast off with old associations.

The tyranny of the labor lodges is awakening the most intense hostility among the thousands who suffer from it. The prostration of manufacturing industry, building, etc., resulting from this cause, is bringing hardship to many a door. This will be felt more keenly as time advances. The inrush of applicants for labor, attracted by the abnormal conditions, is increasing the privations and influencing the opinions of thoughtful workmen.—Interior.

OUR AMERICAN FENCES.

Now it is a principle of the American government and of our free institutions, that foreigners who come to this country and become citizens shall enjoy the same rights and privileges under our laws which native Americans enjoy. But when foreigners combine to subvert one of the most important and precious institutions of our country, and demand immunity in trampling upon our laws, and in promoting vice, immorality and crime for the sake of gain and amusement, the question naturally arises whether better safeguards against foreign interference with our institutions and better conditions of naturalization should not be imposed?

It is the conviction of some of the most enlightened and patriotic statesmen of our country that American citizenship is too cheap—too easy of attainment by foreigners, who are ignorant of the genius of our institutions, unfitted to exercise the right of suffrage—and that a longer term of residence and other more stringent qualifications than at present should be required for naturalization, before the full privileges of citizenship are conferred. This conviction is derived from many significant and alarming facts respecting foreigners in America, of which the following may be cited as illustrations:

Nearly all the saloon keepers and liquor sellers in the country who wish to destroy the Sabbath are foreigners; nearly all socialists, communists, anarchists, and other outlaws and enemies of order, morality and religion, are foreigners; nearly all strikes attended with violence and outrage are instigated, directed and carried on largely by foreigners; nearly all riots and election frauds in our cities have been committed by and through foreigners; most of the oath-bound organizations for the commission of murder and other crimes, like the Molly Maguires, Fenians and Mormon Danites, are composed of foreigners; every dynamite plot and other conspiracy to destroy property and life has been gotten up by foreigners; and a large majority of gamblers, thieves and criminals of all grades in our prisons are foreigners.

These significant facts furnish a subject for serious contemplation, and emphasize the lesson which they convey, that our institutions are in danger of subversion through the indiscriminate admission of all kinds of foreigners to our country and to the privileges of citizenship. Among the thousands of useful and industrious foreigners who come to our shores, multitudes of paupers, convicts, secondhands and criminals of all classes find no difficulty in getting in, and they have become a dangerous element of demoralization and crime in our land.—Editorial in Lutheran Observer.

Liberty is one of the most precious gifts which heaven has bestowed upon man. With it we cannot compare the treasurers which the earth contains or the sea conceals. For liberty, as for honor, we can, and ought to, risk our lives; and, on the other hand, captivity is the greatest evil that can befall man.

When a company of Christians remarkable for the simplicity of their faith and practice were asked why they adhered so strictly to certain views of truth and duty, they replied, "Why we are so ignorant that we cannot explain away the Scriptures."

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

SCHUYLER'S LAKE, N. Y., Nov. 18th, 1886.

Yesterday was very unfavorable for circulating notice for an evening meeting in the M. E. church. I personally visited every house in the village, left a "Weed" pamphlet, and an invitation to the lecture. Snow and mud, and the falling rain and the darkness of the evening deterred many who otherwise would have been present. All gave close and respectful attention while I spoke upon the evils and dangers of the lodge system. It was the first public discussion of the subject in the place, and much curiosity has been awakened, and some genuine conviction produced in the community. Visiting stores and shops with tracts to-day, I am impressed that an opening has been made and some good done. This evening I am to speak at Snowden Hill, four miles distant, if possible to reach the place through rain and mud which still continue.

There are a few known friends of our reform here, the most pronounced and active being Mr. Byron Tunniff, who has not put his light under a bushel. What has been done to dispell the darkness and turn the light on the secret orders in this place up to this time, has mainly been through his influence. The Tunniff family is one of the oldest and best known in Otsego county. John Tunniff, the great-great-grandfather of Byron came from Derbyshire, England, and settled in this then wilderness of the forest, in 1770. There are still remaining several well known land marks of the public spirit which has characterized this line of distinguished citizens. John and his son, and immediate successor, furnished the first Episcopal church with a house of worship, the first Trevelly Baptist church with a hall, Exeter and north Otsego county with its first store, first hotel and first saw-mill, and, unfortunately, with the first distillery and Masonic lodge. Only a limited portion of the extended real estate which was included in the original Tunniff purchase remains in possession of the family, and judging from those whom it has been my good fortune to meet, the family sentiment has undergone an entire revolution on the lodge and liquor questions. Byron voted for St. John, and on the lodge question is uncompromising. J. P. SRODDARD.

SOUTHERN WELCOME AGAIN EXTENDED.

From Mobile, Ala., to Columbus, Miss.—Development of the Country.—The Convict System.—A Renouncing Deputy Grand Master.—Rt. Tapley.—Interested Congregations.—No more Building.

CALEDONIA, MISS., NOV. 10, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—My last Sabbath at Mobile was one of great interest. I preached in the morning in the State Street African M. E. church, the largest in the city; in the afternoon in the Zion African M. E. church, the second in size; and in the evening in the Congregational church. The pastors of the first two churches are Freemasons, but strongly impressed that Masonry and the other secret orders are working great mischief in the churches. My most pointed denunciations met with a hearty response from at least a portion of the congregations. The Congregational pastor is heartily in sympathy with us, and so are most of his people.

Leaving Mobile on the afternoon of the 8th I left behind the waving bananas which had not yet been nipped by the frost, and was soon in the great turpentine region which extends for thirty or more miles back from the Gulf, and is succeeded by the great cotton belt of Mississippi which extends to the northern border of the State. The very favorable autumn has secured an unusually early picking, and the fields seemed mostly gleaned.

At 10 p. m. we reached Artezia, where I stayed till morning to take the train for Columbus. We left Artezia at 8 a. m. in the midst of a pouring rain, the first that has fallen for more than a month. Columbus is the first city I have seen in the State that bears marks of prosperity. Several new business blocks have been constructed and some fine residences are being built. People have not done groaning over the "hard times," but are certainly beginning to hear them with better grace. The Georgia and Pacific railroad will now soon be completed to Birmingham, Ala., forming an important connection, and other roads are in progress or projection.

The failure to carry local prohibition in this county was a serious disappointment. The colored people were made to believe that it was a plot to deprive them of their liberties, and it was the colored vote that defeated it. Nevertheless, much was gained by the discussion. The number of saloons in Columbus has been reduced from eighteen to five, and every pastor, colored and white, has been enlisted against the evil. It is only a question of time when Mississippi will be a prohibition State. There is much, too, that is pleasing in the progress of education. They have now a most excellent graded public school for the colored youth of Columbus, which is free to all, and is attended by over 400 pupils. The policy of universal education is unchallenged.

It would be well if the State were as wise in other respects. The practice that has so long prevailed, of leasing out the convicts of the State to work on railroads and levees cannot be too strongly reprobated. Not only does it interfere with the rights of laborers who work for exceedingly low wages, but is attended with gross inhumanities. Every contractor is vested with irresponsible power, and if such authority was sure to be abused in the case of the slave, much more will it be when exercised over the criminal. Surely this State can devise a plan more decent and humane.

I stayed over night at Columbus with the Deputy Grand Master of the A. F. and A. M. of the State. He is a K. T. and has filled almost every Masonic office. But now he has renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, and tells me he has taken his final leave of all secret orders. He is instructing his church as fast as they can bear it, and has privately persuaded six or seven Masons to give up their order. He reads the Cynosure with great interest, and I was greatly interested in his intelligent Christian household.

Leaving at 7 a. m. to-day, I came in the mail wagon thirteen miles, reaching Bro. Eli Tapley's at 10 a. m. I found Bro. Tapley in bad health, but busy in grinding sugar cane and making molasses. The rest of the family are in usual health, and the general outlook is hopeful. I expect to remain a week.

COLUMBUS, MISS., NOV. 15, 1886.—My visit to the old "Feemster neighborhood" was one of much interest. I found Bro. Eli Tapley and family "faint, yet pursuing," and they seemed especially glad of a little moral support. It was soon arranged that I should hold some meetings. Accordingly word was sent out and I preached on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights to full and increasing congregations. On Saturday night the white congregation that worships in the old Salem church gave up their usual prayer meeting and came over to the Academy to hear me preach, which was an unexpected favor to the colored people, for they have been, heretofore, much like Jews and Samaritans, who had no dealings with each other. Happily this feeling is perceptibly abating.

On Sunday, the 14th, I went with Bro. Tapley to the New Ruhamah Congregational church, eight miles north in Monroe county. I found a small but comfortable frame house of worship, but without any arrangements for warmth. As the day was chilly they built a fire out of doors for the people to warm their hands. We had a Sunday-school, after which I preached to a most attentive congregation. A young man was then examined as to his Christian experience; was baptized, and received into the church, the whole exercises occupying some two and one-half hours. Though many were thinly clad and all were chilled, yet none seemed weary. It was indeed a most precious meeting, and I was greatly interested in the little flock, who are seeking to sustain Gospel principles in their purity, amidst abounding difficulties.

A brisk walk of two or three miles restored a comfortable warmth, and at 7 p. m., though the night was dark and rainy, I met a good congregation at the Piney Grove Congregational church, about one and a half miles from Bro. Tapley's. This little frame church is occupied by a colored school, and rejoices in a stove. According to custom the door was kept open and it gave us little heat, but I have rarely preached to a more attentive congregation. Indeed, the people here seem hungry for the Word, and entreated me to stay and preach to them longer. It did not seem expedient, and to-day Miss I. D. Feemster brought me to this city. These little churches are most earnest in their opposition to both the lodge and the liquor traffic, and are striving to maintain correct Christian principles. Had all the colored people been as well trained this county would not have voted against prohibition. It was the ignorant colored vote that did it. They were made to believe that prohibition meant re-enslavement. They will learn better.

It will be remembered by some of your readers, that when I was here five years ago, I was waited on by a committee of the "first citizens of Caledonia and vicinity," and requested to leave the State forthwith. I declined to do so, and not long after the leader of the party, a Caledonia merchant, was compelled to leave in great haste. He was believed to have burned his neighbor's store, and his native village was too hot for him. One other (a magistrate) has since fled to escape prosecution, and a third fell from the cars while intoxicated and barely escaped with his life. Such is the usual material that mobs are made of, and such their usual endings. This time I have received nothing but most unmistakable kindness from both white and colored. I have to-day called on the leading white Baptist minister of this city, and found him in hearty sympathy with us. He has a number of Masons in his church, but is testifying against the evil. May the Lord give him the grace of courage.

H. H. HINMAN.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE OHIO STATE MEETING.

GREENFIELD, O., NOV. 19, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—"The world moves" and so does our cause in Ohio. When I wrote last I was in Xenia. I have since visited Dayton, Harrisburg, Hamilton, Millville, College Corner, and Cincinnati.

I have been looking after the interests of our State Convention, paper, and finances, and am glad to report progress in all these lines. I have spoken only once to a public audience, but constantly to individuals.

Sabbath evening I had the pleasure of addressing a fair audience in the New Mennonite church at Harrisburg. Friends here have lost none of their zeal since my lectures and discussion on Odd-fellowship last winter. I found here new friends who subscribed for the Cynosure, and others who were investigating.

The I. O. O. F. at Union, the town nearest Harrisburg, meets over a saloon, and I am told on good authority that the saloon-keeper belongs. I was also told that a Mr. Shaw in Union said that the order would hire a hall for me to lecture in if I would come there and speak. I sent word to him that I should be happy to accept his kind offer, and if the order will hire the hall I will tell the people how they make Odd-fellows in Union.

I arrived here last evening at 8 o'clock. This morning I called on friends and find that the trustees of the United Presbyterian church have been consulted and have kindly consented to the use of that church for the convention. The time of convening I think will have to be the same as last year, the 15th and 16th of December. We had hoped to have held it a little earlier this year, but owing to the pressure of other work I have not been able to give it my attention until now. As the election is over friends can more readily turn their thoughts in this direction. We trust and verily believe that there will be a general coming up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. Our convention last year was good. The Lord was with us and unity of spirit prevailed. This year's meeting may, and if I do not entirely misjudge the feeling of the people, will be far better.

Among those who expect to be with us and address the Convention, the following may be mentioned: Dr. D. McDill now of Xenia Theological Seminary, formerly of Monmouth College, Ill. To those who know him I need say nothing, but to those who do not, I will say, you will never regret the expense of coming if you have to come two hundred miles.

Daniel Hill, of New Vienna, will surely make you laugh. He always hits the nail on the head. To the Friend Quakers he needs no introduction. He has for many years published a paper opposing war with the sword, but he makes war on Masonry and whisky.

Rev. Wm. Dillon of Dayton sends out light on the secrecy question through his paper, the Conservator, every week to many of those who are loyal to the rule of the U. B. church on this question.

Dr. L. Davis, D. D., a man whom the Brethren in years past have delighted to honor. But now, as his hair has grown white with age, he has been requested by young men to go back on principles which he has taught for years. The Dr. has promised to be with us if his health will permit (and it is quite good now), and tell us something of the workings of secret orders in the United Brethren church.

Bishop Wright will return to his home in Dayton soon. I have sent him an invitation by his wife to be with us and tell us how the work goes in California. Knowing something of the Bishop I feel sure he will be with us if possible.

The N. C. A. Secretary will, of course, be with us. He always has a good supply of charts, and will come prepared to confer the degrees on those who may desire.

Did space permit I should like to speak of those with whom I have visited this week. Of their words of encouragement, intentions to attend the convention, assistance in the work, etc. God will not suffer any of them to go without their reward. So I can simply say, God bless you, and press onward. We shall expect to see the call for the convention duly signed by the State officers next week. Let all be getting ready for a glorious meeting.

W. B. STODDARD.

GREAT ENCOURAGEMENT FROM IOWA.

OSKALOOSA, IOWA, Nov. 12, 1886.
DEAR CYNOSURE:—After my lecture at Clearfield, Taylor Co., reported in my last letter, I remained and attended two meetings held by Rev. M. A. Gault, assisted by Elder Smith, of Maryville, Mo., and by request made some remarks. These meetings were also held in the U. P. church. Rev. Gault, and Elder Smith are so well known as able and fearless champions of reform, that no words of commendation are needed from me to bring them to the notice of the Christian public. God in his providence has opened a great and an effectual door to Bro. Gault, that no one favoring Gospel morality will be disposed to shut. Elder Smith is original and amusing, as well as instructive, and would, no doubt, draw a crowd to hear him wherever the character of his work is known. He is on fire with zeal for prohibition.

From Clearfield I came to Beaconsfield, and went in company with Bro. O. Gier and Rev. Cyrus Smith to a United Brethren church, some nine miles distant, where I lectured on the religious character of Freemasonry. The new pastor and the leading brethren of the church were present. I will only say of this effort, that I never was more signally helped of the Holy Spirit, in unavailing the unchristian and infidel character of the secret lodge system, than on this occasion. The following evening I spoke at a point two miles from Beaconsfield, to an appreciative audience.

From Beaconsfield I went to Humiston, where I was met and conveyed ten miles into the country. The next day being the Sabbath, I preached in the morning in the United Presbyterian church, and in the evening to the United Brethren congregation whose place of worship is three miles distant. The congregation was full in the morning, and in the evening there were more than could be seated.

On Monday night following I lectured in the Seceder church, Rev. J. D. Masson, pastor. The Seceder church is only one mile from the U. P. church. So I had a congregation of Seceders, United Presbyterians, United Brethren, and some Methodists. The people were aroused to so deep a sense of the Satanic character of the religion of Masonry, that I booked twenty-two new yearly subscribers to the Cynosure in two days, besides receiving a liberal subscription in aid of the Iowa reform work. Seceders, United Presbyterians, United Brethren, and Methodists were united in helping to withstand the spread of infidelity through the secret lodge system. I am persuaded that there is not a Christian in Iowa who would not, with God's blessing, be persuaded to take a stand with Christ against Freemasonry, and its kindred orders, if he could hear such reasons as I gave last Monday night in the Seceder church. I was indebted to Thomas Elder, one of the U. P. brethren, for his team for two days.

On Tuesday night I lectured at Woodland, in the Adventist church, which is occupied, in part, by the Christian Union church, an offshoot of the Methodists. There, as at the Seceder church, the congregation was large and the order perfect. I regret that I did not have time to visit the brethren of Woodland, after the lecture, to invite their practical co-operation with the Iowa Association.

Christian reformers, what we need is, through Jesus Christ to draw nearer to God, and get filled with the Spirit and power of Christ, by which alone the demon of the lodge can be overcome; and then, with the simple weapon of truth made mighty by the Holy Ghost, this stronghold of Satan can be pulled down. The church must be rescued from the corrupting power of the secret lodge system. The State and the nation must be rescued from the domination of the secret empire. A penny laid out now in faithful Christian reform work will go further towards preserving peace than a dollar will go towards restoring order, when the land is full of anarchy and bloodshed.

Write me at Wayne, Henry Co., Iowa, if you will arrange for lectures in your vicinity, and I will visit you as soon as I can. Every minister and layman, whom Satan has deceived and led into the lodge, will turn away from it in horror when he comes to the knowledge of the truth that I can bring to his mind in a single lecture, if he has not already become an apostate from the faith of Christ.

Let prevailing prayer be offered, and the Holy Ghost will be upon us, and the truth, attended by the power of Christ, will be mighty to turn all who have honest hearts away from the secret lodge system, which is Satan's most artfully contrived plan for supplanting Christianity and spreading infidelity in our land.

C. F. HAWLEY.

NOTES OF WISCONSIN WORK.

Since my last report I have spoken as follows: On Lord's day afternoon, Nov. 7, preached and Monday evening lectured at Welsh "Jerusalem" church, near Wales; Sabbath evening and Tuesday spoke at "Bethesda" Welsh church; on the 11th and 12th lectured in the Free Baptist church, Rochester; on the 14th spoke in the Free Baptist church at Prospect Hill and at Big Bend, lecturing in the evenings of that day and Monday at Prospect Hill, and of Tuesday at Big Bend.

In the Welsh settlement west of Waukesha, where I worked Nov. 6-9, I found the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists but very little acquainted with the reform against lodge worship, though the lodges are beginning to make inroads upon them, and unless there shall be an awakening of their churches to the danger that awaits them, they will be undoubtedly swallowed up, largely, by the lodge flood that the dragon is casting out of his mouth, as has happened to so many other denominations that were not watchful. I feel deeply for such people; and for all our foreign population. Hardly any of these Welsh born in the old country will be led into the lodge; their early surroundings and convictions and religious training all tend away from lodgism; and the same is largely true of other foreigners; but their children brought up in this country are deceived with lamentable ease by the fair but false pretensions of secret societies, unless they are carefully and faithfully taught and warned as to the real character of the lodge. Let us strive in prayer and in work to save them.

To these good Welsh people I distributed as many tracts as I could, and gave several pamphlets and a three-months' subscription to the Cynosure, but I sold but one book and took no paid subscriptions to the paper. My audiences and collections were small, but the people treated me very kindly in their homes.

The lectures in Rochester, Racine county, were fairly attended and considerable interest was shown. Bro. M. R. Britten very kindly came over and called on me on the 12th, and with him I went to see our old friend, H. Frost and family. I was very kindly entertained by Prof. A. J. Marshall and his wife, who are both interested in our work. The seminary there flourishes under their care. A donation of some of our anti-secrecy books to the library of the institution would be welcomed. Who will supply them? I took two Cynosure subscriptions in Rochester, and sold several books.

Nov. 13 I rode sixteen miles with Bro. Wm. Bancroft to Prospect Hill, Waukesha county. Bro. A. H. Whitaker, pastor of the Free Baptist church there, received me very kindly, and opened the way for me to speak in his church and also at Big Bend. I have had fair audiences, a good hearing, and very kind treatment at both places. At Prospect Hill I took three yearly subscriptions to Cynosure and one for four months, and sold several books. I am to lecture there again on the 24th.

Taking the approaching storm into account, I had a fair audience at Big Bend. Here is the largest lodge of Sons of Temperance in Wisconsin. They have treated me very courteously, and I have arranged to return and address them on temperance on Saturday evening, the 20th, after they shall have closed their secret session, that being their lodge night.

In the meantime, as I have been laboring incessantly for months, I take the opportunity of securing, as I hope, nerve-rest and spiritual strength, in attending the prophetic conference in Chicago, whither I go to-day, the 17th.

J. F. BROWNE.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"MISREPRESENTATIONS" IN THE "BEACON."

WEYAUWEGA, Wis., Nov. 15, 1886.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—A friend recently sent me the inclosed clipping from the Beacon. As I have no knowledge who is the editor, nor who is the publisher of the Beacon, nor even where it is published, nor in what date of its issue this inclosure appeared, I am at a loss to know through what medium to reply, as requested, unless you will grant me the favor of your columns for that purpose.

Here is the clipping:

MISREPRESENTATIONS OF MISSIONARY WORK IN CHASE, LAKE CO., MICH.

MR. EDITOR:—I have before me while I write, a copy of "Record of the Christian Mission for Evangelizing the Lost in City and Wilderness," by Rev. William F. Davis, locally known as the Michigan lumberman evangelist.

Two paragraphs on pages 15 and 16 contain statements which are at variance with facts in a marvelous degree. I am deeply grieved to be under the necessity of thus attacking Bro. Davis, all the more so as I enjoyed to the full his labors in our midst last February, and none, more than I, rejoiced to see the good work which followed his five days' labor among us. I know just how such a letter as this appears in the eyes of many under whose eyes it will fall; but the sternest necessity of duty to myself, my people, and the Episcopal Methodist friends in Chase, compels me to make the following defence. I am willing to allow Bro. Davis, all the credit he deserves, no more and no less. I copy these two paragraphs as they stand in his own words:

"On the last day of the first month, by invitation of the W. C. T. U., I visited Chase, in Lake county, a village of about one thousand souls. The previous sectarian rivalry which had existed between the Congregational and Methodist churches yielded to the union meetings which were held during five days, and in which God's grace was variously manifested.

"Two teachers in the public schools, 150 children, and persons of various ages and both sexes professed to accept Christ. Three gave up the tobacco habit. In Chase it was claimed that Satan had drawn every man into one or several of the oath-bound secret lodge systems. Even the pastors of the churches have fallen into these snares, and one consequence is that while the lodges have money out at interest, the beggarly pittance paid the ministers for their preaching are raised almost entirely by the women of the rival parishes, who get up suppers and sales and festivals, giving fifty-cent meals for twenty-five cents, and in every way they can strive to persuade the ungodly to give them a little money to help support the churches. Compare Israel's condition in the days of Saul as described in 1 Sam. 13:19-21."

If all this were true, we Christian people in Chase would certainly be "of all men most miserable." Let us look as briefly as we can how the facts stand, and then with the highest amount of charity we can command, we will conclude that Bro. Davis has got things mixed up. First of all there was no "sectarian rivalry" existing between the two churches. Witness thereof, for five years before Bro. Davis visited Chase, each year there was a term of union meetings held with various results, and at the time no such feeling existed chargeable upon the several churches. Such rivalry existed, if at all, in the mind of some solitary individual, or in the mind of the writer.

The somewhat discourteous way in which Bro. D. refers to the people of Chase does him small credit so far as the rules of good breeding are concerned, especially after the way he was received and entertained by the friends here.

Nowhere that I know of does a more friendly feeling exist than prevails between the Congregational and M. E. people in Chase.

J. NICOL, Pastor of the Congregational church.

After carefully looking over the above statement I fully subscribe to the truth regarding the statement made by the Congregational pastor.

C. H. THEOBALD, Pastor of the M. E. church.

Respecting this "attack" I am more pleased to note its endorsement of Christian union than concerned to debate with Pastor Nicol whether there has been any advance made in Christian fellowship in Chase within the past year.

Now if Pastor Nicol will write one more letter to the Beacon, and prove in it that he is teetotally free from the tobacco-chewing abomination, and that he and Pastor Theobald are not in any way helpers of the false religion popularly known as Odd-fellowship, the reception of that communication will rejoice me still more; even though he should satisfactorily prove to himself in it that my "statements" on these subjects are "at variance with facts in a marvelous degree."

As to my reception and entertainment in Chase, all the kindness which I received there laid me under special obligation to deal faithfully with the people while present with them, and record truly God's favor upon that dealing, as I apprehend it. This has been done, and in love. May God continue to add his blessing.

Will the Beacon kindly copy? Sincerely your brother in Christ,

Wm. F. Davis.

BRO. COUNTEE BEHOLDING THE SALVATION OF GOD.

MEMPHIS, Tenn.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Surely "The blessings of the Lord maketh rich." We are having at the Tabernacle Baptist church a season of "fat things." God is manifesting his power among us, and many are inquiring, "What shall I do to be saved?" During the last two weeks sixteen have made a profession of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Among them were four men, each of whom were Masons, Odd-fellows, Immaculates and Tabors. Immediately after it became known that they had hope in Christ, a self-constituted committee of the craft visited them, and urged them to connect themselves with some other church that was not opposed to the secret empire; but they failed in every instance. The brother who was an Immaculate, in talking before the church, said: "I am now a child of God, and as such I can no longer be allied with the lodge, for I am not my own, I have been bought with a price, and therefore God must use me to his name's glory." The others left without any questioning on our part; they are radically for Christ. Numbers hear them, and are pricked to their hearts; while Masons and all the secret society host here abuse and frown upon me, and from them come letters threatening me with death. They come to hear me preach, and I do not fail to give them the unadulterated truth of Christ on the lodge subject. No matter from what part of God's word I take a text, some point derogatory to the lodge comes into my argument. Slowly but surely God is moving against this vulturous confederation, and we give him the glory.

My brother, who was shot with me in October last, has also professed hope in Christ, and is very happy in Jesus. The good work is going on, and we are having meeting every night. Last night an adhering Knight Templar arose for prayer. His wife is a member of the church, and two of his girls are to be baptized next Sunday. The poor man seemed to be all broken up since the conversion of his children, and I praise God that each conversion strikes a terrific blow to the secret empire.

On Sunday last in my remarks I said to the church that God had blessed us abundantly with a revival each year. One year ago we had five hundred communicants, and the revival of last year rid us of nearly three hundred of that number. They could not stand the pure word of God in opposition to their (idol) lodges. My text was, "Now are ye clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." Our meeting will continue next week, and perhaps longer if the interest increases through God's will. The good work of reformation is on the increase, while the lodge threatens on the one hand, appeals for help and information came on the other. One day last week I received the following card:

"Mr. Countee: You have all your members out of the lodge, and you still continue to induce men and women from your pulpit to leave the lodge. Now, sir, if you do not desist we intend to make you. Look out for yourself!"

I have made no reply but, "For Zion's sake I will not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth."

We are almost alone in this reform war. My church is right in the midst of the enemy's stronghold, and they come to nearly every service, and every allusion I make to them has effect in some way. May God bless those connected with the brave old Cynosure, especially Bro. Blanchard, the aged pioneer hero of this grand work of reform. Earnestly desiring the prayers of all the sanctified (separated) ones, I am, dear readers, yours in the midst of the fray. R. N. COUNTEE.

PITH AND POINT.

READY FOR A CANADIAN CONVENTION.

I assure you I am sorry to send so little encouragement to you at this time. I may send other names before January. I am pleased to learn that Rev. Wilkinson of Toronto has been among you; and hope he has returned determined to turn on the light, as it is much needed in Canada. Hope to bear of the convention and enjoy it, if within reach.—T. FRASER, Galt, Ont.

CHEER FOR BRO. WILKINSON.

I was glad to see that Rev. Wilkinson, whom I know very well, was at the State convention in Michigan, and that there is a likelihood of an association being formed in Canada. I assure you there is much need of something being done to check the great evil that secret societies are working. The church and Sunday-school, besides suffering much in the loss of spirituality are in many cases conducted in the interest of some secret organization.—D. W. NELSON, Dundas, Ont., Canada.

A VOLUNTEER REFORM EVANGELIST.

I have traveled many miles the last four weeks distributing tracts and trying to awaken an interest in this reform work. My heart and soul are in the work. I can and do feel that my ways please Him who sets me at this missionary work. If the Lord opens the way more clearly I am ready to step in. He blesses me for every effort I put forth on this line. Unless something can be done right early to check this lodge evil, commotions will take place in our beloved land such as we have not heard of, because God is our sovereign ruler. The quicker our nation wakes up to these facts, the better. I feel that like Nineveh of old we are doomed, and nothing but repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus will save us.—M. L. WORCESTER, Kingston, Ill.

EYES OPENED BY THE SPIRIT.

I am a carpenter by trade, a poor man, have poor health and a large family to support; but nearly three years ago, after being a member of the church for nearly thirteen years, God graciously filled me with his Holy Spirit. Shortly after he gave me to understand in various ways that he needed me for his work in the vineyard. Before, I was troubled with a man-fearing spirit, but since then I can see nothing but Christ Jesus and his honor and glory. The sins of the people seem to rise like mountains, such as the conformity of the church to the world, and the hypocrisy of the ministry, who with one hand take hold of the sacred oracles of God while with the other (and that confirmed by an oath) they bind themselves to the powers of darkness, are co-partners with a very anti-Christ, secret societies. I realize that this world is no friend to our Lord or his servants. My foes have been those of my own house, and among my own kin, and in the church, but I know that the Lord of life and glory reigns within my whole being.—E. L. MEADER, Delaware, Iowa.

A SECEDER IN EARNEST.

I am having much success here in the reform work, distributing Cynosures and tracts as well as lecturing. I do thank the good Lord for the Cynosure; it is the great paper for truth and light.—J. K. GLASSFORD.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON X.—December 5, 1886.—Worshiping God and the Lamb—Rev. 5:1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb, forever and ever.—Rev. 5:13.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The Sealed Book. vs. 1-4. The book sealed with seven seals can be nothing else than a record of the world's history from the beginning to the end of time. Contrary to general usage the scroll is written on both sides showing the fullness of the contents. Everything which pertains to the history of this planet is there written and it is a dark and sad record. It contains the annals of past ages when the brutalizing doctrine that might makes right everywhere prevailed; the sufferings of the weak trodden down by the strong; the records of bloody wars; the pestilence and the famine that strike down the innocent and the guilty alike; the horrors of the slave trade; the terrible wrongs perpetrated on the helpless through the modern traffic in strong drink; the deeds of darkness done under cover of secrecy; and in short all that untold sum of anguish and suffering for which there seems to be neither redress nor remedy. This enigma of unrecompensed suffering; of a seemingly moral injustice at the very heart of natural law has weighed on thoughtful minds in all ages. No wonder John wept because no man was found worthy to open and read that book and solve this great and terrible mystery of sin and sorrow under which the whole creation groans and travails.

2. The New Song. vs. 5-10. Only one is found worthy to judge the human race out of this mysterious scroll and "vindicate the ways of God to men."—the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. "And they sang a new song."—the song of a redeemed universe. It is a new song because it marks a new order of things; a reign of righteousness and mercy in which even the brute creation that have so suffered through the cruelty of fallen man shall have a part. The light has been for ages slowly struggling against the darkness. One by one giant iniquities have tottered to their fall. Every Christian who stands firmly combatting the evil that is in the world is singing the notes of this new song. And none can sing it out clear and full as this grand chorus is intended to be sung till they can trust God for perfect and full salvation;—and feel in their inmost souls the blessed truth:—"Thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood."

3. The Universal Ascription. vs. 11-14. The Lamb is to receive universal homage. All the myriads of angels and all the animate and inanimate creation will take up the notes of praise. Earth joins with heaven to swell the chorus. They who would sing this song in the upper temple must begin to sing it in these lower earthly courts. Praise and worship is the atmosphere of heaven. The more we live in this atmosphere here the more homelike will seem the Father's house when we enter it to go no more out forever.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

Did the saints of old time sing this new song? Ps. 40:3. How are we redeemed by the blood of Christ? 1 Cor. 6:20; Eph. 1:7; Col. 1:14; 1 Pet. 1:18, 19; 1 John 1:7. How does David express the numbers of the angelic multitude? Ps. 68:17. Was the universal dominion of Christ a new doctrine, or was it the faith of the early church? Phil. 2:10, 11. Is this a promise of the final destruction of the Secret Empire?

From Peloubet's Notes.

"A book written within and on the back side." This fullness of the roll is an emblem of the completeness of the contents, an idea which is implied by the number seven of the seals. It indicates that the whole had been determined by God. No other might add to its contents.—Prof. Milligan.

"Was able to open the book, neither to look thereon."

Or therein, in which case the thought is, none could open still less read, the roll. It may, however, be that all who attempted to take the book were unable to face the glory in which it lay. When Christ revealed himself to Saul, he could not see for the glory of that light.—Prof. Carpenter.

"One of the elders saith unto me" (see chap. 4:4). The twenty-four elders spoken of there are understood to be not angels, but representatives of the church. If the elders were the representatives of the church, there was a propriety that they should address John in his trouble; and they by experience knew the power and worth of the Saviour.—Barnes.

"The Root of David." In him the conquering might of David, the "man of war" as well as of Judah "chosen to be the ruler" (1 Chron. 28:4), comes forth with all the freshness of a new youth. Compare for the witness thus given to our Lord, Matt. 17:3 with the parallel texts.—Prof. Milligan.

"Ath prevailed to open the book." Conquered, gained the victory. Not merely was he able to open the book, but he had acquired this power by a victorious struggle. By such a struggle with trials and sorrows he had opened or prepared the way for the highest honor to be bestowed upon him, the honor, and the right to open the sealed book. The general idea is, that none but the Messiah is capable of revealing the secret counsels of God. He knows them all, and therefore is able to disclose them.—Stuart.

"And of the four beasts," rather, living beings, described in chap. 4:6-9. These four living beings are in part identical with the cherubim of the Old Testament (compare Ezek. 1:5-10; 10:30), and in part with the seraphim of Isa. 6:2. As to what is represented by them, there is the greatest diversity of opinion among commentators.

"Of the elders." Of whom there are 24 (chap. 4:10). They are the representatives of Christ's church and people, of those whom Christ calls his friends, and who are admitted to know what their Lord doeth (John 15:15). Various reasons have been suggested why they should be described as 24 in number; they are the twelve tribes doubled, to signify the union of the Gentile with the Jewish church; they are the two sets of twelve, to represent the two Testaments; they are the twelve patriarchs conjoined with the twelve apostles. It will be seen that these were all different forms of the same thought, that the 24 elders represent the complete church of God in the past and in the future, in the Jewish and Gentile worlds. It is the great united church.—Carpenter.

"Stood a Lamb as it had been slain." Greek, a little lamb, giving emphasis to the idea of meekness, purity, innocence. The Lion of the tribe of Judah now appears as a lamb. Both symbols are appropriate to Christ. It is not probable that he appeared in the form of a lamb, but symbolized by a lamb the symbol of his sacrifice for sin. The passage is most striking. The evangelist is told of the Lion which will open the seals; he looks, and lo, it is a lamb! yes, a little lamb, for the word is diminutive. There is deep significance in this. When we read of the lion, we think of power and majesty, and we are right; all power in heaven and earth is Christ's, but it is power manifested in seeming weakness. Righteousness and purity, meekness and gentleness are greater than carnal weapons.—Carpenter. Lol a Lamb appears in the stead of the Lion. This is the battle whereby the Lion has overcome; viz., that he has suffered himself to be slain as a Lamb. It is only in the omnipotence of all-suffering love that the greatness of omnipotence could be proved. Ebrard.

"As it had been slain." In the midst of heavenly glory, Christ crucified is still the prominent object.

"And they sung a new song." They sing, not sang. The continuous worship of heaven is brought before us. The song was new. In its substance, because it celebrates what no imagination of man could before have conceived and no tongue have uttered,—the glory of a complete redemption. The song is not sung only because the roll is opened; its main burden is the ground upon which the Lamb had been found worthy to open it.—Milligan.

"And we shall reign on the earth," rather, they reign, as in Rev. Ver. They reign with and in Christ, but they also reign on the earth. Christ gives them a kingship, even sovereignty, over themselves—the first, best, and most philanthropic of all kingships. He gives them, too, a kingship on the earth among men, for they are exerting those influences, promoting those principles, and dispensing those laws of righteousness, holiness, and peace, which in reality rule all the best developments of life and history. All who traverse these laws are merely intruders, or transitory tyrants, who exert only a phantom power. They are not kings; they may govern, but they do not reign (compare 1 Cor. 3:21-23; Eph. 2:6).—Carpenter.

"And I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne, and the beasts and elders." If there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, what must be the ineffable joy as they behold the multitudes of the redeemed!

"To receive power," etc. Here, as in chap. 7:12, we have seven particulars of ascription. But here there is a difference both from chap. 7:12 and 4:11. In each of those places the article "the" is repeated before each particular; here one article includes them all. Bengel well remarks that we must regard them all as if they formed but one word. And, when they are thus regarded, the article seems to point out the fact of all these as one, belonging to God, whose power and glory the Lamb is worthy to share.—Alford.

"And the Lamb." Jesus Christ. All Creation is better, happier, richer, on account of what Christ's redeeming work has done. How much more cultured and beautiful the world is under Christian influences and culture! New beauties and powers are being continually developed.

SECRETSOCIETIESCONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington, in a letter written a year before his death: "I preside over no lodge, nor have I been in one more than once or twice during the last thirty years."

Charles Francis Adams: "A more perfect agent for the devising and execution of conspiracies against church and state could scarcely have been conceived."

Thaddeus Stevens: "By Freemasonry, trial by jury is transformed into an engine of despotism and Masonic fraud."

President Millard Fillmore, J. C. Spencer and others: "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Chief Justice John Marshall: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned as one capable of much evil and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

John Quincy Adams: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

Charles Francis Adams: "Every man who takes a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment were to prove a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

Thurlow Weed: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

William H. Bevard: "Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men in a secret lodge, order, class, or council, and, bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow-men."

Wendell Phillips: "I wish you success most heartily in your efforts to arouse the community to the danger of secret societies. They are a great evil; entirely out of place in a republic, and no patriot should join or uphold them. Considering the great forces which threaten the welfare of the nation in the next thirty years, and how readily and efficiently they can use any secret organizations, such should not be allowed to exist."

George Washington's Farewell Address: "The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government. All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency."

Daniel Webster: "All secret associations the members of which take upon themselves extraordinary obligations to one another, and are bound together by secret oaths, are naturally sources of jealousy and just alarm to others; are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions, and are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government. Under the influence of this conviction it is my opinion that the future administration of all such oaths and the formation of all such obligations should be prohibited by law."

Edward Everett: "A secret society so widely diffused and connected as this puts a vast power, capable of the most dangerous abuse, into hands irresponsible to the public."

George Washington (to Gov. Trumbull): "Masonry is a benevolent institution, which may be employed for the best or worst purposes."

Richard Rush: Hooker, personifying law, eloquently exclaims, "her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; everything on earth does her homage, the highest is not beyond her control, the least as claiming her protection." Masonry has oversteered this primordial system. She has dethroned this image of God upon earth. To reinstate it over so insolent a victor, we must have a political organization. There is no other way of assailing, there is no other hope of vanquishing, there need be no other dream of humbling such a foe. It fights with desperation.

Wendell Phillips: "History shows them perverting justice, stopping at no crime to protect and conceal their mummeries; controlling politics for selfish and personal ends, and interfering with great danger in national emergencies. Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are forbidden by law and rooted out of existence."

John Hancock: "I am opposed to all secret associations."

James Madison: "From the number and character of those who now support the charges against Masonry, I cannot doubt that it is at least susceptible of abuse, outweighing any disadvantages promised by its patrons."

General U. S. Grant: "All secret, oath-bound political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first bring them together."

Myron Holley of New York: "Such a rebellion Freemasonry has raised. It has violated the dearest rights of nature, and the most sacred enactments of our laws, and this in a spirit manifestly treasonable, for it has done this in pursuance of solemn, deliberate and voluntary obligations to a foreign government,—I mean its own—a government far more alien to that which claims our allegiance than any which has ever afflicted mankind."

Gerrit Smith, in an address, 1870: "Masonry murdered Morgan. If it could not conceal his murderers, it nevertheless protected them. It overrode the laws of the land and ruled the courts and the ballot-boxes. Moreover, it is capable of repeating the crimes. Why then should we not dread secret societies, and do what we can to bring them to an end?"

Samuel C. Pomeroy, in an address, 1883: "There may be a broad distinction between the good and the bad in secret societies, but as they all alike have oath-bound obligations to complete oblivion of all they do or say, I have no means of judging the good from the bad. So I turn away from them all to the great Teacher who said, 'In secret have I said nothing.'"

Joseph Ritner, governor of Pennsylvania, 1837: "If it be true as the lamented Colden (himself one of the initiated) declared that many a Mason became a great man but no great man ever became a Mason, how nearly does it concern the youth of our country to pause and reflect before they commit their present standing and future reputation to the keeping of a society, which for its cold-hearted and selfish purposes could immolate even the fame of Washington at the shrine of its abominations."

Lewis Tappan, private journal, 1814: "Dr. Dixwell gave me lectures on Masonry at his house." "In September left the lodge." Letter, Jan. 21, 1820: "I am free to say that I henceforth renounce Freemasonry, considering it a useless and profane institution."

George Washington, to friends in 1794, quoted by Myron Holley: "The real people occasionally assembled in order to express their sentiments on political sentiments, ought never to be confounded with permanent, self-appointed societies, usurping the right to control constituted authorities, and to dictate to public opinion. While the former was entitled to respect, the latter was incompatible with all government, and must either sink into general dis-esteem, or finally overturn the established order of things."

James G. Birney, candidate of the Liberty party for President, was a Freemason, "but never entered a lodge after he joined the church, and, as his sons grew up, he cautioned them against joining any secret order."—Gen. Wm. Birney.

Judge Piny Merrick (a seceded Mason): "If ever a Chapter or a lodge shall establish laws in conflict with those of the state the Masonic requisition is obedience to the lodge and conflict with the state; and if a member hesitates at this humiliating obedience, his heart must be 'torn from his bosom,' his 'vitals plucked from his body,' and Masonic vengeance, not satisfied with this bloody immolation, denies a resting place to the motionless remains, but they are to be 'burnt to ashes and scattered to the winds.'"

General A. W. Riley: "I hold that the difference between the Christian and a heathen religion is, that one has morality and the other has not. And when our churches refuse to speak of such subjects as slavery, liquor-selling and secret societies, they are becoming heathen religions; that is, religions without morals."

William Wirt: "If this be Masonry, as according to uncontradicted evidence it seems to be, I have no hesitation in saying that I consider it at war with the fundamental principles of the social compact, and a wicked conspiracy against the laws of God and man, that ought to be put down."

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGE-TRY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sanford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co. Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
First Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Baptist, Lowndes Co. Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co. Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co. Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co. Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Saloon Church, Lowndes Co. Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—
Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonic, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tobo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co. Mo.; Hoopesville, Ill.; Esmer, Ill.; Strikersville, N. Y.
Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, LaSalle, Ind.; Congregational Methodist, Maplewood, Mass.
Independent churches in Lowell, Connecticut school house near Lindenwood, Merango and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky.; Uick, Ill.; Clarkburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT.—REV. M. A. Gault, Blanchard Iowa.

COR. SECY AND GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

REC. SECY. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton. Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is: "To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being uprooted, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform. Form of REQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres. W. A. McAlpine; Sec. G. M. Elliott; Treas. E. Fisher, all of Selma.
CALIFORNIA.—Pres. L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec. Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland.
TREAS. C. Rudick, Woodland.
CONNECTICUT.—Pres. J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec. Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas. C. T. Collins, Windsor.
ILLINOIS.—Pres. J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Cor. Sec. H. L. Kellogg; Treas. W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.
INDIANA.—Pres. William H. Figg, Reno Sec. S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas. Benj. Ulah Silver Lake.
IOWA.—Pres. Geo. Warrington, Birningham; Rec. Sec. H. W. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec. C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas. James Harvey.
KANSAS.—Pres. J. F. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec. W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas. J. A. Torrence, N. Cedar.
MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres. S. A. Pratt; Sec. Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas. David Manning Jr., Worcester.
MICHIGAN.—Pres. D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y. H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Belvidere.
MINNESOTA.—Pres. E. G. Paine, Wasego; Cor. Sec. W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y. Thos. Hartley, Richards; Treas. Wm H. Morrill, St. Charles.
MISSOURI.—Pres. B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas. William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.
NEBRASKA.—Pres. S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec. W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas. J. C. Fye.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres. Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec. S. G. Kimball, Gilford Village.
TREAS. George Crosby, Gilford Village.
NEW YORK.—Pres. F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y. John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas. M. Merrick, Syracuse.
OHIO.—Pres. Rev. R. M. Smith, Painesville.
REC. SEC. Rev. A. G. George, Mansfield; Cor. Sec. Rev. A. M. Campbell, Cedarville; Treas. W. P. Clark, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.
PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres. A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec. N. Callender, Thompson; Treas. W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.
VERMONT.—Pres. W. R. Laird, St. Johnsbury; Sec. G. W. Fother.
WISCONSIN.—Pres. J. W. Wood, Saraboo. Sec. W. W. Ames, Menomonge; Treas. M. N. Britten, Vienna.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD.

EDITORS.

HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1886

THE LEVER replies to one of its correspondents who insists on changing the name of the Prohibition party, and argues that parties should die when their work is done. There is good sense in this. The party which survives the object which called it into existence "is dead while it liveth." American is a far better name than Prohibition for a national party. The attempt on the Pacific Coast to resurrect the old "Native American" (Know Nothing) party proves the name popular. Satan wants it.

THE CHRISTIAN CONGRESS.

We request our readers to turn to last week's Cynosure and re-read the article on page 9, sketching the action had on the above Congress from July 14 to November 9. We re-insert the committee now having the matter in hand: editor Calvin W. Pritchard, Friend; Joseph E. Roy, D. D., long Southern Field Secretary American Missionary Association; Rev. B. T. Roberts, editor Free Methodist; Rev. M. C. Ranssen, Lutheran; L. N. Stratton, D. D., Wesleyan; and J. M. Hitchcock, long superintendent of the Moody church Sabbath-school, Chicago.

This committee have already met and opened correspondence to obtain speakers. The names of the distinguished men given as fully endorsing the congress last week were sought, not because we rely on great men; our reliance is on God. But, knowing that those men were opposed to the lodge their endorsement was asked to silence the slanders of the press, which is largely controlled by Masons who keep the people in ignorance by silence or by slandering the opponents of the lodge, as if they were few and unimportant persons; whereas, they represent the brains, character, and religion of the United States.

It is said the Pre-millennial convention in session last week in Chicago, cost $4,000. The expenses of our conference should be provided for at once, so as to pay the expenses of speakers. It would be well to invite ministers to preach to their people on the secret lodge system, and give notice of the February 22nd meeting long enough before, to allow people time to prepare to attend.

FALSE CROYS.

Many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ, and shall deceive many.—Matt. 24: 5.

Twenty-four false Messiahs appeared in the world about the time of the Saviour's first coming as the Son of Man, in Palestine. We are to expect like imposters as his second coming draws near.

Above fifty years ago, John Wilkes came into a weaving-room attached to a farm-house in northern Pennsylvania, where a woman sat weaving in her loom. It was a retired back country neighborhood, inhabited by a devout and simple-minded people. In sepulchral solemnity the man asked her if she believed Christ was coming to the world? She answered, "Yes." "I that speak unto thee am he," was his solemn reply. She and her neighbors believed, and worshipped him in a school-house; and left their apples in heaps till covered with snow in the orchards; because Christ had come and the world was to end. After a while the authorities got out a warrant to imprison him, and he left, telling his leading disciple to meet him at a certain street corner, at such a day and hour, in Philadelphia. The poor deluded farmer was on the spot at the time, but no John Wilkes appeared. He came back from his weary journey a firm believer in John Wilkes.

About ten years ago, Mrs. Dora Beekman, wife of a pastor in Byron, Ill., began to be worshipped as Christ. Her daughter, a bright girl at Rockford Seminary, left, bankrupt in morals, and is, no one knows where. Decent people, fair-minded men among them, worshipped Miss. Beekman, and built her a house. A Methodist preacher from Michigan is among her converts; and there are several squads of her disciples who are singing:—

"All hail the power of Dora's name,

Let angels prostrate fall,

She traveled and died out West, and her followers would not believe her dead, and waited for her to wake up till she rotted. They still believe "death had no power over her," though compelled to bury her.

A late Cincinnati Gazette tells us of a Mrs. Martin on Walnut Hills, who receives worship as Christ; and with a Mrs. Brooks, holds meetings or seances, and is making converts. A young preacher from Spurgeon's College, London, who went there from Cincinnati, had agreed to preach for Dr. Strong in the Central Congregational church, but fell into the seance held by these women and broke his appointment because he believed in Mrs. Martin, and that the churches "have been tried and found wanting."

The earth muttering beneath our feet, the belching out of its internal fires, "distress of nations with perplexity;" "the sea and the waves roaring;" as in our Mexican Gulf, with cyclones beyond precedent and a lawless populace outgrowing the bonds of law as in Jerusalem when it fell,—if these are not auguries of Christ's coming, they surely presage catastrophe, and prove the existence of forces in our crazy planet, sufficient to blow it to fragments and melt its elements with fervent heat.

The Jews failed to "discern the signs of the times," and their posterity for eighteen hundred years have been fulfilling what those signs presaged. As we are doing, they rejected Christ and worshiped devils, and are "Jews."

PREMILLENNIALISM.

Our readers know, perhaps, that a strong convention was in session in Chicago last week, to discuss the above subject. Dr. E. P. Goodwin led in one of the ablest of the many strong discourses given. His theme was that Christ's return will be more humano, "Literal, personal, and visible;" and this is doubtless true. But his personal appearing may vary from all our conceptions. He will not surely appear in "flesh and blood," which "cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." (1 Cor. 15: 50). Christ appeared to Joshua as a captain with sword drawn; to the three on the mount, and to John in Revelation in dazzling glory; and to Mary and Thomas as their crucified friend. But he was always "Literal, personal and visible." His coming in clouds flanked by angel hosts; and his appearing when "before his face the earth and heavens shall flee away (Rev. 20: 11) are to be very different personal appearing from any seen or known as yet.

The Cynosure favors this Prophetic Convention, and loves the good men engaged in it; though their attempts to join hands with the Masonic lodge in Knight Templar Lorimer, which is joining Jeroboam's priests with Judah's; their total abstention from "preparing the way of the Lord" by removing the obstructions which prevent his coming, must make the compassionate angels who watch their convention weep.

Yet it is right to strive to "discern the signs of the times" and to look for, haste unto, and draw motives from the coming of Christ, which is nearing every hour, and now almost here. The acceptable year of the Lord is, all down the ages, joined with the "day of vengeance of our God." The Haymarket bomb, crushing some sixty-seven men and killing seven of them, was a morning gun of God's "day of vengeance," and a presage of his "wrath unto the uttermost."

Still, as we now stand on soil in the South, soaked with blood and ridged with graves, and shout hallelujahs over the fall of slavery, which threw back in God's face all the laws he had given to shape society and save men—

"So, when armed with vengeance in terror Christ comes,
The nation's rebellious to tame,
The reins of omnipotent power he assumes,
And rides in a chariot of flame.

When the portals of heaven at his bidding obey,
And expand ere this banner appearing,
Earth trembles beneath till her mountains give way
And hell shakes her fetters with fear."

Even in that awful coming with clouds, when every eye shall see him, God's saints will lift up their heads with joy for their redemption is at hand; as the godly old Feemster in the heart of the Mississippi, burst out in triumphant poetry and song while the ground was shaken all around him by the first roar of rebel and Union cannon. He knew that his lifelong prayers were to be answered, and his country be free. But he knew, even then, as little of Appomattox, the murder of Lincoln, and the way for the nation's dead, as Premillennialists now know of the second coming of Christ,—the time or the mode. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." But a convention to fulfill prophecy, or prohibit liquors, which joins in with men who condemn Christ's example by Christ—excluding worship in secret lodges, cannot pray sincerely "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!" When Christ comes he is to destroy all who worship the beast, or his image, or receive his mark. Had he come to this millennial convention, some of its members would have fallen dead, as did Nadab and Abihu, who offered strange fire before the Lord. They could not know of his doctrine because they did not do his will! Yet though faulty, dim and uncertain, the convention does good by turning men's minds to God, and the things which are coming on the earth, and by exposing the weak and worldly post-millennialist errorists who think to aid forward Christ's coming, while their congregations are paying hundreds to support the worship of devils in lodges, where they pay tens for the worship of Christ in his church.

If this writing falls under the eye of any member of this convention, we beg such a one in the name of the Master he serves to prayerfully consider whether it would be right in the sight of God to unite to pray for the coming of Christ with a brother who should form a society, and cut out the name of Christ from such parts of the Bible as were used in his lectures? Yet the Blue Lodge cuts out the Saviour's name whenever it occurs in the Scriptures used in its lectures; and Dr. Lorimer belongs to that lodge. Is it not all one as if he did the act himself?

COERCION OF CONSCIENCE.

The American Sentinel of Oakland, California, comes to us with a long reply to an editorial of this paper, in which the writer gives a long list of fines and imprisonments of Seventh-day Adventists for work on Sunday. One man is said to have been sent to jail from Springdale, Ark., for "digging potatoes for his table on Sunday."

This and other parts of the article wear an aspect of extravagance, so that we must wait for confirmation of the facts before commenting on them. If the laws of Kansas or any other State jail a conscientious Adventist who believes the Fourth Command of the Decalogue requires him to work on Sunday and lay by on Saturday, we understand those laws to be unconstitutional and void. Congress "can make no law prohibiting the free exercise" of a man's religion; and States cannot make laws repealing or conflicting with provisions of the Constitution.

The same paper says, "The moment the name of God should be inserted in the Constitution a man becomes punishable for his religious opinions." No; no more than when republicanism is put into the Constitution a man can be punished for saying monarchy is better. Opinion is free, and utterance free all this side of crime, as child murder or polygamy.

But a government without God or morals has no power but lynch power. If majorities can make consciences, then when the rogues are a majority they can hang up all the honest men and be right and just in doing so.

"But right is right since God is God,
And right the day will win;
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

To say that ordinary murder, robbery and adultery are right, is to say there is no right or wrong, but one thing is right as another.

THE N. C. A. CONVENTION IN THE SOUTH.

The last "National Anniversary" worthy of the name was at Batavia, New York, four years ago last September. It is time we revised the by-law on this point to conform to our practice, or else return to the annual national convention as provided in the N. C. A. constitution, and as maintained up to 1878. It is a question whether anniversaries are so profitable an expenditure of our reform energy, as occasional conventions called together by some exigency or purpose of unusual interest with greater investments in the ordinary publication and lecture work.

But, letting the past go, the Southern convention, voted by the annual meeting last June, does present an opportunity worthy of our best efforts. The wonderful progress of popular opinion in respect to the lodge system in many quarters, and the uniform willingness to discuss its character and accept the truth, are providential beckonings to the National Association. The wisdom of the proposal is being daily approved by the experience of the N. C. A. agent now travelling South; and the prospect of a noble meeting, every way worthy of our reform, is daily brightening. Although the Board has taken no action fixing time and place, yet the fact that Knoxville is the place, and the last of December the time generally recommended by those on whose judgment the Board must rely, is reason enough for opening the question in these columns. It should have been done weeks ago. The N. C. A. Board, which has held no meeting for four months, will probably soon give the matter their attention, and a formal call will be issued by the president, Dr. Collins.

An interesting article by Edmund Kirke in the last North American Review, on industrial education for colored youth, says: "There is no better position from which to observe the present condition of the Southern negroes than Knoxville, Tennessee, and there, I think, the problem has been solved of how they should be educated." "In no Northern town have they larger liberty, or more perfect freedom to develop whatever of manhood or womanhood is in them." This being the case, the local opportunities for a successful meeting against the lodge will in that city be most fully enjoyed.

There should be no longer delay on the part of friends in the South who can attend, because of a formal call. Let churches appoint delegates, arrange for their expenses, and prepare memorials upon any phase of the lodge question upon which they wish advice or information. There are able speakers in the South who can bring to the discussion new ideas and invigorate it with new blood. Let every possible arrangement be made during the few weeks that remain before the convention will be held.

—The Voice of New York, which is the highest authority on prohibition matters, makes the total vote of the party this fall 323,061. Two years ago the St. John vote was 151,223. The gain is more than 100 per cent.

—We are constrained, by the way, to say a word for the Daily Voice, which was published during October. It was with genuine regret that we took up the last issue and knew it was the last. A cleaner, livelier, abler daily paper it would be hard to find. The country may hail the day when it shall again issue daily the year round.

—Elder J. F. Browne has been a few days with us in Chicago attending the conference on the second coming of the Lord. He shows the wear of hard work, and is doing well his part in changing the public sentiment of Wisconsin to the right side on the lodge question. Let the brethren stand by him as faithfully.

—We are happy to announce to the Cynosure readers that Hon. S. C. Pomeroy has kindly consented to give them something of his leisure time this winter by preparing for our columns a series of papers containing reminiscences of his Senatorial life during the trying times of the war and reconstruction, from 1861 to 1873. Senator Pomeroy will have universal thanks for this contribution to our country's history, and welcome aid in increasing the value of the Cynosure.

—Bro. Ebey, Missionary Secretary of the Free Methodist church, calls attention to a slight error in the notice of the transfer of the Free Methodist paper. Rev. S. K. J. Chesbro was elected business manager to assist Bro. T. B. Arnold, the publisher, not as assistant editor. Rev. B. T. Roberts has come on from New York and has taken up his duties as editor. The price paid for the paper, $8,000, which at first seemed large, includes the material for printing, worth $800, and back subscriptions and other accounts amounting to $4,400 more.

—The lumberman's evangelist, Bro. William F. Davis of Chelsea, Mass., visited this city and Wheaton last week. He spoke two evenings in the special meetings being held among the students, and gained the love and esteem of all for his earnest, clear and eloquent speaking, not only, but also for his excellences of character. He begins meetings this week in Manistee, Mich., with a Bro. Penny, from Pennsylvania, who joins him in his faith mission for the unevangelized and neglected settlements of the Northwest. The Cynosure readers will find this mission work well worthy of their support and prayer. Contributions sent to Wm. F. Davis, Mt. Washington, Chelsea, Mass., will be duly acknowledged.

—In the year 1851 while Dr. Flavel Bascom, now the patriarch of the Congregational churches of Illinois, was pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Galesburg, the editor of the Cynosure, then president of Knox College, repeated in two discourses in that church an address which he had given before the State Congregational Association which met that year in Rockford. The address was on "Secret Societies," from the texts Ephesians 5:11 and Galatians 4:9. Friends who heard it published it in pamphlet form the printing being done in Zebina Eastman's Western Citizen office in this city. These particulars are given because of their historical interest. In an introductory note by Dr. Bascom he says: "I would invite particular attention to the anti-republican and anti-Christian features of all the three secret orders in common, as developed in the progress of the discourses. After the reader has pondered all the arguments, I would like to ask him if the sacred cause of temperance has not been dragged into an unholy alliance. Is it not true that all which makes a division of 'the Sons' to differ from a plain temperance society was borrowed from Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship, viz., secrecy, ceremony, ornament and the benefit clause? Is there not, then, a more excellent way in which enlightened republicans and American Christians can aid the cause of temperance than by mystery and secrecy—childish ornament and pompous ceremony?"

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Congressional population of Washington is increasing daily, and up at the Capitol there are many indications that the opening of the session is an event in the near future. A few of the Committee rooms have been opened for business already, and here certain Senatorial chairmen, among them Senators Edmunds and Morrill of Vermont, spend some hours daily. Chairman Randall, that staunch protectionist who presides over the House Appropriations Committee, is also busy at his committee room desk. He is determined to have a bill ready by the time Congress meets, provided he can get a quorum of his men together long enough for that purpose. Because of the precedence that is allowed all money bills, he may drop his bill upon any measure of revenue reform that may venture to lift its head.

It is a wonder that Mr. Randall, with his Appropriation extinguisher watching for somebody trying to reduce the tariff, has not served for a cartoon. In a nation of politicians who divide themselves under the banners of Democracy and Republicanism, Mr. Randall enjoys the unique distinction of being classed as a Republican by many Democrats, and as a Democrat by most Republicans. He has claimed to exercise in his committee room more power than the Chief Magistrate in the Executive Mansion, and to have made Presidents, even if he has never himself occupied the White House.

The President is in close retirement now. He sees no unimportant callers, and is busy at work on his message to Congress. Each of the Cabinet officers has laid before him the advance sheets of their annual reports, and Col. Lamont has been assisting him in arranging the matter.

The President's country home is expected to be ready for occupancy in about two weeks. The President and Mrs. Cleveland do not intend to reside there now, nor do they contemplate living there permanently at all. For the present "Oak View" is to be the residence of Mrs. Cleveland's mother, and it will always be available for the President and his wife to go and come as they like. It would be an admirable resort for the President now, while he wants privacy for the preparation of his message. He could shut himself up there without being intruded upon, as the place is four miles from the White House.

The question of absorbing interest just now to the Republican Senators who are here, is whether Mr. Van Wyck is to be re-elected. If he is to hold the balance of power jointly with Mr. Riddleberger, the erratic Senator from Virginia, they admit that it will be extremely uncomfortable. The Senate is now composed of thirty-seven straight out Republicans, and these two above mentioned Senators, who vote with either party as it suits them. Consequently the issue in Nebraska will be watched with very great interest. There are now as many Senators as Representatives in the city, although there are but seventy-six members in a full upper House, while the lower consists of three hundred and twenty-five.

Secretary Whitney has been applying the heroic treatment to several bureaus in his department, making one to do the work over which eight have been quarrelling among themselves. Through the petty jealousies and wastefulness of these bureaus some $20,000,000 worth of naval stores have accumulated, most of which is useless except to be sold as old material.

Delegations from seventeen secret lodges, organized ostensibly for insurance, met in the Riggs House here Tuesday, and organized a "National Congress." The secretary of the meeting was R. C. Hill, editor of a Sunday sheet in Buffalo, falsely called the Truth. This new "national congress" sit, with Albert Pike's Freemasons, over against the Congress of the people, calls itself beneficiary and fraternal, which is another falsehood, as much as if a life insurance company should proclaim itself "fraternal and beneficial." None but secret societies with a ritual and lodge system are to be admitted. The object of this combination of lodgery is to operate against numerous speculative companies which have titles which some might understand to belong to lodges. The Odd-fellows, United Workmen, Knights of Honor, Royal Arcanum, and United American Mechanics are the prominent societies engaged in this business, which seems to have more behind it than appears on its face.

The Craftsman, a paper sustained by the lodges here, has two advertisements of boycotts: one by a printers' union, the other by a Knights of Labor lodge. Evidently Washington is not ready for such sensible measures as have stopped such business in several Northern cities.

As another pointer showing the influence of the secret orders, the "Master Workman of District Assembly Knights of Labor, a man named Hobbs, has been given a position on the National Labor Bureau and has been sent to New York to collect statistics, of course to help on his order.

PRESS COMMENT.

Dr. Cooper, of Philadelphia, was visiting his flock. He called on a parishoner and asked him if he prayed in public. He answered, "No." "Do you pray with your family?" "No." "Do you pray at your table?" "No." "Do you pray in secret?" "No." "Do you pray at all?" "No." Then he addressed Dr. Cooper and said, "Dr. Cooper, I have been thinking of joining the Odd-fellows." The answer of Dr. Cooper was, "You are now at the right stage to join them. Having discontinued prayer you are in the right state to enter the Odd-fellow's fraternity."—Conservator.

In California the old condition of small majorities has returned. It is probable that the Democratic candidates on the State ticket have all been elected by majorities from 2,000 down to 200, with a single exception. The Lieutenant-Governor and one of the Supreme Court Judges may yet come in, with the official returns, from the Republican ticket. Two of the three Railroad Commissioners are Republicans, and two of the four members of the Board of Equalization. Four of the six Congressmen are Republicans, a gain of one for the Democrats. O'Donnell, of the party of eccentricity, has about 11,000 votes for Governor. Wiggington, of the "American party," or party of sentiment, [Anti-Chinese or Know Nothing.—ED. CYNOSURE.] has about 8,000 votes for Governor. Russell, of the Prohibition party, or party of "principle," has about 6,000 votes for Governor.—Pacific.

We sat down recently with a young man who belonged to two of these beneficiary societies which are, as the above writer declares, "almost costless." He had been a member of these societies for five years and had paid dues regularly. He was charmed with them because they would help him so much when sick. Taking the figures which he furnished of initiation fees, monthly dues, regalia, etc., we found he had paid in about $400. During that time he had drawn out for sick benefits $70. Having allowed his dues to lapse once he had been obliged to forego the delightful charity of the lodge during one period of sickness, and had found that lodge insurance had some unexpected drawbacks to it. We can only pity the people for the delusion under which they labor in this matter.—Washington American.

That the order of "Knights" came into being in the genuine interests of labor we do not doubt, and that it may ultimately work good in some respects for the cause it advocates we dare not yet deny. Thousands of the best citizens of our country, who, while they do not belong to the order, yet have hitherto spoken, and still speak kindly and hopefully of it, and even pray that they may be able to find a proper solution for this vexed problem. The order is just now, as we view it, on trial for its life in this country, and we fear has been losing sympathy even among laboring men for some time past. Men naturally revolt against a power that becomes despotic in its demands, and runs away with the God-given and legitimate rights of the individual.—Evangelical Messenger.

Secret societies of all sorts are multiplying so rapidly that their name is legion. They are getting into politics and in the management of industrial concerns, and the newspapers of the day are beginning to see some of the evils and are speaking out against the evil, although as yet quite timidly. These societies are getting to be public nuisances to such a degree that they are attracting the attention of thoughtful men. Possibly the time is near at hand when the objections urged by the church against these children of secrecy and darkness will no longer sound in ears that will not hear. As yet the church's warnings have been but a lone voice crying out in the wilderness. May the voice no longer remain unheeded.—Lutheran Standard.

—Not very long ago in Turkey it was considered a shame for a woman to read. To-day two schools for girls, in Constantinople, have been established by the sultan himself.

THE HOME.

A COUNTRY THANKSGIVING.

Ay, good man, close the great barn door:
The mellow harvest time is o'er!

The earth has given her treasures meet,
Of golden corn and hardened wheat.

You and your neighbors well have wrought,
And of the summer's bounty caught;

Won from her smiles and from her tears
Much goods, perhaps, for many years.

You come a tribute now to pay—
The bells proclaim Thanksgiving Day.

Well have you sown, well have you reaped;
And of the riches you have heaped,

You think, perhaps, that you will give
A part, that others, too, may live.

But if such argument you use,
Your niggard bounty I refuse.

No gifts you on the altar lay,
In any sense are given away.

Lo! rings from heaven a voice abroad:
"Who helps God's poor doth lend the Lord."

What is your wealth? He'd have you know,
To have it, you must let it go.

Think you the hand by heaven struck cold,
Will yet have power to clutch its gold!

Shrouds have no pockets, do they say?
Behold, I show you, then, the way:

Wait not till death shall shut the door,
But send your cargoes on before.

Lo! he that giveth of his board
To help God's poor, doth lend the Lord.

To-day, my brethren—do not wait;
Yonder stands Dame Kelley's gate:

And would you build a mansion fair
In heaven, send your lumber there.

Each stick that on her wood-pile lies,
May raise a dome beyond the skies;

You stop the rents within her walls,
And yonder rise your marble halls;

For every pane that stops the wind,
There shineth one with Jasper lined.

Your wealth is gone, your form lies cold,
But in the city paved with gold,

Your hoard is held in hands Divine;
It bears a name that marks it thine.

Behold the bargain ye have made;
With usury the debt is paid.

No moth doth eat, no thieves do steal,
No suffering heart doth envy feel.

Ring out the words: Who of his hoard
Doth help God's poor, doth lend the Lord!

Go get your cargoes under way;
The bells ring out Thanksgiving Day!

—Selected.

AT LAST—A THANKSGIVING.

"Oh friends! We get whate'er we give."

It was the last month of the long, bright, beautiful autumn, that seemed loth to yield to the claims of its successor, and gave vague hints that it meant to hold its own as long as possible. The village parsonage yard was aflame with color, and the dahlias and coxcombs were splendid with the crimson of the blood of the dying year. But the dahlias and the coxcombs, of all the flower-life alone told of victory in this struggle between life and death; here and there stricken hearts showed that the frost king's touch had been a vanquishing power.

And this apparent victory of defeat and death seemed to reign not only without but within the parsonage walls, for two little lives which had budded and given promise of bloom had, in the first of the summer, been laid low by the frost of death. The little ones were gone, and joy had been a stranger to the mother since then. When the father had recovered from a shock which comes in kind and strength to a man but once, and forms a separate experience in all his life, he roused himself to look in to the face of duty, and saw in doing so the face of a loving father.

But as he looked into the eyes of his wife, he saw nothing but despair. Watching her as she lingered among the flowers, he thought she might find there her lesson of hope; for he was one who believed that God's kingdom of nature was meant to be an interpreter of his kingdom of grace. "She'll find, dear heart," he whispered to himself, "that the Father's changes mean victory for his own in the end."

But the summer passed, and the autumn days came and sped on, and the departed light did not revisit his home; for his wife was still shrouded in gloom, and wandered like a crushed soul among the flowers whose beauty the frost-king had taken. The minister began to feel that the hand of death might beckon also to his wife, and that she would gladly welcome the sign.

The village people cast awed glances at the pale face, once so bright, while they thought of the hours when it had brightened or saddened for their own joys or sorrows. The widow Strait and her children missed, perhaps, the gentle ministrations of the pastor's wife more than others; for her hopeful words and sweet ways had beguiled them often into realizing joys which could not have been found without her help. The widow Strait could not forget her own deep sorrow when she groped in the darkness, blind to the faintest ray of hope, until the hand of the minister's wife had clasped hers, and led her on until she could read clearly, "Thy husband shall rise again." When the blow fell at the parsonage, the widow hastened to offer her deepest sympathy to the afflicted one, but found, to her sorrow, that the hand that had led her on to the light would not accept hers as a help.

The widow mused sorrowfully, and said to herself, "How strange that one who can see so well for others cannot see the light for herself!" And she mourned that her spiritual resources were not adequate to give comfort. . . . Thanksgiving time drew near, and the widow dreaded its approach, for the year before her adored husband had made it a time of cheer. "How can I meet the day? How give thanks?" were questions which rose again and again in her mind, and clamored for an answer.

"Are we to have a Thanksgiving?" asked the elder of her boys; and the question was echoed by Johnny, while both waited for their mother's answer. They saw her face pale slightly, they saw the tears fill her eyes and her lips tremble, before the answer came with forced decision. "Yes," my children, we are to have a Thanksgiving; and I want your help, for I am going so invite the minister's family to keep it with us."

"The minister's family!" exclaimed Ned.

"The minister's wife?" asked Johnny in a tone of despair; "there won't be a bit of fun then."

"And why not?" asked the mother. Neither of the boys seemed prepared to explain why; but they persisted in declaring that with the minister's wife present there could not be a real Thanksgiving. But still with the characteristic elasticity of boy-nature, they began to plan for a good time, taking counsel with their memories of the old blessed days when their father made Thanksgiving a day of rejoicing.

The minister, as he entered his supper-room one evening, said to his wife: "Maggie, I have been to see Mrs. Strait; I thought the coming Thanksgiving would bring back the old sad memories, and I expected to see her cast down; but, dearest, she has her eye upon the promise that you helped her to see; and she has invited us to come and help her keep Thanksgiving." The minister crossed the room, and as he laid his hand upon the bowed head of his wife, he added: "I found the widow Strait gathering morning-glory seeds; and when I surprised her at the task, she said, 'I have been thinking, while gathering these, of the new glory that comes after the dying. I was first helped to look forward to it by your wife. She was an angel of mercy to me; and all day I have been wondering how I could turn the help she gave me towards helping her. I have had it in my soul as a prayer all day, and I feel sure that it will come about in the Lord's way; for I feel sure that help such as she gave me returns to bless the one that gave it.'"

The glorious sun was touching and transfiguring all the autumn ruin, when the minister's wife took her way to the widow Strait's cottage. As she went up the front walk, Ned and Johnny, who were raking leaves in the yard, needed nothing more than a glimpse of the light in her face to tell them that there had been a change. "My!" whispered Johnny, as he let fall his armful of leaves, "she looks as she used to!" Ned only nodded in a superior way, as older brothers will sometimes; but he made up his mind that they would have a real Thanksgiving.

And they had it; and before the minister's wife laid her head upon her pillow that night, she realized more fully than ever before the truth through which one of our poets helped to glorify his ideal Thanksgiving:

"Evil is only the slave of good;
Sorrow the servant of joy;
And the soul is mad that refuses food
Of the meaneast in God's employ."

—Christian Intelligencer.

THANKSGIVING-SERVICES.

Special services of thanksgiving are among the earliest forms of public worship. They began in the family, touched with a sense of its loneliness and dependence upon a higher power, and grew with the growth of the tribe into a national recognition of God's government among men. Only an inconsiderable class of atheists, for the most part those who have forfeited the confidence of their fellows, have ever protested against such an expression of gratitude. What a shadow and conviction of unworthiness would fall upon the land were the people denied the generous outflow of better feeling and loyalty to the highest impulse of the soul. It does not presume a high degree of piety or entire faithfulness in our lives; we say rather he must be heartless indeed who does not respond to this invitation. God has been on our right hand and on our left although we did not perceive him. But it is not necessary to have been conscious of his presence to look backward now over the weeks and months and trace by no uncertain signs his influence and power. And the more we look into our hearts, the deeper we penetrate into the secrets of nature and discover the law of its movement, the more surely shall we find evidences of our dependence on God and be forced to join in with the common testimony to his loving kindness, and say, "Oh, give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good; for his mercy endureth forever."—Central Christian Advocate.

DOROTHY'S THANKSGIVING.

(Founded on fact.)

Dorothy was one of the girls of long ago. She lived in Massachusetts in a little town on the seacoast. Her home fronted toward the harbor, but from its narrow back door she could get a glimpse of a distant forest in which wild animals held high carnival. Her father was a captain, her elder brother a sailor, but she was a fisherman, or rather a fisher-girl. You may wonder at this, so I will explain. There were a great many fishermen along the coast, and once in a while on a bright day when business was not too pressing, they would allow their wives or daughters or sweethearts to accompany them.

Well, Dorothy was neither wife, daughter nor sweetheart of any fisherman, but she was David Northrup's well-beloved niece, and it was he who sometimes favored her by taking her in his boat while fishing. From him she had learned the art of fishing. It was well for the comfort of the family that Dorothy had learned to fish, for she could thus furnish one article of daily food, and their finances sometimes were low. Her father and brother being necessarily away from home most of the time, she was looked upon as the "man of the family." They all leaned upon her, from her sickly mother down to Ben, the three-year-old baby.

Within a stone's throw of the log house in which Dorothy lived was a cluster of fishermen's huts. Over to the right of her home were two mills, a saw-mill and a grist-mill. It was one of her great delights to sit upon the great logs in the former and ride nearly up to the buzzing, awful saw that struck terror to the heart of her timid sister, Elizabeth.

But even more than a ride on that wonderful chariot, the great log, moving slowly along, Dorothy enjoyed her visits to the blacksmith's shop, three doors distant from her own home. When her "stint" was done of an evening, she was frequently allowed a run down to the shop. The flaming forge, working glowingly over wagon-wheel tires and horseshoes, had a weird fascination to her, second only to the blacksmith's striking face. She liked his face, it was strong and good, and she liked him, showing her affection in a way that touched his heart. She helped his little Nina, a delicate child, get the supper sometimes, and often wiped the dishes for her and rocked baby Daniel patiently like the "little mother that she was" until his rebellious eyes closed in sleep. Old Daniel's face had written upon it the peace that comes after the battle. He had lost the wife of his youth while removing his family from Europe, and her dying cry still rang in his ears, "Bury me not in the sea." Their one son had been killed by a pack of wolves, and another had fallen under the tomahawk of an Indian. The five little ones living in the rear of his shop were his grandchildren—children of his daughter Nina, who had been drowned.

It took all the aged blacksmith could earn to fill the five little young robin's mouths, always clamoring for more. Child as Dorothy was, somehow he leaned upon her. Her sunny face, her cheery disposition seemed always to inspire him, and so, no matter how busy he might be at his forge, her step always caused him to look up with a smile and a welcome word of greeting.

There came a time, however, when Dorothy's face became overcast, her happy heart saddened with grief. Word came to the hamlet by a ship that touched shore, that the ship in which Dorothy's father and brother sailed had been wrecked, and all lives lost. It seemed at first as if Dorothy and Elizabeth and little Ben would be left motherless as well as fatherless, for the frail mother was prostrated by the blow. It was this grievous fact that enabled the brave Dorothy to hide her grief as best she could—she longed to cheer her mother.

"Mother, dear," she said, striving to speak calmly, "if father and Nat are dead, they've gone straight to God—that ought to cheer us."

"But I cannot live without them," moaned the stricken woman.

"Poor, poor mother!" soothed the pitying Dorothy, whose own heart was bleeding sorely, "It is hard, oh, so hard, so hard, but mother, dear, you can live without father and Nat, because you know God is leading us. If he has really taken them away, he'll let us lean on him heavier than ever, but perhaps they're still living somewhere—folks don't know for sure that they're not, and they may come back; who knows but they will? Let's live as if we were expectin' them, mother, or, if we can't do that, let's live as if they were expectin' us up there, you know. If they're expectin' us, we've got to do our work here, because if we don't, they'll be disappointed; they won't see us."

Thus quaintly Dorothy comforted her mother, but her own sore heart had its times of wailing. Many a night she cried herself to sleep without any one knowing it—not even Elizabeth who shared her bed. It was spring when the sad news was brought to Dorothy's family; it was fall now, and Mrs. Dart, Dorothy's mother, had made up her mind that not until the sea gives up its dead would she see her husband and elder son again.

They were all busy preparing for winter. Dorothy had exchanged a pair of knitted socks, her own work, for a barrel in which to pack fish, with the cooper's wife, and a pair of mittens for some dressed leather, with the tanner's elderly daughter, the leather to be converted into soft house shoes for mother, Elizabeth and herself. There were two large rooms in the house besides the lofts above, one the kitchen, the other the "best room."

You have often heard of the great chimneys with the large fireplaces in which were seats. In just such a huge fireplace the Dart family were seated one cold November evening. The wind blew fiercely against the cabin, but the little group heeded not the war of the elements, as the great blazing logs in the fireplace gave them warmth and physical comfort. I say physical for their hearts were still sore. The thought of Thanksgiving drawing near oppressed them with a weight of woe, reminding them of happy days when their family had been unbroken.

"Mother," said Elizabeth, "we're goin' to have the great big Thanksgiving cookies, ain't we?"

"I don't know—I guess not; they're an awful bother to make, and I don't seem to have the strength. How Nat did like those cookies!" Mrs. Dart sighed heavily.

"I'll make 'em, mother," Dorothy said. "I'll make a great panful, because you know, mother dear, there are folks right around us that'll like 'em just as well as dear Nat did."

Notwithstanding Dorothy's unselfish words her heart ached so intensely that she longed to sob aloud. She dropped her half-knitted sock in her lap and for a moment her brown hands were tightly clenched in her lap, while her thoughts ran somewhat after this fashion: "Dear, dear father! how he did love boiled deer with vegetables. Uncle David told me to-day that he'd give us a nice piece to cook for Thanksgiving, but I was afraid to tell mother for fear she'd get to cryin' again. She hasn't cooked a mouthful of deer's meat since we heard of father's death. Then those great seed cookies—big as a tea-plate, with the fat girl and boy stamped on 'em, he with his arm around her. Nat used to say that was 'Dorothy an' her future sweetheart.' I'm not old enough, I guess, for a sweetheart, but if I was I'd rather have Nat, dear old Nat, than all the sweethearts in this world. How Nat would make way with those cookies, but sayin' he did love 'em—that's no reason no one else should have any. I'll make some if it kills me, an' I'll divide 'em around amongst Daniel Reese's little flock an' Conrad Leip's poor little ones, an' lame Job Hicks an' the sick little Dunkirks."

Dorothy forced back the hot tears that longed to roll down her cheeks and said cheerily: "Mother, what are we goin' to have for our Thanksgiving dinner?"

"Salt pork and one of your fish and bannocks will do as well as anything," was the answer, given drearly.

"Not on Thanksgiving, mother, since we're able to have something better. Let's try to forget ourselves and please others. I was over to see old Daniel Reese to-night."

"That's nothing new; you're there most every night," interrupted Elizabeth.

"Because they need me," pursued Dorothy unruffled, "and old Daniel looks so weary, he can't work at the forge at all now, and there's no money comin' in. I pity him so, just able to drag around the room leaning on his crutch. We can be thankful we haven't got the rheumatism; and, mother, dear little Nina looks so pale and tired, and they all look hungry; it's my belief that they're almost starved."

"You don't really mean that they are almost starved, do you, child?" asked Mrs. Dart, startled and interested.

"Yes, mother, I do; I'm in no mood for joking. Can't we get up a nice Thanksgiving dinner just the same as if dear father and Nat were here, and invite all of the poor Reese family; it'll do 'em a world of good. We might invite Uncle David, too, and poor Matilda Denning—I'm most sure Nat loved her, mother, but hadn't told her so, maybe, and I know she's pining for him; she's got so white and thin that I feel as if I'd like to take her in my arms an' comfort her if I could, but I don't suppose, seein' I'm only a little girl, and not dear, strong, brave Nat, that I could comfort her in that way. What do you think, mother? Wouldn't it be a good way to spend Thanksgiving?"

"Yes, yes, Dorothy child, you're right. It would be much better to show our thanks to God for his goodness to us by making others happy than to eat salt pork and flat rye cakes all by ourselves with tears in our eyes and rebellion in our hearts."

The next two or three days were busy ones. The iron crane and pot-hooks in the fireplace held pots of simmering goodness. The big brick oven in the chimney sent forth wholesome loaves of wheat, rye and Indian bread, and basins of pork and beans. The wooden platters were scoured to immaculate whiteness, and the pewter dishes shone brightly on the broad old dresser. Thanksgiving morning the "best room" was thrown open, and a glowing fire was built in the fireplace. The brass andirons glistened under Dorothy's polishing, and even the floor shone with its clean sprinkling of white sand, on which was traced a pattern like a veritable carpet. You would not have thought that there was any sorrow in that log-house that morning, for every face looked bright as faces usually do when God is put in front of self. An appetizing odor of venison and roast fowls reached every corner of the house.

"There comes Tilly Dunning," cried little Ben, joyfully. "I guess she'll think we've got a good dinner."

"Of course she will," assented Elizabeth. "Why, the Dunnings are awful poor; I don't suppose Tilly has half enough to eat."

"She'll have enough to-day, though," Dorothy said, joyfully; "she can eat, and eat, and eat until she don't want a bit more, and if Nat knew it, I know he'd—"

Dorothy did not finish her sentence, for Tilly was at the door. Tilly and her widowed mother, who had been invited, too. There were tears of joy in her eyes. As she pressed Dorothy's hands, she said, gratefully: "It was so good of you to let us come. I had so dreaded this day because—because you know—"

"Yes, I know, I know, but we'll have a good time all together. Take your things off, Tilly, I'm goin' down after old Daniel Reese. I'll have to help him up here, he's so lame, but I'll soon be back, very soon."

It took longer to get back than Dorothy had thought, for she had to help the frail little Nina dress the younger children, and then when, after much difficulty, they were all at last started, they had to move "at a snail's pace" (Dorothy thought) on account of the old man's feebleness.

"Here we are; now for a good Thanksgiving," Dorothy said, as they all stepped upon the log porch.

"You'll have a good one, child. God bless you forever," Daniel Reese said fervently. "Folks can't help having good times who are always giving others good times."

The door opened then and Dorothy was caught and held fast.

"My little sister!" a voice said, rapturously.

"Oh, Nat! my Nat!" She returned his embrace passionately, but broke loose to ask, huskily:

"Nat, dear, where's father?"

Nat pointed to the "best room," and a moment later father and daughter were exchanging tearful but fervent greetings. The corner table was loaded with gifts brought from different parts of Europe to the beloved ones at home. It would make a story of itself if I should tell you where the wanderers had been all this time. Their floating together on a piece of the wrecked vessel and afterward swimming to a distant island; their summer spent without being able to attract a vessel, and at last their being picked up by a vessel bound for Europe, might be indefinitely enlarged upon. But I will only say that there never was a more joyous Thanksgiving than the one Dorothy spent in the old log house. Such joyous faces as gathered about the bountifully-spread table are rarely seen. Then came the long, delightful evening; father and Nat telling their weird tale, more fascinating than anything born of the imagination. They wound up their evening by singing "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow," and Dorothy folded her hands reverently, murmuring, "Oh, such blessings!"—Ernest Gilmore.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING DAY—A. D., 1622.

And now, said the Governor, gazing abroad on the piled-up store
Of the sheaves that dotted the clearings, and covered the meadows o'er,

"Tis meet that we render praises because of this yield of grain;

'Tis meet that the Lord of the harvest be thanked for his sun and rain.

"And therefore, I, William Bradford (by the grace of God
to-day,
And the franchisee of this good people), Governor of Plymouth, say

Thro' virtue of vested power—ye shall gather with one accord,
And hold, in the month of November, thanksgiving with the Lord.

"He hath granted us peace and plenty, and the quiet we've sought so long;

He hath thwarted the wily savage, and kept him from doing us wrong;

And unto our Feast the Sachem shall be bidden that he may know
We worship his own Great Spirit who maketh the harvests grow.

"So shoulder your matchlocks, masters: there is hunting of all degrees;

And fishermen, take your tackle, and scour for spoil the seas;

And maidens and dames of Plymouth, your delicate crafts employ,
To honor our First Thanksgiving, and make it a Feast of joy!

"We fall of the fruits and dainties so close to our hand in Devon;

—Ah, they are the lightest losses we suffer for sake of heaven!

But see, in our open clearings, how golden the melons lie;

Enrich them with sweets and spices, and give us the Pumpkin-Pie!"

So, bravely the preparations went on for the autumn
Feast;

The deer and the bear were slaughtered; wild game from the greatest to least

Was heaped in the Colony cabins; brown home-brew served for wine,

And the plum and the grape of the forest, for orange and peach and pine.

At length came the day appointed: the snow had begun to fall,

But the clang from the meeting-house belfry rang merrily out for all,

And summoned the folk of Plymouth, who hastened with glad accord

To listen to Elder Brewster as he fervently thanked the Lord.

In his seat sat Governor Bradford; men, matrons and maidens fair;

Miles Standish and all his soldiers, with corselet and sword,
were there;

And sobbing and tears and gladness had each in its turn the away,

For the grave of the sweet Rose Standish o'ershadowed Thanksgiving Day.

And when Massasoit, the Sachem, sat down with his hundred braves,

And ate of the varied riches of gardens and woods and waves,

And looked on the granaried harvest—with a blow on his brawny chest,

He muttered, "The good Great Spirit loves his white children best!"

—Wide Awake.

Land of liberty! Thy children have no cause to blush for thee. What though the arts have reared few monuments among us, and scarce a trace of the Muse's footstep is found in the paths of our forests or along the banks of our rivers; yet our soil has been consecrated by the blood of heroes, and by great and holy deeds of peace. Its wide extent has become one vast temple and hallowed asylum, sanctified by the prayers and blessings of the persecuted of every sect, and the wretched of all nations.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

—A memorial sermon in honor of the semi-centennial of the laying of the corner-stone of the Mount Holyoke Seminary was preached by the Rev. W. F. Hawkes, South Hadley, Mass., on October 3, reviewing at some length the life of Mary Lyons, and the lessons to be drawn from her work.

—Marietta College is now under the lead of President Eaton (late Commissioner of Education at Washington). The present Freshman class numbers twenty-eight. The whole number of students is nearly 40 per cent more than last year. President Eaton's inspiring influence is felt upon all the educational institutions of the surrounding country.

—The business colleges of the United States have within twenty years multiplied from a few institutions to several hundred, some of which have an annual registration of over 1,000 students each. United States Commissioner Eaton reports a greater number of graduates from the business colleges than from the colleges of law, medicine, and theology combined. Official reports show about 50,000 students during the past year.

—Hon. E. E. White, principal of the Cincinnati schools, made the following list of motives for study in his address before the National Teachers' Association in Topeka, Kan. The seven natural motives used most in school are: 1. A desire for standing or rank, including the desire to excel. 2. A desire for the approbation of equals and superiors. 3. A desire for activity and power. 4. A desire for knowledge. 5. A desire for future good. 6. A sense of honor. 7. A sense of duty. A glance of these seven incentives will suffice to show that in their influence on character they rise from the first to the seventh.

—The fall catalogue of the Union Theological Seminary shows a total number of 136 students. This includes two fellows studying in Berlin and three resident graduates. Fifty-seven colleges and universities are represented. The senior class is large, numbering 53, while the junior class is small with only 37. Through the liberality of Mr. Elliott F. Shepard, provision has been made for a course of sociological lectures, to be delivered in the Adams Chapel of the Union Theological Seminary, by Professors Richmond S. Smith, Arthur T. Hadley, H. M. McCracken, George B. Newcomb and J. Lawrence Laughlin.

—The Northwestern University, at Evanston, Ill., the Rev. Joseph Cummings, D. D., LL. D., president, has a total of 1,183 students (20 per cent increase) in attendance, as follows: Preparatory, 260; college of liberal arts, 227; theology, 126; law, 180; medicine 155; music (exclusively), 170; pharmacy, 65. Of the total about 200 are ladies, 100 of them in the conservatory of music; the others in academic studies and the college of liberal arts. The hall of science—physics and chemistry—and the memorial hall of theology are nearly completed at a cost of $40,000 each. Dr. J. Frederick Parsons, of Leipzig, and Dr. Robert Sheppard, late of London, are new in the list of seventy professors.

LITERATURE.

TALKS ON THE LABOR TROUBLES, by Rev. C. O. BROWN. Pp. 131. Price 60c. F. H. Revell, Chicago.

This is one honest and timely book we would be glad to put in the hand of every American voter. It is written by a good man, and the son of a good man, for the father of the writer is Deacon O. M. Brown, the Oberlin blacksmith and faith missionary society, a whole corporation of faith and love and good works all in one man. Mr. Brown fairly meets the communism in which the theories of Henry George and his followers ends, shows their danger and exposes their fallacy. He writes not in a captious or severe spirit, but with a deeper love and a truer sympathy for the working classes than their blind leaders, and the advice he gives they may more safely follow. Nor is the author less faithful with those who have accumulated wealth, reminding them of their duty, and warning them to repent of dishonest gains. The scope of the book is too great, perhaps, for its size. We should be glad if the author, who has studied the labor problem in many places and in many phases, had more definitely answered the brilliant and captivating proposals of Henry George, who would discourage the primal, the greatest, and most useful occupation of agriculture, by making it bear nearly the whole burden of taxation. And we should be glad also, to see more clearly shown that the only panacea for these social ills is prescribed by the Great Physician, Jesus Christ, whom anarchy mocks and socialism elbows aside.

Shoppel's Modern Houses quarterly is one of those contributions to the home life of American society which it is a pleasure to note and encourage. The house must have the brightness of love within, but love must have a shelter; and a tasteful, agreeable exterior with convenient internal arrangement is no small aid to the comfort of living. Abraham Lincoln's mother kept house in the Indiana woods the whole round year in a shelter of poles, enclosing but three sides, leaving the other open to the winter blasts, but the poor woman was not more happy nor was her illustrious son a better President because of such severe living. This work has colored frontispiece, fifty-one designs for houses, and chapters on landscape gardening, etc. Price, $1.00.

The December Century will contain a life-size portrait of the right hand of Abraham Lincoln. Both of Lincoln's hands, as well as his face, were cast from life by Leonard W. Volk in the year 1860, a full account of which casting was given in the Century for December, 1881, accompanied by an engraving of the mask. The right hand has now been drawn by Mr. Alden Weir and engraved by Mr. R. C. Collins. Opposite the hand appear in fac simile four stanzas from Mr. Stedman's poem entitled, "The hand of Lincoln," originally published in the Independent.

A father can find few better presents for his young son than a year's reading of the Scientific American. Its contents will lead the young mind in the path of earnest thought, and if he treasurs there awhile, he will forget frivolities and be of some account, and if he has an inventive or mechanical turn of mind, this paper will afford him more entertainment, as well as useful information, than he can obtain elsewhere. See rates in our clubbing list.

The third in the series of original engravings, which the American Agriculturist is presenting to subscribers, appears with the December number. It is 18 by 25 inches in size, illustrating Mount Vernon, Washington's birth-place, farm, tomb, etc. Donald G. Mitchell (Ik Marvel) writes the six column description, which contains unpublished letters of Washington. The next engraving in the series illustrates the early home, farm at Mentor, stock, etc., etc., of President Garfield, together with description by a prominent writer. We club with the American Agriculturist. Every person who immediately subscribes will receive the engravings free for next year and this year also.

Demorest's Monthly Magazine for December contains a fine oil picture, "Sliding," represents a snow scene in the time of the French Directory. "Across the Continent," by Jennie June, is an entertaining illustrated article. The stories and fashion notes are popular with some readers, but they do not tend to wholesome life here, and only to death hereafter. The prohibition department is earnest and good.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Mr. Moody commenced a series of meetings at Cambridge, Mass., on the 15th inst. He faced 1,200 men, largely Harvard students, who received him with respect, but without enthusiasm. The result will be watched with interest.

—A dispatch says of this meeting: "Dwight L. Moody, the evangelist, faced an audience this evening in Saunders Theatre, that even he found it difficult to move. Twelve hundred men sat before Mr. Moody when he began the meeting, and he had to fight for every particle of enthusiasm with which the audience favored him. In his manly, hearty way he found the path to the respect of the students. This first meeting while it was by no means a failure, was not a grand success. Mr. Moody will, however, be backed in his effort to convert Harvard students by a band of 150 men of the Harvard Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, who will give him devoted support. About 300 students and outsiders besides the members of the society stayed to-night after Mr. Moody's lecture."

—It is proposed to establish in Brooklyn a church for Chinese. Over 3,000 Chinese attend the Sunday-schools of the city.

—The High Street church, Columbus, Ohio, has a bonded debt of some thousands. Without resort to any dinners, or fairs, or lotteries, or other worldly performances, but on a direct appeal from the pastor, Bro. C. W. Hiatt, $6,000 was raised at once lately, and by a little effort among absent members the whole debt can be lifted off.

—Mr. Gulick, of Japan Mission of the American Board, says that it would seem as if the whole nation is yet to learn the English language. Half of the books sold in fifty-five book-stores in Japan are English. Webster's Spelling-book and Wilson's First Reader have been reprinted in Tokio, and the latter is sold by the million at the retail price of seven cents.

—The Presbyterian church at Clyde, Kansas, has for some time during a vacancy in the pastorate been supplied by Prof. T. C. Moffatt, late of Wheaton College, one of its members. On the last Sunday evening before the arrival of the pastor, Prof. M. was presented with a purse of nearly $40 as an acknowledgement of his services and a token of esteem.

—The editor of the Japanese paper, the Kirioto Kyo Shinbun, has received directly from all the Protestant churches of Japan their statistics for the past year, which he gives in comparison with the three preceding years, by which the marvelous growth appears in that time of 151 churches from 88; of 11,604 members from 3,769; and of contributions of yen 23,407 from 12,477; the yen being worth about eighty cents gold.

—Bibles are distributed at Castle Garden, New York, printed in the following languages: English, Welsh, French, Danish, Swedish, Finnish, Italian, Spanish, German, Dutch, Russian, Bulgarian, Hungarian, Bohemian, Polish, Slavic, Arabic, Greek, Armenian, Hebrew, and Portuguese.

—Henry Varley, the evangelist, and Joseph Hannington, brother of the late Bishop Hannington, who was killed in October last while prosecuting missionary work in Central Africa, have sailed from England for Cape Town, with the view of conducting a special mission there for a few months.

—During a recent illness of the Queen of Corea Dr. Allen, of the Presbyterian Board mission, refused to prescribe for her unless his associate, Miss Ellers, should examine her symptoms and report to him. The king became alarmed and discharged all the native doctors about the place. After the Queen's recovery she gave a handsome sedan-chair to Miss Ellers.

—Mr. H. E. Perkins, a high government official in the Punjab, India, intends to resign his lucrative position, in which he has been for more than twenty-five years, to become a lay missionary of the Church Missionary Society, whose work and results he has had such opportunity to witness.

—Rev. George Brown, of the Methodist mission to New Britain, a large island off the coast of New Guinea, is now visiting England. When he started that mission five years ago the native savages attacked and killed some of his Fijian teachers which he took with him. When he recently left the island 500 of the natives gathered to show their esteem for him, and loaded him with presents.

—The Board of Foreign Missions for the Methodist Episcopal church, which has been in session the last week in New York City, appropriated $41,000 for work in South America, a large increase over the allowance for last year, as the opening for work there seems more favorable; for China $106,272 was appropriated; for Germany, $446,600; for North India, $73,202; for South India, $35,000; for Bulgaria, $16,729; for Italy, $46,345. A proposal was made to pay Dr. Taylor, the missionary bishop of Africa, $3,000, though he has often said that he did not want it, and the motion was carried.

—Rev. Dr. Gibson, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church of San Francisco, lately celebrated with his people the twentieth anniversary of his pastorate. The occasion was one of great interest and was participated in by many friends of Dr. G. in the city outside his church. His has been by six years the longest pastorage in the city, and his labors for religion and morality have been highly appreciated in the city. He has for some years conducted a Saturday meeting with the Sabbath-school teachers, and is recognized as a leader in the temperance work. When the Congregational pastors in May discussed the lodge question, he was present and gave an earnest testimony for Christ against the secret orders.

—Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs, who is one of the signers of the paper approving a conference on secret societies, celebrated his fortieth anniversary as pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y., November 19, and preached two sermons in honor of the event on the Sabbath preceding. He was born August 23, 1821. His father was pastor of the church of Braintree, Mass., sixty years. Dr. Storrs studied at Monson Academy; graduated at Amherst College, in 1839; in the law office of Rufus Choate two years; graduated at Andover Theological Seminary in 1845; pastor of the Harvard Congregational church, Brookline, Mass., one year; called to the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y., 1846. At that time Brooklyn had 60,000 inhabitants; now it has 750,000. In addition to his labors as pastor, Dr. Storrs has performed an immense amount of work in the preparation and delivery of sermons and lectures on special occasions. In elegance of diction and attractiveness of manner he has no superior among living clergymen.

HOME HINTS.

MAKING A HOME.

At a reception in Washington, according to the Youth's Companion, a circle of friends were discussing the characteristics of a woman, famous in the last generation, when a gentleman remarked;

"To me, she was most remarkable for her ability to make a home. Put her (as I have seen done in the West) in a log cabin with nothing but some wooden chairs, a piece of muslin, an open fire, and the odds and ends which she had stored in her trunk, and she would turn it in a few hours into a charming dwelling place. Of all her gifts, that was to me the most attractive and womanly."

An American who saw in his youth an Englishwoman pre-eminent at that time for her learning and genius, was questioned as to his impression of her. "She overwhelmed me with her knowledge; her broad, liberal views and her philanthropy opened a new world to me. Yet the most distinct recollection I have of the visit is the torn and dirty table cloth, the greasy carpet, and the ashes strewn half way across the floor."

Carlyle, who had been used to coarse surroundings in his early home, was deeply impressed by the refinement, the pretty "bit of pleasuring," the gentleness, in the home of the woman he afterwards married; and the most pathetic part of his wife's history is her heroic effort to give this dainty charm to the rough dwellings in which he placed her.

There is no trait in the Englishman stronger than his love of home, and hence he is apt to value in woman the quality of "making a home" above all others. The sailor's wife "makes the hearth clean" to show her joy at his return. It is the "Household motions" of Wordsworth's ideal women that are "light and free" and all Shakespeare's lovable heroines are domestic women.

"Let me see your home and I will tell you what you are," the Russian Paulovitch says to his countrywoman. Our American girls, in their zeal for music, art, or it may be authorship, are sometimes apt to forget this. They leave the oversight and the details of house-keeping to servants, forgetting that the soiled tablecloth and greasy carpet tell tales of character as loudly and emphatically as do neatness and taste.

They forget, too, that while their pictures or song or story may prove a failure, a dainty, cheerful home is a poem which any woman may give to the world, and one which all men can understand and will certainly take to heart.

THE EXCESSIVE USE OF TEA.

America and England are the two countries that are afflicted most with the maladies arising from the excessive consumption of tea. Individuals may suffer in a variety of ways. It is customary to speak of acute, sub-acute and chronic "theism," a form that has no connection with theological matters. The predominance of the nervous system may be observed, or the weakness may be noted more especially in the brain as distinguished from the spinal cord. Perversion of the sense of hearing is not at all an uncommon symptom, patients hearing voices that have no real or objective existence. The irritability that overtakes women so frequently may sometimes be clearly traced to an excessive indulgence in afternoon tea. No doubt the tannin which tea has been standing contains does a great amount of mischief, but theism belongs rather to that class of disease in which morphinism, caffeine and vanilism are found. The habit of tea-drinking is one that grows on its victims like the similar ones of opium or alcohol. Taken in strict moderation and with due precautions in the mode of preparation, tea is, like alcohol, a valuable stimulant; in its abuse there is a certain analogy.—Science.

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at the College." Illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents.

National Christian Association,

221 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

SONGS OF PILGRIMAGE.

A HYMNAL

FOR THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

Probably the most extensive collection of hymns in the English language.

It contains 1533 hymns, with music for them all.
It contains 344 tunes from 112 known authors.
It contains old hymns you have hunted for.
It contains old tunes your grandmother sang.
It contains hymns you learned when a child.
It contains old tunes you have wanted so long.
It contains new tunes you have never heard.
It contains plenty of solid standard music.
It contains numerous grand old minor tunes.
It contains some 500 hymns you never saw.
It contains 131 hymns from Watts.
It contains 149 of Wesley's hymns.
It contains over 300 new hymns from H. L. H.
It contains hymns for all occasions.
It contains 131 hymns from Watts.
It contains old hymns from the Latin and Greek.
It contains hymns from the French and German.
It contains hymns from the Welsh and Danish.
It contains hymns for the old and young.
It contains hymns for sick and well.
It contains 528 pages of hymns and music.
It contains the names of authors and composers.
It contains the dates of both hymns and tunes.
It contains an index of subjects.

It is printed from type like this line.

YES YOU CAN CARRY IT IN YOUR POCKET!

Price in flexible cloth, $1.00, cloth extra, $1.25.

Address orders to the publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.,
OR TO THIS OFFICE.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Christian's Secret

OF

A Happy Life.

28th THOUSAND.

Baptist Commendation.

"We are delighted with this book. It reaches to the very core of Christian experience, and is eminently experimental in its teachings. It meets the doubts and difficulties of conscientious seekers after the bread and water of life, but whose efforts result only in alternate failure and victory. The author, without claiming to be a theologian, sends out the results of a happy and rich experience to help others to lead a happy Christian life."—Baptist Weekly.

Presbyterian Endorsement.

"The happy book so long and so recently devout in its spirit that it disarms criticism. It contains so much that is sound and practical, so much that, if needed, will make our lives simpler and more useful, that the intelligent reader who really wishes to lead a life 'hid with Christ in God' can scarcely fail to derive profit from its perusal."—Interior.

Methodist Word of Praise.

"We have not for years read a book with more delight and profit. It is not a theological book. No effort is made to change the theological views of any one. The author has a rich experience, and tells it in a plain and delightful manner."—Christian Advocate.

United Brethren's Approval.

"We have seldom met with a more interesting volume, abounding throughout with apt illustrations; we have failed to find a dry line from title-page to final."—Religious Telescope.

Congregational Comment.

"It contains much clear, pungent reasoning and interesting incident. It is a practical and experimental lesson. The author's God's word, and is worthy of universal circulation."—Church Union.

This enlarged edition is a beautiful large 12mo volume of 280 pages.

Price, in cloth, richly stamped, 75 cts.

Address, W. L. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform

Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung! What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience!

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wives, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither stirring nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, everyday walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winner" of a past age. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denials will awaken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by disposition lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set free from the gloom of the lodge and its sparks. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secret work. Every minister of the gospel should read it. Every husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unravelling of mysterious circumstances which have important bearing upon current events.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing. It tells how bad men control the good men in the lodge and put their own members behind the scenes of crime. For sale at 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART" AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A

"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York Rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revived and Improved Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with all allusions, etc. Over 200 cuts, 96 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, at Headquarters for Anti-Secret Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day: two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not stirring, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. It is so written that temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions"; in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Woman's Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret unions of workmen. Old-fellow the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Enamptment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over a hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. H. Rinal. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen $2.00.

All orders promptly filled by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

CHICKEN CHOLERA

The symptoms of cholera are great thirst, a nervous, anxious expression, greenish droppings, and rapid prostration. Its work is done quickly, usually killing the birds in twenty-four hours or less. When it attacks a flock the sick birds must be separated from the others and a thorough cleaning and disinfection of the whole premises—yards, coops, and even the roosts and nests—must be made by sprinkling with water, to every gallon of which an ounce of carbolic acid is added.

Although hundreds of remedies have been proposed, it is doubtful if a sure cure has as yet been discovered for this terrible scourge of the poultry yards. The best method of treating a large flock of fowls is to allow them no drinking water at all, but add a teaspoonful of liquid carbolic acid to a quart of water, and use this water for mixing the soft food, which should consist of two pounds of corn meal, one pound of parched flour, half a pound of fenugreek and an ounce of bread soda. Boil a pound of the inner bark of the red oak tree in half a gallon of water down to a quart. Take a pound of the mixture, pour in a gill of the red oak bark decoction, stir it well, and then add the carbolic water until the whole is of the consistency of dough, but do not have it too stiff. Give them all they will eat of it. In fact, keep it before them all the time. Those that do not eat should be forced by cramming with a tablespoonful of the mixture twice a day. This will be absolutely necessary with turkeys. Give no water until the birds begin to recover. Then add twenty drops of carbolic acid and a tablespoonful of the red oak bark solution to each pint of the drinking water. Keep the sick birds dry and warm, disinfect all droppings as soon as they accumulate, and bury or burn all dead birds.—American Agriculturist.

A SMALL FARM WELL TILLED.

The superiority of small farms over large ones, which require a large amount of expensive machinery to conduct them, is found in the market gardens. As an example, there is one of five or six acres within the limits of Boston, Mass., which produces its owner a clear annual income from $3,000 to $5,000. Instead of spending money for machinery and labor the farmer devotes his capital largely to the enrichment of his grounds. The amount of manure he applies to his few acres, seems almost wasteful, but the results prove his wisdom. Within two or three weeks he marketed from a small patch $175 worth of string beans. His early potatoes brought him something like $2,000, and the ground where they grew is already at work producing a second crop of vegetables. The amount of "truck" which he manages to secure from his few acres, which he about his house and barn, is really marvelous, but the secret is high cultivation and a scientific method. The same method may be applied anywhere in the country; and the dawdling away over one hundred acres, and getting only half a crop, and at the same time impoverishing the soil is the sheerest folly.

We cannot too strongly urge upon our readers the necessity of subscribing for a family weekly newspaper of the first class—such, for instance, as the Independent, of New York. It is a newspaper, magazine, and review, all in one. It is religious, a literary, an educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial, and a political paper combined. It has 32 folio pages and 21 departments. No matter what a person's religion, politics or profession may be, no matter what the age, sex, employment or condition may be, the Independent will prove a help, an instructor, an educator. Our readers can do no less than to send a postal for a free specimen copy, or for thirty cents the paper will be sent a month, enabling one to judge of its merits more critically. Its yearly subscription is $3.00, or two years for $5.00.

Address, The Independent, 251 Broadway, New York City.

Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN GYNOSURE.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. It is a good home-dish, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing halm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cures. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold. There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

How, R. L. TAYLOR, of Bryan, Mich., Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh, coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a Pillow-Inhaler, and following its use I am now a great sufferer from Bronchitis and Catarrh of the Throat, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 5th St., New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchitis and Catarrh of the Throat, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,

Central Music Hall, Room 19, 60, State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.

Main Office: 1500 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

MUNN & CO.
PATENTS

ESTABLISHED 1846
NEW YORK

After Forty years' experience in the preparation of more than One Hundred Thousand applications for patents in the United States and Foreign countries, the publishers of the Scientific American continue to act as solicitors for patents, caveats, trade-marks, copyrights, etc., for the United States, and to obtain patents in Canada, England, France, Germany, and all other countries. Their experience is unequalled and their facilities are unsurpassed.

Drawings and specifications prepared and filed in the Patent Office on short notice. Terms very reasonable. No charge for examination of models or drawings. Advice by mail free.

Patents obtained through Munn & Co. are noted in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, which has the largest circulation and is the most influential newspaper of its kind published in the world. The advantages of such a notice every patentee understands.

This large and splendidly illustrated newspaper is published WEEKLY at $3.00 a year, and is admitted to be the best paper devoted to science, mechanics, inventions, engineering works, and other departments of industrial progress, published in any country. It contains the names of all patentees and title of every invention patented each week. Try it four months for one dollar. Sold by all newsdealers.

If you have an invention to patent write to Munn & Co., publishers of Scientific American, 361 Broadway, New York.

Handbook about patents mailed free.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS OF MRGAN MONUMENT.

20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood,
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Whiston College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association,

221 West Madison St., Chicago.

NATIONAL SUICIDE, AND ITS PREVENTION.

BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

"Even his fallings lean to virtue's side."

—Gynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticize. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

"A THRILLING WARNING."

THE Man Traps of the City.

BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons

It treats of

The Tiger and His Den,

Cups of Flame,

The Scarlet Sin,

Embezzlement,

The Devil's Printing Press,

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that now like melted lava from the bow of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime rear their ugly heads, robes of the garments with which they have been surrounded by the prurient literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the prodigal is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a life that, though wicked, has its future life to be aborted.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents.

Paper bound, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your family. Send for full catalogue to

221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The Medical and Surgical SANITARIUM

LARGEST SANITARIUM IN THE WORLD.

This institution, one of the buildings of which is shown in the cut, stands without a rival in the perfection and completeness of its appointments. The following are a few of the special methods employed: Turkish, Russian, Roman—Thermo-Electric, Electro-Vapor, Electro-Hydric, Electro-Chemical, Hot-Air, Vapor, and every form of water bath; electricity in every form; Swedish movements—manual and mechanical massage. Pneumatic treatment. Vacuum treatment, sun baths. All other remedial agents of known curative value employed.

An artificial climate, possessing the advantages of perfectly pure air and an equable temperature, is produced for the benefit of those invalids who annually visit the South and other warm climates. Porches enclosed in glass afford fine opportunity for promoting without exposure, and a large gymnasium offers every facility for thorough and systematic physical training.

Pure water, good ventilation, steam heating, perfect sewerage. Special departments for the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, etc. For circular with particulars, address SANITARIUM, Battle Creek, Mich.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATEROPE.

Introduction by

REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,

(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of the life that now is, and to give comfort and help as to the life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the head and refuses to consider the oldish man a burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveler to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

WHAT IS NATIONAL REFORM?

A RIGHT ANSWER TO THIS LEADING QUESTION INVOLVES THE SOLUTION OF

SOCIAL, MORAL AND POLITICAL PROBLEMS.

Can the Question be Answered?

SEND $2 FOR ONE YEAR'S SUBSCRIPTION TO THE

CHRISTIAN NATION.

252 BROADWAY,

NEW YORK,

AND

READ AND LEARN FOR YOURSELF.

BESIDES ITS INTELLIGENT AND POPULAR DISCUSSIONS OF THESE QUESTIONS OF INTEREST TO EVERY MAN AND WOMAN, THE CHRISTIAN NATION IS

A Home Paper in the Fullest Sense.

Light and Life S. S. Supplies.

We are prepared to furnish anything in the line of Sunday-school supplies, including a choice line of reward cards and tickets, which we sell at low rates. Teachers' registers, Library Registers, Bibles, Wall Motions, and Charts.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS.

It is our aim to produce papers that will not only interest the children by their attractive appearance and readability, but by sound, evangelical and wholesome teaching to lead them to Christ. All sensational matter and worldly conformed contents are carefully avoided. Please give them a trial.

THE PEAK (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE LILY (monthly). Single copy, per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE SUNSHINE (monthly). Single copy, per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

PURE WORDS (monthly). Single copy, per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

Single copy of each of the four monthlies to one address per year 75 cents. No single subscription taken for less than one year. SIXTEEN COPIES FREE.

LIGHT AND LIFE IN FIFTY CENTS (FREELY) CONTAINS LESSON STORY for the next Sunday.

4 cents per quarter; 16 cents per year.

LESSON HELPS.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON QUARTERLY CONTAINS: 1. Common version arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 3. Home Readings. 4. Introductory, including Review Questions, Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 5. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time, places, persons and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronunciation of the names and places. 6. Notes and Explanations. 7. Review Questions for the whole school in concert. 8. Next Sunday's Lesson, including references to memory verses and Golden Text. 9. Eleven pages of instructions and suggestions, for teachers.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF CONTAINS name as quarterly except the instructions and suggestions to teachers.

25 SAMPLES FREE. Be sure and see this leaf before you order for the next quarter. Price, $2.50 per 100 copies, per year.

CATALOGUE SENT FREE

T. B. ARNOLD, PUBLISHER; 104 & 106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XIX., No. 11.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1886.

WHOLE No. 866.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR.....$2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.....$1.50.

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments..... 1	From the General Agent;..... 4
Charles Francis Adams..... 8	The Southern Work; A Glimpse of the Wisconsin Agent; A Glorious Convention Preparing in Ohio Bro. Hawley turns Northward..... 4,5
Christ's Second Coming..... 8	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
Shall the Lodge Control Prohibition?..... 9	BIBLE LESSON..... 6
The late Gurney Funeral..... 9	Secret Societies Condemned..... 7
CONTRIBUTIONS:	THE N. C. A..... 7
The Times of War and Reconstruction..... 1	NOTICES..... 9
The National Congress..... 2	THE HOME..... 10
Masonry and the Crouch Murders..... 2	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Week-day Sermon..... 2	Press Comment..... 12
SELECTED:	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Christmas..... 3	LODGE NOTES..... 13
The Mason's Pass..... 3	LECTURE LIST..... 13
CORRESPONDENCE:	AMERICAN PARTY..... 13
The Congress of Christians: A Cry from India; The Chicago Anarchists; National Reform in the South; Pith and Point..... 5,6	FARM NOTES..... 14
	IN BRIEF..... 15
	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16

The great sale of the Brinley Library in New York a few days since revealed some peculiarities in public taste which are interesting to opposers of secretism. A copy of William Morgan's "Illustrations of Masonry" sold for $24, and three volumes of Anti-masonic sermons and orations for $30. The liberal purchasers of these works are hereby informed that many other documents of equal value are for sale at this office for one-tenth the auction price.

An intelligent and pious lady teacher in our Chicago public schools remarked the other day that she believed the people will have ere long to rise and demand the reinstatement of the Bible and a careful instruction in the principles of the Christian religion in our common schools to restore to the minds of the children the idea of authority which is being destroyed by the present infidel, Masonic management. Infidelity and anarchy must be expected to grow in the active young minds which have no anchorage in the Word and authority of God. The Presbyterian Synod of New York has just been discussing the same important topic, and resolutions were reported advocating the teaching of the existence of a personal God, our responsibility to God, the immortality of the soul, the reality of the future spiritual state, and the Decalogue interpreted by the Sermon on the Mount, and the life of Christ as a standard of morality.

Davis, the rebellion leader, is evidently displeased with the Northern press. "You may set it down as a general proposition," he said the other day, that everything you see published in a Northern paper about me is totally false." For instance, the evidence that he was a Freemason before and during the war, a fact which he has taken pains to deny widely and absolutely, yet without at all shaking the testimony of his own friends to the truth of the charge. So too he denied as emphatically that he ever proposed to use the Confederate army to coerce the Southern States if any portion of them failed to support the Davis government at Richmond. This charge was first published by Gen. W. T. Sherman. But the denial suddenly loses all its point by the publication of a letter from Davis to Governor Vance of South Carolina in 1863, and published at the time in a Raleigh paper. This letter fully sustains the charge of Sherman, which Davis says is altogether untrue. By and by we shall know how much the ex-rebel regards the truth. No wonder he has written of his unwillingness that the history of the conspiracy to release the Camp Douglas prisoners and scatter the yellow fever plague in Northern cities by means of infected garments be published.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS.

[See page 8.]

The granting of a writ of supersedeas in the anarchist cases by Judge Scott of the Illinois Supreme Court, would not be so much regretted, were it not hailed by the enemies of social order as a great victory for their principles. The decision postpones the execution, which would have taken place Friday, but it does not change the state of the case. The sentence of death still hangs over the heads of Spies and his company. The Supreme Court will give the case a rehearing in March, and the people, whose lives were assailed in the persons of the police in the massacre of May 4, will wait patiently for an approval of a sentence they believe to be just. It is unfortunate that the decision is made to appear to be an admission by high authority that the first trial was unfair, and that to conspire against society and murder its protectors is not a punishable offense. This is a conclusion for which the anarchists have no warrant, but they will make the most of it to influence their unreasoning followers and change public opinion. They have raised money by thousands for this case; but in selecting the blasphemer Ingersoll to defend them they have cast off all reference to Divine justice or providence, and may bitterly find at last that no man may with impunity "put off the law of God."

The most alarming feature of this case is the vote of the general meeting of the Knights of Labor at Richmond in October asking mercy for the condemned anarchists, though pretending at the same time not to be in sympathy with them! District Assembly No. 24 of the same lodge, in this city, was more honest in voting a condemnation of Judge Gary's court, and that the decision is a "foul and diabolical blot" upon civilization. In July the same body pretended to expel the anarchists, Parsons among them. But this seems to have been a mere effect of the pressure of public opinion. It is an undoubted fact that Parsons is now a member of the order in good standing; and Carlton and Barry, sent here by Powderly to settle the Stock Yards strike, had a long conference with the condemned men in the jail. Now comes too a demand from the municipal council of Paris, the breeding place of communism, that the government at Washington interfere; and the anarchists in London yell for the murder of Governor Oglesby if their confederates are hung. The supporters of anarchy are rallying throughout the world. The secret lodges of the Lehr and Wehr Verin and the International are resuming their meetings in Chicago, and the papers report them discussing the details of another dynamite plot. These facts are ominous, and if the sword of justice is long held back by "the law's delays" the citizens of Chicago may all have to become policemen for the protection of their business and their homes.

Much responsibility rests on persons who are representatives of a public cause, and especially of a cause that is seeking strength with which to support its claims. If they, while loyal to it, and even passionately so, in expression and labor, make themselves ridiculous by eccentricities, to say nothing of things worse than that, they do an almost irreparable injury.—Southwestern Presbyterian.

THE TIMES OF WAR AND RECONSTRUCTION.

REMINISCENCES BY HON. S. C. POMEROY.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN IN KANSAS.

With the leave of the editor I propose to occupy a leisure hour occasionally in writing for the Cynosure upon questions of importance in National politics, and in giving personal reminiscences of men and things which have occurred during the last forty years; some of which I have seen, "a part which I was."

My circumstances and surroundings have allied me to movements which have now become historic, and it will be a marvel if the next generation grapple with more delicate or important events than have been put upon the hands of this; and hence it is, that all the actors in the public events of this period have had a part more or less responsible, which can now be examined and re-examined, as it becomes stereotyped in impartial history.

For ten years preceding the War of the Rebellion I took a deep interest in the events which led to it. Upon its breaking out in 1861 I had a seat in the Senate, and during all the period of the War, and the trying period of Reconstruction, I was still there to take some little part of the work in hand; and at no subsequent period have I been indifferent to passing public events.

I had the honor of an acquaintance with Abraham Lincoln before and after he became the President of the United States; not to say an association with him, and his Cabinet. This association, of course, also included such men as Seward, Bates, Cameron, and Chase, of his Cabinet; and Sumner, Wilson, Fessenden, and Collamer of the Senate; with Stevens and Covode, Garfield and Lovejoy of the House of Representatives. I name these men only as they represent the class of men upon whom devolved the conduct of public affairs during the trying times of which I have spoken.

The men of those times are fast disappearing from public life, and most of them are already among the departed.

If you indulge me, then, I shall give some historical, personal reminiscences which go to make up the lives and events of the period.

The events in Kansas, and the struggle there preceding the War will form chapters by themselves; and I shall follow no chronological order. Some chapters may be last which should have been first, and some first which should have been last.

Of Mr. Lincoln, no one tires, or is surfeited in reading of him; and incidents of little value in themselves, are important as connected with him. I remember entertaining him, at my house in Atchison, Kansas, in 1857, while in our territorial struggle, and at the time of the great discussion upon the issue of slavery or freedom for Kansas. Mr. Lincoln was to make an address at the Methodist church that evening. While at the dinner table he asked Mrs. Pomeroy if she was to attend the meeting. She replied that she intended to do so, whereupon Mr. Lincoln said, he "feared she would not be interested;" and added, "I don't take well with the ladies in my speeches. I suppose its because I can't flatter them."

Mrs. Pomeroy rallied at the moment and said, "Do you think flattery an essential thing to interest a lady? I have not so learned them."

Mr. Lincoln saw he had struck a wrong lead, and at once made apologies, and spoke of exceptions to the rule.

In walking to church that evening he was in front of me, having the arm of Judge Dellahay. But I remember to have overheard when he said to Dellahay, "Didn't I get into a bad fix with that lady at the table? She was too much for me."

But when we entered a crowded church, and for the first time listened to his earnest appeals for the cause we loved, his unpremeditated remark at the table was forgotten; men and women alike were drawn to him. And even General B. F. Stringfellow, who was present, applauded his speech! From that hour, Mr. Lincoln had a warm place in all our hearts.

Mr. Lincoln spent that night at the Massasoit House in Atchison, kept by one Thomas Murphy, and they had a game of hiliards after the morning breakfast, and to the day of his death Murphy never ceased to speak of his "game with President Lincoln, and of his beating him! That may account for the fact that Murphy, ignoring his nationality, always voted the Republican ticket.

Mr. Lincoln followed up his speech in Atchison, by addresses in other towns, and so strongly identified himself with the Free State cause and people, that Kansas, though a Territory, was enthusiastic for him in the National Convention at Chicago in 1860.

Three years later, when I presented Thomas Murphy to Mr. President Lincoln, for an appointment as superintendent of Indian affairs for our department, Mr. Lincoln said, "Yes, you shall have it. You beat me once; but I hope you won't beat the poor Indian. Be good to him!" And so Thomas Murphy became the superintendent of Indians for the "Central Superintendency." And General Stringfellow has been connected with the Republican party these many years.

The words of Abraham Lincoln, and his short visit to Kansas at that early period, did much to secure and concentrate a sentiment in Atchison for the Free State cause. For Atchison was one of the last places to become entirely harmonious in the future destiny of Kansas.

But I lived to see the men who were strongly and conscientiously opposed to the Free State party and their measures, become their active and earnest supporters. And their most earnest congratulations were ejaculations of thankfulness that they were saved from themselves. Men are led in a way they know not, often to find it the right way.

Washington, D. C.

THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE.

BY REV. HALLECK FLOYD.

In the Cynosure of Nov. 18th, I see that the efforts to secure this meeting are resulting in the hearty endorsement of the movement by representative men of large influence in their respective churches. This is a matter of great rejoicing with many of our people (United Brethren). As a denomination we have maintained our testimony for more than a century against this system of anti-Christ; and we hail this movement to arouse the latent sentiment of the Christian churches of America with delight. It is with our people the more to be desired because of an organized movement in the denomination to break the force of our testimony against the lodge power. This system of anti-Christ only needs to be known to be driven from the church of Jesus Christ.

The abnormal condition of society which threatens municipal and state governments is fostered and protected by this system of Baal worship. This Con-gress of Christians is both opportune and significant, as to the acknowledgment of the great battle that is upon us, and as to joining the issue between righteously and unrighteousness in high places. May great wisdom and grace attend the movement. I hope to be in attendance.

Dublin, Ind.

MASONRY AND THE CROUCH MURDERS.

BY REV. H. A. DAY.

The "Masonic Outrages" pamphlet should be in the hands of every Anti-mason in the United States. Be it known, however, that not all the Masonic outrages are specified in the little volume. The outrages of Freemasonry are being perpetrated continually under our very eyes, and with the knowledge of some of our so-called "best men," in church and state. I am more than ever convinced that we shall not see in this country what loyal men and women long for, until the curse of secret societyism is banished.

In the light of present circumstances, I have a few questions to ask Michigan readers. You who have watched closely the movements connected with that appalling tragedy, the "Crouch Murder," I ask, what possible conclusion can we arrive at, than that Freemasonry is at the bottom of all this disgusting farce? Outrage after outrage has been, and is being committed all along the one line of that awful murder, and since that eventful night, until not less than eight human beings have been sacrificed, whose deaths can be traced directly or indirectly to the murders of the Crouch family or their allies. In every instance after each scene, public gaze has been turned in one direction, for the principal actors. In every instance, by some inexplorable, subtle influence, unknown to any save those who have studied the methods of Freemasonry, has that gaze been diverted and attention taken up in the pursuit of shadows. The Detroit Evening News at one time stated that "the officers of Jackson county could not track Jumbo in a snow-bank," so easily did they allow the proper persons to escape their vigilance. A man can no more easily track Jumbo than he could a mouse when both eyes are closely bandaged. Fear off the accursed hoodwink of fraternalized bar-room loafers, murderers, attorneys, judges, ministers, detectives, burglars, etc., etc., and the finding of the perpetrators of this ceaseless list of atrocious crimes will be an easy matter, and their proper punishment a short task.

Have we got to the last on the list, whose death is traceable to the same quarter in Jackson county? Notice how naturally all eyes turn in the one direction on the announcement of a death like those which we here name. Jacob Crouch, Henry White, Eunice White, Moses Polley, James Foy, Mrs. D. Holcomb, Jennie Farley; besides the attempted murder of the man named Brown, and the editor in Union City.

Let us notice the last case of death. Jennie Farley died at the Stowell House in Jackson a few weeks since. Before her death she showed a letter to a woman of the house, threatening her with death if she ever disclosed the father of her unborn child. She did not show the signature; the writer of that threat is not positively known. But here is a query: Why was it that when it was known that Jennie Farley was dead, a messenger went at once to Jnd. Crouch, from whom he received ten dollars with which to bury the poor unfortunate? Why did Jud. Crouch pay those expenses? What had he to do with it? That he was connected with the whole affair he never denied. When asked a pointed question at the inquest, he laughingly states that it would be rather embarrassing to reply, and the matter was not pressed. Why was it not pressed? The poor girl was buried without a mourner or a funeral. There the matter drops. The jury agree on a verdict of suicide. We do not presume to say who are the awfully guilty parties in this awful affair from Jacob Crouch to Jennie Farley. It is certainly remarkable, however, that all eyes have instinctively turned in the one direction, and from that one direction clear evidence of innocence has never been given, and never will be. Some two months ago Jud. Crouch was formally arrested for the murder of Eunice White, his own sister. Yesterday's paper states that his trial is adjourned until the next term of court. Why? To let public sentiment die away and give the lodge an opportunity. That's why.

When will our eyes open to stubborn facts. In the most bloody tragedy which ever aroused Michigan, the officers of the State and court fail to do their duty, and public sentiment is worn away by the continual farce of attorneys, witnesses, judge and jury. Of late, disaffected detectives have intimated that they could unfold a tale, if they would. We do not doubt it in the least. Doubtless the sheriff might do the same. Quite likely the judge could edify and enlighten us conspires were he so disposed.

It will probably never do to say aught against Masonry in the presence of the murderers of the long list above named. They know too well the meaning of those terrible oaths. Who that has kept an eye on the maneuverings of this whole affair can fail to see that just out of sight, behind a mysterious something, are crouched all the facts together with the murderers and so-called officers of justice, watching the public mind in order to "take due note and govern themselves accordingly." The mark of the beast of organized secrecy is on all the movements connected with the Crouch murder mystery, from the beginning until now.

WEEK-DAY SERMON.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

In that wonderful one hundred and nineteenth Psalm, one verse has always struck me with special force: "I will walk at liberty; for I seek thy precepts." The more a human soul is awake to its high destiny, the more it reaches out after the illimitable, the boundless, the infinite; in other words, every movement either of the church as a body or as individuals after a higher standard of holiness is a movement for more soul liberty. We are born in the swaddling bands of sect and creed, and there is no more hopeful sign than that a new day is breaking over the church than this: that here and there earnest souls are bursting those swaddling bands, and seeing a vision of wider horizons beckoning into an infinity of light and knowledge they never knew before.

Certain grave ecclesiastical councils seem not to have found this out, or else they would hardly spend days tinkering over forms and words as if there was not a whole world around them lying in wickedness—a world that cares very little for the mere technicalities of doctrine, but has a great deal of respect for that honest, sturdy faith that takes its stand on the Word of God and never separates its life from its belief.

The original Hebrew reads, "I will walk at large," unrestrained, unconfined; free as God intended us to be when he made man in his own image. What is the spell which enchains us when we gaze on the broad ocean, rolling between the Northland's eternal glaciers and the shores of everlasting summer? or in a vision of some far-stretching prairie whose only boundary lines are the golden and jasper gates of the sunset? What is it but the spell of infinity, deep calling unto deep; a recognition by the human spirit in the freedom and the expanse of these natural objects of that largeness and liberty which is its own heritage.

Take the simplest and most common instance in our daily lives as an illustration of what the Psalmist means. Are we in bondage to fear? To be delivered from fear of the future, or anything the future may bring us is to walk at liberty. It may be fear of poverty which oppresses us, it may be a haunting dread of death; it may be a thousand things that are only phantoms of our own conjuring up. Whatever it is, so long as that fear is in our souls we are in bondage; we are in a strange land where we cannot sing the songs of Zion. But is it not written for the sake of all who are anxious for the morrow that if we "seek first the kingdom of God all these things will be added unto us." Is it not written for those "who through fear of death are all their lifetime subject to bondage" that Christ's triumph over the grave is the sure pledge of our own. Is it not written for those oppressed by any human dread, that "all things are ours, and we are Christ's, and Christ is God's." Let the weakest Christian realize that no seraphim ages old at Creation's birth-hour, no "anointed cherub walking up and down in the midst of the stones of fire," is bound to divine Love by a link half so strong as that which binds his own doubting, fearing, timorous soul, and he steps at once into a large place: The Word, or as our Saviour puts it, the Truth has made him free. He realizes what the psalmist meant when he said, "I will walk at liberty; for I seek thy precepts."

Take the fear of man to which so many Christian ministers and editors of religious papers are now in bondage. Mariners sometimes witness a sight that once seen is never forgotten: some gigantic iceberg, its base lapped by the soft warm waves of the Gulf Stream that would fain bear it to its death on the palm shores of the equator:

"But its green roofs sleep in the awful deep
Two hundred fathoms low!"

and it heeds not their treacherous lullaby. Grandly, with all its icy battlements glistening in the sun, and sending out diamond-pointed arrows from every pinnacle, it sweeps on, ever against the current, ever with face set towards its birthplace in the blue waters of the polar basin. The whole explanation of the mystery is in a counter-current flowing at a great depth under the surface stream. So when the heart is rooted in the eternal precepts of God, it finds no difficulty in going against the social current. It walks at liberty; custom and fashion cannot bind it; circumstances have no power over it. It has the freedom of the universe.

CHRISTMAS.

Luke 2: 8-17.

BY REV. J. W. SPROULL.

Christmas is Christ-mass. Christ, the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew Messiah, means anointed, and is the official title of our Saviour. Mass is the communion service in the Roman Catholic church. In it is offered up the consecrated wafer, claimed to be the very body of Christ. Christmas then is the mass of Christ, an especial mass celebrated in his honor. The term is applied to both a season and a day. The former begins on the 30th of November and continues until the 6th of January.

It is not, however, as a holy-day Christmas is best known and most observed. Long ago the complaint was made, and often since has been repeated, that too much attention is paid to its "festive character" and too little to "its more solemn aspects." In other words the holiday crowds out the holy-day; recreation interferes with worship.

That this is true now no one conversant with the facts will deny. As a holy-day but little attention is paid to Christmas by the community at large. In many churches there is no religious service. Even of those open for worship but few of the members attend. The nativity is not the chief subject of conversation on the street or in our homes. Indeed it is but seldom referred to. In no proper sense can it be said to be the center around which cluster the memories of the day.

But as a holiday, a day of mirth, of fun, of sport, how well, how universally, it is kept! Business is largely suspended, and old and young, rich and poor, saint and sinner, give themselves up to pleasure. It is also the day when our streets are most crowded, the places of amusement, the theaters, the drinking saloons, the gambling dens, the vile haunts of sin and crime. * * *

Nowhere in the Bible, neither in prophecy nor history, in gospel nor epistle, are the day and month of Christ's birth stated. The passage read from my text contains the nearest reference to the time. The presumption from it is against the date generally accepted. December is the rainy season in Judea. It is not likely shepherds would then be watching their flocks on the plains. Not only is Scripture silent, but there is no well-authenticated tradition respecting it. The fathers were as ignorant of, and as much divided in opinion in regard to the day, as are scholars and biographers of Christ in more modern times. According to the Edinburgh Review, "by the fifth century," "the 25th of December had been agreed upon." "It was not," says Abbott, "until the sixth century that anything like unanimity prevailed as to the day to be observed." Dr. Schaaf gives the following brief summary of views:

"In the Primitive church there was no agreement as to the time of Christ's birth. In the east the 6th of January was observed as the day of his baptism and birth. In the third century, as Clement of Alexandria relates, some regarded the 20th of May, others the 20th of April as the birthday of our Saviour. Among modern chronologists and biographers of Jesus, there is still greater difference of opinion, and every month, even June and July (when the fields are parched for want of rain), have been named as the time when the great event took place. Light-foot assigns the nativity to September, Lardner and Newcome to October, Wieseler to February, Paulus to March, Greswell and Alford to the 5th of April, just after the spring rains when there is an abundance of pasture; Liechtenstein places it in July or December, Strong in August, Robinson in autumn, Clinton in spring, Andrews between the middle of December, 749, U. C., to the middle of January, 750, U. C. On the other hand Roman Catholic historians and biographers of Jesus, as Sepp, Friedlieb, Juchacz, Paritzius, also some Protestant writers, defend the popular tradition, or the 25th of December. Wordsworth gives up the problem and thinks that the Holy Spirit has concealed the year and day of Christ's birth and the duration of his ministry from the wise and prudent to keep them humble."

It is not necessary to make additional quotations. The evidence fully justifies Dr. Schaaf's assertion, "The day and month cannot be certainly determined." It justifies also the assertion, that the evidence is against the 25th of December. For regarding that as the anniversary of Christ's birth, "there is no authority whatever, except the church." That date was selected not on historic grounds, not "instinctively because of its poetic and symbolic fitness," but, as we shall see in a little, for reasons of a very different kind.

Surely in view of these facts we are safe in affirming that God intentionally concealed from us the date of the nativity, seeing it better for us not now to know it. The abuses accompanying the observance of the day, kept as the anniversary of that event, signally vindicate the wisdom of God in so doing and also afford one more illustration of man's folly in trying to be wise above that which is written.

But why, it may be asked, if there is no way by which the date of the nativity can be ascertained, and the presumptive evidence is against the month of December, why was the 25th of that month selected? The answer is easily given. It affords another illustration of Rome's cunning. That date was selected exclusively from motives of policy. The manner in which the day has been long observed, and is now observed, had originally not the most remote reference to the birth of our Lord.

"The manner," remarks Abbott, "in which this Christmas festival came to be observed in the Romish church and through it in the other churches is as follows: Precisely in this season of the year a series of heathen festivals occurred, the celebration of which was in many ways closely interwoven with the whole civil and social life of the Romans. Hence the Christians were often exposed to be led astray into many of the customs and solemnities peculiar to these festivals. To this series of pagan festivals belonging to this season was to be opposed that Christian festival which could be so easily connected with the feelings and sentiments that lay at their foundation. Hence the celebration of the nativity of Christ was transferred to the 25th of December for the purpose of drawing away the Christian people from all participation in the heathen festivals, and of gradually drawing the pagans themselves from their heathen customs to the Christian celebration."

"Most heathen nations," says Johnston, "regarded the winter solstice as the beginning of the renewed life and activity of the powers of nature. The Romans, Celts, and Germans, from the oldest times, celebrated the season with great feasts. Some of their usages passed over from heathenism to Christianity, and have partly survived to the present day. But the church sought to wash the deep-rooted heathen element by introducing its grand liturgy, besides dramatic representations of the birth of Christ and the first events of his life."

Dr. Schaaf confirms the above statement as follows:

"The Christmas festival was probably the Christian transformation or regeneration of a series of kindred heathen festivals which were kept in Rome in the month of December, in commemoration of the golden age of universal freedom and equality, and in honor of the unconquered sun, and which were greatly held, especially for slaves and children. This circumstance accounts for many customs of the Christmas season, like the giving of presents to the children and the poor, the lighting of wax tapers, likewise also the erection of Christmas trees, and gives them for a Christian import. . . . It also betrays the origin of the many excesses in which the unbelieving world indulges at this season."

It would be both interesting and instructive, were there time, to show how largely we imitate to-day the ancient pagans in our observance of this season in in both its religious and social aspects.

This, then, is the history of Christmas Day. It is utterly impossible to conceal its pagan origin and its pagan character. The words of a recent traveller with respect to something that came under his observation, are exceedingly applicable to the result of this attempt on the part of Rome, winked at by Protestants, to give a heathen holiday a Christian origin and make out of it a Christian holy-day. "It reminds me," in his remark, "of a tombstone which is shown to the traveller in the Catacombs at Rome, with an inscription on both sides of it. The one side sets forth the virtues of a pagan Roman long before the Christian era; the other side celebrates the virtues of the Christian who stole, or, at least, appropriated this tombstone from the pagan."

How full of significance to us, in the light of these facts, is Paul's expression of surprise in his epistle to the Galatians, that they should "turn back to the weak and beggarly elements," and "observe days and months and times and years!" How surpassing strange is it that the Protestant world should so soon close its eyes to the plain truth and encourage Rome in her superstitions and deceptions, and the dissolute in their sin, by recognizing Christmas! It was to what at one time had been of great advantage, the Galatians turned back. It is to what had always been idolatrous and licentious, professors of Christianity have turned back. If the former were thought deserving of reproof, what, think ye, should be done with the latter? Whether or not we approve of their course, we can easily understand, in the light of these facts, why the Puritans and Presbyterians in Scotland, took such decided action in regard to Christmas, rejecting it entirely and forbidding, at one time, its celebration.

As it may be interesting to you to know exactly what was the action taken by our ancestors on this subject, I make one extract, reminding you that when it was taken the Second Reformation in Scotland was at its zenith. That was the day of the church's purity and power.

By the Act of Assembly, 13th of February, 1545, it was unanimously ordained that the observance of Yule*, day, or other superstitious days, shall be proceeded against by kirk censures, and shall make their public repentance therefor in the face of the offended congregation. And if masters of schools or colleges grant vacancy of that day, they are to elect to answer to the next Assembly by the ministers of the place, and no vacancy is to be granted at that or any time thereafter in compensation thereof. And scholars guilty herein are to be corrected by their masters; but if they should refuse to subject themselves to correction, or be fugitives from discipline, they are not to be received into any other school or college within the kingdom.

There is no need to consider further this subject. Enough has been said. To try to convince those who, while admitting in general the correctness of what has been presented (and there are such), still defend the observance of the 25th of December on the ground that the actual and precise date of the event is a matter of small moment in comparison with the keeping of some day in commemoration of the nativity, on the ground that the heathen festival is a prophecy of the Christian, and should be so regarded, or for other reasons of a like nature, would be a useless task. The statement of their position is its best refutation. Our duty is plain. When we remember that God has purposely concealed from us the date of Christ's birth, that the day selected as the anniversary of that event was selected exclusively from worldly considerations, that the "festival of Christmas" is the Christian transformation of "the heathen festivals," held at the same period of the year, that the religious aspect of the day is almost entirely lost sight of, that it is now throughout the civilized world spent almost exclusively in pleasure and dissipation, and is made an occasion for the commission of more sin than is committed on any other in the year, this the day observed as the anniversary of the nativity, surely our duty, the duty of all who are sincerely desirous of the honor of Christ, is to refuse to recognize or countenance it in any way as a holy day.

*From a Saxon word meaning feast, in olden times given to Christians.

We can learn from this subject these among other lessons: the great danger of taking from or adding to any of the regulations and ordinances God has appointed; the natural tendency of the human heart to imitate the example of those around us in conforming to the ways of the world and to make plausible pretexts for so doing; and the necessity for spending wholly in God's worship time devoted to his service.—Reformed Presbyterian.

THE MASONS' PASS.

When the islands were first becoming so famous as to attract attention in all parts of the country, I, a young minister in very poor health, scraped together money enough to make the journey from Lewiston to Montreal. On arriving at the steamer an adventure of much personal and some national and international interest occurred. Many young men, desiring to escape the draft then ordered—it was in the summer of 1862—were fleeing to Canada. Secretary Stanton issued an order, which was in force for a short time only, that no person liable to a draft should be allowed to cross the frontier without a passport, and that the United States Marshals should stop all such. I had the misfortune to attempt to go the very day the order arrived and went into effect. As I attempted to go on board I was seized by an officer, and pushed roughly back.

"What is this for?"

"Well, have you a pass?"

"No. What do I want a pass for?"

"You can't go into Canada without a pass. You are liable to a draft, and you are trying to get away, and I have orders to stop you."

This was the first I had heard of it. I stood there, and saw him pass certain men with a wink, and some who made the signs of some secret order. Perceiving the favoritism, I told him that I was a minister in poor health taking a vacation trip, and was not liable to a draft, as he could see that I was sick.

"Young man," said he, "that won't go down. There are a good many sick nowadays. This ministerial dodge won't work."

This stirred me to self-defense. By producing letters, threatening to report him at Washington for letting persons go on board who had no passes but made Masonic or other signs, and promising that I would leave that boat at Ogdensburg, at last I got on. Such was his general course that I concluded that the best pass I could have offered him would have been a $5 note.—Dr. James M. Buckley in the Christian Advocate.

After his return from Europe, late last summer, Mr. Chauncey Depew said to the representative of a daily newspaper, who wished to obtain the impressions he had brought back with him, that one of the facts which had chiefly arrested his attention was that the anarchists and communists of the Continent, being stoutly resisted at every step, thwarted by the governments and the people, being repressed with severity and having little political power, were turning their faces toward the United States and were coming to this country in increasing numbers, for they believed it to be a free field where they could work out their schemes without hindrance and effect their desire to destroy all private property. It is plain to all that Mr. Depew is right. He is competent to form an opinion on such a matter and his words should have weight with us. Evidence enough has been furnished during the past two or three years that communism is increasing its strength among us.—Intelligencer.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

But little more than a year ago the White House, Capitol, Executive Departments and other public buildings here were draped in mourning for a dead Vice President. Now again they are draped for the deceased ex-President, and flags all over the city droop at half mast. The emblems of mourning will remain up for a month, and will postpone for a time the projected entertainments at the White House. It was the intention of the President and Mrs. Cleveland to open the Mansion immediately after the opening of Congress, but nothing akin to gaiety has ever taken place there when the house is in mourning. Nor will the President accept invitations for the time, even to the houses of the Members of his Cabinet.

Hon. George Bancroft, the historian, gave an elegant banquet on Friday evening in honor of the President and Mrs. Cleveland, but they withdrew their acceptance out of respect to the late ex-President. It is not customary, and would not be good form for the President to attend entertainments while his official home is draped in black. Unlike his predecessor, who entered with zest into the social life of the Capital, and mingled freely with unofficial society whenever occasion offered, Mr. Cleveland has so far only once departed from his determination not to accept invitations outside of his Cabinet. This was when he dined with Commissioner Webb a fortnight ago. He has claimed as his excuse for this seeming exclusiveness, lack of time and pressure of business.

—Mr. Arthur was by far the most social President of the twenty-three who have occupied the White House. The cares of State weighed heavily upon him, and he plunged into the social world of the Capital in order to find relief. He turned night into day, scarcely ever retiring before 2 o'clock A. M., and it was a matter of surprise to those who observed his habits that he was able to serve out his official term. His health was deplorably broken long before he left Washington, and he fully realized the fact. He was very popular here, and his fine manners, dignified bearing, and kindly, genial disposition made him a central figure at every social gathering.

President Cleveland, with several members of the Cabinet, a Senatorial Committee appointed by Senator Sherman, and a Congressional Committee designated by Speaker Carlisle, went to the ex-President's funeral.

Speaking of symbols of mourning suggests a question of etiquette concerning the White House flag. A naval officer of wide experience in such matters noticed it at half mast and asked if President Cleveland was dead. He said the display of the flag at half mast would convey this impression to any person familiar with the recognized use of such symbols. According to this authority the national flag should be displayed over the Executive Mansion at half mast only when the President himself is dead. The national character of the building should be indicated by the display of the flag at all times, from sunrise to sunset. In times of public sorrow the flag should not be raised at all, but on the death of the President it should droop at half mast.

The city is fast filling up for the winter. Every train brings some politician or lobbyist or General or Judge or Senator or Representative, and Congress is only two weeks off.

Brigadier General Miles, the veteran Indian fighter, is in Washington on a furlough. He thinks Gerónimo and his friends were properly dealt with, and says Gov. Zulick of Arizona is also satisfied with the disposition made of them. Their surrender was absolute, but they threw themselves upon the mercy of their captors, in the hope that by so doing their lives might be spared.

General Sherman's report to Congress on the question of the National Indian policy, strongly recommends that the Indian lands hereafter should be held in severalty, that is—instead of being held in large tracts by the tribes as such, that it be divided according to the numbers of families and persons, and that the ownership be held by them as individuals or as families. We believe that this idea was first brought before Congress by the eloquent and self-sacrificing lady who spent some time with us three years ago, Miss Alice Fletcher. Her view was that such a division of property is necessary, in order to release the Indian from tribal servitude, and in order to bring them to civilization. The War Department has evidently become a convert to that theory. The theory is none the worse because a woman suggested it.—Southwestern Presbyterian.

—Rev. G. W. Bowne, an Episcopal minister of Baltimore, whose extreme ritualistic practices produced dissensions in his church, has gone where he belonged—to the Roman Catholics.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

RICHFIELD SPRINGS, N. Y., Nov. 20.

Accompanied by B. Tunnickliff I reached the summit of "Snowden Hill" in the late afternoon of the 18th. The journey was "up hill business" all the way, but we were rewarded by a hearty welcome at the home of Abraham Babcock. He had been often urged to join the Masons, but felt suspicious that there was something crooked about the business or secrecy would not be necessary. My lecture giving him a peep behind the curtain interested him, and he wished to know more of what is done of them in secret. The night could scarcely have been more unfavorable, yet despite darkness, snow and mud there was a fair audience, and deep interest, especially on the part of the ladies. Two things prevented further meetings: the condition of the roads, which old settlers said they had never seen so bad before; and the failure of crops in this region, which made everybody feel too poor to subscribe for the Cynosure or contribute in aid of the lecture work. The M. E. church, at the Lake, after one evening's use for the reasonable sum of one dollar, was tendered free of charge, with entertainment thrown in, by a lady who has $500 invested in the house, and from whom the lodge has stolen two or more choice sons. B. Tunnickliff and other friends were agreed that an opening had been effected with very favorable impressions, and that it would be advisable to defer further efforts.

Mr. Tunnickliff provided me with very pleasant quarters in the family of Rev. Mr. Darrow, an aged and retired Free Baptist minister, who yielding to solicitations once entered a lodge of Odd Fellows, much to his disgust and sorrow. He abandoned the craft at once, and gave it as his experience and the careful observation of more than half a century, that it is impossible for a Christian to maintain his spirituality and retain active connection with a secret lodge. He had never known a single exception, and the lives of many promising young men and ministers had been marred or totally wrecked at the secret altar of Baal worship. The whole town of Schuyler's Lake, with its lodge of fifty or more night worshippers, its half dozen or more bars, pool tables, etc., and two staving churches, where a score of hearers is considered a good audience, shows what Good Templarism and Freemasonry can and will do for the morals and religion of a community where they are allowed to work without let or hindrance. The Lake is "a thing of beauty," and the surrounding landscape the most picturesque, yet with all its natural grandeur, fertility of soil and wealth of attraction, this region is so blighted by the lodge and the liquor curse, that, were it not for accessions from other regions, it would very soon settle down into the darkness and shadow of spiritual death.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 22.—My stop at this point has been rendered exceedingly pleasant by the kindness of brethren and friends. I attended and took part in six different meetings during the Sabbath, in all of which I met earnest praying workers. The Wesleyan brethren are engaged in special effort for revival and enlargement. The pastor, E. W. Bruce, assisted by Rev. D. P. Rathbun, is pushing the battle to the gates and they are not afraid of "spoiling the work" by admitting a recognized anti-lodge minister into the pulpit. At 3 P. M. I attended a meeting in City Hall, which interested me much. The lady who is leading a movement in behalf of children of intemperate friends, gave an account of her work and needs for the little ones. Some of the incidents related in connection with her work and the fourteen little unfortunates now in her care were very touching. Later in the day I met this lady again at the room of the W. C. T. U., among the active workers who have kept their room open for thirteen years. They were glad to hear of incidents I could relate and especially of the organization and work at Wheaton. They proposed to try the "Coffee Lunch" at their next election. The theme of the evening was "Third Party in Politics," and it was intelligently and thoroughly handled. The meeting at the R. R. Y. M. C. A. was well attended at 4 P. M. Revs. Rathbun and Bruce spoke, and several gave testimony to what the Lord had done for them. After the evening services I passed the night with our true fellow worker, Charles Merritt, who was glad to obtain a fresh supply of tracts which he distributes wisely. I had the pleasure of meeting and greeting Bro. Kinney and his bride at the church, and of renewing the acquaintance of many whose faces and blessing are always a benison. An hour with Bro. Wardner in the Wesleyan sanctuary this morning deepened conviction that rum and the secret lodge system have little to hope either from his timidity or indiscretion, and much to fear from his uncompromising hostility. That his "sharp sword has entered their bones" is abundantly manifest by the numerous threatening missives which have recently been sent him. Bro. Merrick kindly took me in his carriage to the home of Donald Kirkpatrick to whom the readers of the Cynosure need no introduction. I regretted exceedingly to find him suffering with an inflamed eye and a slight paralysis of the right side of his face. Physicians encourage him to hope for a speedy recovery. He reads reports of our anti-secrecy work as he is able, and with unabated interest. His sympathy and judgment does not cover all declarations embodied in the "American Platform," but holds firmly to the creed: no unrepentant lodge preachers in the pulpit, and no devotee of the secret empire in civil office. He believes profoundly in the Southern educational work and will aid in making it a success.

One thing noticeable in all the reform meetings was the presence of Wesleyans and their prominence in aggressive measures. May the Lord reward them and give to the Master's cause more uncompromising Christians of whatever name. "The Lord hath need of them." J. P. STODDARD.

THE SOUTHERN WORK.

SELMA REVISITED.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Of all the inland cities of the South, I have seen none that is prettier than Selma, Ala. Its broad streets are beautifully shaded with great evergreen oaks that reach their huge arms so as to form a great green arch. Numerous artesian wells furnish the city an abundant supply of pure water, and a large fine water tower is one of the recent additions. Since I was here, five years ago, there have been numerous additions and improvements, among them a great iron bridge across the Alabama River, and a large and beautiful building, now nearly completed, for the Y. M. C. A.

The educational and moral work has not been neglected. For the colored people there are the most excellent schools: Knox Academy under the care of Rev. G. M. Elliott; Burrell Institute of the A. M. A., and the Baptist Normal and Theological school, first started by Rev. H. Woodsmall. All are in a prosperous condition.

I met a most kind and hospitable reception from pastors Elliott and C. W. Curtis, and have been aided in all practicable ways in my work. Yesterday with pastor Curtis, I visited the ministers and it was arranged that on next Sabbath I shall preach in the Congregational church in the morning, the St. Phillips St. Baptist church in the afternoon and in the Tabernacle Baptist church in the evening. The pastor of the A. M. E. church was a student at Howard University, and heard me lecture there in 1882. He has kept out of all secret societies. The pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist church is a R. A. Mason, but says he has abandoned all secret societies, and bids me a God-speed in my work. He is astonished that the Masons suffer me to live. The editor of the Independent (an able paper published by the colored people) is a presiding elder in the A. M. E. church. He says he has joined about all the secret societies he has ever heard of, and has been a high Mason, but has given them all up, and heartily sympathizes with me in my work.

The Annual Conference of the Zion A. M. Episcopal church is in session in this city and I hope to attend some of its meetings. There are two efficient W. C. T. Unions in this city, No. 1 for white ladies; No. 2 has no respect to race. This latter has expanded into a State W. C. T. U., and has friendly relations with the older Union. The Congregational and the Covenant churches are steadily growing, and the former is enlarging its borders, having recently added a sister church in the vicinity. I have to-day visited the Burrell and Knox schools and was greatly pleased with the recitations. There is certainly a most hopeful progress in this part of this State. H. H. HINMAN.

A GLIMPSE OF THE WISCONSIN AGENT.

WAUKESHA, Wis., Nov. 26, 1886.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Since being at your office a week ago, I have been gratified in seeing additional tokens for good in Waukesha. I found Bro. J. Y. Wolf, of Milwaukee, and others, have begun good salvation meetings. Three stirring meetings were held on the Sabbath, in Barstow Hall. The meetings have so far been increasing in interest and have been well attended, and souls are being stirred, some seeking the Lord. So we thank God and take courage.

Last evening Elder J. F. Browne came this way, and was gladly welcomed and gave us a good, sensible Gospel talk, and was listened to with interest and profit. Several manifested their conviction of the necessity of real salvation as clearly recommended. This morning found him in Fond du Lac as arranged for his work.

I wish to say in this connection that Bro. Browne's coming to this county since our State meeting at Waupun, has been of real, and doubtless great permanent value to this part of the State, and though but pioneer work comparatively, yet it is a wonderfully good seconding and settling series of sledge hammer dealings with strongly entrenched giant evils, and no better agent need be asked for in these parts of the field. Many will yet desire and seek more light on these great evils, which he so ably and in excellent Christian spirit clearly expounds and discusses. S. E. ORVIS.

A GLORIOUS CONVENTION PREPARING IN OHIO.

GREENFIELD, O., Nov. 27, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Since my last I have spent my time in the region round about, interesting friends to attend the convention. I have visited New Martinsburg, New Vienna, Martinsville, Wilmington, Port William and Gurneyville. Friends in all of these places have assured me of their intention to attend. Thanksgiving day evening I addressed a good audience in the Dover (Friends) meeting house. The best of attention was given. One young man said he would not have missed the lecture for five dollars, but he didn't give the five dollars.

I returned to this place last evening. After reading the many letters which I find here and looking over the ground generally, I am sure we are to have a glorious convention this year. Some told me after the convention last year that they regretted very much they did not attend. Some were prevented because they did not arrange soon enough. Friends, make your plans beforehand, and when the time comes start. Thousands of people don't get to heaven simply because they don't make right plans and carry them out. If you are a pastor, and holding a revival, get the people so revived that they can run the meeting a day or so without your being present. If you are a farmer, arrange with the hired man or neighbor to milk the cows and feed the stock. More than half the excuses people make are not real. If you really believe that these secret societies are degrading and debasing the church of Christ, swearing young husbands to life-long concealment from their wives, and dethroning justice in our courts, will you not make an effort to say so by meeting with those who are laboring for their overthrow?

We need your words of encouragement and counsel in this great work. Will not every one that expects to be here from a distance sit right down and write me so arrangements can be made for your entertainment. Bring all you can with you. The people of Greenfield are very good-natured, and I have no doubt will open their homes to entertain us. Many have already assured me they would do all they could. If you see anyone angry when you come, you may be sure it is one of the fraternity.

We expect the usual reduction in railroad fare. Those who secure a certificate from the station agent where they buy their tickets stating that they have purchased a full-fare ticket to the place of meeting, will be permitted to return for 1 cent per mile, if the certificate be signed by the secretary of the convention. The secretary is not allowed to sign these certificates unless fifty or more are presented, so every one should get a certificate no matter how short a distance they come.

Where is Greenfield? This question has been asked by several. It is in Highland county, near the corner of Fayette and Ross, fifty miles south of Columbus and fifteen miles south-east of Washington, C. H. It has a population of nearly three thousand. Two railroads, the Ohio Southern, which is a continuation of the I. B. and W., and the C. W. and B. pass through it. These roads make good connection with others leading to Greenfield. Friends coming from Columbus and the north should take the Midland to Washington, C. H.; coming from Dayton and the north-west, the Pan-handle to South Charleston and then the O. S. Those coming from Logan and Hardin counties can come straight through by the I. B. and W. From Morgan, Hocking and Athens counties come via. Hamden and Chillicothe; from Muskingum and Gurnsey counties, via. Zanesville, Lancaster and Circleville. Any farther information about roads will be gladly given. See the list of speakers given in the call elsewhere. Remember the time, Dec. 15th and 16th.

If you have a neighbor who is a Mason bring him along. The Masons should come to see what the Anti-masons are doing. We hold no secret sessions, shall soon have several thousand bills printed advertising the convention. Those who will assist in distributing them should send their names at once. Address me till the convention at Greenfield, Highland Co. W. B. STODDARD, State Agent.

BRO. HAWLEY TURNS NORTHWARD.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—From Wayne county I went to Mahaska county, where I preached and lectured in the city of Oskaloosa. Some interest was developed, and future work was called for, both in the city and the adjoining country.

I then went northward, visiting my new home at Wasioja, Dodge Co., Minn., which is about thirty miles from the north line of Iowa. A severe snow storm was raging when I reached there. Prof. E. G. Payne, the principal of Wasioja Seminary, who is also president of the Minnesota State Christian Association opposed to secret societies, had, in concurrence with the president of the Dodge County Christian Association, arranged for me to rest at home, by delivering a course of four lectures against the secret lodge system, including a sermon on the Masonic plan of salvation in contrast with that of the Gospel, on Lord's day evening. Owing to the storm that raged, the first two lectures of the course were withdrawn. But I gave two lectures. In the first, I analyzed the Masonic oaths, or covenants, and showed that they bound to sin and crime; and instead of being irrevocable, and hence perpetual, as Masonic authorities claim, are, in reality, destitute of any force whatever; and that they have not even the force of a bond of honor. Hence every honest Mason is at liberty to renounce Masonry, and expose it as a fraud and a wicked conspiracy against righteous, God-ordained civil government; and, also, as a Satanic conspiracy against the law of God, and the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

In the second lecture I showed that, as there is but one God, there can be but one true religion; and, as there is one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus, the religion of Christ must be the one true religion of God. Hence, said Jesus, "no man can come unto the Father but by me." And Peter, indorsing Jesus as the Saviour, affirmed that by no other name could we be saved. I then proved that Freemasonry was a religion, as really as Mohammedanism, or any form of paganism; and, if a religion, it must either be the religion of Christ; or, it must be a rival religion through which Satan is working to supplant Christ and subvert Christianity. Freemasonry was shown to be: (1) a rival of Christianity, in that it claims to regenerate men, and free them from sin; (2) it is not Christianity, as it supplies no scheme of redemption from sin; (3) its plan of salvation squarely antagonizes the Gospel plan, as Christ is ignored and purposely excluded.

Rev. M. A. Gault said after hearing my second lecture, "Bro. Hawley, I do not see how Free-

[Continued on 12th page.]

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE CRUSH OF CHRISTIANS.

BRUSH CREEK, Iowa, Nov. 26, 1886.

EDITORS CYNOSURE:—Since it was first proposed over a year ago, I have felt a deep interest in the approaching Congress of Christians opposed to secret societies, to be held in Chicago on Feb. 22. I believe it is the most important step ever proposed in the history of the movement. If it is properly worked up, it will mark a new and important epoch in the history of the anti-secret cause. A call for such a congress stating the underlying Bible principles of the movement and signed by the prominent men in the various churches, and widely published through the various church papers, cannot fail to bring the subject before the masses as it has never been brought before. I have found in the most popular churches, ministers and members, who at heart are opposed to secret societies, but Nicodemus-like, are afraid to say so openly "for fear of the Jews." All such would be emboldened by an array of names and talent which such a convention would bring together. There is strength in numbers. Coals of fire when brought together create light and heat, and a large convention of the kind proposed in Chicago would kindle a flame that would blaze from ocean to ocean. Now as the weight and momentum of the movement will be estimated by the delegation at this convention, let every effort be made to secure the largest possible attendance.

Allow me to make a few suggestions as to the steps necessary to make this congress a success. Let it be published not only in the organs of the movement but in all the denominational papers, and as many of the secular papers as possible. In addition to this, let a circular programme be published containing a call and signers for the convention, and a list of speakers and their topics. Let these be mailed to as many as possible at least one month before the convention. Let the programme consist of the best talent that can be secured in the various churches. Let the programme be so arranged as to bring out the strongest indictment against the secret orders, putting the strongest and most experienced speakers to lead in the discussions. Let everything possible be done to secure entertainment in Chicago for those unable to entertain themselves. Finally, let every friend of the cause be earnest in prayer that this meeting may be one powerful for good. Providence permitting, I expect to be in attendance.

M. A. GAULT.

A CRY FROM INDIA.

WHO WILL HEAR AND HELP.

SECUNDERABAD, Oct. 13, 1886.

DEAR BROTHER:—I date my letter "Secunderabad," but I am 150 miles in the interior and 60 from the railroad or postoffice. Yet the Cynosure reaches me regularly. I read with deep interest each number. Philo Carpenter is gone. Who will take his place? Your battle is not half begun yet. Secrecy holds the reins yet firmly. When there will be a let up no one can now see. But the war must be kept up. The large supply of tracts sent me in India have all gone. Some of them have stirred up much fire; others have opened eyes, and I believe much good has been done. There is still great need.

I want another supply. I will get them off over this empire. Many natives are being led into Masonry, largely because they see the worldly gain in it, and do not see the curse in it. I feel the need of something for them. If some one interested in this great land will pay for about $25 worth of tracts it will be a great boon to India.

There are a few of us in India who are not afraid of the odium of opposing secrecy. Many missionaries are Masons. But not many associate in India. C. B. WARD, Telugu Missionary.

THE CHICAGO ANARCHISTS.

The Anarchists in our jail for murder have some friends who desire their pardon. Ladies are soliciting signatures, and make tender appeals on behalf of the families which are in great need of the earnings of the fathers and husbands now confined. But we can see no reason for sending such men again into society, for they would train up their children to lawlessness and be ready to repeat their abominable conduct. It is possible that they may not be hanged; as time passes on public indignation cools, but the public judgment of the character of their action remains unaltered. Therefore, if the law should be upheld there must be penalty executed upon such violators of it.

The lesson, however, is only partially learned by our community when it can allow dynamite to be prepared for other lands; and when our blatant advocates of anarchy in other countries are praised as patriots, and smiled upon by the politicians for merely party purposes. Such men desire the control of the public affairs by hook or by crook, and flatter even the red-flag supporters and their fiery orators in order to gain their votes! What but something of this spirit can account for the do-nothing executive of our city and State and nation when thousands in Chicago and other cities marched on the Lord's day to the music of the anarchists under the red flag, and listened with rapture to their incendiary orators?

Is there not a secret in all this to which our newspapers scarcely dare allude? What is it? Aha! the violators of the law are members of—a mob—ah, no! Members of the respectable secret order of dynamiters!

Therefore, O ye governors, beware how you treat them. They number tens of thousands, and may hold the balance of power in the next election! Don't check them. Let them alone. But how unfortunate when they murder our police! We could get along if they had hurt or killed a few scabs, but—well, we must make the best of it now.

Some Irish patriots among us are getting impatient with such men as Parnell and Davitt, and would prefer some more explosions and dirks to the peaceable proceedings which have prevailed for a few months over there. Shall the United States continue to allow her free soil to be anarchized for foreign countries? If Irishmen become naturalized Americans, let them act worthy of the change and of their new privileges; but if they continue to be more Irish than American, and violate our laws by preparing dynamite, etc., let them know that law must reign over them as well as over the RED FLAG. H.

NATIONAL REFORM IN THE SOUTH.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 16, 1886.

Tennyson remarked at the anniversary of a metaphysical society that "modern science ought at least to have taught us one thing: how to distinguish between light and heat." A trip South has convinced me that what the colored people need is not the heat of angry contention, but the light of candid, dispassionate discussion. They have long been in the night; the schoolhouse and the church must bring them into the day. We first visited Knox Academy, of Selma, Alabama, under the care of the Reformed Presbyterian church. Rev. G. M. Elliott is principal. He is recognized as one of the first educators South, and his skill and energy are apparent in this well-ordered school. He has 500 pupils, all he can possibly accommodate. As I stood before this school, I could not help exclaiming, "Ring out the silver bells. The blacks are free." The hopes of Charles Sumner, William Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips are realized. The labors of J. R. W. Sloane, A. M. Milligan and J. M. Willson are bearing fruit.

I spoke next at Talladega College, Rev. Henry S. De Forest, D. D., president. This is the only thoroughly equipped college for that race in Alabama. And when we remember that there are 600,000 blacks in the State and 80 per cent illiterate, we cannot help exclaiming, "What are these among so many?" The main building, Swayne Hall, was put up in 1853 for collegiate purposes. It was the product of slave labor. The slaves were often made to smart under the lash. One negro lives near by today who carried mortar. His master whipped him until the blood ran down his back. He often cried while at work because his children could not be educated in that house. But strange to say, three of his sons have recently graduated with honors. During the war this building was used as a rebel prison. A Yankee soldier scratched on a window pane, "prisoners of war." They keep that pane hung up in the library. Dr. Demorest stated these facts in the Christian at Work last May.

The community was so enraged that he was compelled to come North for a season to escape personal violence. They have two additional buildings, Foster and Stone Halls, besides dwellings for the professors, Cassedy school house, Slater workshop, etc., and 220 acres of land. They have a faculty of eighteen and nearly 300 students in the theological, collegiate and industrial departments. This is an American Missionary institution, and there are eight others under the same society in the South.

We found good soil for National Reform principles. Such institutions as Selma, Knox Academy and Talladega College are the hope of the colored people. What they want is more light. They are perishing for lack of knowledge. Ignorant preachers are their curse. If the blind lead the blind, both fall into the ditch. One man like Bro. Elliott is worth ten thousand ignorant and unlearned men who do not know their right hand from their left.

I next lectured at the Tuskegee State Normal, B. T. Washington, principal. The institution has 380 acres, most of which was purchased for 75 cts. per acre, and two main buildings, Alabama and Porter Halls, with thirteen officers and teachers and 279 pupils. They aim to fit the latter for usefulness in any sphere of life. An afternoon was devoted to our work.

On last Sabbath morning I preached in Clark University, Atlanta, Ga. This is a plant of the Freedmen's Aid Society, just outside the city limits in a grove, beautiful for situation. They have 400 acres, three main buildings, Gammon Theological Hall, Chrisman and Warren Halls, and a number of dwellings for professors and married students. They expect to put up a fourth hall the coming year. Rev. E. O. Thayer is president. This faculty numbers twenty-one, with about 300 students. More are coming than they can accommodate. They were friendly to our work. One of the professors said: "That sermon was second to none ever delivered in this university." A student observed, "Hearing such a sermon as that is an event in one's life. It is only two or three times that a man will have the opportunity of listening to such a discourse." Straws show the direction of the current. Rev. Horace Binns, president of Atlanta University, an institution almost the duplicate of Clark, very kindly offered me the privilege of preaching to his students on Sabbath evening, but a previous engagement prevented my accepting.

On Monday morning I spoke before the Spellman Seminary, Miss S. B. Packard, principal. She has 500 girls. They occupy the old barracks. Last summer Rockefeller Hall was completed. I found that the future wives of our coming statesmen were as much interested in this work as their brothers.

This was the climax of my visit South. I never saw the like before. Miss Packard is certainly a grand woman.

Atlanta is a beautiful city of 60,000, a moral, church-going, prohibition city. But like other cities South it is afflicted with caste. The blacks are not allowed in white congregations. They may not ride in first-class cars. But it is evident that the blacks are gradually gaining and the whites are losing. By and by the blacks may take the kingdom. "God reigns and the government at Washington still stands."

J. M. FOSTER.

PITH AND POINT.

GOOD CHURCH FROM THE LUMBERMEN'S EVANGELIST.

I was sorry to learn, too late, from Bro. Fenton of St. Paul, the time of the State Convention recently held in Wisconsin. It would have given me great pleasure to have been present. I find proof everywhere of the good results of your faithful testimony against the unfruitful works of darkness, and abundant reason for still adding line unto line and precept unto precept.—WILLIAM F. DAVIS.

A SAD AMALGAMATION.

It is announced by press and pulpits that the Freemasons are to lay the corner stone of the M. E. church. There will be mutual sympathy and good will and a general hand-shaking with the world, the flesh and the devil all round. But in the words of Christ, "how great is the darkness" that makes such desecration and profanation possible! It is true as the Wise Man says, "The fear of man bringeth a snare" and our M. E. friends are sadly entangled. It may be interesting to note the final outcome of this combination; whatever the end may be the evil results and damage will be immense. However, let us rejoice that some will be saved, having come out—not along the broad way of popularity and through the wide gate of compromise, but out of great tribulation and having washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.—R. P. BRORUP, Webster, Dak.

THE STRUGGLE IN THE U. S. CHURCH.

I am reading your paper and am much interested in this general reform movement. My time and energies are devoted as you know to the battle in our own church. I am glad to say that our cause is gaining ground. As fast as our brethren get access to the light they are taking a stand for the right. If our paper, the Christian Conservator, had a circulation of ten or fifteen thousand, we should win the day. Pray for us.—H. FLOYD.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON XI.—December 12, 1886.—The Saints in Heaven.—Rev. 7:9-17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple.—Rev. 7:15.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The Great Multitude. vs. 7-12. John's vision of the redeemed is a most comforting as well as glorious vision. It should be an encouragement to ourselves to press forward and become one of that great multitude. If so many of our race have found salvation we have certainly every reason to hope and none to despair. It should also be an encouragement to mission work and all efforts to save souls. The throng which no man can number is composed of all nations and tongues. But they are one in Christ, Greek and barbarian, Roman and Jew. All differences of race or creed are forgotten; they were purchased at the same priceless cost, and one soul is as precious as another in the eyes of their divine Redeemer. There is here a lesson against the sectarian differences and petty religious feuds which divide so large a part of the Christian world. We are not told that there are no varieties of personal opinion in heaven. It is probable that there are differences of individual minds the same as here but it causes no controversy, no bickerings or disputings, because every thought and feeling is held subordinate to one passion—that of love and adoring gratitude to their Saviour. And just so far as Christians here below come into this happy state, so far will sectarianism and strife be banished.

2. The Blessed State of the Redeemed. vs. 13-17. The elder's question to John, and the answer, "These are they which came out of great tribulation," proves that the Christian life must be one of constant struggle. It was a period of persecution. Pagan Rome was making one of her last great efforts to withstand the conquering power of the cross. Can we conceive anything better calculated to strengthen the faith of these hunted and harassed Christians than this vision of their martyred brethren admitted to stand continually in the immediate presence of God; all pain and sorrow gone, led by the Lamb himself to the living fountains, their whole existence continual joy and praise. But the lesson is as needed by our age as any former one. The tendency is to make of the Christian life too easy a thing, but the words of Paul are not obsolete, "They who would live godly in this world must suffer persecution." We have the same religious principles to stand up for as did the early martyrs, and those principles are as unpalatable to the natural heart now as they were centuries ago. The gist of all these moral questions that are now demanding an answer is this, Shall Christ rule or Satan? Shall we pay homage to the Prince of this world by keeping silent on popular evils, or shall we come out boldly on the Lord's side, and take what may follow, the derision, perhaps the personal abuse of enemies, or what is far worse, to bear the coldness and misunderstanding of professed friends. There would be many more reform workers in the field, many more ministers and Christian laymen to protest against wrong and iniquity if they did not shrink from drinking this bitter cup. But the way to heaven was never intended to be an easy way. Blessed is he, and he only, who overcometh.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

Why do the saints ascribe the glory of their salvation to God alone? Ps. 3:3; Isa. 43:11; Jer. 3:23; Hos. 13:4. Under what striking vision did Zechariah show Christ's power to cleanse? Zech. 3:3, 4, 5.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"A great multitude which no man could number." This representation is in strong contrast with a very common opinion that only a few will be saved. The representation in the Bible is, that immense hosts of the human race will be saved. We have every reason to believe that taking the race at large, and estimating it as a whole, a vast majority of the whole will be brought to heaven. For the true religion is yet to spread all over the world, and perhaps for many, many thousands of years piety is to be as prevalent as sin has been; and in that long and happy time of the world's history we may hope that the numbers of the saved may surpass all who have been lost in past periods, beyond any power of computation.—A. Barnes. We have sometimes heard it said that Christians cannot be happy in heaven, if so many are lost. But this vision of the future helps us. People are happy in this country though they know that some by their own fault are in prison, or in the poor house, or on beds of pain.

"Of all nations." This implies two things: (1) That the Gospel would be preached among all nations; and (2) that even when it was thus preached to them, they would keep up their national characteristics. There can be no hope of blending all the nations of the earth under one visible sovereignty. They may all be subjected to the spiritual reign of the Redeemer, but still there is no reason to suppose that they will not have their distinct organizations and laws.—Barnes.

"Kindreds, and people and tongues." Note (1) that no one nation can attain its highest state till all nations are Christianized, as the waters of the sea can not keep the high level of their waves unless all the sea is lifted up. Note (2) that every Christian people is better and happier on account of the great variety of Christians. Each nation and race has something special to contribute to the general good; and there will always be something lacking from the harmony of the new song till every nation joins in it. Note (3) missions have more than repaid their expense in men and money many times over, if they have done no more than prove that the religion of Jesus is adapted to all of every race and name and therefore is divine. Note (4) God has already redeemed some of every race, to a high degree of Christian living and character, to show the church what God would do with all.—P.

"Fell before the throne on their faces." In token of reverence and humility. Let these angels reprove those persons (some of them Christians, whose representatives fell on their faces) who are irreverent in the house of God, and do not take reverential positions during worship in the prayer-meetings and Sunday-school. It is not goodness nor greatness that refuses to join with the angels in reverential forms and expressions of worship.

"And have washed their robes." In the blood of the Lamb, and thus made them clean and pure. This expression leads us to the thought of the whole cleansing efficacy of the work of Christ, to its removal of the power of sin as well as to pardon, to new life imparted as well as to old transgressions forgiven (compare Zech. 3:4). In the vision of St. John, water alone does not exhibit the special blessing of the New Covenant (compare 1 John 5:6). The Old Covenant has water; the New has "blood," and blood is life. What is here signified, therefore, is that these believers are made new creatures in Christ Jesus; they are alike justified and sanctified, when they are "washed" in the blood of Christ.—Milligan.

"And they serve him night and day in his temple." Their whole life is worship. All they do expresses their love and reverence. It is a great privilege to serve God to ennoble all our lives by doing God's will, and carrying on his work. It gives zest and value to living.

"And he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them." Or, as in Rev. Ver. shall spread his tabernacle over them, as the divine glory, or Shekinah, overshadowed the mercy-seat. The glory appeared as a light within, and as a cloud on the outside; a light, truth, comfort, joy, love within, and a defence against all foes without. It is exceedingly difficult to express the sense of these glorious words in which the fulfillment of the Old Testament promises, such as Levit. 26:11; Isa. 45:6; Ezek. 37:27, is announced. They give the fact of the dwelling of God among them, united with the fact of his protection being over them, and assuring to them the exemptions next to be mentioned. In the term "shall tabernacle" (so literally as to contain a multitude of recollections, of the pillar in the wilderness, of the Shekinah in the holy place, of the tabernacle of witness with all its symbolism. These will all now be realized and superseded by the overshadowing presence of God himself.—A. Ford.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington, in a letter written a year before his death: "I preside over no lodge, nor have I been in one more than once or twice during the last thirty years."

President Millard Fillmore, J. C. Spencer and others: "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Chief Justice John Marshall: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned as one capable of much evil and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

John Quincy Adams: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

General A. W. Riley: "I hold that the difference between the Christian and a heathen religion is, that one has morality and the other has not. And when our churches refuse to speak of such subjects as slavery, liquor-selling and secret societies, they are becoming heathen religions; that is, religions without morals."

Charles Francis Adams: "Every man who takes a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment were to prove a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield: In conducting the governments of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but secret orders to be considered, which have agents everywhere—rascals and agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

William H. Seward: "Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men in a secret lodge, order, class, or council, and, bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow-men."

Wendell Phillips: "I wish you success most heartily in your efforts to arouse the community to the danger of secret societies. They are a great evil; entirely out of place in a republic, and no patriot should join or uphold them. Considering the great forces which threaten the welfare of the nation in the next thirty years, and how readily and efficiently they can use any secret organizations, such should not be allowed to exist."

George Washington's Farewell Address: "The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government. All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle and of fatal tendency."

Daniel Webster: "All secret associations the members of which take upon themselves extraordinary obligations to one another, and are bound together by secret oaths, are naturally sources of jealousy and just alarm to others; are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions, and are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government. Under the influence of this conviction it is my opinion that the future administration of all such oaths and the formation of all such obligations should be prohibited by law."

George Washington (to Gov. Trumbull): "Masonry is a benevolent institution, which may be employed for the best or worst purposes."

Edward Everett: "A secret society so widely diffused and connected as this puts a vast power, capable of the most dangerous abuse, into hands irresponsible to the public."

Richard Rush: Hooker, personifying law, eloquently exclaims, "her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; everything on earth does her homage, the highest is not beyond her control, the least as claiming her protection." Masonry has oversteered this primordial system. She has dethroned this image of God upon earth. To reinstate it over so insolent a victor, we must have a political organization. There is no other way of assailing, there is no other hope of vanquishing, there need be no other dream of humbling such a foe. It fights with desperation.

Wendell Phillips: "History shows them perverting justice, stopping at no crime to protect and conceal their mummeries; controlling politics for selfish and personal ends, and interfering with great danger in national emergencies. Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are forbidden by law and rooted out of existence."

John Hancock: "I am opposed to all secret associations."

James Madison: "From the number and character of those who now support the charges against Masonry, I cannot doubt that it is at least susceptible of abuse, outweighing any disadvantages promised by its patrons."

General U. S. Grant: "All secret, oath-bound political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first bring them together."

Myron Holley of New York: "Such a rebellion Freemasonry has raised. It has violated the dearest rights of nature, and the most sacred enactments of our laws, and this in a spirit manifestly unreasonable, for it has done this in pursuance of solemn, deliberate and voluntary obligations to a foreign government,—I mean its own—a government far more alien to that which claims our allegiance than any which has ever afflicted mankind."

Gerrit Smith, in an address, 1870: "Masonry murdered Morgan. If it could not conceal his murderers, it nevertheless protected them. It overrode the laws of the land and ruled the courts and the ballot-boxes. Moreover, it is capable of repeating the crimes. Why then should we not dread secret societies, and do what we can to bring them to an end?"

William Wirt: "If this be Masonry, as according to uncontradicted evidence it seems to be, I have no hesitation in saying that I consider it at war with the fundamental principles of the social compact, and a wicked conspiracy against the laws of God and man, that ought to be put down."

Joseph Ritner, governor of Pennsylvania, 1847: "If it be true as the lamented Golden (himself one of the initiated) declared that many a Mason became a great man but no great man ever became a Mason, how nearly does it concern the youth of our country to pause and reflect before they commit their present standing and future reputation to the keeping of a society, which for its cold-hearted and selfish purposes could immolate even the fame of Washington at the shrine of its abominations."

Lewis Tappan, private journal, 1814: "Dr. Dixwell gave me lectures on Masonry at his house." "In September left the lodge." Letter, Jan. 21, 1829: "I am free to say that I henceforth renounce Freemasonry, considering it a useless and profane institution."

George Washington, to friends in 1794, quoted by Myron Holley: "The real people occasionally assembled in order to express their sentiments on political sentiments, ought never to be confounded with permanent, self-appointed societies, usurping the right to control constituted authorities, and to dictate to public opinion. While the former was entitled to respect, the latter was incompatible with all government, and must either sink into general disesteem, or finally overturn the established order of things."

Charles Francis Adams: "A more perfect agent for the devising and execution of conspiracies against church and state could scarcely have been conceived."

Thaddeus Stevens: "By Freemasonry, trial by jury is transformed into an engine of despotism and Masonic fraud."

Judge Pliny Merrick (a seceded Mason): "If ever a Chapter or a lodge shall establish laws in conflict with those of the state the Masonic requisition is obedience to the lodge and conflict with the state; and if a member hesitates at this humiliating obedience, his heart must be 'torn from his bosom,' his 'vitals plucked from his body,' and Masonic vengeance, not satisfied with this bloody immolation, denies a resting place to the motionless remains, but they are to be 'hurled to ashes and scattered to the winds.'"

Samuel C. Pomeroy, in an address, 1883: "There may be a broad distinction between the good and the bad in secret societies, but as they all alike have oath-bound obligations to complete oblivion of all they do or say, I have no means of judging the good from the bad. So I turn away from them all to the great Teacher who said, 'In secret have I said nothing.'"

Judge Daniel H. Whitney, (renouncing Mason): While professed ministers of the Gospel and members of churches are permitted to associate themselves with these organizations, the task to apply a remedy will be a hopeless one; and just so long will the declaration made to me not long since by a high Mason and a worthy man prove true, that "a Masonic lodge is the strangest medley of priests and murderers—deacons and whoremasters—church members and gamblers—decent men and loafers—drunkards and rowdies, that the All Seeing-Eye ever looked down upon."

Hon. Samuel Dexter, in an open letter to the Grand Master of Mass., 1798: "If there be no very important reason for upholding Masonry at a moment like the present, there is a reason against it. The system of the destroyers of human virtue and happiness is to undermine in the dark the castle that cannot be carried by storm. Secret agency has overthrown all the republics of Europe, and an extended, secret, leveling, self-created society, without any valuable object of pursuit, and embracing bad characters as well as good, cannot be the subject of approbation of an anxious patriot."

General J. W. Phelps: "All secret organizations are links of one and the same chain which binds men to evil and not to good. The Masonic lodge is the parent source from which all similar modern organizations have emanated and this lodge is now in active operation in every city and considerable village of the country swaying our parties and churches; filling our offices, secular and divine, with its partisans; shaping our political destinies; and teaching a spurious and corrupting morality subversive both of the Christian religion and of free institutions."

Thurlow Weed: "I now look back through an interval of fifty six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

A. M. Sullivan, Irish Leader: I had not studied in vain the history of secret, oath-bound associations. I regarded them with horror. I knew all that could be said as to their advantages in revolutionizing a country, but even in the firmest and best of hands they had a direct tendency to demoralization and are often on the whole more perilous to society than open tyranny."

Hon. Edward Blake, leader in Canadian Parliament, March, 1883: "I am not in favor of State recognition of any secret societies. I have never joined one, though many of my best friends are members of secret societies. But I believe the tendency of secrecy itself to be injurious. I believe that it brings with it the possibility of evil; I believe that it involves a certain amount of sacrifice of individuality and independence, and gives very great facilities for the misleading of members by designing leaders very great and mischievous facilities for that purpose." "I believe that a great deal of the trouble, social and political, that has occurred in those countries [Europe and America] is due to secret societies."

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT.—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y and TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is: To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being leproyed, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform. FORM OF REQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of _____ dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fisher, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Rudbeck, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, William; Sec., Geo. Smith, William; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Uleh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birming; Sec., H. W. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., James Harvey.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Torrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning Jr., Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, William; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Berksville.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasele; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richard; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., H. F. Miller, Eagleview; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., R. F. Campbell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Rev. R. M. Smith, Piquette; Rec. Sec., Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Cor. Sec., Rev. A. M. Campbell, Cedarville; Treas., W. P. Clark, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Peet, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Berde, Wilkbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird, St. Johnsbury; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD.

HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1886.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS.

This son of the sixth, and grandson of the second President of the United States, died in Boston, Nov. 21, 1886.

As the entire American daily press gives a historic chart of his person and life which will be read from ocean to ocean, the Cynosure will add a supplement by giving what that chart omits, viz., the relation of his father and himself to that system which now darkens the American heavens, which his father, in his letters to Livingston, April 10, 1833, pronounced "if not the greatest, one of the greatest, moral and political evils under which this Union is now laboring;" and added, "Your lodges and chapters must and will be political caucuses."

Seventeen years later his son, Charles Francis, in a preface to a reprint of his father's volume, wrote of Masonry, "A more perfect system for devising and executing conspiracies against the church or state could scarcely have been conceived." Yet editors all over the United States will suppress his sentiments, while they laud the man.

He was graduated from Cambridge at eighteen; married at 22; read Russian, German, and French; retained the talent and wealth of his family in the third generation; a lawyer, statesman, diplomat; in the Legislature, in Congress, a founder of the Republican party; our minister to England in the seven stormiest years of our history, 1861-8; an overmatch for the British aristocracy led by Lord John Russell and backed by the Cotton loan; the friend and peer and eulogist of Seward, appointed by the New York Legislature to give his memorial address; and the popular writer for leading reviews; yet, while the press is on its knees before the majesty and might of his intelligence, if one takes an article from his preface to his father's book, on which both believed the future of this Republic hangs, to one hundred editors, ninety-five of them would not dare to print it. This of itself is a horrible confession that those editors live like cringing natives over volcanoes, hoping to get bread by not awaking their fires.

The lodge plays at kings and priests. It came here in 1733 and was weak for forty years, till the Revolution of '76; war, which strengthens every thing which is evil, strengthened it. In 1826-36 it sunk in all the free States before popular discussion. Slavery sheltered it then, and it in turn sheltered its shelter, till, by God's mercy, Lincoln, Seward, Chase, Stanton, and Stevens, with Adams in London, and Grant in the field, none of them Masons, we escaped the curse of God on false worships, and survived the war.

This national salvation is the more wonderful because the lodge defeated John Quincy Adams for a second term, and ruled us from Jackson to Lincoln, by the suspected murder of two good Presidents, Harrison and Taylor. Jackson and his Cabinet belonged to Federal Lodge, No. 1, D. C. The Southern politicians were Masons; the Northern statesmen, Webster, Adams, Everett, Quincy, Seward, Stevens, etc., were Anti-masons. The rebellion was thirty years hatching, from Jackson to Lincoln, and the lodge brooded it. It paid for the raids on Kansas. It furnished secret drill rooms for the war; and initiated the Indians who fought us at Pea Ridge. The ten lodges in the District of Columbia, all went for secession; and the Southern country lodges followed suit. The blood which we spilt, and the taxes we are paying attest the correctness of the judgment of Charles Francis Adams and his father, that there are no nests of rebellion like secret, sworn lodges.

This brief sketch of facts sets the three Adamases in a clear, strong light, as the apostles of humanity, and friends of God and man.

Charles Francis Adams was the first nominee of the infant American party in Oberlin, 1872. He was three times visited by the writer in his stately stone fire-proof library, at Quincy, Mass. The large building was lined with books, up to the eaves of the roof. Mr. Adams replied to the request that he would head our American movement against the lodge: "I am too far along. You must have younger men. There seems to be a craze of secret societies coming over men. I was in Boston yesterday, and a procession of 'Knights' of some sort were parading the streets; and the people seemed to relish them." He took a deep interest in what we were doing against them; and at the end of an hour's conversation arose and took down a handsome volume of his father's letters, and pointing to the preface, said, "I wrote that preface, and was thus an earlier Anti-mason than yourself." If the newspapers which laud Mr. Adams would put his argument in that preface before the American people at this time, it would overturn the politics of States.

The New York Independent wonders how Mr. Seward would have weathered and outrode the tempest, "had it not been for the solid, systematic method reflected back into his administration from Mr. Adams in London"; and adds this estimate of his great work: "So far as the issue of the war depended on the prevention of foreign intervention, Mr. Adams saved the country." If the testimony of the press from Florida to Alaska could be collated, their united voice would confirm the sentiment with which the Independent opens, which is this: "On the whole the most remarkable family that has appeared in this country is the Adams family of Massachusetts, whose distinguished head, the Hon. Charles Francis Adams, died at his residence in Mt. Vernon street, Boston, early Sunday morning."

The clearest, calmest, most statesmanlike writing Mr. Adams ever did, is in the forty octavo pages, his preface to his father's letters; and the climax of this great argument is in these words: "The arguments of Mr. Adams [John Quincy], although directed against the particular order of Freemasonry, are susceptible of broader application extending over all societies of which the radical error is that they shun the light of day." "The pride of freemen living under a system of equal laws, * * * the union of an open heart and honest, liberal hand, such a state cannot co-exist with secret obligations."

Now why should the Independent, why should the American press, while exalting the mind of the Adams family above all others "which this country has produced," shrink from publishing the sentiments and reasonings of those minds?

The reason is obvious: the lodge would withdraw its patronage and give it to papers which shield it by their silence; and thus become silent partners in the suppression of free speech, minions of the rulers of the darkness of this world. This Satanic policy defeated the father wherever lodge treachery could reach him, drove him from the Presidency at the end of a single term, defeated him for the Senate, defeated him for Governor of Massachusetts, drove him back to the little town of Quincy, to a district where the voters were not Masons; and these sent him back to Washington and kept him there till his sublime death at 80 years of age in defiance of slavery and the lodge. Webster's end was pitiful. Douglas died of disappointed ambition. J. Q. Adams died in the Capitol of the nation as Wolfe died on the heights of Abraham, a conqueror after triumphs mightier than the taking of Quebec. His son has now followed him, with a nation's gratitude and homage laid upon his bier.

That son has died too soon. His enemies, the children of darkness, as they did his great father, defeated him for governor, and for the U. S. Senate; but guided by God, the red hand of war gave us an Anti-masonic administration, which gave him his diplomatic victories in London and Geneva; and newspapers are now rising and pushing aside the potroom presses; which, had Adams's years been less, would have crowned his brow with the laurels of the highest political office in the world. The slave power could not quell the father. The lodge power did not conquer the son.

When slavery fell, the lodge serpents lost their burrow and fled North. They come here to meet their doom pronounced by Christ that they "shall be rooted up." And the true-hearted, fearless South will soon identify and take vengeance on their betrayers. Eight hundred thousand Baptists in the South, are learning from Woodsmall, Countee, and others, that the old slave-masters were Masons, and that Masonry was the silent mother of secession. The meek and much-enduring blacks are learning from their children in the mission schools that Christ said nothing in secret; that Masons cut his name from their Bibles; and that those who swear obedience to the lodges are the slaves of tyrants, and the masses who follow them are the slaves of slaves! And the time is coming in the South when the lodge and the saloon will be avoided as "the breathing holes of hell." Then will be the time to write the epitaph of the Adams family.

Let us not despair. The fact that such minds have uttered the strongest, clearest condemnations of the lodge, like the upper currents in the atmosphere, will yet prevail. And the fact that the secret system has once fallen before popular discussion proves it to be vulnerable to truth; which, a heathen writer could see and say, "is great and must prevail."

CHRIST'S SECOND COMING.

The Pre-Millennial Conference over, let us gather the results.

1. The speeches and papers contained immense learning and research.

2. Since Wm. Miller preached Second Adventism fifty-three years ago, much excitement but no permanent revivals followed; though several sects resulted. We hear of no conversion to Christ at the late convention.

3. The arguments against the post-millennial theory were Scriptural and conclusive; and were urged with success. The Scriptures abundantly testify that the "last days" prior to Christ's coming are to be "perilous" days; "the acceptable year of the Lord" being joined with the "day of vengeance of our God."

4. But the pre-millennial theory, so far as they venture one, is no better. One of the ablest papers, that of W. E. Blackstone of Oak Park, shows by figures that the human race, from Adam down, can be gathered and reviewed from "one of the foot hills of the Rocky Mountains on the plains of Colorado;" and that those now living on the earth "could all stand in the city of Philadelphia." Mr. Blackstone's paper is an exceedingly able and earnest plea for missions.

But the pre-millennial theory proper, as stated by Prof. Stroeter, is in these words: "The Gospel of the kingdom is to be preached, not to improve the present condition of the world, but to save men out of it." And Dr. Pierson utters the same thus: "Nowhere is the purpose of this dispensation represented as the conversion of the world, but always the out-gathering from the worth of a people for God." Again: "Not to convert all, but to preach to all the Gospel of witness, and from the four winds of heaven to gather out God's elect."

This theory seems to us unscriptural and unsound, and "good news" only to "the elect." We think there is a third and better theory than post or pre-millennial, as expounded above, viz.: That the Gospel is to be preached "to every creature" for his conversion; that Christ "tasted death for every man," Heb. 2: 9, and thus opened a door on the heaven side of every man, to enter if he will; that God's purposes are a system over, above, and including this absolute free will; and that "the wrath to come" comes by men forsaking God and serving Baal.

True, we are told that Christ will come to earth, as he did to Sodom and Jerusalem, and find men at each others' throats, "scoffers, lovers of pleasures," etc., and that wrath will come to the uttermost, as in our late slavery war, in which, there were conversions all the time and a great salvation wrought out by it; and that when Satan is beaten, driven out, "by the blood of the Lamb and the word of their testimony," there will be millennium, the Lord's prayer being answered, his "will done on earth." We are evidently in the "last days" rapidly nearing the end; the time of which is hid, but not the fact or its tokens which are thickening.

But prophecy is generic and symbolic, and, like everything else, "runs into infinity;" and to literalize it is to stultify it and ourselves. Zechariah (14:4) says of Christ when "the day of the Lord cometh," "His feet shall stand on Mount Olives," which shall "cleave in the midst" and make "a great valley." This is literalized by many who will have Christ stand there, and restore Jesus and gather the nations as Mr. Blackstone's paper shows he might do in the "plain of Esdrælon," and "on the adjacent hill sides," and view them from Mt. Tabor. But that same chapter of Zechariah says that the pots, in rebuilt Jerusalem, shall be holy, and "all they that sacrifice shall come and seethe in those pots," and "there shall be no Canaanite in the House of the Lord of Hosts." Zech. 14: 21. Is this, too, all literal?

To a Jew these symbols were pregnant with meaning. If we take Jerusalem to mean "the mother of us all," the "city from heaven," and the temple, Christ's habitation, the church, an available meaning is possibly better than rallying the human race at the literal Jerusalem, and boiling victuals for them in the pots and kitchen vessels now become holy. But if we literalize one verse of that chapter we must literalize all the verses. If you spiritualize or make symbols of one, we may of the rest. The desolate land of Palestine, nay, our little globe itself, will, we apprehend, cut a less prominent figure in the day of Christ's appearing than our fancies are wont to make them. At the crucifixion not only did the earth quake but the sun was darkened at mid-day, and the worlds of our solar system must have shared the shock. Satan was cast from other worlds into ours; and John in the Revelation saw the occupants of those other orbs mingling and co-operating with ours. The dwellers in the heavenly worlds are called on to rejoice when Satan is cast out to our earth, and when Babylon is fallen. And though the myriads of other globes praise Christ in unison, none could learn the new song of redemption but those redeemed from this earth. This mingling of worlds and their inhabitants may have somewhat literal in them: and if so, when the first heaven and earth are passed away, and there is "no more sea," Palestine will be deprived of her sea ports and so changed in other respects that Jews may lose their local attachments to it. In short, the stupendous possibilities which prophecy adumbrates make us shrink from dogmatizing and literalizing about the physical changes which may come. Prophets themselves were often ignorant of the import of their own visions; much more may we be. One thing is certain; at the end all will be clear, and all prophecy fulfilled.

In one respect the pre and post-millennialists are alike. They are so engrossed with the import of prophecy that they neglect to work for the removal of obstructions to its fulfillment. We have seen three large churches thronged with sun-rise prayer meetings of the American Board in Boston, while slavery had its hand on the nation's throat, and some missionaries of that Board were holding slaves while they sang,—

"The morning light is breaking,
The shadows disappear."

and, but to name the word "slavery" would have disturbed their devotions. So with the Pre-millennialists. If there is one moral force on earth which hinders and obstructs Christ's coming to reign, it is that dark system of organized deism which excludes him from its prayers and cuts his name from the Scriptures which they use. Yet the Pre-millennialists were welcomed by a high representative of the lodge, and in their long and learned discussions no allusion was made to the stronghold of Satan where dynamite is preparing to blow up the state which God has ordained, and disintegrating the churches for which Christ has shed his blood, that he might purify and present it to himself "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing."

SHALL THE LODGE CONTROL PROHIBITION?

The chairman of the National Committee of the Prohibition party, John B. Finch, in a long, official letter to the New York Witness, has issued the following order to the Prohibition hosts:

"Every division of the temperance armies must be supported. Prohibitionists must sustain and support all the primary schools in their party. The Good Templars, the National Temperance Society, the W. C. T. U., the Sons of Temperance, and all other organizations which teach total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the State, should receive the earnest support of every loyal Prohibitionist. These organizations have been the nurseries of temperance sentiment in the country. But for their work in years past, the Prohibition party would have been an impossibility. These organizations are needed now as never before, and the Prohibitionist who says the day for them has passed shows how utterly he fails to comprehend the needs of the reform. The vast amount of liquor drunk in this country shows the need of total abstinence teaching, and it must not be neglected. There should be one or more of these organizations in every town and hamlet in the United States."

This is an order to disband the army while the battle is on, and scatter it into guerrilla bands. It is amazing: first, because of its untruth. To put the W. C. T. U. down to the level of the lodges, which, in the judgment of the ablest temperance workers, like old Dr. Jewett, have put that great cause back for years, is as unjust as it is untrue. The Prohibition party has never been so dependent upon these lodges, is not now, nor will it ever be.

It is more amazing because of its affront to at least nineteen-twentieths of the Prohibition voters, and bold defiance of their convictions. Take from that party the actual and moral support of the United and Reformed Presbyterians, Free and Wesleyan Methodists, United Brethren, Friends, and thousands on thousands in other churches who hate the lodge, and it is dead. On the other hand we everywhere hear that the lodges repudiate the third party, and the quarrel even gets into the Grand Lodges.

This letter is, in short, a challenge from the lodge, which, having put its champion nominally at the head of the party, begins now to play boldly for its own advantage. This is well. Let the disease come to the surface, and the conscience of the party will slough off the corruption.

Now that the enemy begins to show his head it is time to hit it. Let the National American Committee take wise and prompt action. An appeal should be carefully drawn, and so widely circulated that every prohibition voter may see it. If we be true men, and stand by our professions of allegiance to truth, we should make this lodge challenge the occasion for the triumph of that truth, in the repudiation by the Prohibition party of foresworn leaders foisted upon it by the lodge. Among its 325,000 voters there are able men enough clean of this evil to furnish its candidates and fill up its committees. They need not be pronounced Anti-masons, they must not be sworn lodgemen. The National American committee can easily act through its sub-committee, and the time has come to act. We have been sufficiently modest since Finch started the hissing in the Pittsburg convention. Let our advice be so wisely given that it will be heeded, and the Prohibition party saved from the enemies within. The advice of the Wesleyan and the College Springs Crank, which we print in "Press Comments," is opportune and good. Not long ago Finch said he would be willing to declare for open work and methods if American Prohibitionists demanded it, now he is stumping Canada for his lodge and ordering his party to turn to and help.

It is grievous to see his letter in the Witness prominently displayed and approved in an editorial note. Not such we believe would have been the course of the lamented John Dougall, who would not have feared to rebuke such a demand upon Prohibitionists. Let us hope the Witness editors will correct themselves in this matter.

AT THE LATE GURNEY FUNERAL, Drs. Goodwin and Williams, while eulogizing highly the Christian character of the dead, were able to speak favorably only of his Christian life of many years ago. Their silence respecting later years was noticed, and was not uncalled for. It is known that for years, while nominally a member of the Leavitt Street Congregational church, he has neglected attendance on divine worship almost altogether, and was not unfrequently to be seen on his doorstep reading the Sunday morning paper and smoking cigars during the time of service. He has occasionally attended since Rev. T. P. Prudden became pastor of the church, who being an enthusiastic advocate of the Andover "new-departure", future-probation theory, has attractions for men whose supreme devotion seemed, like Gurney's, to be given to the lodge. Mr. Gurney was an inveterate smoker, and it is more than probable that this vile habit assisted the progress of his disease. In the Christian services at the church his character was eulogized as a model, and his devotion to Christ contrasted with his lodge relation, which he held to be secondary. It was sad to mark the effect upon the Freemasons present, who well enough knew Gurney's devotion to their order, though the speakers may have been ignorant of it. The above we believe to be a true statement of Mr. Gurney's religious life. Mrs. Gurney, we are told, is, on the other hand, a pious woman, faithful to her Christian duties in the church.

THE TEN LOST TRIBES.—A good friend and reformer, Rev. E. P. Ingersoll of Springfield, Kansas, sends us a small, neatly executed volume of 80 pages, entitled, "Lost Israel Found," which contains much ingenious research. It is a repetition of many like endeavors to find the lost tribes, leading to even differing results. These tribes left the true God under Rehoboam. Years after the Assyrian King took them all away to his country. There they formed secret lodges and "served Baal." 2 Kings 17: 9-16. Then we read; "The Lord was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight; there was none left." That is, they became heathen and lost their identity, and, as God put them "out of his sight," he must have sharp eyes who finds them.

—Secretary Stoddard returned from the East last Thursday just in time for a bountiful Thanksgiving feast with invited friends at his home in Wheaton.

—Presidents H. H. George and C. A. Blanchard of Geneva and Wheaton Colleges are announced as among the speakers from the North who will attend the National Convention in Tennessee.

—Rev. S. Collins, D. D., writes from Pittsburg concerning the National Convention in the South. He is just recovering from a three-weeks' attack of fever and may not be able to go so far as Knoxville, but if health permits he will endeavor to be present.

—Bro. I. R. B. Arnold has just finished a very interesting course of lectures in St. Charles, Ill., writes Bro. N. E. Parks, pastor of the Free Methodist church. The brethren there feel under deep obligation to him for his able and attractive addresses which have been very instructive to all who attended.

—Bro. Hinman's Southern work agrees with him, and he writes that he has gained in health ever since he left this city. He found in Rev. Dr. Dobbs of Columbus, Miss., a personal friend of Dr. Pentecost of Brooklyn and an Anti-mason. From Selma he has gone to Talladega, Alabama.

—A letter received late from Bro. Hinman gives a brief account of a business meeting of the Alabama State association at Selma, at which Rev. G. M. Elliott of that city consented to act as agent and lecturer for the State so far as his other duties will allow. Prof. Elliott is a Covenanter, and a man of fine intellectual and moral qualifications. He has just resigned his office as principal of Knox Academy in order to devote his whole time to pastoral and reform work.

—Bro. Jasper J. Tucker is traveling in Michigan as a reform colporteur. He writes from Hillsdale of his trials and successes, rejoicing to bear reproach for the cause of Christ. Having once been a Mason he is able to very aptly apply the Scripture to the consciences of lodge men. He realizes the greatness of the work and when Masons threaten to Morganize him he only feels like crying the louder against their wicked system if so be their souls may be saved.

—Rev. J. W. Sproul, pastor of the Central Reformed Presbyterian church, Allegheny City, Pa., whose argument on Christmas is reproduced on another page, clearly and forcibly presents such reasons against the observance of the day as should appeal strongly to candid Christian minds. Soon the full tide of the Christmas season will be on us, and an early review of the whole question should be made by all who would avoid the patronage of Romanizing customs, which old Dr. Jonas King, long a missionary of the American Board in the East, showed tended also to heathenism, the religion of the lodge, and not toward Christ.

—J. W. Beer, a prominent member of the Brethren church (liberal Dunker) writes to the Evangelist of his traveling experiences on the boat from San Francisco to Oregon. His logic is sound in the following case: "I was fortunate to have for a room mate Mr. J. R. Heath, of Auburn, Cal., a man of considerable experience in ocean travel. He is a Freemason and a gentleman. I preached to him the Gospel of Christ; but although he acknowledged the truth, he was not like the eunuch, ready to say, 'Here is water, what doth hinder me?' He knew what was in the way. He confessed that a man cannot obey the Gospel command, 'Swear not at all,' and become a Freemason. This admitted, it is evident that a Freemason cannot become a Christian, and obey the Gospel, without renouncing Freemasonry."

Remember that while Satan, the god of the lodge, has much power, Christ has ALL power. In the name of our omnipotent Christ let us go up to this battle and he will give us the victory. The devil is cunning as a serpent; but he is subject to violent fits of anger, and when mad he acts the fool. As the leader of the lodge against the church of Christ, Satan is becoming so excited that his head is no longer level. The cloven foot of infidelity is so apparent in the religious philosophy of Freemasonry; and the secret empire with the iron heel of its despotism is so openly trampling upon American liberty that we have every reason to hope that the American churches and the American people will ere long arise and free themselves from the corrupting and tyrannous domination of the lodge.—C. F. Hawley.

NOTICES.

OHIO CONVENTION NOTICE.

The annual convention of the Ohio Christian Association will be held at Greenfield beginning at 10 A. M. Wednesday, the 15th of December, and continuing through Thursday, the 16th. Able representatives of the cause will be present to give instruction concerning the mysteries of the Secret Empire. We hope very many friends of the cause will be present. Let such as contemplate going watch carefully the reports of the State agent, W. B. Stoddard, and you will learn all that is needed concerning the speakers who are expected, how to reach the place of meeting, arrangements for entertainment, etc., etc.

H. R. SMITH, Pres.
S. A. GEORGE, Sec'y.

A REQUEST.

The undersigned requests all who subscribed money for C. F. Hawley, our State Lecturer, to pay all now due to the receiver in each locality, and he to forward to me as soon as practicable, as Bro. Hawley must have money to go on with the work. Also let readers of the Cynosure and others in favor of the reform in localities where subscriptions have not been taken, get up a subscription, give notice of the amount subscribed to me, send for Hawley to come and lecture, and pay him the money when he comes, so he will not have to beg his way, or say anything about money to his congregations.

JAMES HARVEY, Treasurer of State Association,
Pleasant Plain, Iowa.

THE HOME.

IT IS WELL.

Yes, it is well! the evening shadows lengthen;

Home's golden glades shine on our ravished sight;

And though the tender ties we try to strengthen

Break one by one—at evening-time 'tis light.

'Tis well! The way was often dull and weary;

The spirit fainted oft beneath its load;

No sunshine came from skies all gray and dreary;

And yet our feet were bound to tread that road.

'Tis well that not again our hearts shall shiver

Beneath old sorrows once so hard to bear;

That not again beside death's darksome river

Shall we deplore the good, the loved, the fair.

No more, with tears wrought from deep inner anguish,

Shall we bewail the dear hopes crushed and gone;

No more need we in doubt or fear to languish,

So far the day is past, the journey done.

As voyagers, by fierce winds beat and broken,

Come into port beneath the calmer sky,

So we, still bearing on our brows the token

Of tempest past, draw to our haven nigh.

A sweeter air comes from the shores immortal,

Inviting homeward at the day's decline;

Almost we see where from the open portal

Fair forms stand beckoning with their smiles Divine.

'Tis well. The earth with all her myriad voices

Has lost the power our senses to enthrall.

We hear, above the tumult and the noises,

Soft tones of music, like an angel's call.

'Tis well, O friends! We should not turn—retracing

The long, vain years, nor call our lost youth back;

Gladly, with spirits braced, the future facing,

We leave behind the dusty, foot-worn track.

—Chamber's Journal.

UNCHAINING THE TIGER.

The skeptical writers of the eighteenth century believed in the existence of a Divine Being, and a future existence; the skeptics of the nineteenth century deny the existence of God, and plunge into bald, blank atheism. There is, in fact, no firm standing-ground between the tablelands of Christian faith, and the unfathomable depths of atheistic unbelief. If there be any God, it must be the God of the Bible; and if we reject the revelation of the Scriptures there is no other revelation that is for a moment worthy of our attention or regard.

The skeptics of the eighteenth century believed that men could discard Divine Revelation, and still hold faith in Divine existence; and while denying the truth of the Scriptures, they denounced atheistic ideas as dangerous and untrue. Thus Voltaire, who, disgusted with an unscriptural religion, and at war with hereditary tyranny, sowed the seeds of infidelity and revolution through the length and breadth of France, was clear and pointed in his condemnation of atheistic principles, as appears from the following extract:

"If the world were governed by atheists, it would be as well to be under the immediate rule of those infernal beings who are depicted to us full of fury against their victims. In a word, atheists who have power in their hands would be as mischievous to the human race as superstitious persons; certainly their principles will not be opposed to the assassinations and poisonings which will seem necessary. They must tend to all crimes in the storms of life. The atheist, crafty, ungrateful, calumnious, plundering, bloody, reasons and acts as if he is sure of impunity on the part of men. For if there is no God the monster is his own god; he immolates to himself whatever he desires or whatever is an obstacle in his way. The most tender prayers, the best reason, make no impression upon him." Voltaire, Works, Vol. I, pp. 136-139, Paris, 1837.

These were Voltaire's sentiments; but when he had scattered infidelity through the land, the seed which he had sown bore its natural fruit. When a boat is cut loose from its moorings, no one can tell where the currents and tides will bear it. When a tiger is unchained, he cares very little for the sentiments of the man who let him loose. French infidelity culminated in French atheism, the reign of terror, and all the horrors connected therewith.

The same principles still have in them the power and potency to produce the same results. If the atheist be cultured, and under the influence of Christian training, he may remain a decent citizen of civilized society, notwithstanding his atheism; but if he be destitute of such training, and if he be left to the guidance of the principles he has imbibed, he will hesitate at no violence, he will shrink from no crimes. The principles of infidelity and atheism are unchanged in their character and their fruits, as may be seen in the atheists, the anarchists, the nihilists, the dynamiters, and bomb-throwers of the present day. A menagerie of wild beasts would be a quiet residence compared with a community ruled by such brutal and atheistic agitators.

If men like Voltaire will sow the dragon's teeth of infidelity, they must expect the armed hosts of atheism to spring up along their path. They are doing it to-day; and the number of homicides in the United States have more than doubled in a single year. And what are Christians doing about it? Too many of them are building sectarian fences, and quarreling over sectarian issues, and leaving the tide of evil to roll on unhindered. Infidel tracts and pamphlets are scattered by the ton; what are you doing to scatter the antidote to this poison?—Armory.

VAIN INVESTMENTS.

If you are not content with an income to support comfortably your household, you would not be content though your income rolled in on you fifty or a hundred thousand dollars a year. It is not what we get, it is what we are that makes us happy or miserable. If that is so, how do you account for the fact that many of those who fare sumptuously every day are washish and dissatisfied, and overbearing, and forboding, and cranky, and uncompromising; with a countenance on which wrath always lowers, and a lip which scorn curls; while many a time, in the summer evening, you see a laboring man going home in his shirt-sleeves, with a pail on his arm and a pickax over his shoulder, his face bright with smiles and his heart with hope, and the night of his toil bright with flaming auroras? It is an illustration of the fact that it is not outward condition that makes a man happy.

A man came to Rothschild, the great banker, and said: "You must be a thoroughly happy man." He said: "Me happy? Happy, when just as I sit down to dine a man sends me a note, saying, 'If you don't send me £500 before to-morrow night, I will blow your brains out.' Me happy?" Oh, I wish I could, by the power of the Lord Almighty, break the infatuation of those men who are neglecting the present sources of satisfaction, hoping that there is to be something in the future for them of a worldly nature that will satisfy their souls. The heart right, all is right. The heart wrong, all is wrong. But I ask you to higher riches, to crowns that never fade, to investments that always declare dividends.—Talmage.

MEN AND MONEY.

The call for more men and money was not made prominent in Paul's ministry; doubtless the field was wide and hard to till, the laborers few and their subsistence meagre,—but his method was more Scriptural and spiritual. His call was for more of God's power, larger and fuller measure of the Holy Ghost; and men and money came as the inevitable result of God's presence and power in the church.

It seems to us that we have reversed the matter, put the effect first, and substituted it for the cause. A man who is filled with the Holy Ghost cannot fail to put himself and all his means at God's disposal; this is the condition by which this fullness is secured and maintained. A church filled with the Holy Ghost never fails for lack of men, nor lack of money, but has a supply of both for God's uses.

Under the inspirations of church rivalry, pride, or enthusiasm, with an activity which does not spring from faith, we may plan and purpose and do, and as the result of this, may go far beyond the measure of our faith, and overreach our spiritual resources. There are mere human and worldly forces which may cause us to enlarge our spiritual capital, and, instead of happy and prosperous returns, we may only reap the shame and humiliation of defeat and bankruptcy. In large spiritual ventures a good capital of faith should be on deposit to begin with, and large and steady additions as the only securities for spiritual solvency and gain.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

THE LORD HELPS.

A weaver living in the little German town of Wuppertal, a poor man in his outward circumstances, but rich toward God, was well known in his neighborhood as one who trusted in the Lord at all times. His constant faith expressed itself in what became his habitual utterances under all circumstances of trouble and perplexity. "The Lord helps," he was wont to say; and he said it undauntedly, even when it looked as if the Lord had forsaken him. Such a time it was, when in a season of scarcity, work ran short, many hands were discharged, and the master by whom our weaver was employed gave him dismissal. After much fruitless entreaty that he might be kept on, he said at last, "Well, the Lord helps," and so returned home. His wife when she heard the sad news, bewailed it terribly; but her husband strove to cheer her with his accustomed assurance. "The Lord helps," he said; and even although as the days went on, poverty pinched them sorely, nothing could shake his firm reliance on Him in whom he trusted. At last came the day when not a penny was left, no bread, no fuel in the house, only starvation stared them in the face. Sadly his wife tidied and swept the little room on the ground floor in which they lived. The window was open, and possibly the words were heard outside, with which the weaver strove to keep up their courage: "The Lord helps." Presently a street boy looked saucily in, and threw a dead raven at the feet of the pious man; "There, saint! there is something for you to eat!" he cried.

The weaver picked up the dead raven, and stroking its feathers down, said compassionately, "Poor creature! thou must have died of hunger." When, however, he felt its crop to see whether it was empty, he noticed something hard, and wishing to know what had caused the bird's death he began to examine it. What was his surprise when, on opening the gullet, a gold necklace fell into his hand. The wife looked at it confounded; the weaver exclaimed, "The Lord helps;" and in haste took the chain to the nearest goldsmith, told him how he had found it, and received with gladness two dollars which the goldsmith offered to lend him for his present need.

The goldsmith soon cleaned the trinket and recognized it as one he had seen before. "Shall I tell you the owner?" he asked, when the weaver called again. "Yes," was the joyful answer, "for I would gladly give it back into the right hands."

But what cause had he to admire the wonderful ways of God when the goldsmith pronounced the name of his master at the factory.

Quickly he took the necklace and went with it to his former employer. In his family, too, there was much joy at the discovery, for suspicion was removed from a servant. But the merchant was ashamed and touched; he had not forgotten the words uttered by the poor man when he was dismissed. "Yes," he said, thoughtfully and kindly; "the Lord helps; and now you not only go home richly rewarded, but I will no longer leave without work so pious a workman, whom the Lord so evidently stands by and helps; you shall henceforth be no more in need." Thus He who fed Elijah by living ravens, proves Himself equally able to supply the needs of his tired servant by the same bird when dead.—Sword and Trowel.

GOOD COUNSEL.

A RHYME SIX HUNDRED YEARS OLD.

Guard, my child, thy tongue,
That it speak no wrong;
Let no evil word pass o'er it,
Set the watch of truth before it,
That it do no wrong,
Guard, my child, thy tongue!

Guard, my child, thine eyes:
Prying is not wise,
Let them look on what is right;
From all evil turn their sight;
Prying is not wise,
Guard, my child, thine eyes!

Guard, my child, thine ear!
Wicked words will scar:
Let no evil words come in
That may cause the soul to sin,
Wicked words will scar,
Guard, my child, thine ear!

Ear, and eye, and tongue,
Guard while thou art young;
For, alas! these busy three (An unruly members be,
Guard while thou art young,
Ears, and eyes, and tongue!

—Selected.

BREATHING THROUGH THE MOUTH.

Tight dressing, though the most serious hindrance to the habit of good breathing, is not the only obstacle. There are careless ways of sitting and standing that draw the shoulders forward and cramp the chest; and it is as hard for the lungs to do good work when the chest is narrow and constricted as it is for a closely bandaged hand to set a copy of clear, graceful penmanship. Then there are lazy ways of breathing, and one-sided ways of breathing, and the particularly bad habit of breathing through the mouth. Now the nose was meant to breathe through, and it is marvelously arranged for filtering the impurities out of the air, and for changing it to a suitable temperature for entering the lungs. The mouth has no such apparatus, and when air is swallowed through the mouth instead of breathed through the nose, it has an injurious effect upon the lungs. A story is told of an Indian who had a personal encounter with a white man much his superior in size and strength, and who was asked afterward if he was not afraid. "Me never afraid of man who keeps mouth open," was the immediate reply. Indeed, breathing through the mouth gives a foolish and weak expression to the face, as you may see by watching any one asleep with the mouth open.

It may be noted that an anæmic, or low, condition of the blood is seldom found where there is an established habit of full, deep breathing with the mouth closed.—Hellen Clark Stowery.

TEMPERANCE.

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION.

HOW IT PASSED CONGRESS.

[Extract from the report of Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, the Superintendent of this department to the national W. C. T. U.]

"Come to Washington and help get a Temperance Education Law through Congress for the schools under the control of the Federal Government," said Senator H. W. Blair, three years before.

A public event last autumn, led to the swift intentional decision that the time had come to carry out this suggestion.

I went to Washington, December 1st, and presented the question before the local W. C. T. U. and a company of gentlemen who subsequently organized into the Citizens' Committee. These, with the Washington W. C. T. U., formed an advisory body-guard for the measure, while the entire charge of the bill was put into my hands. The first step was to send petitions for this legislation addressed to Congress for circulation to every local W. C. T. U. in all the States and Territories. The fear that the women in our Unions in distant States would take little interest in this Bill to benefit remote portions of the country, proved entirely groundless. With equal zeal the womanhood of the North, South, East and West, in carrying the petitions for signatures from house to house, showed their sympathies as broad as the great country of which they are a part.

The public sentiment of their own locality was then gathered up and focalized on each member of the Committee to whom the bill would be referred, in both branches of Congress.

With great care and study to strengthen it at points where the laws of the State had proved weak the bill was drafted.

It was presented to the Senate by Hon. H. W. Blair, of New Hampshire, and to the House by Hon. Byron Cutchon, of Michigan. January 28, a hearing was had before the Senate Committee on Education. The plea of your National Superintendent for the report of the identical bill presented was supplemented by the Rev. Drs. Baldwin, Bartlett and others. Seven days later a similar hearing was had before a like Committee of the House. The spirit with which the arguments presented on both these occasions was received, aroused our hopes. The sharp debate in the Senate over the order to print these addresses was the first indication of antagonism.

A certain Senator declared that "any rum-seller or his patrons had as good a right to have their views on temperance education printed by the National Government, as any woman or minister."

Nevertheless, the speeches were printed, and this had located the first in the long line of opposition that had to be overcome step by step.

The following extract, from a copy sent me of a letter a lady from his State wrote that Senator, is a fair illustration of the reception his ideas met in that locality:

"When I knew you, sir, in our State, you were a chivalric Southern gentleman. Imagine my indignation at the audacity of the reporter who dares to represent you as saying that 'liquor men have as good a right to be heard in the Congress of the United States on the education of the children as any lady.' * * * I am sure you must be misrepresented, for no man who would say such a thing in the National Senate, could represent a white man's government from this State."

Many such letters reached the Senator. Thus his opposition died. The bill, unchanged, was favorably reported from the Senate Committee. Letters and petitions from all the States and Territories had poured in upon the National Senate for weeks. The mood of that body at this point was most unfortunate. Debate on the admission of Dakota had aroused violent sectional feeling and party strife,

"They will oppose your bill, and it will be lost, unless you have some of those strong constitutional lawyers to sustain Senator Blair in defending it," was the advice of a gentleman connected with the Senate. To Vermont, the first State, I went and presented the situation to sympathetic audiences among Senator Edmunds' constituency. As quickly as the mails could carry them, messages followed from the Green Mountain State, assuring that Senator that his people wished him to befriend this Bill. And he did in a wise way, for whenever he presented a petition from his State after that, he took pains in open Senate to either inquire after the Bill, or to drop the remark that he "hoped it would soon be brought up," or to say that he believed it "had merit, and his people wanted it passed." A petition representing the entire legal bar in his Congressional District, sent by the Ohio women, was presented by the Hon. John Sherman, President of the Senate. The stream of petitions and letters meanwhile kept pouring in upon every Senator from every State. March 18, 1886, the Senate voted to take up the calendar out of its regular order. Senator Blair, recognizing the opportune moment, aided by Senator Sherman in the chair, brought forward the Bill, and unamended and without debate, it passed the Senate unanimously. "This is victory enough for one year," our friends in and out of Congress said: "Of course you don't expect to get the Bill any farther this session?" But every discouragement only strengthened the assurance that God intended it to pass, and at that session.

For three months the Bill had been buried in a sub-committee of the House Committee on Education, which thus far had only proved a sepulchre for all business referred to them. The meetings of that body were on each Friday morning. With the recurring Fridays the hope dawned and died that then the report would come. It became evident that nothing but the will of the people, concentrated upon its objecting members, would ever move that committee to report. Starting upon the premise that the people are the sovereigns and Congress their servants, and that the servant obeys the master (if he wishes to keep his place), it seemed best to carry this case directly to the master (the people) for their verdict. Thousands and thousands of letters describing the situation, containing a copy of the Bill, were written to our W. C. T. U.'s who were our channel of communication with the people. And now in addition to the streams of petitions that were received by the various members of Congress, and each day referred by them to this Committee, letters from constituents came "like snow flakes" to every member of Congress, asking "why the Bill was not reported." The dead silence in which they had hoped to strangle it was now broken. Hon. Mr. O'Donnell, of Michigan, prominently known as a strong friend to the measure on the sub-committee, said of that period of the struggle: "When in my seat in the House, one member after another, about every ten minutes, with an open letter in hand, came to me with, 'O'Donnell, why don't your committee report that Temperance Education Bill, my people are after me about it, and I always,' said he, 'referred these inquiries to the chairman of the sub-committee.' The first objection thus offered by this Chairman was, 'Such legislation will offend our German voters.' Immediately we sent out petitions for the Bill to be signed only by German voters and German women, and the faithful W. C. T. U.'s in the States with German population, speedily gathered their signatures, and these sent into Congress by the hundreds, proved that fear groundless; but the fertile brain of this chairman of the sub-committee seemed never at a loss for objections. The book job charge, now in this phase, and now in that, was the reason for not reporting, week after week, as the session wore away. One case will illustrate the methods of attack and defense. At one session of this Committee, this chairman, in his profoundly oracular style, asserted that 'there's but one book on this subject in the world; it had gone into all these schools in fourteen States—a monster monopoly! and Congress is asked to be a party to it.' Our friends upon the committee were not familiar with the facts, but we were, and when they came together the next Friday, we had piled Mr. O'Donnell's committee desk high with the many books on this subject, good and bad, with statements from the various publishers of the number each had sold in the different States. Thus by ocular demonstration, and otherwise, week after week, as the session wore away the objections were answered, until at last the announcement came that such an act by Congress would be "unconstitutional," and the objectors declared themselves "Strict Constructionists."

Our friends on the committee—bright journalists, bank presidents, business men—but not lawyers—were nonplussed at this. When I learned about it, for the first time in my life I wished I was a lawyer; but I could now study the law in this case, and rushed to the Congressional Library to begin. An indexed copy of the Constitution revealed this clause: "The Congress of the United States shall have power to make all needful rules for the Territories and all other property of the United States." Certainly nothing could be more constitutional than this Bill. Through the huge volumes of the Acts of Congress, with Mrs. Nesbit, of Missouri, my constant companion in those labors, we searched for precedents in the legislation of Congress for the Territories. The last Friday morning dawned, April 16th, when we knew if no report was reached that day, there was little hope for our Bill at that session of Congress. We had personally seen every member of the committee whose support we could expect, to ensure their presence, and had carried to Mr. O'Donnell, our bright journalist and friend, the marked passages in the Constitution, the many acts of Congress concerning the Territories, as precedents to be used in answer to the "unconstitutional" argument; had, in short, with a feeling of absolute dependence, ask for "wisdom of Him who has promised it," and did believe He was giving it, and to the utmost followed out every suggestion. Then back to the little chamber on Capitol Hill, from which the letters and petitions had gone to all the land, I went to pray—to pace the room in suspense, and to read again and again God's promises that had been my stay in all the dark days of this long struggle. At 12 o'clock, noon, in the Ladies' Reception room of the Representatives' Hall, in our National Capitol, a group of gentlemen, our friends on the committee, met us with smiling faces, saying: "Victory! Complete victory!" The enemy was divided; could not agree, only the vote to report unamended could be carried.

Hon. Mr. Morrison, a few minutes after meeting the vanquished chairman of the sub-committee, said: "I hear you have acted on those Temperance Education petitions; what Bill did you report?" "Mrs. Hunt's Bill; every 'i' dotted, and every 't' crossed," was the reply. "Why, Burns, what are your politics?" asked Mr. Morrison. "I went to bed last night a Democrat, but what I am this morning I don't know," was the reply.

The following was a month of almost superhuman labor and anxiety. If one of the great political parties in this body could be made solid for the measure, the other would not wish to take the responsibility of defeating it, seemed clear. Soon that condition seemed possible, "But you can't get it up this session; it is so low down on the calendar," said even our friends. I began a study of the rules of the House, and aided through the suggestion of the Hon. Mr. Conger, of Iowa, found our only chance was Suspension Bill day, when to pass, it must have a two-thirds vote. That day, May 19th, came. In Mrs. Tilton's parlors with the Washington W. C. T. U. we held a prayer-meeting that morning, sang "Give to the Winds Your Fears," and went to the Capitol. We were kindly given the members' gallery; from it we watched the business of the morning hour pass. The time to take up the preliminaries that led to our bill, came, when a member of Mr. Randall's Committee moved to take up an appropriation bill instead; immediately on the left side of the House from the Speaker the wildest excitement prevailed. Men shouted, screamed, yelled "Suspension Bill day, Mr. Speaker!" "Suspension Bill day!" "Temperance Education, Mr. Speaker!" Mr. T. B. Reed, of Maine, with uplifted arm and closed fist rushed toward the desk and shouted over the din and uproar: "Mr. Speaker, this is interpreted as opposition to the Temperance Education Bill." The other side understood that. It was the gamut thrown down, and meant war, in other words, filibustering which would give the friends of the measure a chance to make the speeches showing the country who had killed the bill. The leaders on the left drew off in a knot in front of the Speaker's desk and those on the right "went down in cellar," as one of the members called their conference in a basement committee room while the yeas and nays were being called on the bringing up of the appropriation bill. A page had been kindly given us to communicate with the floor; our friends among the members came and went to and from our gallery as the exciting moments flew. The leaders on the right came from the basement and privately said to the determined men on the left, "We'll let your bill through if you won't discuss it." To this we all agreed. The appropriation bill disposed of, ours came, and 209 voted for it and only 8 voted against it. Then came days of intense suspense. "Will the President who is vetoing more bills than have all the Presidents before him, veto this?" Friends of the measure in both branches of Congress made various suggestions, but at last decided that Mrs. Hunt, with a lady companion, should go alone and talk with the Chief Magistrate. Coming into his presence, I said, "Mr. President, I have not come to urge you to sign the Temperance Education Bill just passed by both branches of Congress; as Governor of New York you put your signature to such a bill and are thus committed to this measure; but I have come, sir, to ask if you will kindly give me the pen with which you sign this National Bill." He laughed, and three days later sent me the pen.

Thus the strongest Temperance Education law ever passed by any legislative body became the law of this great Republic.

[Continued from 5th page.]

sonry can stand before such truth as you have given us in this lecture." In the name of the Christ whom Masonry rejects from its system of religion, I would ask, how can Masonry maintain its position in the churches when it is clearly shown to be a system of organized infidelity? "Come out," says God, "and be separate; touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you."

On Sabbath morning, Nov. 21st, Rev. M. A. Gault, Western Secretary of the National Reform Association, arrived at Wasioja from Eden Station, three miles distant, in time for the morning service. He was advertised to speak in the Seminary building in the morning, and in the Baptist church in the afternoon. He gave us two grand sermons on National Reform. On Monday night he gave a lecture which was both amusing and instructive, and which served as a desert after the four solid reformatory discourses we had given them.

On Monday night the president of the Dodge County Christian Association called a business meeting, and it was arranged to belt Wasioja with a circle of appointments for lectures when I return to visit my family, so as to rest me from my Iowa work.

Wasioja Seminary is a moral light-house. Prof. E. G. Paine, the principal, has always stood in the front rank of the prohibition and anti-secrecy reforms; and he could not have more worthy assistants than Miss Paine and Miss Dow. Let such schools as Wasioja be filled with students, and liberally supplied with means to carry forward the work of God committed to them.

Miss Paine may be doing her last year's work in this Seminary; but Miss Dow, who will doubtless take her place as preceptress, is as perfect a type of Christian womanhood as Prof. Paine, the principal of the Seminary, is of Christian manhood. With Christian instructors of so high a type, and a moral atmosphere free from the taint of the lodge, the saloon, or the billiard hall, Wasioja appeals for patronage to those parents who are interested in the moral and religious, as well as the intellectual and physical training of their children. What Wheaton is as a College, Wasioja is as a literary Seminary—a center of Christian reform.

Then, be liberal toward Wasioja. Send her students and donations until, with God's blessing, the little one becomes a thousand.

Leaving Wasioja we came to Brush Creek, to attend the Payette County meeting, auxiliary to the Iowa Christian Association, of which more anon.

C. F. HAWLEY.

PRESS COMMENT.

The members of the American party need to be warned not to be too hasty in laying aside their opposition to secret societies. When prohibition becomes popular then the members of the order will be ready to endorse it, and they may even claim that the reform has been aided and advanced by the fraternities; but let no sensible man be deluded by such claims, for an evil tree will not bring forth good fruit. The lodges are under the guidance of the Prince of the power of the air, and the behests of their ruler they will obey. Let us never cease from the demand, "Abolish the lodge." But while we thus detest the institution, let us manifest a Christian spirit toward them that are caught in the meshes of Satan, and strive to rescue them from their sin and slavery. If we can induce one to renounce the hidden things of dishonesty, our work will not be in vain.—Birmingham, Iowa, Free Press.

At the corner-stone laying of a Jewish synagogue at Cleveland, O., the corner-stone was laid by the Ohio Masonic Grand Lodge. Besides the addresses of two Rabbis and a layman, a short address was made by the mayor of Cleveland, and a prayer was offered by a Unitarian minister. In explanation of this act of the Masons, it was stated, that it is the duty of Freemasons to lay corner-stones whenever called upon. If that is so, then it is equally the duty of all fair-minded Christians to repudiate an order that endeavors to wipe out all differences between Jews and Christians, Turks and heathens. Acts of this kind should convince the most charitable that the secret orders are religious in their nature and that their religion is of a kind with which true Christianity can have no fellowship.—Lutheran Standard.

That Finch and some of his secret ilk have no other special use for prohibition but to favor secretism, we have seriously suspected since the hissing of the serpent of secretism in the National convention. We believe in prohibition. We believe in a prohibition political party. We believe in prohibition ballots. We believe also that it is the duty of those who believe that secret societies and intemperance are the twin perils of every interest, social, civil and religious, to insist that prohibition shall not be used as a pliant tool of secretism to work up its dark-lantern diabolism. We can join hands with any and all in a war of words and a war of ballots against the rum fiend, but we prefer to be excused from joining hands with secretists in prostituting prohibition, or prohibition party organization, to the promotion of organized secretism. We are decidedly and forever opposed to the monopoly of temperance sentiment or temperance party organization in the interests of secretism, which in its organized capacity is the arch foe of all law that comes in conflict with its own anarchism. The sooner the temperance cause is divorced from an attempted enforced union with secret mummeries, the sooner will its triumphs be assured.—Wesleyan Methodist.

John B. Finch, secretary of the Prohibition National Central Committee, is out in a letter in which he makes an appeal in behalf of the Good Templar's lodge in the name of the Prohibition party. Now we tell you just what it is, fellow Prohibitionists, we have no use for John B. Finch and the lodge, of which he stands at the head. The sooner we drop J. B. Finch the better. We do not want our forces divided. We ought to stand united, but it will be hard to unite the American voters in the Prohibition ranks with such a man in the lead. It would be bad enough to have the head of the Good Templar's lodge at the head of the party in itself, but when he seeks to use his official standing in the party to bolster up an impudent kid of the secret empire we emphatically object. This secret empire has grown and spread to such an extent and become so perilous to our republican institutions and such a devilish underhanded foe of the Christian church that the time has come for free men everywhere not only to put their foot on the old beast, but also on every one of the cubs. There is no earthly use for Good Templarism. We defy any man to show one single reason why this lodge should exist. The Lord has no use for it; but the devil has. It gives respectability to secrecy, it is a training school for Masonry and Odd-fellowship and helps to implant a thirst for the spiritual intoxication of mystical, ritualistic, Christless, lodge religion. Now in view of these things, the sooner John B. Finch is retired from his position the better. Let the American Prohibitionists make their influence felt in the organizing for the future. At the rate the world is moving lodgery is going to collapse in a very few years as sure as this Republic survives the upheavals of the next twenty years. Let us stand firm as Christians and lovers of liberty.—College Springs Crank.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Rev. Edward Mathews preached his farewell sermon in the Free Methodist church, Jackson, Mich., last Sabbath, and started next day for New York, where he will assist his brother James in his mission for poor boys for a time before making his proposed trip to England. His address will be 25 State street, New York.

—Bro. O. S. Palmer, whose prospective work in India as an industrial missionary under the Faith Missionary society of Oberlin, the Cynosure has before noticed, embarked at New York Saturday, Nov. 20th, for Bombay. With him were five others: his wife lately married; Rev. R. W. Munson and wife; Miss Miner of Lima, N. Y.; and Miss Lydia Wyckoff, M. D. They left New York on the Anchor Line steamer Furnessia. There were seven other missionaries booked for the same vessel. May God grant to all a prosperous and happy voyage, and an abundant outpouring of his Holy Spirit upon their own souls and blessing upon their work. All who wish to sustain foreign missionary work which is free from the lodge will find the Oberlin society true to their principles.

—The three Visitors of Andover Theological Seminary, who have, under the charter of the institution, the power of removal of the professors, met in Boston to hear charges of heresy made by four alumni: Henry M. Dexter, D. D., editor of the Congregationalist; J. W. Wellman, D. D., of Malden, a retired minister; Prof. J. J. Blaisdell, of Beloit College; and Rev. O. T. Lamphar, of Beverly, a retired minister. They are all graduates of Andover Seminary, and Dr. Wellman is a trustee. The charges are made jointly against Professors Smyth, Tucker, Churchill, Harris and Hineks, as joint authors of the volume "Progressive Orthodoxy." Against Professors Smyth and Tucker the additional charge has been made that they are not orthodox and consistent Calvinists. The charges against the five professors jointly involve several counts, "for any or all of which particulars of heterodoxy and opposition, if proved, the Board of Visitors is required to admonish or remove them."

—A very marked improvement has taken place in the British navy in respect to religious matters. Daily prayers are now made part of routine on board every vessel in the navy, and Sabbath afternoon and evening services are becoming the rule. Fifty years ago one service a week was the utmost provided for.

—Rev. Dr. C. S. Vedder, of the Huguenot Memorial church, Charleston, S. C., has secured in New York the sum of $6,000 deemed necessary for the repairs of the church, which was injured in the recent earthquake. It was contributed largely, says the Evangelist, by Huguenot descendants, one gentleman giving five-sixths of the whole.

—At a meeting in the old Fishing Creek church in Chester county, South Carolina, by the blessing of God, the services of Rev. George Summey for a week and a half's work resulted in the addition of forty-four, nearly all of them people of mature years.

—The following statistical summary of the Reformed Church in the United States for 1886 is gathered from the statistics of the district synods for the present year, to-wit: District synods, 7; classes, 52; ministers, 802; congregations, 1,481; members, 183,980; unconfirmed members, 108,724; infant baptisms, 14,089; adult baptisms, 1,741; confirmations, 10,733; by certificate, 5,582; communicants, 146,636; dismissions, 2,551; excommunications, 38; names erased, 2,381; deaths, 4,638; Sunday-schools, 1,422; Sunday-school scholars, 122,695; students for the ministry, 186; benevolent contributions, $140,121.85, and contributed for congregational purposes, $804,321.61.

—There are now ninety-five Congregational churches in Pennsylvania, and a meeting of delegates from local conferences, held at Ridgway, October 14, organized a State Association, and the first regular meeting is to be held at Ebensburg, June 21, 1887.

—The Rev. Sam Jones is to begin a series of evangelistic services in Boston in a short time by invitation of the Methodist ministers there. The Baptist and Congregationalist clergy were asked to join in the arrangement, but after some deliberation have declined to do so.

—Stall's Lutheran Year Book for 1887 gives the present condition of the church as follows: In the United States and Canada there are 58 synods, 3,990 ministers, 7,573 congregations, and 930,830 communicants. The Lutheran Church in the world comprises 25,452 ministers, 33,693 congregations, 47,451,136 members and adherents. In this country there are 19 Theological Seminaries, having 562 students, 55 professors, and 50,395 volumes in library; 26 colleges, with 2,627 students, 177 professors, 104,800 volumes in their libraries; $569,300 endowment, and property worth $1,070,500; 27 classical seminaries, with 2,108 students, 117 professors, $90,300 endowments, $480,000 worth of property; and 12 young ladies' seminaries, with 889 students, 100 instructors, and $197,500 worth of property. The church in this country has 134 religious papers, of which 42 are English, with a circulation of 320,000; 53 German, with a circulation of 250,000; 22 Norwegian, with a circulation of 50,000; 9 Swedish, with a circulation of 45,000; 4 Danish, with 5,000 circulation; 2 Finnish, and 2 Icelandic.

—The revival in the Congo mission continues. More than a thousand have publicly professed faith in Christ at Banza Manteke station. At Mukim-bungu there are about thirty recent converts, and at Palabalala there are encouraging tokens of a work of a Spirit. Two of the King's sons have openly professed to be Christians. Four-fifths of the converts at Banza Manteke are adults, and they show great zeal and devotion in extending a knowledge of the truth to their people, many of them going a long distance to make known the Gospel, returning to the missionary with men and women whom they have persuaded to believe the truth. As is usual where the Spirit is working with power, great opposition and persecution has been aroused against the Christians.

LODGE NOTES.

The Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows of Illinois, in session at Springfield, sent a telegram of condolence to the family of the late ex-President Arthur. This was merely a "bit of check" to advertise the order. Arthur was not an Odd-fellow.

Recently organizers of the Knights of Labor have been busy among the sugarcane laborers in Louisiana, and numbers of the field hands have been initiated.

An appeal on behalf of the condemned anarchist Parsons is being spread broadcast by local assembly, No. 1307, of the Knights of Labor, of which assembly Parsons is "a member in good standing." The appeal, which is a lengthy one, states that Parsons had always been a good and faithful member of the order, and in the opinion of the assembly he did not receive a fair trial.

John B. Finch, termed "the Honorable" by lodge organs, is lecturing through Canada for the Good Templars.

Of the 900 brass-workers employed in Chicago but 400 are members of Wire-workers' Assembly, Knights of Labor. An effort is being made to induce the non-union men to join the union. If they do not succeed, the 400 will attempt to dominate the majority if any question arises to lead to a strike.

A mass convention of Knights of Labor and trades union men, in Boston, nominated George E. McNeill for mayor last Friday.

In an address Friday at Montreal Michael Davitt highly complimented Mr. Powderly, saying that while he was at the head of the Knights of Labor he would keep that organization "clear from doctrines antagonistic to just government or the rights of the people."

The railway section foremen of North America met in convention at the Pacific House, Council Bluffs, November 25 and 26, and organized the Brotherhood of Railway Section Foremen of North America.

At a general convention of the Fenian Brotherhood in New York, on Tuesday and Wednesday, all official connection of O'Donovan Rossa with the Brotherhood was dissolved. The government of the order was thoroughly re-organized. There are various rumors as to the cause of Rossa's relegation to individuality in Irish matters, but the facts are closely guarded by those who know them.

Finch seems anxious to ruin the Prohibition party with lodgery, as Katzenstein has maneuvered for the destruction of Good Templarism in California. An Orphans' Home, started by the order, is discovered to be $11,000 in debt under his management for three years.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Nov. 22 to Nov. 27 inclusive:

B J Borton, J H Roberts, E Walker, P Lee, E Smith, J W Thompson, P B Chamberlin, C E Bailey, C A Webb, A C Lemm, J B White, A C Hland, R C W Frink, B D Bolling, R Porter, Rev L D Felt, L R Holbrook, Mrs S E Hull, E B Krohl, E Jacobs, J Harper, J N Bear, P Hurless, H Tiffany, A J Loudonback, M Morse, Rev J S Amidon, E Grinnell, G W Goodner, H F Donthart.

SONGS FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE and SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—Jo—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 22 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. H. H. Hinman, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Iowa, C. F. Hawley, Wayne, Henry Co. Care Rev. Geo. Fry. Illinois, I. R. B. Arnold, Wheaton. Wisconsin, J. F. Browne. Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville. New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus. Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seeders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill. N. Callender, Thompson, Pa. J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa. T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind. E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind. H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich. J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa. A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind. J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O. W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo. T. S. Walter, Kit, Jay Co, Ind. J. L. Barlow, Wheaton, Ill. A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill. E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich. S. G. Fenton, St Paul, Minn. E. L. Grinnell, Blairsville, Iowa. Warren Taylor, South Salem, O. J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn. J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa. W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo. Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind. E. Barnston, Haskinville, Steuben Co, N. Y. Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont. D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

LEPAGE'S LIQUID GLUE
UNRIVALED FOR CEMENTING
WOOD, METAL, CHINA, GLASS, ETC.
Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Masons & Plasterers in France & Russia. PAINTS CO. 65, MFD ONLY BY THE RUSSIA CEMENT & GLASS CO. LONDON, ENGLAND. 125-127, Sample 21a Can by Mail, 25c.

Suggestive Outline BIBLE STUDIES AND BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT, Author (with S. R. Riggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as George F. Pentecost, Horatio Bonar, Henry Morehouse, George C. Needham, D. W. White, D. H. Brooks, A. J. Gordon, William Lincoln, J. H. Vincent, Chas. M. Whitelisey, C. G. Moore, L. W. Munhall, Etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use the Bible. 321 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects. Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptance? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will see.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY, ELDER DAVID BERNARD, CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS OF MRGAN MONUMENT.

20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

Baccalaureate Sermon, BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow. 1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy. 1884—J. Blanchard and J. A. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John F. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE

District of Columbia, E. D. Bailey; Alabama, Jesse Ward; Arkansas, Charles Faget; Connecticut, Philip Bacon; Dakota, A. F. Dempsey; Florida, J. F. Galloway; Illinois, N. Stratton; Indiana, Israel Hess; Iowa, J. S. Norris; Kansas, H. Curtis; Maine, J. S. Rice; Massachusetts, S. A. Pratt; Michigan, H. A. Day; Minnesota, E. J. Payve; Mississippi, E. Tangle; Nebraska, E. B. Graham; New York, F. W. Capwell; New Jersey, Robert Armstrong; New Hampshire, S. C. Kimball; Ohio, J. M. Scott; Pennsylvania, N. Callender; Rhode Island, A. M. Paull; Tennessee, R. N. Critten; Vermont, F. F. French; Wisconsin, M. R. Britten.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of America, politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and classism by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to the disruption of the Republic, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws, and considering as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to suppress crime, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worship invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impostures and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought the peace which we enjoy, and that the memories of the dead will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land, and trust that the beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or deprecatd contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Article of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.

14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.

15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

The Christian's Secret

OR A Happy Life.

28th THOUSAND.

Baptist Commendation.

"The book is written with a theological book. It reaches to the very core of Christian experience, and is eminently experimental in its teaching. It meets the doubts and difficulties of connectedness, and it feeds the bread and water of life, but whose effect result only in alternate failure and victory. The author, without claiming to be a theologian, sends out the results of a happy and rich experience to help others to a happy Christian life."—Christian Advocate.

Presbyterian Endorsement.

"The book is so truly and reverential y devout in its spirit that it deters criticism. It contains so much that is sound and practical, so much that, if heeded, will make our lives better, happier and more useful, that the intelligent reader who really wishes to lead a life hid with Christ in God, can scarcely fail to derive profit from its perusal."—Interior.

Methodist Word of Praise.

"We have not for years read a book with more delight and profit. It is not a theological book. No effort is made to change the theological views of any one. The author has a rich experience, and tells it in a plain and delightful manner."—Christian Advocate.

United Brethren's Approval.

"We have seldom met with a more interesting volume, abounding throughout with apt illustrations; we have failed to find a dry line from title-page to final."—Religious Telescope.

Congregational Comment.

"It contains much clear, pungent reasoning and interesting incidents, and is a most valuable and instructive lesson taught out of God's word, and is worthy of universal circulation."—Church Union.

This enlarged edition is a beautiful large 12mo volume of 240 pages.

Price, in cloth, richly stamped, 75 cts.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform

Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience!

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Mental Gymnastics;

OR

Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose.

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons; THE STUDENT, His Lessons; THE BUSINESS MAN, His Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test.

The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

We cordially commend it to all persons of falling memory as the best book obtainable on that subject.—INTER-OCEAN. Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent, postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY

candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

FARM NOTES.

WASHINGTON'S PROGRESSIVE FARMING.

Next we find him—a few years only intervening—master and owner of Mt. Vernon, where he gets a reputation in all the region as a shrewd, sagacious farmer—is among the first to observe the heavy drain which tobacco growing is making on the land; he enlarges his wheat-sowings—is anxious to bring about its sale by weight, that he may be encouraged to put better land to its growth. He tests "plaster of Paris," though is very doubtful most times of its efficacy; he plows in buckwheat twice in a season, allowing the first sowing to mature its seed, and turning in the second at the stage of its greatest succulence; he talks of importing a "hippopotamus" (not the animal, but a marine machine of that name), for dredging mud from the river bottom, which mud, he believed, would have great manurial value. He made surveys and maps of the various farms comprising his estate, and knew the tillage history of every field. These maps are still in existence, and so are others, showing his layout of drive-ways about his enlarging homestead. Special localities are indicated for the planting of new trees which are severally named, and if there is not much of garden-like grace in the drawings, there is a good engineering rigor of curve, which was more natural to him; indeed, in matters of taste, whether as respects blue velvets, or waistcoats, or wood paths, or the planting of his coppices, Washington was not inventive or swaying toward easy graces, but lived, rather, after cool, orderly conventionalities.—Donald G. Mitchell in American Agriculturist.

BARK SCRAPING.—Many good authorities now concur in the opinion that scraping the bark of fruit trees is not only unnecessary but often injurious, that no tree when properly thriving needs it, and if not thriving scraping the bark will not do much good. One of our contemporaries says:—

When in the garden among fruit trees, we sometimes scrape off some of the loose, rough, mossy bark, but we do it more for a change of posture or rest for the body, or to make the trunks look a little better, than with any expectation of helping the growth of the tree. We lately came into possession of a neglected orchard, and these remarks apply to this only. In our life-long experience in the care of orchard trees, we have found no occasion for spending any time scraping or washing the trunks of trees, or slitting the bark to give the tree room to grow. The Rural New Yorker, alluding to this subject, says: Pray don't waste your time and strength in this way. If you give your trees good food to eat and plenty of it, and cut out while young all branches that interfere with each other, you have done all you can to promote their welfare. Leave the rest to nature. Mr. J. J. Thomas, horticultural editor of the Country Gentleman, also condemns the practice of scraping, believing it renders the trees more susceptible to injury from cold in winter.

PROPAGATING GRAPEVINES.—The most simple method of propagating grapevines is by cutting. In the fall, when pruning, choose some of the well ripened wood of medium size and cut into lengths from six to nine inches long each containing from three to four buds, cutting close below the lower bud and about an inch above the upper. Tie them into convenient-sized bundles, with the lower ends even, and place them in a cool, moist cellar, or bury them out of doors in well-drained ground, with the upper ends downward, and cover with fine soil. In spring prepare a bed of rich, light, well pulverized soil composed partly of woods earth. In this bed sink a spade deep enough to receive the whole length of a cutting except the upper bud, which should be left even with the surrounding ground. In withdrawing the spade insert the cutting, lower end downward, in the opening left by the spade, pressing the earth close around it with the foot. The cuttings may be placed a few inches apart in the row, and by the following spring will have rooted sufficiently to set out in the vineyard.

The currant and gooseberry may also be propagated in the same way, setting the cuttings a little farther apart in the row. As cold weather comes on, it is better to cover them over with a little coarse litter from the stable, removing the same the following spring, and keeping them well hoed and clear of weeds during the summer. In this way they will have acquired sufficient root by the fall to set out.—Baltimore Sun.

FEEDING OF HORSES.—The fattening qualities of corn as compared with oats, is shown by the greater amount of oil it contains, being nearly double that of oats. Therefore, if used as food for working horses, it should be given in these proportions. Equal quantities of corn and oats should not be ground together. Such a mixture is dangerous. Oats should be given whole, unless necessary to bruise them for a special reason. Corn ground with the cob adds to its bulk, and does away with some objections to its use. Hay fed with the grain, helps the digestion of the latter. We should prefer not to moisten the grain—particularly if the animal is a greedy feeder. Bran mash should be given at least once a week in place of grain, or better still, carrots twice a week.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR

Illustrated.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN or SECRET Work."

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

PRICE 25 CENTS.

For Sale by

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

After forty years' experience in the preparation of more than One Hundred American continue to act as solicitors for patents, caveats, trade-marks, copyrights, etc., for the United States, and to obtain patents in Canada, England, France, Germany, and all other countries. Their experience is unequalled and their facilities are unsurpassed.

Drawings and specifications prepared and filed in the Patent Office on short notice. Terms very reasonable. No charge for examination of models or drawings. Advice by mail free.

Patents obtained through Munn & Co. are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, which has the largest circulation and is the most influential newspaper of its kind published in the world. The advantages of such a notice every patentee understands.

This large and splendidly illustrated newspaper is published WEEKLY at $3.00 a year, and is admitted to be the best paper devoted to science, mechanics, inventions, engineering works, and other departments of industrial progress, published in any country. It contains the names of all patentees and title of every invention patented each week. Try it four months for one dollar. Sold by all newsdealers.

If you have an invention to patent write to Munn & Co., publishers of Scientific American, 361 Broadway, New York.

Handbook about patents mailed free.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood,
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association,

221 West Madison St., Chicago.

FINNEY ON MASONY.

The character, aims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "Bright Mason" long, and he tells us what it means to be a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 50c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth or a netting of the same in leather to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Helden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers' tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, everyday walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denials will awaken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by disipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book for the hands of the wife or daughter to superintend co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is incessantly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unravelling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

By Samuel B. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

The deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how has it mastered both in style and argument. One is incessantly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unravelling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART" AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revived Odd-fellowship, Grand Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 200 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25c; per dozen, $2.50. For sale by the National Christian Association, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. At Head-quarters for Anti-secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curve, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling—experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless one, oblige member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "baiting between two opinions." In other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Woman's Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasonry, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are especially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Ensamment and Rebekah (advised) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of its order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the ritual of the book published by the National Christian Association. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 75c; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

IN BRIEF.

"My boy," said the father to his son, "treat every one with politeness, even those who are rude to you. For remember that you show courtesies to others not because they are gentlemen, but because you are."

The other day an up-town gentleman, whose wife wished him to send up a corn doctor to the house, made the engagement and telegraphed her to this effect: "Chiroprapist will be up at two o'clock." The lady was greatly surprised, but somewhat consoled, when she received the message: "Cheer up, dearest. Will be up at two o'clock."

A San Francisco Chinaman, who had been smuggling cigars in his coat sleeve, was asked how he came by the cigars. "A fiend ask me hold till he come back; he one bad man, he no come back, he habe chil eye," replied the innocent Ah Sin.

A New York judge who was trying a man for robbing a woman of her gold watch as she was stepping on a horse car, laid a neat piece of cross examination. The man claimed that the watch was his and the woman was mistaken in identifying it as hers. Suddenly the judge asked, "Where's the key?" The prisoner fumbled in his pockets, and said he must have left it at home. The judge asked him if he had wound the watch frequently with the key, and he said, "yes." Then a key was procured, watch and key were handed to the prisoner, and he was told to wind the watch. He opened the case, but could not find any place to use the key, because the watch was a stemwinder. The sentence was five years and a half.

The Tribune reporter, who, a few days ago, interviewed Charles Francis Adams, president of the Union Pacific, says the dining room of his special car has a motto suspended at each end of it, "God hateth a liar," and "Truth is mighty, why then lie?" No place could be more appropriate for such mottoes than the resorts of railroad magnates, but it is respectfully suggested to Mr. Adams, that when he travels in the domain and on the track of the C. P. R. R. and S. P. R. R. common politeness should induce him to remove those offensive radical sentiments and innuendos, or at least, turn their faces to the wall while here. They are altogether too personal by suggestive when openly exposed on railroad property in this State.—Los Angeles Censor.

A patent was issued recently to George Westinghouse, Jr., of Pittsburgh, Pa., inventor of the Westinghouse air brake, for a new system of distributing electricity to be used in lighting and for other purposes—a system which, it is said, will greatly cheapen the electric light and render it a more dangerous rival of illuminating gas by effecting a saving of about 95 per cent in the distribution as compared with the Edison three-wire system. In tests of the invention a single main circuit of wire less than one-quarter of an inch in diameter carried the current for 800 sixteen-candle power incandescent lights, all situated at a distance of three miles from the dynamo. The inventor claims that to light this number of lamps at an equal distance the Edison system would require from ninety to one hundred wires of the same system.

The vitality which China has evinced during the past decade naturally awakens speculation as to the part she is to play in the future history of the world. Within a short time, China has accomplished the extirpation of the Panthays, has obliterated from the map the Mussulman Kingdom of Kashgar, and obtained from Russia the retrocession of Kuldja, in all of which she displayed a force and determination, which, if developed in proportion to the strength of the empire, would make her a powerful antagonist for any two of the great European powers. Russia and France have already been seriously checked in their territorial expansion by Chinese interference, and Britain now recognizes that the friendship of the Chinese court is essential to the peaceful occupation and government of Burmah. China's influence at St. Petersburg, Paris and London is therefore recognized by diplomats, and every precaution is taken to prevent any insult being offered to the members of the respective Chinese embassies. To the speculative thinker, the possible position that China may occupy before another century rolls around, offers abundant food for thought. A great Pagan nation, the government of which controls nearly one-third of the population of the globe, would, if it availed itself of all the arts of civilization be a power for evil rather than for good; and it is therefore in the interests of humanity, from a purely material and worldly standpoint, that the efforts to Christianize these people be carried on with redoubled zeal.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and Lung, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a half-pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-douing, coughing or sneezing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

How, E. L. HASTINGS, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has, to my knowledge, relieved, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Catarrh of the Throat, and Catarrh of the Lungs, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all afflicted with such maladies."

W. L. HIDDEN, 38 West 4th St., New York: "My wife, who has been a great sufferer from Catarrh, coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and after using it a few days, she is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO., Central Music Hall, Room 25, 99 State and Randolph Sts., Chicago. Main Office: 1550 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

SONGS OF PILGRIMAGE.

A HYMNAL FOR THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

Probably the most extensive collection of hymns in the English language.

- It contains 1533 hymns, with music for them all.
- It contains 344 tunes from 112 known authors.
- It contains old hymns you have hunted for.
- It contains old tunes your grandmother sang.
- It contains hymns you learned when a child.
- It contains old tunes you have wanted so long.
- It contains new tunes you have never heard.
- It contains plenty of solid standard music.
- It contains numerous grand old minor tunes.
- It contains some 500 hymns you never saw.
- It contains 131 hymns from Watts.
- It contains 140 of Wesley's hymns.
- It contains over 300 new hymns from H. L. H.
- It contains hymns for all occasions.
- It contains hymns of the blessed hope.
- It contains old hymns from the Latin and Greek.
- It contains hymns from the French and German.
- It contains hymns from the Welsh and Danish.
- It contains hymns for the old and young.
- It contains hymns for sick and well.
- It contains 228 pages of hymns and music.
- It contains the names of authors and composers.
- It contains the dates of both hymns and tunes.
- It contains an index of subjects.

It is printed from type like this line.

YET YOU CAN CARRY IT IN YOUR POCKET!

Price in flexible cloth, $1.00, cloth extra, $1.25.

Address orders to the publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.,

OR TO THIS OFFICE.

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR ILLUSTRATED.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN WORK"

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

Price 25 Cents.

For Sale by NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO.

NATIONAL SUICIDE, AND ITS PREVENTION.

BY OSCAR F. LUMBY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumby's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept his doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield, "Even his fallings lean to virtue's side."

—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumby is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticize. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. L. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

"A THRILLING WARNING."

Man Traps of the City.

BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons

It treats of

The Tiger and His Den.

Cups of Flame.

The Scarlet Sin.

Embezzlement.

The Devil's Printing Press.

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that flow like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shown in their horror, and the careful reader, with which they have been surrounded by the purring literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the profligate in here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a life that, though wicked, has its future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. L. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

WHAT IS NATIONAL REFORM?

A RIGHT ANSWER TO THIS LEADING QUESTION INVOLVES THE SOLUTION OF

SOCIAL, MORAL AND POLITICAL PROBLEMS.

Can the Question be Answered?

SEND $2 FOR ONE YEAR'S SUBSCRIPTION TO THE

CHRISTIAN NATION.

252 BROADWAY,

NEW YORK,

AND

READ AND LEARN FOR YOURSELF.

BESIDES ITS INTELLIGENT AND POPULAR DISCUSSIONS OF THESE QUESTIONS OF INTEREST TO EVERY MAN AND WOMAN, THE CHRISTIAN NATION

A Home Paper in the Fullest Sense.

Light and Life S. S. Supplies.

We are prepared to furnish anything in the line of Sunday-school supplies, including a choice line of reward card and tickets, which we sell at low rates. Teachers' supplies, Library Registers, Maps, Wall Maps, and Charts.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS.

It is our aim to produce papers that will not only interest the children by their attractive appearance and readability, but by sound, evangelical and wholesome teaching to lead them to Christ. All seasonal and religious papers, including the following: THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy, per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents. THE LILY (monthly). Single copy, per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents. THE SUNSHINE (monthly). Single copy, per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents. PURE WORDS (monthly). Single copy, per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

Single copy of each of the four monthlies to one address per year 75 cents. No single subscription taken for less than one year. SEVENTEEN CENTS PER COPY. LIGHT AND LIFE (PARENT CLASS WEEKLY) CONTAINS Lesson Story for the next Sunday 4 cents per quarter; 16 cents per year.

LESSON HELPS.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON QUARTERLY CONTAINS: 1. Common version arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 3. Verse Readings. 4. Introductory, including Review Questions, Connecting Links, and Opening Exercises. 5. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time, place, persons and unique parties of the lesson with the proper pronunciation of the names and places. 6. Notes and Explanations of Questions. 7. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 8. Next Sunday's Lesson, including of reviews in memory verses and Golden Text. In. Eleven pages of instructions and suggestions for teachers. Price per quarter 3 cents; per year, 12 cents.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF CONTAINS same as quarterly except the instructions and suggestions to teachers.

8¢ SAMPLES FREE. Be sure and send this leaf before you order for the next quarter. Price, $7.50 per 100 copies, per year. CATALOGUE SENT FREE.

T. B. ARNOLD, PUBLISHER: 104 & 106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Medical and Surgical SANITARIUM

LARGEST SANITARIUM IN THE WORLD.

This institution, one of the buildings of which is shown in the cut, stands without a rival in the perfection and completeness of its appointments.

The following are a few of the special methods employed: Turkish, Russian, Roman, Thermo-Electric, Electro-vapor, Electro-hydro, Electro-chemical, Hot-air, Vapor, and every form of water bath; electricity in every form; Swedish movements—manual and mechanical—Massage, Pneumatic treatment, Vacuum treatment, sun baths. All other remedial agents of known curative value employed.

An artificial climate, possessing the advantage of perfectly pure air and an equable temperature, is produced for the benefit of those invalids who, annually visit the South and other warm climates. Forches enclosed in glass afford fine opportunity for promoting without exposure, and a large number of other every facility for thorough and systematic physical training.

Pure water, good ventilation, steam heating, perfect sewerage. Special departments for the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, etc. For circulars with particulars, address

SANITARIUM, Battle Creek, Mich.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D., (Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of the life that now is, and to give comfort and help as to the life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man a burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveler to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1.

Address, W. L. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XIX., No. 12

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1886.

WHOLE No. 867.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.
SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR.....$2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.....$1.50.

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.....	1
Knights in Distress.....	8
What Are the Prospects.....	8
Some Hope of Mr. Cleveland.....	8
N. C. A. Board Meeting.....	9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Human Vampires.....	1
The Plan for Episcopal Methodists.....	2
The Government vs. other Corporations.....	3
A Few Thoughts on the Drink Traffic.....	3
Smoking in Lodge Rooms.....	3
SELECTED:
Three Words of Strength (poetry).....	3
A Difference of Opinion.....	3
CORRESPONDENCE:
National Reform in Ohio; Eastern Sight-seeing; The Prospective Christian Congress; From a Mobile Pastor; Fifth and Point.....	5, 6
BIBLE LESSON.....	6
OBITUARY.....	7

The barbaric manner of the Knights Templar Freemasons at the White House last week, as related on another page, is a very apt illustration of their arrogance in seizing the political offices of the country. Freemasons do not number one-twentieth of the voters, but they hold about three-fourths of the offices, which is seven-tenths more than should fall to them, even if they had not made themselves aliens by their lodge oath. The American people must learn from President Cleveland how to shake them off.

This Washington incident also uncovers the barbarism inherent in the lodge. While its religion is heathenism, its titles, its regalia, its oaths, its ceremonies public and secret are all barbarian in origin and in nature, and must educate decent men back toward the savage state. Such is also the effect upon women who put themselves under its patronage. Such is the effect upon the homes invaded and sometimes broken up by the lodge. If men will cultivate barbarism they may expect to show in their manners and characters the effect of such association.

Egypt has given us some more relics, but Dr. Weisse, Col. Pictou and the rest of the Masons are very quiet. A tomb has been discovered in Egypt by Prof. Maspero, in which a square, a mason's level, compasses, and other tools have been found beside a mummy. Probably if Prof. Maspero was a blinded Hiramite, like Lieutenant Gorringer, he would have hailed the lodges around the world as did the latter when he tipped Cleopatra's Needle over. But the Professor is less enthusiastic for the lodge than truthful as an explorer, and the Masons are dumb at his announcement that the dead man was an architect who had control of one quarter of the cemetery at Thebes, and so the tools and the masonry is of the genuine kind.

Ben Hogan, is a converted pugilist, whose work has been well proved in Chicago and up and down the Pacific coast. The story of his conversion in a thrilling one, a wonderful testimony to the power of God upon the heart. And if any one doubts whether it be genuine, let it be taken in evidence that the other night when two celebrated bruisers were holding a brutal performance before a great crowd, Ben suddenly interrupted the game by leaping on the platform and beginning an exhortation. The fighting stopped and all listened respectfully to a speech all on fire for Christ. But the devil's grip was too strong to be at once shaken off and the sparring began again, yet no doubt with some loss of its spirit.

The suggestion of Dr. A. B. Leonard of Ohio, who made a strong carvas for Prohibition in Ohio two years ago, that General Clinton B. Fisk, the recent Prohibition candidate for Governor of New Jersey, be that party's next candidate for President, is meeting with much favor. General Fisk is a prominent Methodist, and his generous gift to the cause of education among the colored people, Fisk University, is expected to win him many votes from that race in the South. He is, moreover, as well known in religious and philanthropic movements as St. John was in politics, and is opposed to the lodge.

Father Rheuman, priest of St. Bridget's church, Montreal, opened on the Knights of Labor lodge last Sabbath morning, warning good Catholics to avoid it, since the order was controlled by Freemasons, and Freemasonry was condemned by the Pope; but the greatest objection was, that the order recruited its members just like other secret societies, and kept them bound to secrecy by oaths. It is true that Powderly and Barry and probably other Knights of Labor leaders are not only Catholics, but are not sworn members of the Masonic lodge; yet they show the law of that lodge written on their hearts, and may be justly condemned by the Romish church. The result of the Baltimore conference of American prelates is awaited with some anxiety. It is improbable that contradictory orders will be sent from Rome, but if the order is denounced in America as in Canada, it will go hard with the multitude who have followed Powderly into this business.

A Federal grand jury at Indianapolis discharged last week was very evidently afflicted with lodge leprosy. That city having found it necessary to supplement the force of officers appointed to execute the laws with a committee of one hundred citizens, charges of fraud at the last election were made and the examination proceeded. The grand jury, after a three weeks' investigation of evidence which the committee regarded as beyond question, made no indictment. Judge Woods sent them away with stinging rebuke for their conduct in the inquiry, which had been notorious. The district attorney is also blamed for the result. He is the Judge Turpie who was a chief support of the great election swindler Mackin of this city.

A worse case is the disagreement of the jury in the trial of Alderman McQuade of New York, for taking a bribe from the Broadway Horse Railway company. This jury sat and heard two ex-aldermen testify that thirteen members of the Board held secret meetings and "agreed to always vote together if anything came up, except politically." That is, they formed an impromptu secret lodge, and worked it just as Masonry and other secret societies. They had an offer of $500,000 cash from the Broadway company, and of $750,000, part bonds, from another. They accepted the first, and each pocketed $20,000. The police had worked up the evidence proving this, and the repenting aldermen corroborated it; yet the jury could not agree! In the San Francisco jail there are twenty-two untried murderers. No wonder a mob of 10,000 men marched to the jail the other day to take the law into their own hands. Every few years an earthquake shook, like the terrible riots at Cincinnati two years ago, is needed to shake off for a time the grip of the lodge upon our courts. Will this people never learn wisdom from their bitter experiences?

The election of Rev. Myron Reed of the First Congregational church, Denver, to Congress, explains the vagaries of his course in religious matters, which have for some time been the scandal of pious people in that city. When a student in the seminary here he betrayed his ambition by keeping a sharp watch for the $1,000 pulpits. He apparently ends his course as a teacher of religion by entering politics. He has been working to this end for some time, by every artifice that would secure a low popularity, playing base ball in match games, orator for any body and every body who would invite him, and finally joining the Masonic lodge. An influential daily noticing his election says: "Mr. Reed has in the last three years been a stalwart Republican, an independent Republican, a Mugwump, a Cleveland-Civil-Service Democrat, and now he is claimed as an out and out Bourbon, whose election is a rebuke to the civil service pretensions of President Cleveland. If Dr. Reed's theology is as dependent upon circumstances as is his politics, he ought to be very popular with Democrats." It is pitiful that such blind leaders should yet have a following, and even have grave public trusts put in their hands. But it is not surprising that men who profess to be ministers of the glorious Gospel of Christ degrade that work and deny their Master for an election to Congress, when such a scramble for self can be allowed as is reported from Springfield in this State. Chaplains are to be chosen for the two houses of the legislature and are to receive $90 per month for the sinecure. The candidates are so numerous and persistent that the churches are being scandalized, and the lodges, like the G. A. R., are emboldened to put forward candidates of their own.

HUMAN VAMPIRES.

BY H. H. HINMAN.

I recently heard a vociferous plea addressed to a bevy of colored women on a street corner, which had for its object to convince them, that a new secret society with an insurance attachment would, for a very small outlay, provide for them in sickness, and give them a grand funeral in case of their decease. Besides this there was an indefinite promise of care for widows and orphans, together with the assurance of much social enjoyment, numerous picnics, excursions, processions and displays, to say nothing of certain exalted offices and dignified titles to which they might hope to attain.

As these poor women were not versed in interest tables, and not even familiar with the rules of arithmetic, being simple minded women, who earn a scanty support by service in families or in laundry work, it was not strange that to their imaginations the offer should have been regarded as most tempting and the opportunity a grand one for attaining to a position of comfort, of pleasure and competence. It is not strange that from their meager earnings should be drawn a sum sufficient to give them a financial connection with the "Sons and Daughters of the Immaculate Household of Fidelity"—and that the said vampire should, after completing the capture by an initiation, go on, reasonably satisfied with his success in that field, unless he should find a return to the same more promising than the search for a new one.

Innumerable as the frogs of Egypt, are these human vampires. Societies are gotten up in all the Southern cities, and circulars are sent out promising to enterprising men (who will make an affidavit of fidelity and concealment) a large share of the ill-gotten gains. A recent circular sent from Vicksburg, Miss., to a minister of the Gospel promised him $100 per month for organizing such societies and to make him a perpetual agent for the collection of dues. It is not in human nature to refuse so tempting an offer, nor is it strange that the whole South should swarm with these creatures, when bled words, like the wings of vampires, should soothe the victims while they suck their heart's blood.

A large share of these societies are unknown to law, and legally irresponsible. And when more money can be made by disruption than by continuance the officers simply discontinue business and disappear. Nearly all of them make promises which every business man knows could not be fulfilled by honest business methods. The lapsing of a large proportion of policies and the defrauding of multitudes of their hard-earned "dues" is the cunning device for cheating the innocent to enrich the crafty. That these schemes are perpetual robberies, all who have given the subject attention well know, and so long as the colored people of the South are ignorant and unsuspecting, so long will they be robbed. Recently the railroad officials of Mobile reported that each adult colored person in that city spent on an average eight dollars in railroad excursions gotten up by the societies. This was for tickets alone. The report of one of the largest churches of that city showed less than fifty cents per member for church purposes. The societies eat up the churches.

Nor is it these comparatively unknown societies that work this perpetual mischief. There lies before me a letter addressed to a clergyman of Selma, Alabama, in behalf of Good Templary. The writer says, "I am a 32 degree Mason, and fail to see the slightest wrong in it, or that it ever interferes with the duties of religion." After an argument to show that the Good Templary order is purely Christian, he goes on to say, "The world could not get along without secret societies. Every business house is a secret society, every church, every home. It is all nonsense to talk about secretcies. It is a great pity that our colored people are not more fond of secrets. If we could learn to keep our secrets we would advance twice as fast as we do now."

But secrecy pertains to barbarism much more than to civilized life. Just in proportion as people advance in Christian civilization do the occasions of concealment steadily diminish. Organized secrecy is wholly needless and entirely out of place in a Christian republic. The foregoing plea is a plea for barbarism. Doubtless the man who made it gets a liberal pay for the lodges he organizes and the people he initiates, and hence can see no evil in this or in kindred systems. But such men's perceptions must be very obtuse. They are simply blind leaders of the blind. May we be delivered from them.

THE PLAN FOR EPISCOPAL METHODISTS.

BY REV. J. T. MICHAEL.

Since the publication of my article addressed to "lovers of righteousness in the Methodist Episcopal church," I have received some evidence that the plan which I then proposed has begun to accomplish a small part of its purpose. If carried out fully and properly, it must bring about glorious and everlasting results. Not that the Methodist Episcopal church will be reformed; I do not believe that it will, but I do believe that some of the greatest hindrances which stand in the way of a deep and radical, and holy reformation and revival will be effectually destroyed.

The Christian Advocate is the leading official organ of the Methodist Episcopal church. In the issue of November 4, 1886, in an editorial on "Our Country's Need of a New Pentecost," Dr. Buckley says, "The need of the times is a modern Pentecost, a new reformation, another time of refreshing kindred to that which gave birth to Methodism, a vast outpouring of the Holy Ghost upon whole communities, spreading like rivers of water over every part of our country." Yes; and we will surely have it, if we will do our part. Some effects are preceded by gradual processes; other effects require blasting. In both the Lutheran reformation and the Wesleyan revival, to which Dr. Buckley refers, there was a great deal of blasting; and if we are to have the reformation, the need of which he so clearly sees, we must accept a vast amount of this kind of work—a work which will produce not a little shattering and upheaving near the place where the able editor of the Advocate is now standing. My plan is a plan for successful blasting, and is to be used when other means prove to be failures. I want to get copies of this plan in every Methodist Episcopal society in the land. I am satisfied that this can be done if every lover of righteousness who reads these lines will help according to his ability. I will sell the plan, printed in a four-page tract, at the rate of fifteen hundred pages for one dollar, or one hundred and fifty pages for ten cents, postage paid. I do not seek to make a penny out of the undertaking. Gladly would I give them away, were I able to do so. Will you not take hold of this matter at once? If you are not a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, you may carry the tracts to those who are. Or, you may find that they will apply to other denominations. If you are a member, and if you have received the light, does not consistency require that you do something?

Suppose an obscure member of your own class should join an infidel club which rejected Jesus Christ, and which offered a scheme of salvation without Christ, what do you think should be done with such a brother? Is it not perfectly clear that the church should explain to him the evil nature of this association, and try to get him to leave it? Should he persist in refusing to leave, would you not admit that it was the duty of the church, for its own good and for the good of the offender, to place him outside of its pale? What is the difference between the club which this member joins and the organization with which your bishops, your editors, your presiding elders, your pastors are allowed to connect themselves? One is open, the other is secret, but both reject our divine Saviour, both offer salvation for time and for eternity without him. Masonry does this in thousands of instances right here before our eyes.

It is true, as your excellent editor shows in the article to which I have referred, that the church in its present condition is not conquering, as it should conquer, the awful wickedness of the present day; but may we not partly account for this sad state by the fact that the church has taken to its bosom a gigantic system of blasphemy which mangles the Bible, tries to dethrone the Son of God, and claims to open a path to heaven without the cross of Calvary?

Do you deny that this is a fact as far as your church is concerned? You must admit that Ancient Craft Masonry excludes Christ. You must admit that many of your ministers and members are Freemasons, while many others do not utter a syllable against the institution. Now, does this same Masonry teach salvation?

"Lectures and Addresses" is the title of a book published by your own Methodist Book Concern. The author, the late Rev. Thomas Guard, D. D., was one of your most prominent ministers. In this book there is a "Masonic Oration," from which I will give you a few extracts. On page 361, the oration declares that the "Masonic life springs from religion, is nourished by religion, and must ever repose and flourish engirdled by religion." Perhaps you have been saying that Masonry has nothing to do with religion.

Page 352: "We, despite the perils and trials and slanders of foes, secular and spiritual, ask our enemies to trace a wrinkle upon our brow, or pluck a gray hair from our exuberant locks. We, like Israel's great leader, after the lapse of nearly three thousand years, move forth, bathed in the dew of the morning, with eye undimmed, with form erect, with natural strength unabated, destined to run a race with time, and prove in our principles, heirs of a radiant and rapturous immortality." This quotation refers to the "antiquity" of "the ancient and honorable order." Dr. Guard points us to Solomon's temple as the place where the "fraternity," for which he has such a "fulness of youthful fervor and ardent admiration," had its commencement; but instead of doing this, had he mentioned the Goose and Gridiron and the Apple-tree taverns, I think he would have come nearer the truth.

Page 354: "Who can object to or oppose such a system as ours? Is he a moralist? Then here may he learn the purest ethics and practice the most manly virtues. . . . Is he a presbyter or priest? Then we tell him that religion shall find in us one of her most useful auxiliaries, one of her most fair and generous hand-maidens, and that the theology which he inculcates we live to embody. We, as he, believe in one God; as he, in one great light of conduct, the Holy Bible; as he, in one great comfort and help in all seasons of trial, peril, woe—even prayer; and, as he, anticipate another and a better world." Notice that it is not said that "we, as he, believe in one Mediator, the Lord Jesus Christ." That would have been unmasonic. The statement about the Bible is misleading. Masonry does not require its worshipers to believe in the Bible in the sense required by evangelical Christianity. A man may be a Mason without believing that one line of the Scriptures is divinely inspired. Parts of the Bible may be omitted, and the whole may be set aside altogether, while the Koran, or some other volume containing a pretended revelation, may be put in its place.

Page 362: "Immortality is ours. Yonder our system warrants us in looking. The acacia sprig speaks of a life that survives the grave. . . . Our ranks are suffering loss by the removal thence of honored and trusted brothers. They are not lost. They still practice their sublime art in building up edifices of knowledge, wisdom and joy, in some distant region of the Supreme Architect's domain. We shall meet them, if we be true and humble and faithful men. Aye, we shall meet them in possession of highest Masonic honors, and within the encompassing shelter of the most perfect of Masonic workmanship; most perfect; for is it not 'a city which hath foundation?' Is it not a city 'foursquare,' having gates north, south, east and westward? Is not that Masonic? . . . Within that foursquare city our brotherhood is gathering as the stream of time flows onward."

We may not demand that everything issued by the denominational publishing house of the Methodist Episcopal church should necessarily be in complete harmony with Methodist doctrine, but when the official publishing agents copyright and place their imprint upon a book containing this "Masonic Oration" without even a hint of disapprobation, certainly every loyal Methodist heart ought to beat with a holy indignation. And when we remember that this same oration affirms that the mysteries of Masonry "are not mysteries of iniquity," that "slanderous libels have been uttered respecting them," and that these "libels are but the spiteful, malignant fabrications of sanguinary fanatics, or of a depraved priesthood" (p. 354), then we may get a faint idea of the horrible deception which the oration is able to accomplish.

Dr. Guard has gone to his Judge, but his address, "delivered before the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of California," and published by the Methodist Book Concern, still lives to poison the minds and ruin the souls of the young men of our nation.

Dr. Guard was an admirer of John Wesley. On page 111, referring to this eminent man of God, he says, "He was quick to detect a fallacy, and swift to expose a false premise or conclusion. . . . He demanded a reason for everything believed in and advocated by him."

Let us read what Wesley wrote concerning Masonry. Journal, volume II., page 398: "I went to Ballymena, and read a strange tract that professed to disclose 'the inmost recesses of Freemasonry,' said to be 'translated from the French original, lately published at Berlin.' I incline to think it is a genuine account. Only if it be, I wonder the author is suffered to live. If it be, what an amazing banter upon all mankind is Freemasonry! And what a secret is it which so many conceal to keep! From what motive? Through fear, or shame to own it?"

In a reference to this passage, Dr. Buckley tells us in the Advocate that "John Wesley knew nothing whatever of Masonry." Well, whether he did or did not, it is certain that he gave a more reliable description than do many who claim to be his followers, and who are walking in the "light" of "the sublime mysteries." Whether the tract which he read was true, I do not know, but I do know that his opinion is just what might have been expected had he seen what many good and wise men can prove to be a faithful and exact revelation.

Look at this great Methodist Episcopal church. Look at it in the light of its own teaching, that God's design in raising it up "was to reform the continent, and spread Scriptural holiness over these lands." Look at it in the light of the facts and unanswered and unanswerable arguments which have been given to the world during the last twenty years, and then will you not see that it is wrong to stand still any longer? Will you not see that every lover of the Bible and pure Methodism ought to go to work to bring about a movement which will expose and tear to shreds one of the vilest and most subtle alliances which has ever stained and disgraced the pages of history?

In operating the plan which I have offered, there is one danger against which I must give a warning. Do not allow yourself in any case to be pushed on by a haughty, bitter spirit. While you must be uncompromising, be sure that you keep very humble. Go forward impelled by the elasticity of love—love for God, love for the right, love for the souls of those who are in error. The love which is like Christ's love is far more thorough and persevering than hatred or bitterness. Wesley says, "Although . . . God did use, at the time of the Reformation, some sour, overbearing, passionate men, yet he did not use them because they were such, but notwithstanding they were so. And there is no doubt he would have used them much more, had they been of an humbler and milder spirit."—(Journal, volume II., page 232).

May the ever-living, ever-loving, ever-conquering God be with you, to guide you, to strengthen you, and to give you the victory.

This article also is to be printed in tract form. Send for a supply, and scatter them along with the "Plan" in every society of the Methodist Episcopal church within your reach. Address me at SOUTH OIL CITY, VENANGO CO., PA. Please do not send stamps when you can possibly avoid it. Postal notes and money orders should be made payable to Oil City—not South Oil City. I am glad to be able to state that the price of the "Appeal to the Holy People in the Methodist Episcopal Church" has been reduced to one dollar per hundred. They may be obtained from me or from the publisher, Rev. B. T. Roberts, North Chili, Monroe Co., N. Y. This "Appeal" will help you to understand the "Plan." J. T. MICHAEL.

THREE WORDS OF STRENGTH.

There are three lessons I would write—
Three words as with a burning pen,
In tracings of eternal light,
Upon the hearts of men.

Have hope. Though clouds environ now,
And gladness hides her face in scorn,
Put thou the shadow from thy brow—
No night but hath its morn.

Have faith. Where'er thy bark is driven—
The calm's discord, the tempest's mirth—
Know this: God rules the hosts of heaven,
Th' inhabitants of earth.

Have love. Not love alone for one,
But man, as man, thy brother call,
And scatter, like the circling sun,
Thy charities on all.

Thus grave these lessons on thy soul—
Hope, Faith and Love—and thou shalt find
Strength when life's surges rudest roll,
Sight, when thou else wert blind.

—Schiller.

THE GOVERNMENT VERSUS OTHER CORPORATIONS.

BY REV. M. A. GAULT.

We often hear it said that there is little difference between our government as a corporation and any business corporation. It is true there are several points in which they are alike. Both are collective bodies. Both are organized bodies. Both are bodies having a continuous existence. Both have to some extent moral character and aims.

But there are several important points of difference. A corporation is entirely voluntary; that is, it is optional whether we enter it or not. But the government is relatively voluntary, that is, we are not at liberty to remain out of it if it recognizes the civil law of Christ as its supreme rule. If it recognizes any other standard as supreme, it is our duty to refuse to enter it. A corporation is only incidental to advancing civilization, while government is a necessity of human nature. A corporation is local and temporary, the government universal and permanent. A corporation cannot fine or imprison, or command men. It cannot put men to death, or call them to the battle field, but government can do all this when necessary, for it is clothed with authority. A corporation is a creature of the State, but a properly constituted government is a creature of God. A corporation is bound to recognize the authority of the State, but the government must own the authority of God.

A FEW THOUGHTS ON THE DRINK TRAFFIC.

BY J. F. AVERY.

The battle is the Lord's. Let us be strong in the consciousness of our strength, if God be for us; and surely he is. The Word declares no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven. How needful that we should remove the stumbling stones out of the way. For Time's records, with all their awful fullness, fail to tell how many perish eternally through the vice of intemperance, led into death and bondage by the power of strong drink. Who but God can count the tears of the bruised and helpless, for earth is full of woe and bitterness, the creation of strong drink's doing. "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord; I will repay"; and presently makers, vendors, and in fact all who help on the business of leading others into temptation, must give an account, and verily a just God must give them their reward, even if with a part of their unhallowed gains they build churches and support missions. Let us work and pray for the suppression and removal of strong drink and its destructive influence.

Should it be tolerated? What? Why, one of the most accursed and accursing businesses under the heavens. The process of wine-making and the drunkenness in connection therewith brought upon and into a good man's family an awful curse. Noah's is not the only name coupled with the curse and shame of intoxicating drinks. The pages of history, sacred and profane, are stained with records of bloodshed, filthiness, wretchedness, misery, and poverty, and all to be traced to the pleasureable madness, or rather, the idiotic debauchery and imbecility produced by tarrying long at the wine cup. More have been destroyed by mixed wines and the cunning concoctions of strong drink than human calculation can ever tell. Why is it that men make such fortunes in the manufacture and vending of intoxicating drink? Why are men so anxious to get and pay for a license to sell ails, whines and biers? Pardon me if I have given too liberal an interpretation of the signs of the trade. Why is it governments and corporations seem so eager and willing to grant "License to sell, and to be drunk on the premises," and off the premises, so long as the drink is paid for and the public peace is not outrageously interfered with?

Then the law comes down upon the poor drunken fool, who, after pouring down ales, wines, beers or spirituous liquors, as his purse, taste or inclination allows, until he is a maddened, senseless similitude of a man. Then after a night's lodging the law generally demands a fine of five dollars and costs. What for? Why? Is it to prove that the love of money is the root of all evil? We fear if the truth is told, it must be confessed. Men sacrifice their honor and better feelings as Judas did his Master, because they are greedy and have the bag. But alas, long ere this, experience should have taught all concerned in this business, and we would not exclude any who have aught to do in aiding or abetting the traffic, that when we give our vote for Barabas, it is useless for us to wash our hands as Pilate did, and declare we will have nothing to do with the result and responsibility. Who will try to answer the above suggested thoughts and questions? Herod did not desire the beheading of John the Baptist, but he set the machinery in operation, and today both Pilate and Herod stand in the list of men guilty of shedding innocent blood. "Tell me," said a gentleman to a poor drunkard, when urging him to give up the intoxicating cup, "where it was you took your first steps in this intemperate course." "At my father's table," replied the unhappy young man. "Before I left home to become a clerk, I had learned to love the drink that has ruined me. The first drop I ever tasted was handed me by my now broken-hearted mother."

The infidelity of working-men, says Rev. Charles Garrett, in nine cases out of ten comes out of the public-house.

Why not vote and work for Prohibition? Is not the blood-money poured into our municipal and national treasuries more than counterbalanced? First, by the crime, wretchedness and waste bred and created thereby, not only in the slums and brothels of our larger cities, but by the gross sin, gauntness and miserableness in almost every conceivable form which is known to exist almost everywhere where a license to sell is in force. The unhappiness is often veiled and hidden. The day must come when those who are responsible will reap, with groans and tears, some of the torments of hell, which they poured out on earth. The fire of intemperance which burned up so much of domestic happiness, and destroyed in so many homes and places the fair bloom of love, will, with the evil of the spirit horribly intensified, prove that their unhallowed gain was lost! Eternal soul loss! Secondly, it could easily be shown, and it has been shown in figures, that this creation of the nation's revenue and wealth is a veritable bubble. Yes, worse, a positive source of loss and waste, both of life and gold. Yet in spite of living evidences in our crowded tenements, hospitals, poor-houses, asylums, prisons and penitentiaries, the makers and sellers of intoxicating drink will push the sale and temptation of that which intoxicates.

He'll tell you you want it, the climate is damp,
If you would be healthy, to keep out of the cold;
To make you feel merry, to keep out the cramp;
Because you are young, or because you are old.

But the truth is, he wants all to take it, for he is greedy of gold.

Halifax, N. S.

SMOKING IN LODGE ROOMS.

It is neither right nor in good taste to smoke in the lodge or ante-room—especially during the session of the lodge. The brother who cannot refrain from indulging his taste for tobacco during a brief session of two or three hours must be indeed a sad slave of the "weed," and for his own good, even if he has no regard for the preferences of his brethren, he should inaugurate a personal reform. In a lodge of twenty or more members there will almost certainly be found at least a few who do not smoke themselves and who are more or less unpleasantly affected by having to sit in a room where others are smoking. Sometimes a man who does not himself smoke enjoys the perfume of tobacco, but generally the anti-smoker dislikes to be compelled to breathe a tobacco-laden atmosphere. These brothers have rights which those who do enjoy the practice ought by all means to respect.

The pipe and cigar should be laid aside during lodge hours, unless there is connected with the hall a side room especially dedicated to the smokers' use. Those who, in that case, desire to indulge in their favorite habit, can do so without compelling others to suffer therefrom.

G. E. D.

The above is clipped from the Eastern Good Templar, published in Boston, and is, of course, adressed to Good Templars. It is very charitable and "fraternal," but it is suggested that G. E. D. might have gone a little farther, and been equally consistent in adding the following:

There are also some weak-minded people who object to the flavor of gin and beer in the lodge room. Therefore, the gin bottle and beer pitcher should be laid aside during lodge hours, unless there is a side-room especially dedicated to the worship of alcohol and tobacco. A. D. W.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

John B. Finch, the head of the Good Templars, has issued a proclamation, by virtue of his position at the head of the National committee of the Prohibition party, in which he says: "Prohibitionists should help the Good Templars, W. C. T. U., Sons of Temperance, National Temperance Society and other organizations which are the primary schools of our party. Our work must be as broad as the reform." Mr. Finch may not intend it, but his statement will not endure examination before the mirror of truth. The W. C. T. U. is sandwiched between the two lodges, which is a false position. Those who believe in prohibition do co-operate with the W. C. T. U. and honor it; but they do not care to see the lodge standing by to steal such favors—of the National Temperance Society it is a pity that little can be said while it is under the control of the lodge. It is not true that these lodges are the primary schools of the party. If it was understood that the tactics or principles of the Prohibition party were borrowed from the lodge, Mr. Finch would directly find himself without any followers. It is true that "our work" should be as broad as the reform, and for that reason the Cynosure calls on the Good Templars and other temperance lodges to give up their secret worship and come out like men on Christ's side of this great reform.—Christian Cynosure.

The principle of prohibition was taught before the Good Templars or Sons came into existence, and open temperance organizations have existed all along beside the secret orders, which have been "primary schools of our party." Notably the United Kingdom Alliance and the League of Great Britain, the Band of Hope and the Catholic Total Abstinence societies. Anything that taught and practiced total abstinence has been a nursery and primary school of our party.

Doubtless the Good Templars and the Sons in most of our States and in England, were for some years the most active and general workers and disseminators of total abstinence and prohibition. And leading, thinking men of these orders and of the open societies graduated up to political party action, as the only real effective agency to make prohibition a success. They did so as individuals, not as societies.

But the W. C. T. U. is the only one of the societies named by Mr. Finch which has ever endorsed our party. The other societies have been teaching the alphabet and trying to save a few shipwrecked and wounded victims of rum all these years, and steadily and stupidly refused to help build light-houses and beacons and to use or countenance measures of prevention to save the world from the beginning of ruin.

When progressive men and women of these a b c primary schools have said. We have been ten, twenty, thirty years learning this alphabet and have known it perfectly so many years, can we not take a reading lesson? the smokers and half-reformed drinkers and the titled and salaried officials have given an emphatic "No. What used to be, is good enough; if we espouse anything new, it will endanger our order. Don't you know this is the grandest order the world has ever known?"

Thus putting the instrument above the cause, they have led people to ask whether such an instrument is worth maintaining after its usefulness is doubtful, and when its guns are so frequently pointed the same way as those of the dramsoph. James Russell Lowell aptly says:

"Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of Truth with Falsehood
For the good or evil side.
Some great cause, God's New Messiah,
Offering each the bloom or blight,
Puts the goats upon the left hand
And the sheep upon the right;
And the choice goes by for ever
'Twixt that darkness and that light."

When the choice was presented to the W. C. T. U. they chose the light and they live. The secret orders have chosen the darkness. And if the choice has not gone by for ever, it will soon, unless they obey forthwith the law of progress.—Censor, Los Angeles.

An association has been organized at Racine, Wis., with the object of erecting a monument to the memory of the Rev. Mr. Haddock, the prohibition martyr, of Sioux City, Iowa.

REFORM NEWS.

THE KNOXVILLE N. C. A. ANNIVERSARY,
DECEMBER 28 AND 29, 1886.

Who will pray? Who will attend, and who will send money to make this meeting a grand success?

Friends throughout the country will note that this is the first convention of the kind attempted in the South, and it ought to be the first in a series of meetings that will effect a radical change in the sentiment of the South on the lodge question.

You have read Bro. Hinman's reports with the deepest interest, and have noted with gratitude his cordial reception by religious leaders, and hearty welcome at many of the institutions of learning, with other tokens of favor indicating that this field is "ripe for the harvest."

Dr. Roy and Bro. Woodsmall, each furnished a list of personal acquaintances in the ministry, to whom I addressed letters, and received in most instances encouraging replies. With scarcely an exception the movement is hailed as a ray of light and harbinger of a better day, that will be heartily supported by the pulpits and personal efforts of these brethren.

Some have the means and will attend, but the larger part say, I will cheerfully give my time and best efforts to make the convention a success, but I have not money to pay my expenses. These brethren need help, and in helping them the cause will be strengthened at every point where they labor. It would be impracticable to give a list of these brethren, but any donations sent me at Knoxville, Tenn., or to W. I. Phillips at the Cynosure office, will be used as directed. Brethren and sisters, to whom the Lord has entrusted money, will you not remember this important convention with a donation such as you are able to give and the Lord will accept?

If possible, we want to have Pres. H. H. George, Pres. C. A. Blanchard, and others who will address the convention, speak at other pivotal points, where the thoughts-men and women of the present and immediate future are being educated. Bro. Hinman has "prepared the way" and done a grand work, and the people are ready and anxious to hear the truth. You can help this work, if you will, by your prayers and your contributions. If the convention succeeds it will give a forward impulse to the entire work South and North. Let us accept the duty, improve the opportunity, and look to God in faith for a victory that will give a new and grand inspiration along the whole line of conflict. J. P. STODDARD,
Secretary N. C. A.

THE LAST CALL FOR THE OHIO STATE CONVENTION.

CHILLICOTHE, O., Dec. 3rd, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have been especially impressed of late with the terrible way that justice is subverted in our court-houses. I heard the senior editor of the Cynosure once say, "It is getting so now that our criminal cases are not decided in our court-houses but in the brick halls that stand back of them." The more I see these cases tried the more I believe this to be correct.

In the village of Greenfield, Ohio, alone not less than three murderers may be seen walking the streets unguarded. A former mayor of this town laid wait for and in cold blood shot a citizen on his way home from work. After making the county a great expense by way of a trial he was turned loose, and afterward knocked a man into a cellar-way, nearly killing him, because he had objected to his being cleared.

To-day in this city a man by the name of Keys is having his second trial for the murder of two young men by the name of Taylor. Keys called the two young men out of their home, accused them of stealing from him, and shot them before they could return. He has been running at large all summer. His first trial cost the county $5,000, and there is no telling about the second. In addition to other costs one hundred men are subpoenaed as witnesses. I am told on good authority (and I should be thankful to anyone who can prove otherwise to do so) that all of these murderers are Masons.

With all this staring him in the face, a citizen of Greenfield, who had just been complaining about heavy taxes, said to me no longer ago than yesterday, that he did not know anything against Masonry. It did not hurt him any. Citizens of Greenfield, when will you unmask this hidden foe? Will it be after your lands are sold to pay taxes for mock trials, your friends murdered, and their murderers, like the gladiators of old, marching erect through the streets? Or are you disgusted with this kind of work? Then join those who will meet in the United Presbyterian church next Wednesday, Dec. 15th, at 10 o'clock, and assist them in forming plans to eradicate this terrible evil from our land.

Friends of the anti-secrecy cause in Ohio, what do you say about this convention? Will it be the best one ever held in our State? Is it worth your time and the little money it will cost to attend? Do you really mean what you say, when you say that both the church and state are being degraded and disgraced by the lodge? I believe you will answer these questions by your presence at this convention.

A grand list of men have volunteered to present the different phases of this question to us. Ample provision will be made for reduced R. R. fare and entertainment on your arrival. What is there to hinder your coming and making this meeting a power that will take the scales from thousands of eyes, and give our cause such an impetus that time only will reveal its results?

Don't forget to ask your station agent for a certificate stating that you pay full fare to the convention. If fifty or more certificates are presented, and there doubtless will be, you can return to your homes for one-third the regular fare. I had three thousand bills printed to-day to advertise. And those who would like them to send to friends or give notice in their county papers, will be furnished on application. Write at once. W. B. STODDARD, Greenfield, Ohio.

ALABAMA CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

The members of the Alabama Christian Association met at the Reformed Presbyterian church, Nov. 25, at 6 o'clock p. m. Rev. C. B. Curtis offered prayer, and Prof. James Pickens was chosen president pro tem. After remarks by H. H. Hinman, agent of the N. C. A. for the South, the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:

President: Prof. J. Pickens of Selma.
Vice Presidents: Prof. G. W. Andrews, Talladega; Dr. Jesse Ward, Partridge; Rev. F. G. Ragland, Mobile; Rev. Asher Curtis, Marion.
Secretary: Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.
Treasurer: Rev. C. B. Curtis, Selma.

The following were chosen delegates to the Knoxville convention: Prof. G. W. Andrews, Dr. Jesse Ward, Rev. F. G. Ragland, Rev. G. M. Elliott.

The following resolution was then presented and, after full discussion, adopted without dissent:

Resolved, That as members of the Alabama Christian Association we view with profound satisfaction the progress of the anti-secrecy reform in the South, and we pledge our best endeavors to awaken an earnest Christian sentiment against all forms of organized secretism.

A number of names were offered for membership and enrolled. Rev. G. M. Elliott consented to act as agent for the N. C. A. in Alabama, so far as consistent with his pastoral duties; and the Association adjourned to meet at the call of its officers.

H. H. HINMAN,
N. C. A. Agent for the South.

JOURNEYINGS IN ALABAMA.

The N. C. A. Agent highly appreciated at Selma.—Union Thanksgiving service.—Prosperity of Northern Alabama.—Rapid Growth of Birmingham.—Partridge the Banner town for St. John, and the lodges about dead.

SELMA, Ala., Nov. 25, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—My stay here has been most pleasant and I hope profitable, though most of the nights have been dark and rainy. I addressed by invitation the students of the Baptist Normal and Theological Institute, and on Sabbath preached three times, in the Congregational, the Tabernacle Baptist, and the St. Phillips St. Baptist churches, besides addressing the Sabbath-school in the Congregational church. In each of these discourses my theme was largely the evils and dangers of secretism. In all, the attendance and attention was good, and in the St. Phillips St. church, one of the largest of the city, the congregation was unusual. I had the sympathy and endorsement of the pastors, though one of them has been and is connected with the Masonic fraternity. On Monday night I lectured in the Congregational church and had a good meeting. By urgent request I remained over Thanksgiving day. Five congregations met in the Reformed Presbyterian church, and by request of the pastor, Rev. G. M. Elliott, I preached the sermon and had the five pastors in my congregation. The house was filled, and my remarks (which I hope to send you) were listened to with respectful attention. To-night we have a called meeting of the Alabama Christian Association, and to-morrow I go, D. V., to Warrior in Jefferson county, to spend a week, and then to Talladega. My health remains good, and I feel greatly blessed in the opportunities of the day.

WARRIOR, Ala., Nov. 29.—After my pleasant Thanksgiving at Selma, on the 26th I took leave of Pastor C. B. Curtis and his excellent wife who had so kindly entertained me during my stay in that city, and was soon gliding over the plains towards the hilly mining region of Northern Alabama. Here, more than anywhere else, have I found business activity, and villages of rapid growth. The great coal and iron region of Alabama is a vast and comparatively undeveloped source of wealth. Birmingham has sprung from a small village to a city of more than 30,000 inhabitants, and judging from the streets that are chopped out through the adjoining forest, it is certainly a city of great expectations. Numerous railroads are projected, and some being constructed, all having Birmingham as the point from which they radiate.

Warrior is a coal town, and like all these villages is made up largely of a foreign element. It is needless to say that all these mining towns are in the grip of the lodge. Not so with the surrounding country. There is much free thought and earnest protest against all political or lodge usurpation.

On the 26th I went out to Partridge, nine miles west of here, and stayed with our hospitable and indefatigable friend, Dr. Jesse Ward. Partridge precinct gave a majority for St. John in 1884, and they recognize him as their President. It has no saloon. Since I was here five years ago the Baptists have built a comfortable house of worship, almost within a stone's throw of Dr. Ward's. By invitation of the pastor, Elder J. W. McCreary, I preached there on Saturday and Sabbath, (27th and 28th.) In both, I gave reasons why we should "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness," but my last discourse was entirely on that theme. I had one Masonic minister to hear me, but nearly all others were sympathetic. Dr. Ward is in feeble health, but better than he has been. The people are raising larger crops of cotton and corn than formerly, and lodgism of all sorts is at a discount. I came in to-day and leave in a few minutes for Talladega.

TALLADEGA, Ala., Dec. 1.—Here again are the mountains looking grand and blue in the distance. Not quite so grand as where I last saw them in East Tennessee, yet a part of the same mountain system. Northern Alabama, which has until within a recent period had but little to recommend it, is to become, by reason of its iron and coal deposits, the wealthiest part of the State, and at present shows most signs of prosperity. The quantity of cotton and corn is steadily increasing, while stock raising is beginning to receive greater attention.

Talladega College, which is really a university, since it has normal, collegiate and theological departments, is doing a much needed and most excellent work. It has four fine buildings and at present over 300 students. Its able corps of teachers, under the presidency of Rev. H. S. De Forest, are doing a work that is most important to the future of the South. I have met a number of the graduates of Talladega, and have found none of them who is not opposed to secret societies.

To-day I visited the well conducted farm under the direction of Mr. Bishop, by whose excellent business management there is a gradual recuperation of the land, together with moderate profits. He has found stock raising profitable, and expects to enlarge that department of his business.

At 7 p. m., by request of the President, I addressed the students on the relations of secret societies to Christianity. I had a full attendance both of the faculty and students, and fixed attention. Dr. De Forest added most excellent arguments and exhortations, enforcing what had been said. Nowhere, unless it were at Wheaton, have I ever heard sounder or more earnest advice on this subject. To-morrow I go to Atlanta. H. H. HINMAN.

THE WORK IN WISCONSIN.

Lodge family affection.—Preaching and lecturing in Waukesha and Racine counties.—Thanksgiving at Waukeeshan.—Among Seventh-Day Baptists near Berlin.—The campaign drawing to a close.

EDITOR CYNOSURE.—Secret societies have a fellow-feeling for one another, as was exemplified in the effort made by some of the members of the Sons of Temperance lodge at Big Bend to prolong the secret session of the lodge on the evening of the 20th, so as to prevent me from delivering the lecture which I was announced to give on that occasion after the lodge should adjourn. And this effort to prevent me from speaking was made in spite of the fact that the address which I was announced to deliver was to be simply in favor of temperance, a reform which these objecting lodge members claim to have joined the lodge for the sake of promoting! How jealous many nursery-lodge children seem to be of the honor of the Masonic temple! But this temperance lodge at Big Bend has in it many good people who don't put lodgery first and temperance next, but who are real and earnest temperance people, and so I gave my lecture. On the 21st, I preached in the morning at Prospect Hill, in the afternoon at Big Bend, and in the evening in the Free Baptist church at Caldwell's Prairie, Racine Co. I trust that God is accomplishing some good through my preaching as well as through my lecturing.

Monday evening, 22nd, I lectured again at Big Bend, and Tuesday evening at Caldwell's Prairie. The weather was quite unfavorable on both these evenings, but the attendance, though small, was fully up to expectations. Tuesday evening the weather became quite cold, and so it has held to the present (29th). To the Griffins, Roses, father and mother Clark, and others of Big Bend, I am indebted for much kindness, as also to L. C. Ward and family of Caldwell's Prairie.

Wednesday evening, 24th, I attended a parlor meeting at the house of Dea. Hale at Prospect, at which I talked over the lodge question with the few friends present and answered many inquiries.

Thursday I walked to Waukesha, intending to take the noon train for Fond du Lac on my way to Berlin, but was compelled (providentially, perhaps) to wait. So I ate Thanksgiving dinner with Bro. S. E. Orvis, his daughter, Mrs. Walker, and her husband, workers from Racine, and Bro. J. Y. Wolf of Milwaukee, and at Bro. Wolf's request preached at the Free Methodist meeting at night, when some indicated their purpose to become Christians.

Friday, 26th, at 2 A. M., I started for Berlin, stopping briefly on the way at a Free Baptist quarterly meeting near Rosendale. Got to Berlin early in the evening and was met by Bro. H. F. Clark, who drove me four and a half miles south to the Seventh-day Baptist chapel, where we found an audience waiting, to whom I preached, taking occasion in the course of my sermon, as was expected, to expose the falsity of Masonry. Saturday morning I preached again at the same place, and lectured in the evening. Sabbath morning I preached in the Baptist church-house in Berlin, to good acceptance, and lectured again in the evening at the S. D. Baptist chapel. The weather has been unfavorable (snow-storm yesterday) and audiences somewhat small, but I have had good attention. To-night I am to lecture again at the S. D. Baptist chapel (there seems to be no opening in Berlin). From here I expect to go either to Rio or Coloma. As my time in Wisconsin is short (I expect to leave about Dec. 23), and there are several places at which I am expected to lecture, I must ask brethren to have work ready so that I may, as far as possible, preach twice in the day-time on Lord's day, and lecture every evening in the week. J. F. BROWN.

BRINGING IN THE KINGDOM IN IOWA.

Generous Helpers.—Lecturers Hawley and Gault Directing a Grand Campaign.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The meeting at Brush Creek, Fayette county, was a very encouraging success. The evening congregations were good. We discussed National Reform topics, the first two evenings. The last evening was specially devoted to showing the anti-Christian and infidel character of the secret lodge system.

We left some good friends when we departed from Brush Creek. Mr. Wm. Morley pays $42 to support our reform work, $25 to aid the circulation of the Christian Cynosure, and $25 to relieve the Western Crank from financial embarrassment. Mr. Morley certainly means business.

In a day session of this county meeting, Wm. Morley and Mrs. Morley, his wife, and pastor C. R. Hunt of West Union, were appointed to represent the Fayette County Christian Association in the coming Congress of Christians at Chicago, to convene February 22nd. They were authorized to add to their number by appointing any other suitable persons who would be willing to go at their own expense.

We have one man who seems determined to rival Mr. Morley in his contribution to the Iowa Christian Association reform work. I refer to the former agent of the Wisconsin Christian Association. He was at the Iowa State meeting at Birmingham. He has already paid $40 in cash, and we are on the first half of the year yet.

From Brush Creek I went to Masonville and spent the Sabbath with pastor Harrington, preaching at two of his three appointments to full congregations.

On Monday, Nov. 29, I went to Hopkinton, where Bro. M. A. Gault and myself had arranged to hold a reform convention. I arrived too late for the Monday night meeting, and was met at the station by Bro. Gault and pastor T. H. Acheson, who is the bishop of the Covenant church of Hopkinton. It is not long since Bro. Acheson was installed pastor.

He is a young man of promise. If the Covenanters have plenty of such boys, they will long retain their position in the front rank of reform.

Bro. Gault had preached two reform sermons on the Sabbath, and lectured on Monday night before I arrived, to large and deeply interested audiences. He is a master workman in the field of National Reform. I only wish that his labors could be multiplied a thousand fold.

I was pleasantly entertained at the house of Bro. H. M. Johnston. I began labor by lecturing at 3 P. M. on Tuesday; subject, "Masonry a Conspiracy against Civil Government." Bro. Gault followed with a stirring lecture on the demands of liberalism. In the evening I lectured to a large congregation, on the "Antagonism of Masonry and its kindred orders to the Gospel." At the conclusion of my lecture we gave an opportunity to the people to aid the Iowa Association in exposing the despotic and anti-Christian character of the secret lodge system, and in turning men from it to Christ. The response was prompt and liberal. Twelve new readers were secured for the Cynosure.

Friday, Dec. 1st, we left Hopkinton, for Quasqueton, in Buchanan county, to commence a three days' meeting there. Failing in our connections, we remain in Delaware to-night. Bro. Harrington will man the guns at Quasqueton this evening. Tomorrow, if the Lord will, we will be with him, and may the Master bless and give the victory.

C. F. HAWLEY.

MASONRY SEEN IN A NEW LIGHT.

BATAVIA, Ill.

I have much enjoyed my work for the past few weeks, "showing up" Masonry with my pictures; have always had large houses, often more than could be seated. At Crystal Lake I met several of the old veterans, where the subject of secret societies has not been much agitated of late years, and many of the young people are being drawn into the lodge. The meetings at Cortland were well attended, and I hope some good done. I had a very pleasant visit for an hour after my lecture last evening with a young Mason, who said he had been prejudiced in favor of Masonry by unkind attacks made upon Masons. He said, "There were many Masons here to-night who were here last evening; they liked your talk and would come again;" and, "this is the first time I have ever listened to an Anti-masonic lecture without getting 'boiling hot.' Am convinced that your way of showing up Masonry, not from a personal or one-sided standpoint, but by showing its origin and fundamental principles, will do more to keep people from going into it than ordinary lectures will." I think this a very candid admission for an adhering Mason to make, especially while he is in active sympathy with the lodge. He says he is going to study into the matter, and I hope he may be led to accept Christ instead of Masonry; and there is hope for him, as he subscribed for the Cynosure, and said he would read. Every Mason in the room except one took a sample copy of the Cynosure home to read. I. R. B. ARNOLD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NATIONAL REFORM IN OHIO.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I have read of a fabled carpet upon which if a man sat he would be transported to any part of the world. The railroad system realizes that dream. Two weeks ago I was in the heart of Alabama. Two weeks before on the green mountains of Vermont; now in Northern Ohio, and all from sitting on the velvet cushions of the easy-going passenger coach. The ship of state has recently been tossed on the waves of political excitement. By earthquakes, cyclones, railroad and marine disasters the hand of God has been touching her, and every timber groans. But still we would say to our Great Captain in the language of Seneca's pilot: "Oh! Neptune! you may save me if you will; you may sink me if you will; but whatever happen, I will keep my rudder true." The National Reform Association aims to teach this nation to "keep her rudder true." On last Thursday evening we spoke in the Cincinnati Y. M. C. A. hall. A goodly number of young men were present; the interest deepened to the end. This we regard as a rare opportunity. Such open doors should not be passed by. There are in this country and Canada 664 associations, 611 of which report an aggregate membership of 110,387, an average of 184. This is a field prepared for National Reform. The secretary, Geo. T. Howser, is doing a good work there. They have their plans and specifications for a new building. On Sabbath morning we preached in the Plymouth Congregational church, Youngstown, Rev. J. L. Davies, pastor. This is a new congregation organized in 1882. They have 130 members. Their new church building is a combination of beauty and usefulness. Bro. Davies' prayer at the close satisfied us that he is all right on National Reform. At noon and again in the evening we preached for the Reformed Presbyterian congregation. Prof. D. McAllister held their first communion two weeks ago. They propose buying a lot and building at once. On Monday morning we met with the Youngstown ministers in the Y. M. C. A. parlors. We were kindly allowed to call the attention of the brethren to our meeting that evening. Bro. Davies seconded us as follows: "I heard Bro. Foster on this subject in my own pulpit yesterday with great satisfaction, and wish to say, it is worthy of our attention and support. You will be repaid for attending the meeting." The lecture Monday evening was in Reading Room hall. If the size of the audience had been up to its quality it would have been immense. But all great reforms have been maintained and carried forward by minorities. The heavy rain kept many away. Rev. Patrick O'Connor, a convert from Rome, minister in the M. E. church and editor of the Christian Citizen, led in prayer. The subject was new to him. He heartily endorsed the sentiments expressed. On Tuesday evening we lectured in the Eighth St. Reformed Presbyterian church, Pittsburgh. Rev. J. S. Collins, of the United Presbyterian church, offered prayer. Prof. D. B. Willson spoke an encouraging word. He said: "This movement is sure of ultimate triumph. I do not see how any Christian can believe otherwise. I am reminded to-night that the cause has recently lost some of its ablest defenders. In the death of Prof. A. A. Hodge, of Princeton Theological Seminary, a great man has fallen among us. I can never forget a remark the Doctor made in a convention in this city, that opposition to this movement by professed Christians arises from 'confused minds and scared hearts.' That covers the whole ground." Prof. R. J. George referred to the power behind the movement. He had heard it asserted that if a single denomination should demand the abolition of the liquor traffic and be in earnest, it would be granted. The church is clothed with power from on high.

A few may accomplish great results. Rev. Torrence Boyd, of Ireland, was full of hope. This work is in line with the prophetic word, and God is in it. Dr. S. Collins had heard eight discourses at

(Continued on 12th page.)

EASTERN SIGHT-SEEING.

DADEVILLE, Mo.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—On the 25th of April last I started on a visiting tour to the East. Southeastern Ohio was my first objective point. Here I arose in life, in every sense of the word—literally, educationally and morally as well. I fought through the great anti-slavery struggle here; and from nineteen to forty-five my humble life was spent in the school-room as an educator of the young. No marvel that I was interested here. Twenty years absence, however, had made its mark of change.

From here I went to central Pennsylvania—the land of my nativity. Now towering evergreen mountains abound on every side. In vain would it be for me to attempt a description of nature here, or my feelings, in being permitted once more, after a lapse of more than half a century, to visit these objects of interest. To take the hand of school-mates of fifty-four years ago, is a matter of rather rare occurrence.

From here I go to the capital of our great Republic—my first visit to the place; and I would say, wondrous place in many respects. Its streets, avenues, parks, statues, fountains, cemeteries and a multitude of other things, to say nothing of museums and places of general attraction and interest, are grand and noble to a degree, that all I shall say in regard to them is, I simply invite others to go and see for themselves. Then the dignitaries of the place: the President and bride, Senators, Representatives, etc. A Douglass, a Pomeroy, and without the least favoritism, whatever, I will say right here, that Samuel C. Pomeroy, from my standpoint, is peer to any with whom I came in contact, whether in or out of office.

Bidding Washington adieu, I return via Harper's Ferry. Truly historic ground! Naturally, historically and morally. Here upon the 2d of December, 1859, a deed was consummated, that sealed the downfall of American slavery.

Niagara Falls! How can my futile pen depict a single characteristic that has not long since been exhausted? Great, grand, stupendous beyond conception, to say nothing of comparison; and yet, I must say, that they did not come up to what I had always imagined them to be. Up to the time I saw them, I always had before the mind, when contemplating this wonderful exhibition of Almighty Power, a rough, declivitous, or rather precipitous sort of country around about. But just the opposite of this are the facts. The extreme simplicity of the thing is wherein I was deceived. The whole affair considered from a purely natural standpoint is, a mighty river simply obeying the natural law of gravitation in tumbling over into a monster ditch that it meets at that particular point. And there is the whole of it. J. W. THOMPSON.

THE PROSPECTIVE CHRISTIAN CONGRESS.

I am rejoicing in hope of the proposed conference. The anti-secret cause has everything to hope from such a meeting.

Handling light is dangerous work to the cause of darkness, and when men of mark consent to take in hand the discussion of secretism, its empire will soon decline. It matters not on which side of the conflict men array themselves, honest, thorough discussion means death to these worse than heathen despotisms. When a score or two such men as are already committed to this conference join in the honest investigation of the subject in hand, lodge rats will fly to their "holes in the wall," or be mashed between the upper and the nether millstone of truth. I am glad to recognize one Baptist minister in the roll of great and earnest men brave and loyal enough to join this holy crusade against Satan's anointed. Hope there will be many more Giddons from the great army of Baptists.

For six consecutive years your humble correspondent, along with the veteran reformer now laid aside from active work by age and infirmity, the venerable and able A. L. Post, and the valiant and self-denying S. E. Miller, endeavored to induce the Abington and the Bridgewater Baptist associations to candidly discuss secretism in relation to the Redeemer's kingdom. The "crooked ways" resorted to by the leaders of these bodies are known. Tricks below the lowest political caucus were resorted to in order to keep honest discussion out. Despite these "fearful and unbelieving souls" secretism is doomed to discussion and ventilation, the "rough on rats" of lodgery. They well know that light means death to them. Let on the light of a million-candle power on this "Hell-gate" of ratery. How they will sigh for their holes in the wall! Masonic light, cover their consecrated heads. These sons of light are partial to Masonic light, found in darkened rooms at midnight. Give them more and better than they seek.

Allow me to suggest that this much-needed conference is most needed in the East, in New York, Boston, or in Philadelphia. Let these sons of light, for once, travel east in quest of real light. Let a respectful and earnest invitation be sent to the leaders of lodgery who dare to face discussion, to meet in this conference. If any of them accept, the more good will come out of it; if they refuse, it will recoil on their own cause. I am very expectant in view of this meeting. In a meeting of many of our great and good men we have hope; but in the triune God is the main hope. May his presence make the meeting a Christian Congress, indeed. To this end let us be "instant in prayer." Yours for the coming kingdom. NATHAN CALLENDER.

FROM A MOBILE PASTOR.

MOBILE, Ala., Nov. 27, 1886.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Somebody has sent me two copies of your paper which I like very well. The personal references to me in the article of Rev. H. H. Hinman (your agent) are misleading (I hope not intentionally) the public. I am a Master, yes, Past Master Mason. Now I don't believe that there is in this world nor the other a soul that can make me even think of forsaking it. If Rev. Hinman, or any other minister in good standing with his or their church, visits and wishes to preach in my pulpit they are at liberty to do so. If in the course of their discourse they can find anything to justify them in denouncing Masonry, let them do so. I believe in free speech. I am opposed to having lodge meetings of any kind on the Sabbath except for funerals. That is the only thing I dislike in societies. I don't fail to preach against that. Ask my congregation. The good brother reminds me of a member of my choir wading in water up to his knees yesterday as though looking for something, and when asked what it was, answered, "Nothing, only I expect to sing bass on Christmas day and I am trying to get a little hoarse." The members of my choir have been trying to get rid of him for some time. Come again, brother Hinman, you will meet a warm reception. You have said nothing that would make us do different to former treatment toward you. We simply wish to correct a mistake made by you.

Z. T. PEARSALL,
Pastor State St. A. M. E. Z. Church.

PITH AND POINT.

I. R. B. ARNOLD AT SYCAMORE.

Prof. I. R. B. Arnold exhibited his illustrations of heathen worship and its reproduction in the Masonic and other secret lodges to a crowded house last evening in the Free Methodist church of this place to the great instruction and gratification of the spectators. His accompanying lecture was listened to with marked attention. I heard, at the close of the exercises several influential men speak in the highest approval of both the beauty of the illustrations, their aptness to the subject of the lecture as well as the general information on the subject of ancient heathen mythology. We bid him God-speed in his worthy occupation.—J. L. WARD, St. Charles, Ill., Nov. 27, 1886.

A WORKER WITH A WELCOME.

I am yet alive, and by the good providence of God I hope to live until God shall overthrow the last vestige of the Secret Empire and send it back to its native hell. I am trying to find subscribers for the Cynosure for the last month or two. I have been taking the paper to the Y. M. C. A. reading room in our city and they seem to be very much pleased with it. I may yet find some friends of our cause. I wish when our lecturers are passing through to the East that they would call on me at Corry, Erie Co., Pa., and oblige—REV. J. S. AMIDON.

A CHEERING WORD FOR THE CYNOSURE.

Its value cannot be estimated in dollars and dimes. It "serves the present age" more fully than any periodical of which we (self and wife) have any knowledge. We are waiting with much solicitude to see an announcement of the time of the anticipated Christian Congress, and hope to attend if it is not deferred too long.—A. C. HAND, Chain Center, Minn.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON XII.—December 19, 1886.—The Great Invitation.—Rev. 22:3-21.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.—Rev. 7:15.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The Permanence of Character. vs. 8-12. The angels' answer to John brings out in a very striking light the oneness of all true co-workers with God. Saint or seraphim, a little child or the ruler of a nation, all are alike fellow servants. "Seal not the sayings," etc. We must understand by this language that Revelations was never intended to be an obscure book, but one of the most important in the canon of Scripture for warning, instruction and encouragement. They are Christ's last words to the church before his coming. They are meant for her comfort and cheer. "He that is unjust," etc. Character always tends to fixity. There is no sanctifying power in death. What we are in this life we shall be in the life to come. "My reward is with me," etc. While this was spoken primarily of the reward every Christian will receive at the judgment we need not confine the meaning entirely to the future. When a sinner opens his heart to Christ, he accepts with him all the blessings Christ can bestow. He never enters a soul empty-handed. His reward is always with him.

2. The Blessedness of Obedience. vs. 13-16. It is doing, not mere feeling that wins the blessing. While deeds are nothing that do not spring from love, mere emotions are less than nothing if they do not crystallize into action. "Without are dogs," etc. One great blessedness of the redeemed is that they are separated from those of opposite character. They are no longer doomed like righteous Lot to be vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked. "I, Jesus," etc. Revelations contains the parting counsels of Christ to his church, his last words ere he comes in glory and takes her unto himself, which is another reason why all Christians should make a deep, prayerful and loving study of its pages.

3. The Great Invitation. vs. 17-21. Not only the Spirit and the Bride say, Come, but every hearer of this gracious invitation is to pass it on to some one else. It is a great invitation not only because it invites to an eternity of unimagined bliss but because it invites every one. The Whosoever of the Gospel form a most clearly marked dividing line between the religion of Christ and every form of false worship. The heaven of paganism never writes Free Grace over its doorway. The Nirvana of Buddhism is open only to those who by great austerities and torturing penances have earned the rest of annihilation. The Masonic heaven, or as they phrase it "the Grand Lodge above," only takes in free white males who have faithfully practiced their Masonic duties; at the same time it grants free admittance to the very class the Christian heaven excludes, drunkards, profane swearers, infidels, and dissolute characters of all descriptions. This is taking away from the words of this prophecy. It is denying what God has solemnly affirmed. It is affirming what he has solemnly denied. His curse must rest on an institution which makes him a liar, and plays the part to men of the serpent to Eve by saying to them, "Thou shalt not surely die." "Even so come Lord Jesus." Though it be in the shock of judgment, in great national and social convulsions, every believing heart must respond "Amen." Take to thyself thy great power and reign, "for thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever."

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How did Solomon express the idea contained in verse 11? Eccles. 11:3, 1. c. Do all who work for Jesus receive their reward in the joy of the work? Is. 40:10; 62:11.

From U. P. Bible Teacher.

PRACTICAL.

1. The Triune God is the only proper object of worship.
2. Christ's faithful, humble servants enjoy the honor of being co-laborers with the angels.
3. God's word is not sealed; therefore it is our duty to seek to know its meaning.
4. Both the standing and character of everyone are being irreversibly fixed in this life.
5. God is writing on the fading and falling flowers, on our changing countenances, upon the shifting clouds, fit symbol of our changeable lives: "Be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."
6. It is the duty of all who hear the Gospel both to come to Jesus and invite others.
7. We should be extremely careful, both in expounding God's word and living it.

EMPHATIC POINTS.

"I John saw these things and heard them" (v. 8). And we are all ready to vote John the most fortunate man that ever lived. Such honor, such blessedness was never bestowed on any other man that lived. Happy John. And yet all this and more! awaits the first opening of the eyes of every saint on entering the eternal world. Your dear father died just two months or two years—or it matters not just how long—then for two months or two years he has not only been enjoying the vision of this blessedness but the reality of it. While you stood in an agony of grief at the bedside holding the cold, pulseless hand and closing the sightless eyes, the eye of his soul was feasting on the glories of heaven, while his hand was waving the victor's palm, and with a voice that had in it the ring of eternal youth and from a heart that felt the thrill of eternal bliss, he sang the new song. And yet you continue to weep. Weep not, "they are not dead but gone before."

"And he which is filthy, let him be filthy still" (v. 11). This is what took place at an examination of a class of theological students in a South Carolina Methodist Conference of colored Methodists in 1884: The Bishop—"Young man, do you use intoxicating liquors in any form?" First Student—"No, sir;" and so the question went around the class, every one giving the same answer—"No, sir." Bishop—"Young man, do you use tobacco in any form or shape?" Sensation, confusion, consternation followed this question. One answered, "no, sir;" another, "a little;" others used it "some." Bishop—"Young gentlemen, will you stop de use of tobacco if you are licensed by this Conference?" They hesitate. Bishop—"O, I knows what you thinkin' 'bout, you think: 'Now there is Brother A., and Elder B., and Deacon C.,—they all use tobacco.' Very true; but they have Scripture for it. The Bible says: 'Him that is filthy, let him be filthy still.' Yes, young man, they have Scripture for it, but you haven't. Will you quit the use ob tobacco?" They all agreed. Was the old Bishop's application of Scripture justifiable? The "filthy" part is correct, any way.

"Blessed are they that do his commandments" that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city (v. 14). Have you that right? Are you doing his commandments? That is the way to test your right. It is not belonging to the church, or being baptized, or going to Sabbath-school, but doing his commandments. Let us not deceive ourselves.

"For without are dogs and sorcerers," etc. (v. 15.). And that is the kind of society all who are shut out of heaven will get into. It has often occurred to me that if there were no hell but what our associates would make, it ought to be enough to drive a decent person mad to have the prospect of spending an eternity in it. How many very respectable people there are who would no more think of spending an hour with such characters than they would of running into a small pox or yellow fever infested district, and who are preparing to spend an eternity with just these awful characters! Oh, beware! There will be no choice of society in hell. In perdition the slaves are as good and as respectable as the representatives of the best families.

"Even so, come Lord Jesus" (v. 20). Can you join in that prayer? Come quickly. This is the last lesson of the year 1886. If it shall prove the last lesson you shall ever teach or recite, are you ready for that prayer? Looking back over the year's work, teacher, do you think if Jesus comes you will get the reward of the faithful? If he calls you who have enjoyed the advantages of another year for preparation for eternity, will he find you ready? Let us meditate on this closing petition, Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen.

OBITUARY.

Died, in Englewood, New Jersey, suddenly, Nov. 19th, of neuralgia of the heart, ELIZABETH WETMORE, beloved wife of Rev. George Barrell Cheever, aged 72 years.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. H. H. Hinman, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Iowa, C. F. Hawley, Wayne, Henry Co. Care Rev. Geo. Fry.
Illinois, I. R. B. Arnold, Wheaton.
Wisconsin, J. F. Browne.
Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Secceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Fridt, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Decatur, Mo.
T. S. Walter, Klt, Jay Co., Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Wheaton, Ill.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill.
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
J. H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
E. Barnetson, Haskinsville, Steuben Co., N. Y.
Wm. K. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Families are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming year. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We still send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian.....	$2.50
The American (Washington).....	3.50
New Rural.....	3.00
The Missionary Review.....	3.00
Christian Herald N. Y.....	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis).....	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly.....	3.90
New Witness.....	3.00
Union Signal.....	3.00
Christian Statesman (Phila.).....	3.50
The Interior.....	3.85
The Independent.....	4.25
The S. S. Times.....	3.50
Gospel in All Lands.....	3.50
The Nation.....	4.50
New York Tribune, Weekly.....	2.50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly.....	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean, Weekly.....	2.50
Harpers Magazine.....	4.75
North American Review.....	5.75
The Century.....	5.25
Scientific American.....	4.25
Birds and Blossoms.....	2.10
Penny.....	2.35
Vick's Magazine.....	2.50
American Agriculturist.....	2.60

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encamped and Rehearsed, including a profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate, with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred full-page illustrations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the Odd-Fellowship, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Book," furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of each jurisdiction, and is published in a large, elegant, and durable binding, cloth, 650 pp., $5.00. Paper cover, per dozen $4.00.

Orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 8, 1874.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy. 1884—J. Blanchard and J. A. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John F. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE

District of Columbia, E. D. Bailey; Alabama, Jesse Ward; Arkansas, Charles Paget; Connecticut, Philip Bacon; Delaware, F. F. Dempsey; Florida, J. P. Galloway; Illinois, J. N. Stratton; Indiana, Israel Hess; Iowa, J. N. Norris; Kansas, H. Curtis; Maine, J. S. Rice; Massachusetts, S. A. Pratt; Michigan, H. A. Day; Minnesota, E. J. Payne; Mississippi, E. T. Taylor; Nebraska, E. B. Graham; New York, F. W. Capwell; New Jersey, Robert Armstrong; New Hampshire, S. C. Kimball; Ohio, J. M. Scott; Pennsylvania, N. Callender; Rhode Island, A. M. Pratt; Tennessee, R. N. Countee; Vermont, F. F. French; Wisconsin, M. R. Britten.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and classiness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to the corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable.

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human law, and the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable. We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human law, and the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.

14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.

15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGE-KEEP.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disaffiliation and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhama Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.

First Congregational, Ames, Iowa.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.

Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.

Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Old Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.

Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Brownlee Church, Calcedonia, Miss.

Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.

West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonic, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopesville, Ill.; Emen, Ill.; Skykrewe, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Bolsburg, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, County, Mass. school houses near Lindenwood, Mrengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky.; Ustick, Ill.; Clarkburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

G. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.

A. D. ZARAPONTIS, Andros, Greece.

B. W. BARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one funds shall be sent.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin, Ohio. Published by Finney was a "Bible Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl. 2c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 50c; per dozen $5.00.

Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT.—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y and TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being upraised, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of _____ dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Rudbeck, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., E. C. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Uleh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Sec., Rec. Sec., H. W. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., James Harvey.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Torrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning Sr., Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Waseja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Atalson; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Atalson.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmont, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Rec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Morrill, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Rev. M. R. Smith, Painesville; Rec. Sec., Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Cor. Sec., Rev. A. M. Campbell, Cedarville; Treas., W. P. Clark, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Williamsport.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird, St. Johnsbury; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo. Cor. Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD.

EDITORS.

HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1886

OUR POLE STAR NEVER SETS.

THE CYNOSURE FOR 1887.

The readers who have welcomed our weekly visits for 1886 will be pleased to know something of the plans maturing for their benefit during the coming year.

The star beams of the Cynosure have shone upon the portraits and the characters of twelve noble men as the months of 1886 have passed: David Bernard, George W. Clark, John G. Fee, Charles C. Foote, John B. Gough, J. R. W. Sloane, George Thompson, Samuel D. Greene, Nathan Brown, Philo Carpenter, John Dougall, George F. Pentecost, and Charles Francis Adams—each a noble life, full of such excellencies as all should imitate.

We have in preparation biographies of other men as worthy, and fine portraits are already of such statesmen as:

SUMNER,

SEWARD,

WEBSTER,

GLADSTONE,

with HOWARD CROSBY, and BISHOP HAMLIN, and

"JOHN BROWN, OSSAWATOMIE BROWN."

The complete list we do not wish to promise, since the changes of the year will make calls that cannot be anticipated. But the biographical department will be as full and rich as ever.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED by "Great Men in the State," will be completed; and will be followed by the condemnations of "Great Men in the Church," of "the Public Press, and "Out of their own Mouth." The compilation of these extracts will involve prolonged and patient labor, but the work will be made as perfect as possible. A list of papers which oppose the lodge is also preparing. This is also requiring much examination.

The center of interest for the year will be in the Christian Congress. This meeting will receive the most careful attention of the Cynosure, and the most complete report may be expected in its columns. The development of the work in the South will also be closely followed, and in every possible way encouraged, as well as the lecture work in the several States.

NO GENUINE ANTI MASON

can afford to be without the Cynosure next year. The growing list of contributors and correspondents constantly invites companionship with some of the bravest and noblest men living. Look back over the list of hundreds who have written and you may justly dread even a short separation from their estimable company.

The Christian Cynosure will be, God willing, the paper for Christian reformers in 1887. Let it have the patronage of thousands to whom it is now a stranger.

The Iowa W. C. T. U. have voted unanimously, never to acknowledge as leader a woman who does not "wear the triple crown of Christianity, wifehood, and motherhood." This sneer at Miss Willard's single estate excels in meanness, malice, and bad taste, all that we ever heard or read from the pen or voice of woman. Surely corruptio optimi pessima—the best thing spoiled becomes the worst.

DR. McCOSH of Princeton College said to the writer in pleasant Scotch brogue: "If ye can chase secret societies out of colleges, ye'll do a good thing. We did it eight years ago." Since that time his students have increased from three or four hundred to six hundred as fine looking young men as we ever saw. We purpose an extended notice of Princeton and its men.

HUME, who, when told he was struck with death, called for cards and a game of whist, and joked about finding "old Charron's boat on this side the Styx," says of Cromwell in his history of England, that: "The long prayers which he said to his family in the morning, and again in the afternoon, consumed his time and that of his plowmen; and he reserved no time for his temporal affairs. (Vol. II, p. 419). This the strongest possible commendation of constancy in family prayers. Of all the men England ever produced, Cromwell excelled in "temporal affairs." No man ever overreached him in a bargain, even while marrying his daughters; and the "temporal affairs of three kingdoms owe, as this same Mr. Hume testifies, all their freedom to Cromwell and his Puritans.

"There is nothing so silly as cunning," said Canning, Premier of Great Britain. Mr. John B. Finch seems trying to be cunning. In the Parker House, Boston, he said to several Prohibitionists: "If the little secrecy there is in our temperance lodges keeps respectable people from voting with us, I am for giving it up." This is No. 1. Lately he said through an interviewer: "The Prohibitionists must help the Good Templars, Sons, etc. They are the primary schools of our party." This is No. 2. And now he comes out officially and calls on the Prohibition party to buttress and support the secret temperance lodges! J. N. Stearns, who, by the secret lodges, supplanted and cast out the noble Dr. Marsh, who was father of the National Temperance movement, is unpopular at Silver Lake Assembly, of which he is half owner. The people did not like to hear him. He was continually sifting in secretism. Is there no means of ridding the national temperance cause of these men until they rid themselves of their lodgery. That cause, which is ours, is suffering from them.

"I never knew a man who was bad fit for any purpose that was good. There is always some fatal flaw, some disqualifying ingredient which spoils the compound and unfits it for any useful purpose."—Edmund Burke.

"THE KNIGHTS IN DISTRESS."

Under this caption, the Inter Ocean gives another "Secret Circular" of Mr. Powderly calling for money to aid those turbulent and worthless strikers who are not permitted to return with their comrades to work with their old employers. Grand Master Powderly has a salary of five thousand dollars, and he calls on the men, from whom the strike took three millions of wages, to support such as are sifted out and not permitted to return to work.

On what ground, Mr. Powderly? Have you reduced the day to eight hours? No. Have you compelled the employers to take back the men whom they had dismissed? No.

Has your organization performed one promise to the dupes, who, charmed by secrecy, with their hands raised to heaven, pledged, as you say, by something "more sacred than an oath," to obey your behests? No! not one.

You called for money to support the "victimized," before the Richmond General Assembly; and you received "only about" fourteen thousand dollars. How much of that sum went for expenses of the Knights at Richmond, your secret (published) circular does not tell us; only that it was not enough to support in idleness those who were forbidden to work!

As Abolitionists, we used often to quote the words of Lord Brougham: "While men despise fraud, and loathe rapine, and abhor blood, they should forever reject with indignation the wild and guilty fantasy, that man can hold property in man." But here is a wilder fraud, a more loathsome rapine, and more abhorrent bloodshed began May 4 last, than the property-holding of man originated and set on. For it is religious fraud, religious rapine, and religious blood-shed! For false religious oaths and rites turn men to brutes more stupid than the white bears, which, when called out of their dens, and stabbed by the hunters, hug the spears which are goring their vitals.

WHAT ARE THE PROSPECTS?

If wholesale fraud and swindling imposition could open men's eyes, the lodge and liquor systems would have driven their dupes back to reason and temperance long ago. But they will not, for "Doubtless the pleasure is as great

Of being cheated as to cheat."

Half of the thousand men, who lately stood shivering in the cold, at the call of Gov. Oglesby, with guns loaded with shot cartridges at secret lodge-men, ordered by secret despots to quit work, will draw their pay from the State, and pay dues to secret lodges! And Americans look on, with the stupid stare of cattle in a slaughter yard, waiting for their turn to come.

When Ulysses in his wanderings, came to the islands of the Sirens, he saved his men from being bewitched by their strains by stopping their ears with wax, and saved himself by ordering his men to chain him to the mast of his ship. But when they came to the Island of Circe, that goddess turned his men to swine, and drove them, bristled and grunting, in to her sty.

The lodge is a Circe; and once penetrated by her witchcraft, men earning one and a half to four dollars a day, will, at her bidding, quit work and starve, or eat the bread that others earn, and curse the country which furnishes means to feed them in their idleness. But the lodge is not invulnerable. The principalities of Europe have, by turn, taken it by the throat, and strangled it for a time. The people of Mexico, as Wilson gives the history, after roasting, first on one side and then on the other by the Yorinkins and Escosces, as their Gautemozin was roasted on fire by the Spaniards, at last cried out in mass, "Down with secret societies,"—and down they went.

Nor should we forget the testimony of Rob. Morris in the digest of the Grand Lodge of Iowa, that 1,500 lodges in our own country were sunk by popular discussion; and 45,000 Masons "left their lodges to return to them no more." Lodges, like sneak-thieves and assassins, are cowards. But though like sneak-thieves they fly, like sneak-thieves they return when honest men are asleep. There is but one power which can cast these legions out, and bid them enter men no more. That is the power of Christ.

There is to be a convention the last of this month in Knoxville, Tenn., and a Congress of Christians in Chicago, Feb. 22d, next. Women properly hold prayer-meetings on election days, but no election ever called for prayer so loudly as these two meetings. The issue is Christ or Satan; all that is good against all that is bad. A barbarian wished Rome had but one neck, that he might sever it at a blow. The human race has but one rope, worship, which holds it to God and heaven and hope. That rope once cut, the devil has this globe of ours and drives its inhabitants to his, worse than Circian sty. There is neither the true God or perfect humanity, law or Gospel in a Masonic lodge.

There are at least a dozen or twenty different religious papers which are one against this evil; and a thousand which will favor these attempts to divorce Christianity, South and North, from secretism. Will not these papers unite in prayer to Almighty God, that he will shed light and truth on these Knoxville and Chicago religious conventions?

If Elder Prichard's committee will prepare a brief Christian Muezzin call to prayer, the Chicago press will publish it for these respectable Christian gentlemen; and as fire fell at the prayer of Moses, and "armies of aliens were put to flight by the prayer of Hezekiah, so if we pray to him, God will hear us and save us.

SOME HOPE OF MR. CLEVELAND.

Either President Cleveland is a wiser man than people have accounted, or he has the happy faculty of selecting wise advisers. One or two cases which have tested his independence of character, and his esteem for the dignity and honor of his high office must be noted. They give confidence that in the affairs of state he will be as prudent as in the social matters with which they were related.

When the President and his associates were lately invited to Richmond it was arranged that Mrs. Cleveland should accompany him, and a grand evening reception had been planned. But when word came that a daughter of Jeff. Davis would divide the honors of the occasion, Mr. Cleveland promptly decided to leave his wife at home, and sent word that he would forego the reception, and let the Southern worshippers of the ex-rebel chief say their worst. Miss Davis was born since the war and has no rebellion record, but she was to be the innocent agent of reviving the old secession spirit and adding an unworthy glow to the darkening sunset of her unrepentant father. The President saw the snare set for his feet and wisely kept out of it.

A most ludicrous scene transpired last week at the White House, which, as an exhibition of the shameless swagger and bullying presumption of Masonry, can hardly be paralleled. The following is from a Washington dispatch of Nov. 9th to the Daily News of this city. While we read we admire the respect of the President to his position as an American, and wonder what sort of a figure some of our Presidents, or Presidential candidates would have made before this strutting company of Knight Templar idiots:

"There was a funny scene at the White House today. A company of Knights Templar from Philadelphia arrived here this morning on an excursion, and at high noon, arrayed in the most resplendent uniforms, marched to the executive mansion, under the command of a knight who was very small in size but very large in importance. To the astonishment of the door-keepers they entered the vestibule in marching order, single file, with their hats on and their swords clanging on the tile floor. Into the east-room, without saying as much as 'By your leave,' they proceeded, and when the column was stretched across the southern end the little commander cried: 'Halt—front face—right dress.' Then calling one of the ushers, who were looking amazed at the proceedings, the commander exclaimed: 'Notify the President that we are here and would like to see him.' The usher explained that the President was busy on his message and would see no one, particularly at that time of day, which was an hour earlier than his public reception. The Lilliputian commander gave the usher a withering look of scorn, as if to say, 'What have I to do with thee, minion?' and, calling his orderly, sent him up stairs to inform the President that a commandery of Knights Templar from Philadelphia were drawn up in the eastroom awaiting his pleasure. The orderly soon returned from his errand with an answer similar to that the usher gave, and the little commander's face flushed. Calling his staff to a consultation, it was decided that he should go up himself and explain things. He saw Charley Loeffler, the President's usher, and tried to see Col. Lamont, but all he got was the information that the President was engaged and could not be disturbed if 1,000,000 Knights Templar from Philadelphia were waiting. The little commander blustered and bullied, but all in vain, and had to return crestfallen to his command, who were given the order to march, and started for the Corcoran Art Gallery, where they went through the same performance. One of the ushers at the White House insists that they expected the President would ask them all to stay to dinner."

N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

At a meeting regularly called last Saturday forenoon eight members of the National Board were present.

It was voted that the next National Anniversary be held in Knoxville, Tennessee, on the 28th and 29th of the present month. It was also voted to pay H. H. Hinman $25 for extra services in compiling the pamphlet, "Masonic Outrages."

The main business of the meeting was with financial matters, the acceptance and disposal of trust funds, collection and renewal of loans. These matters were not finished, and the Board adjourned to meet again in a week.

—The list of Baptist ministers in the Living Way, who are known to be opposed to lodgery, has grown to twenty-one. Let this list grow to the hundreds. Send Bro. Countee all the names possible.

—Secretary Stoddard accompanied by Mrs. Stoddard and her niece, Miss Rollins, start for Tennessee on the 13th to attend the National Convention. Bro. Stoddard turns off into Ohio to attend the State meeting at Greenfield.

—Bishop Milton Wright, who is caring for the United Brethren conferences on the Pacific slope, returned to Dayton, Ohio, the day before Thanksgiving. His home is yet in that city. Mrs. Wright has been for some time in feeble health.

—Bro. Hinman reached Atlanta, Georgia, Friday morning, and met there his first rebuff from the teachers of the American Missionary Association, one of whom is a Freemason. President Graves, however, of the Baptist Theological Seminary promised an opportunity to address the students of that institution.

—The Voice of New York, easily at the head of the strictly Prohibition organs, makes a new demand upon the popular favor it so largely and justly enjoys, by doubling its size and enlarging its type, at the same time adding some departments which will recommend it as a family paper, as well as leading press for a great movement.

—The Detroit Freemason is possessed of astonishing intelligence and editorial sagacity. "The first Grand Master of Masons was King Solomon," begins a leader in that paper last week. A little further on he tells of the inspection of the temple completed by Deputy Grand Master Hiram Abiff. By what right does the editor tamper with Masonic tradition? The same lodge lie that makes Solomon "Grand Master" has Hiram killed by three ruffians. Does the Detroit editor call up his ghost?

—Rev. N. R. Johnston, the devoted and esteemed Chinese missionary of Oakland, California, and correspondent of the Cynosure, reports in Our Banner an interesting visit to Jason and Owen Brown, and their sister, Mrs. Thompson, at the foot of the Sierra Madre mountains several miles north of Pasadena, a pleasure which the representative of the Cynosure enjoyed in May before in company with Bro. Bufkin and his estimable wife.

—Elder J. F. Browne is undaunted by the Wisconsin weather, which thus early in the season has run down to ten degrees below zero. His appointments for Wednesday and Thursday, the 8th and 9th, are at Rio, Columbia county, and vicinity; on the 10th at Mondovi; 11th and 12th at Menomonie; and from the 13th to the 16th in Richland county. Bro. Browne has pushed forward the work in Wisconsin by one of the best campaigns he ever made, or the State has ever experienced, and it is to be much regretted that we read of his purpose to return to Kentucky soon.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Congress meets Monday. When it convenes it will begin work on the Appropriation bills which keep the Government running. It will probably do little other work during the short session, for these money bills will keep it busy. They invariably give rise to volumes of debate, and it will be the same old story. The Forty-ninth Congress, like others that have preceded it, has been too lazy during the long, and too busy during the short session to answer any of the great questions before it. Indeed, the business of this great and growing country demands continuous sessions of Congress. With so much pressing legislation there should be no Congressional vacations, and the new Congress should convene the day after the old one expires.

Annual reports are rapidly coming in, and they contain a great deal of interesting information. That of Commodore Wilson, Chief of the Naval Bureau of Construction and Repair, is anything but complimentary to the navy of a great government. In a detailed description of the present condition of the new cruisers and other vessels, he says the number of serviceable naval vessels has been reduced to two first rate, ten second, twenty third rate, and seven fourth rate, including two torpedo rams. Thirteen ironclads and five other vessels are in need of repairs, and certain others that he names are even beyond repair.

Although the Washington Exposition project is not yet an assured fact, the much discussed National drill is. It will take place in this city, and will begin on the 23d of next May. Its objects are to stimulate proficiency in military matters and to bring together citizen soldiers from all over the country. The recent display made by the National Guards, at the dedication of the Bartholdi Statue, awakened new interest with citizen soldiery, and to this National camp around the Washington Monument. It is boasted that millions of people from all parts of the United States will come to view this drill.

Our Quaker friends and their numerous sympathizers shake the head at these preparations, which will, of course, in their ultimate effect tend to increase the popular desire for warlike parade and martial glory, and cultivate that military spirit which is the wisdom of our government to repress. Our public men are too slowly coming to the high ground taken by Sumner in his earliest great speech, July 4th, 1845, five years before he became Senator, on the True Grandeur of Nations, which was pronounced by Richard Cobden the noblest contribution by any modern writer to the cause of peace.

Early in December, and just about the time Congress gets into working shape, a convention of notables from the States and Territories will be held here to inaugurate the Exposition scheme and to agree upon a plan of procedure to submit to Congress. It has been urged by rival cities that the atmosphere of Washington is not suitable for either a summer or a winter exposition. Statistics prove that its inhabitants experience more pleasant days in the year than falls to the lot of most people anywhere. Autumn here lingers until December and spring begins in April. The winter is not severe, and summer is tempered by the shade of seventy thousand trees along streets from 100 to 150 feet in width. Washington, moreover, is the center of the nation's treasures and antiquities. It contains over fifty million dollars worth of national property, and it has all the conditions necessary to the success of the grand enterprise which is contemplated.

President Cleveland is represented to be in a state of anger and disgust over the outcome of the police investigation, that has stirred up the city during the past two weeks. The dismissed officials will probably appeal to Mr. Cleveland for redress, and in the event that he fails to take the matter up, they say they will go to Congress. It is stated by authority that those who would like to know the whole truth about this matter, the moving causes that have connected the President with the trouble, together with the insinuations against certain distinguished citizens and officers, will do well to insist upon a Congressional investigation of the police scandal. They will find the subject interwoven in a manner that will surprise politicians; but the lodges and saloons will make a strong fight for their favorites, and to conceal their hand in the matter.

THE SIXTEENTH NATIONAL CONVENTION.

TO BE HELD AT KNOXVILLE, TENN. DEC. 28TH AND 29TH, 1886.

Nearly three years have passed since the friends of our reform gathered at Washington City in National Convention. We have now another opportunity of meeting to greet each other as we come together from the various sections of our moral battle-field, to look in each other's faces, to clasp the hand, renew the zeal, encourage by experience, and increase the power, the faith and the efficiency of every soldier of Christ. The place is well chosen. For the first time the National Christian Association holds its convention in the South, where for several years the most remarkable victories have been gained for the truth we uphold. Nowhere in the North is the Cynosure more welcome; nowhere are our lecturers more eagerly heard; nowhere has there been more self-denial for Christ in this work; nowhere has the lodge lost more adherents than among the colored churches of the South. The churches and schools of the American Missionary Association are on God's side of this great question, the 800,000 Baptists are rapidly and happily joining them, and other churches must follow. The appointment of this meeting must be regarded as a great and providential opportunity for our work, to give it a new impulse in all the Southern States, where already the Prohibition cause is receiving greatest encouragement. We should keep pace with that movement.

Let, therefore, everyone, without regard to sectional lines turn toward Knoxville; and if it is not possible that your steps may go thither, let your prayers and offerings come up for a memorial before God, that a great blessing may come to all the land from this convention.

S. COLLINS, President.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, Secretary.

KNOXVILLE R. R. NOTICE.

Round trip tickets to Knoxville, Tenn., can be secured through W. I. Phillips at the Cynosure office for something less than $30. Much depends on the number going. Send your names to W. I. Phillips at once and you shall have first class accommodations and company at the lowest rates obtainable. This is your opportunity and time to go South and do something personally for those who have been set free in answer to your prayers.
J. P. STODDARD.

OHIO CONVENTION NOTICE.

The annual convention of the Ohio Christian Association will be held at Greenfield beginning at 10 A. M. Wednesday, the 15th of December, and continuing through Thursday, the 16th. Able representatives of the cause will be present to give instruction concerning the mysteries of the Secret Empire. We hope very many friends of the cause will be present. Let such as contemplate going watch carefully the reports of the State agent, W. B. Stoddard, and you will learn all that is needed concerning the speakers who are expected, how to reach the place of meeting, arrangements for entertainment, etc., etc.

H. R. SMITH, Pres.
S. A. GEORGE, Sec'y.

THE DUPAGE COUNTY (ILL.) ASSOCIATION will hold its annual meeting at Elmhurst, on Saturday, Dec. 18th, at 2 o'clock, in the chapel of the Pro-Seminary. Good speakers in English and German are engaged.

The government finds it almost impossible to get testimony against the murderers of the Rev. Mr. Haddock. This is generally ascribed to the terrorizing influence of the saloon power; and what that power, backed by its immense capital, is able to do in the way of fighting justice is yet to be seen. But very few people stop to think that there is an invisible hand behind the saloon which can throw dust in the eyes of judge and jury, and an intelligent public besides. Mr. Haddock was not a secret society man, and it has been discovered that many of the business men of Sioux city belonged to the Masonic lodge, and under its shield of secrecy deprecated, as they expressed it, "making such a fuss over the affair."—Conservator.

The agitators who have been over-officious in their attempts to commit the Knights of Labor to a socialistic policy and who have attempted to use the order for purposes outside of labor reform have evidently gone too far. When six assemblies in one State withdraw their charters, when other organizations, as much interested in labor reform as the Knights of Labor can be, decline to form alliances looking to the solidification of voters subject to the order of any central committee it may be assumed that the work of disintegration has begun. All class movements attract great attention for a time, and the hopes of the rank and file, the ambition of the leaders, and the scheming talent of the hangers on contribute to make the interest something like enthusiasm. But in a country where independent thinking is encouraged and where independent action is regarded as an adjunct of manliness it is almost impossible to bring even the uneducated under autocratic rule.

—Inter Ocean.

THE HOME.

CHRIST WITHIN.

Why wouldest thou teach my soul to rise,
And seek for Jesus in the skies?
Is he so far apart?
Are skies a better dwelling-place
Than man's celestial heart and face,
Made pure and bright with heavenly grace?
Oh, find him in thy heart.

Why wouldest thou teach my thirsty soul
To wait till death shall make it whole?
Is Christ so far away?
Oh, no! I see him now, and near;
In my own beating heart I hear
His throbbing life, his voice of cheer;
He turns my night to day.

Then cease thy looking here and there,
And first of all thy heart prepare,
By purity from sin;
And then, lit up with heaven's bright glow,
Thy soul of truth and love shall know
That heaven above is heaven below,
And Christ is found within.

—Prof. Thomas C. Upham.

THE BEST MONEY BAGS.

Jesus says provide for yourselves bags that do not wax old. A bag that does not wax old is one that will never fail to be sending in an income. There are men in heaven, saved by grace (as all are), who were rich while on earth. But all their money was invested in fine mansions and gardens and railroads and bank shares. When they had possession of them they failed to convert any part of them into the exchange of heaven, and now they get no more good from them. Ask him, "Oh, saint, are you getting in anything now from your investments down there?" He will tell you, "Nothing whatever; the interest is all paid in the coin of earth, and that is not transmissible; I ought to have seen to that when I had a chance; I cannot do it now."

Very different is it with the saints who have given money to help save men from death, whether the amounts be large or small. Look for example at the favored ones who founded such schools as Wellesley and Vassar, and put up such buildings as Crosby Hall and a dozen others, or who in some wise way have invested their property with a view to results in another world. Ask them, "Are you getting any income from your investment down there?" "Oh, yes; a wonderful income. There is a continual stream of persons coming in here who were started heavenward, or were helped on their way by those investments. They are beginning to come up out of all lands and tribes and kindreds and tongues." These earthly investments pay dividends in heaven. They are bags that wax not old.

Do all this as a part of your present work. Tell them to remember who it was that gave himself for them; who it was that told them to lay up treasure in heaven. Bid them remember Paul's charge to men of means that they be rich in good works, laying up in store for themselves a good foundation (a good deposit—themelion) against the time to come that they may lay hold on life which is life indeed; that is, that having treasure laid up in heaven it will be more easy to get their hearts there. "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." And so, brethren, give yourselves to God, and lifting up your hands to him, say, "O Lord, here am I—take me! Take me and use me to promote thy glory and the glory of my blessed Lord." —Selected.

DEBT AND HEALTH.

A western newspaper very reasonably affirms that one's condition of health or disease depends upon his pecuniary state. To insure health, so far as human effort can control the matter, one should, above all, be cheerful, contented, and calm. You cannot do this if you intentionally or unintentionally incur debt, for debt is embarrassing and painfully annoying. No person of the least pride or self-respect can possibly be comfortable if in debt. Debt is something that cannot always be avoided, although it never fails to produce in persons of principle an amount of mental worry that is absolutely distressing. Mental tension, pecuniary trouble, is one of the chief causes of insanity. Men struggle for a competency because they, especially those not far removed from poverty, fear poverty, not for themselves, but for others. A father will suffer more in the thought that his wife and daughter may be left penniless than he will if the family physician tells him that the wife has an incurable cancer, and may die any moment, or that the daughter will be crippled for life. He prefers even this to the thought that she may be forced to manual labor. It is true that poverty in our artificial state of society involves all the miseries—hunger, overwork, humiliation, and sickness, yet we can hardly understand why men should not choose them all, rather than sickness and physical suffering. The man who commits suicide from pecuniary troubles is, nine times in ten, found to be one who is overworked or who has raged secretly or openly at the apparent injustice involved in work that brings no return, or who, haunted by fear of poverty, has lived beyond his income, incurred annoying debts and takes his life to escape the consequent misery and mental agony. Nothing overturns the mental balance so surely as a long-continued sense of injustice or long-continued debt, and nothing is so frequent a cause for suicide. Hope springs eternal in the human breast, but in the matter of money making years of non-success kill hope and destroy mental vigor and bodily health. No other form of misery produces the same impression as financial wrong. To be a healthy man, learn to bear cheerfully the misfortune as well as the good fortune of life. Therefore, the mental requirements of the laws of health are cheerfulness, contentment and calmness, and that man live within his income, however small. —Phrenological Journal.

A GENUINE LOVE STORY.

This story was originally told by Spurgeon. A young clergyman and his bride were invited guests at a large party given by a wealthy parishioner. In all the freshness and elegance of the bridal wardrobe the young wife shone among the throng, distinguished by her comeliness and vivacity and rich attire; and when, during the evening, her young husband drew her aside and whispered to her that she was the most beautiful woman in all the company, and that his heart was bursting with pride and love for her, she thought herself the happiest wife in the world. Ten years later the same husband and wife were guests at the same house, where were gathered a similar gay company. The wife of ten years ago wore the same dress she had worn on the previous occasion; and, of course, it had been altered and re-made, and was old-fashioned and almost shabby. Toil and care and motherhood and pinched circumstances had taken the roses out of her cheeks and the lithe spring out of her form. She sat apart from the crowd, care worn and preoccupied. Her small hands, roughened with coarse toil, were ungloved, for the minister's salary was painfully small. A little apart the ten-year husband stood and looked at his wife, and as he observed her faded dress and weary attitude, a great sense of all her patient, loving faithfulness came over his heart. Looking up, she caught his earnest gaze and noticed that his eyes were filled with tears. She rose and went to him, her questioning eyes mutely asked for an explanation of his emotion; and when he tenderly took her hand, and placing it upon his arm, led her away from the crowd, and told her how he had been thinking of her as she looked ten years before, when she was a bride, and how much more precious she was to him now, and how much more beautiful, for all her shabby dress and roughened hands, and how he appreciated all her sacrifice and patient toil for him and their children, a great wave of happiness filled her heart, and light shone in her face that gave it more than youthful beauty, and in all the company there was not so happy a couple as this husband and wife, their hearts and faces aglow from the flaming up of pure sentiment that transfigured and ennobled and glorified all the toil and privations they have endured.

HOW TO ACCOUNT FOR JESUS CHRIST.

He is not to be accounted for by any spiritual Darwinism, by any possible process of development. Do what you will with his character, you cannot bring him into line with his predecessors, whether Jewish or Gentile, or with the culture or standard of his age. These eighteen centuries of progress have not brought the advanced guard of humanity up to him. We can trace the rudiments of other pre-eminent characters, and show whence and how they grew. There is no human or earthly accounting for him. The character of Christ as portrayed in the Gospels is the highest possible evidence of their authenticity. It is a character, which, without an original, could not have been conceived by the evangelists; one for which they had neither the materials within their reach, nor the genius or culture requisite for its invention. As an actual character, it could not by any possibility have been formed by antecedent or surrounding influences. It was not a natural development; for human virtue has not yet developed up to its standard. Its human side cannot possibly be authentic, unless its divine side be equally authentic.—Dr. A. P. Peabody, Lectures for 1874.

LIVES OF CELEBRATED MEN.

MARTIN LUTHER.

Martin Luther, the great Reformer, was born at Eisleben, in Germany, November 10, 1483. His parents were Hans and Margaret Luther, hard working and humble peasants. As Luther by his birth was a man of the people, so he continued by his work to remain a man for the people and of the people. His doctrines are eminently suitable for plain, honest and earnest men and women, and the character which he gave to the Lutheran Church is like his own.

Luther's home-life was that of a boy in a religious and strict household. No offences were overlooked; no faults allowed to go unpunished. It may have lacked in sweetness and love, but if it did, we must remember that the Christian religion then lacked that which develops the purest and sweetest home-life—the full appreciation of the Gospel. When we contrast Luther's own household life with that of his father's household, we see exactly the difference between a Gospel life and the legal spirit which prevailed before the Reformation.

Luther's parents were very willing to make sacrifices for him in order that he might receive an education and rise to a better position in life than they themselves occupied. They believed fully in education, and did not think their son could have too much of it. They sent him to the best schools they could afford, aiding him as far as they could, until he reached the college or university itself.

Luther did all he could to aid himself, also. He was obliged to beg for food at times while a student. He found friends, however, and assistance, and showed himself worthy of them, and so retained them. It was during these student days that he came upon a copy of the Scriptures, and that serious and earnest thought about his spiritual life came upon him. People often complain that young men are ruined in character while at college. A fair examination of the matter will show that many more are ruined who go elsewhere to trades, into stores, and the like. It will be found, also, that a great many have been turned to nobler thoughts and a Christian life. It will be seen, also, that of those said to be ruined at college, the larger part were spoiled by a lack of good training at home before they came.

From a want of sufficient knowledge of the Gospel, Luther was impelled to enter a monastery as the only way to save his soul. He gave up all his prospects of worldly advance, and, much to the sorrow and disappointment of his father, became a monk. If any man ever tried to find peace of soul and union with God by fastings and scourgings, and penances, Luther did. But he found none, and, indeed, might have died in anguish of soul had not a pious old monk directed him to the love of God, and the comforting thoughts expressed in the Apostles' Creed.

Subsequently Luther became a teacher in the University of Wittenberg; a preacher, or doctor, of the Scriptures, and was led on from step to step to grasp and apply the great and blessed truth that our faith in Christ, and not our good works, saves us. Just then a shameful trade was carried on in "indulgences," or pardons sold for sins that were to be committed, as well as those that had been done. Luther was aroused by this; preached against it, and at last published a statement in short sentences, called theses, October 31, 1517, which he nailed up at the church door, so that whoever did not accept them might challenge him to a debate upon them, as the custom then was.

This was the beginning of the Reformation. It led to great excitement and discussion far and wide. Luther was summoned to answer for these theses, and appeared at last at a great gathering, or "diet," at Worms, (1521). It was here, in the presence of emperor and princes and dignitaries of the Church, that he declared his faith, and refused to depart from it. "Here I stand," he cried; "I cannot do otherwise; God help me. Amen." From Worms Luther went to the Wartburg, a castle, where he was hidden from his enemies, who would have slain him. Here he translated the Bible into German, and wrote various works.

He returned again to Wittenberg, where he continued his labors, protected by the Elector Frederick from his foes. Meanwhile the Reformation went on, and those who believed the teachings of the Gospel increased. Finally, June 25th, 1530, in another grand diet of the German Empire, held at Augsburg, Luther's teachings were presented by the princes and cities which confessed them. This is called the Augsburg Confession, and is the statement of what Lutherans believe that God's Word teaches.

Seeing in what ignorance of the Gospel men were, Luther wrote a book of instruction to be used in teaching them, and especially their children; this is called Luther's Catechism, and is still used by the Lutherans for this purpose. Luther's translation of the Bible is still in use among all who read and speak the German language.

Luther died February 18th, 1546, full of honors, beloved of all who knew him, hated by none save his enemies who were such because of the doctrines he taught. Solemnly and sadly he was borne to his grave, and buried at Wittenberg, where his dust awaits the resurrection of the just.—Church Messenger.

TELLING FORTUNES.

"Be not among wine-bibbers, among riotous eaters of flesh; for the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty, and drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags." (Prov. 23: 20, 21.)

I'll tell you two fortunes, my fine little lad,
For you to accept or refuse;
The one of them good, the other one bad;
Now hear them, and say which you choose.

I see by my gifts, within reach of your hand,
A fortune right fair to behold;
A house and a hundred good acres of land,
With harvest fields yellow as gold.

I see a great orchard, with boughs hanging down
With apples, green, russet, and red;
I see droves of cattle, some white and some brown
But all of them sleek and well fed.

I see droves of swallows about the barn-door,
See the fanning-mill whirling so fast;
I see them threshing wheat on the floor—
And now the bright picture has past!

And I see rising dismally up in the place
Of the beautiful house and the land,
A man with a fiery-red nose on his face,
And a little brown jug in his hand!

Oh, if you beheld him, my lad, you would wish
That he was less wretched to see;
For his boot-tops they gap like the mouth of a fish,
And his trousers are out at the knee!

In walking he staggers, now this way, now that,
And his eyes stand out like a bug's;
And he wears an old coat, and a battered-in hat,
And I think that the fault is the jug's.

For the text says the drunkard shall come to be poor,
And that drowsiness clothes men with rags,
And he doesn't look much like a man, I am sure,
Who has honest hard cash in his bags.

Now, which will you have? To be thrifty and snug,
And to be right side up with your dish;
Or go with your eyes like the eyes of a bug,
And your shoes like the mouth of a fish?

—Alice Cary.

THE MOLE AND THE ROBIN.

A mole, who had been hunting earth-worms all day, stopped at the door of his long, dark tunnel, and listened to the evening song of the robin. The bird was perched upon a clump of golden-rod, close by the mole's run, whistling notes of praise.

"Who are you?" asked the mole.

"I am robin redbreast," was the answer; "one of the great bird family."

"You sing very sweetly," said the mole.

"Ah! that is nothing," the robin replied. "Have you never heard the morning concert of the birds, Mr. Mole?"

"Concert! I know of no such thing," was the mole's response.

"You surprise me!" exclaimed the redbreast. "How can you have lived so long in these parts, and not have heard the morning praise of the birds? You have much to learn, I assure you. Why, the air and trees are full of birds, who float and sing in the early sunlight, and soar away into the heavens. Our mother earth has many other beautiful things; there are gay flowers of many colors and sweet fragrance; there are green grass, waving boughs and luscious fruits; there are blue skies, golden, white, and rosy clouds, nodding forests, sloping hills, and myriads of painted insects sporting in the sun. But there is nothing fairer to my eyes than the birds, the beautiful birds!"

So saying, robin flew to the very top of the golden-rod, and as he rocked back and forth whistled loudly the notes of his song.

"What are you saying?" cried the mole. "I do not believe it! There are no such things as those you tell of. Flowers and clouds, forsooth! Insects, forests and concerts of birds—it is incredible! I never saw them, I never heard them, and I am an old mole, and am counted a wise one, too; for I have burrowed long and far, with scientific skill, beneath the ground."

"Dear me!" whistled the robin, merrily. "That is no proof at all; for earth has a life more lovely and wonderful above its surface than beneath."

"Nay, nay!" laughed the mole, scornfully. "I have burrowed all my life, and know and affirm that earth produces nothing but fishing-worms!"

"Poor, blind mole!" said the robin, and flew away toward the setting-sun.

"Poor, deluded bird!" squeaked the mole, and ran back into his burrow.—Henry C. M. Cook.

TEMPERANCE.

RUM AND WAGE-EARNERS.

Fourteen States have Bureaus of Statistics of Labor, the oldest being that of Massachusetts, which, under the management of a statistician of ability and experience, the Hon. Carroll D. Wright, has contributed immensely to the facilities for the study of various social and industrial problems. The Massachusetts Bureau was established in 1869; but the bureaus in six of the fourteen States date from 1883 and 1884. It is to be hoped that other States will establish bureaus at as early a day as possible. It costs but little comparatively to sustain them; and the facts and statistics which they can gather, arrange and print in annual reports would be of incalculable value to legislators, and to all students of social and economical questions. Much of the legislation which is being put upon the statute-books deals either directly or indirectly with such questions, and is too often based upon unsupported theories rather than well-ascertained facts. No State can really afford to be without a Bureau of Statistics of Labor and Industry.

We have been looking over the seventh annual report of the New Jersey Bureau of Statistics of Labor and Industries, and have been specially impressed with a chapter concerning the condition of wage earners, and how it can be improved. The chapter is made up of passages of letters of individual workmen and others, and is very interesting as well as instructive. Various industries are represented, much information is given, and not a few striking suggestions are offered. Rum appears in a large number of cases as the fruitful cause of material, physical, social and moral deterioration, and prohibition, total abstinence, local option and moderation are named as the most efficient remedies, according to the personal view of the writer. We quote some of the sentences, first as to the cause:

"Whisky and beer are the great obstacles here."
"Intemperance is the cause of very much wretchedness in our families."

"The greatest evil is strong drink."
"Our morals here are low on account of rum."
"Many of the hands drink to excess."
"The liquor traffic has a bad effect on our trade."
"Strong drink injures a great many of us."
"Morality would be good except for drunkenness."
"Too large a portion of our wages go to the sellers of rum and beer."

"Drunkenness is the bane of the working classes."
"Many of our men love beer more than their families."
"Drink is the workman's curse."

"Tobacco and liquor are a great injury."
"Except for beer and whisky, we are very moral."

"Rum does much to lower us."
"Workmen drink too much for their own good."

"Rum and beer are our great enemies."
"Our condition is much lower than it should be. This results principally from the use of liquor and from ignorance."

"Much immorality—whisky is at the bottom."
"Ignorance and intemperance are the chief causes which prevent us from improving."

"Intemperance is the great vice of the painters."

As to remedy the following suggestions are made:

"Laws prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquor would improve the workmen's condition."

"Local option has improved our condition."

"A prohibitory law would do much for our improvement."

"The liquor traffic has a bad effect on trade; prohibition would do good."

"Prohibition is needed."

"Should drink less."

"Total abstinence."

"Men should not spend so much time in saloons."

"We must have a prohibitory law before our condition is much bettered."

"The shoemakers of Newark must have a better organization if they are ever to improve; also less breweries and saloons."

"What is wanted is that men should drink less and keep better hours."

"Better education and legal prohibition of the sale of liquors."

"Do not believe in prohibition entirely, but think that many workmen would be better off if we had it."

"When rum has been banished there will be some hope."

"We should also support and encourage each other to resist the evils of drink."

"Abolish rum and tobacco."

"Prohibition both of tobacco and liquor would benefit us."

"Prohibition is about the only thing which will elevate workmen."

These passages are from representatives of various trades, and from various localities. They are selected from numerous replies, every passage representing an individual. The views are those of the average intelligent workman. They ask to be delivered from the curse. The New Jersey Assembly has now before it the Local Option bill passed by the Senate. The Assembly will be false to the interests of honest labor as well as to all other worthy considerations if it rejects this bill.—N. Y. Independent.

LIKE A BURNING OVEN.

When Axel Gustafson, the author of "The Foundation of Death," returned a few days since to England, the Society for the Study and Cure of Inebriety, Dr. Norman Kerr, president, held a reception to give him welcome. In reply to their cordial greeting Mr. Gustafson said:

"I found the United States like a burning oven, for I have never seen so much excitement in my life on the drink question as to-day there is in America. For my part I am quite clear of this, that in a few years it will be impossible for anyone to get a glass of beer or whisky in that country. It is a political agitation as well as a moral and legal one, and there is no antagonism between them; they all work together."

The reason that the United States is "like a burning oven," on this temperance question is twofold. First, because the question has been driven straight into politics, where every man that casts a ballot or takes any interest in elections is forced to see it and think about it. Second, we have not tried the impossible feat of awakening a great moral uprising on a half way policy. Men may talk about high license or local option; but we must have a wave of moral enthusiasm, and compromises never occasion such waves.—Voice.

"I have fought under the flag of that grand old 'party of moral idea' in all its glorious battles, as my great-grandfather fought under Washington through the Revolution, and as his great-grandfather fought King Philip for the salvation of infant New England. But not the scalping Indian, nor the oppressive Briton, nor the pro-slavery rebellion, nor all of them combined, were so dangerous a foe to America and mankind as is the rum-colossus of to-day. New England was saved, independence was secured, the Union was saved. The next war is to save America as a whole from the Gorgon rum. And now I am in for that campaign with seven generations of fighting blood boiling-hot in me. This . . . is the logical result of all my antecedents, hereditary and personal. I was born an Abolitionist and Prohibitionist, and mean to make my 'calling and election sure' for both."—Geo. L. Taylor.

The laboring classes of the city of Chicago and the town of Lake spend $12,000,000 annually for liquors—$1,000,000 a month.

Peter Carey, aged 9, who lived with his parents at Holyoke, Mass., came home drunk the other day, and was so severely beaten by his father that he died next day. The affair has caused much excitement.

A boycott without precedent has been instituted in Chattanooga, Tenn., against the business men in the congregation of Rev. J. C. Rankin, one of the leading ministers of that city, who has been making war on the saloons. It is the infuriated liquor-sellers who are doing it; he having personally investigated and exposed their evil deeds.

The prohibitionists will be glad to know that Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky Company has failed and dragged down with it a hotel containing a bar, and likewise that Bourbon county, Kentucky, has been carried by the Prohibition party.—N. Y. Advertiser.

A proposition from the liquor dealers is a notification to the hop and malt growers in the interior of New York State, that unless they support candidates for the Assembly favorable to the liquor dealers' interests, the latter will buy no more supplies from them. This is carrying business into politics with a vengeance.

If four-fifths of all the crime and wretchedness of our community comes from the saloon, and the saloon can be closed by the ballot, who will say that our responsibility is not measured by our ability? The only question to be settled now, is. How soon will the people be aroused to their personal responsibility for the existence of this monster vice?

LITERATURE.

"ARBITRATION BETWEEN LABOR AND CAPITAL." By Hon. Daniel J. Ryan, of Portsmouth, Ohio. Price $1. For sale by "The Age of Steel," St. Louis, Missouri.

We have examined this book with some care, and regard it as a most valuable treatise on this phase of the Labor Question. While the work is without parade of learning, and makes no pretensions to a high order of literary merit, yet it contains many good thoughts and suggestions.

The author argues with much skill and ability the failure and fallacy of strikes, and the advantages of arbitration as a means of settling disputes between Labor and Capital. His line of argument, in substance, is about as follows:

1. Strikes have failed to accomplish what the workingman demands, although they have given him partial relief.

2. Their enormous cost in wages thrown away has proven that no good that comes from them is worth the price paid.

3. Their demoralizing effect, generally culminating in lawlessness and at times in bloodshed, antagonizes public opinion to the just claims of labor.

4. Their arbitrary management, which creates a general idleness in a trade when the irritation is local, is clearly unjust.

5. They lead to an unjust distribution of wages, by making the uniform rates of wages established apply to the indolent and unskillful as well as to the industrious and efficient workman.

6. That arbitration is the better policy; that it has none of these evils; that it makes equity the essential element in the settlement of labor disputes; that it is submission to the influence of reason instead of a contest between physical endurance and financial strength; and that it is the only rational method consistent with the welfare of society.

The author maintains these positions with much skill and ability. His work is evidently the result of patient investigation and comprehensive study. We heartily commend the book to all who wish a clear and comprehensive treatment of the subject in a small compass.

B. W. WILLIAMS.

Weatherford, Texas, Nov. 26, 1886.

The opening articles of the December Century are on Lincoln's youthful idol, Henry Clay. His home at Ashland is described by Charles W. Coleman, Jr., and reminiscences are contributed by his friend, political opponent and executor, J. O. Harrison, Esq. Three portraits of Clay are given. The second part of the Lincoln biography deals with "Lincoln as Soldier, Lawyer and Politician." The characteristics of the future President are clearly distinguished in the young man—his humor, his pluck, his simplicity, his homely resources, above all, his devotion to principle. The style of the history is buoyant, spirited and entertaining, and shows a good sense of proportion and a carefulness that inspires confidence. The narrative is brought down to the close of Lincoln's "pioneer period" and into the first years of his legislative experience, including events which first gave him prominence as a legislator and a politician. "The Food Question in America and Europe" by Edward Atkinson is a suggestive study of a most practical subject, the victualing question as related to labor and wages, the comparison being greatly in favor of the United States. A curious article is "A Little Millerite," by Mrs. Jane Marsh Parker, being reminiscences of Millerism in 1843 and 1844, the time set for the end of the world. A portrait of William Miller, the leader of the "Ascensionists," is given, together with a contemporary pictorial chart of "Daniel's Visions," by which the date of "the last day" was demonstrated. The topic in the War Series is "The Second Day at Gettysburg," by Generals Henry J. Hunt and E. M. Law, the latter with special regard to "Round Top and the Confederate Right." Altogether this is one of the greatest numbers the Century has ever issued.

The Library Magazine has undertaken weekly visits, remaining at the very low price of $1.00 per year. Among the titles of special interest in some late numbers are: "Egyptian Divine Myths," "The Recent Volcanic Eruption in New Zealand," "Higher Education of Woman," "Historical Sketch of the Jews since the Destruction of Jerusalem," "The Week of Seven Days."

F. H. Revell of this city has published "Prophetic Studies of the International Prophetic Conference" upon the near coming of the Lord: its literal and personal character; the development of the Antichrist; the first resurrection; the Jews and their future; predicted judgments; the millennium; and kindred topics and events; together with their practical application as an incentive to evangelistic and mission work and personal consecration; being the report of the Int. Prophetic Conference held in Chicago, November, 1886, and containing papers, addresses, etc. May be had at this office. Price 50c and $1.00

Pocket Lessons for Sunday Schools is a handy arrangement of the next year's Sabbath school lessons—designed to be a pocket companion all the year round. The type is clear and readable; proper names are divided into syllables and accented; and while the King James version is followed in the text the principal changes of the revision are given in the foot-notes. For teachers' memoranda, a special interleaved edition has been prepared at a slight additional cost. For sale by dealers in Sunday-school supplies at 10 cts.

As an exponent of what is freshest and of most importance in matters pertaining to the Old Testament, we commend the Old Testament Student. The December number will be especially welcome to students of the Bible who are looking for aids to the study of Genesis. It contains papers by Dr. J. A. Smith on "Religion as an Element of Civilization," by Dr. R. V. Foster on "Hebrew Prophets and Prophecy," and by Dr. G. H. Schodde on "The Literary Problem of Genesis 1 to 3"; Notes on the Sunday-school Lessons by Dr. Willis J. Beecher, and a "Book-Study," by the editor, Dr. Harper, of Genesis 1 to 11, as bearing particularly on that part of the Bible which will be studied in the Sunday-schools next month.

St. Nicholas for the month has a striking and entertaining article on "How a Great Battle Panorama is Made." It is written by Theodore R. Davis who was interested in the production of the great Mission Ridge panorama in Chicago and it is copiously illustrated with sketches by the author, and with reproductions of photographs. The entire process of producing the marvelous effects obtained is described so as to be easily understood. "The Bamberg Boys and their flock of Sheep," by J. T. Trowbridge, is a short story that may be usefully suggested to the farmer boys.

(Continued from 5th page.)

Ocean Grove last summer, by men of different denominations, and they were all full of National Reform principles, although the name was not mentioned. The heaven is working. Many fear it will lead to an establishment of religion. Such persons fail to distinguish between religion as a principle, and religion as an organized worshipping society. The state must not establish the latter. It cannot live without the former.

Wednesday evening we lectured before the Normal school at Canfield, Ohio. A number of the towns people came in. The chapel was full. Better attention could not be given. President Webster called the meeting to order. Prof. Dixon, D.D., pastor of the Presbyterian church of that place, led in prayer. We had spoken on this platform last August, and so some things could be taken for granted. The president leaves the door wide open for us whenever we can return. Dr. Dixon is one of the few grand good men in whose fellowship one's soul is refreshed.

On Thursday morning we preached in the N. Jackson Reformed Presbyterian church. The storm lessened our audience. It would be unjust not to mention the fact that Messrs. John and Alexander Ewing drove us eighteen miles through the mud and snow to meet another appointment. They were successful. Such Covenanters are unacquainted with the word failure. That evening we lectured in the New Bedford United Presbyterian church, Rev. H. S. Boyd, pastor. This is the most modern church building we have spoken in yet. The evening was stormy and cold. We were surprised that so many came out. Drs. Sloane and Milligan once carried on a two days' debate in this place on the subject, and Secretary Coleman lectured here recently; the people knew what it was. Bro. Boyd gave us a hearty endorsement. He believed all we said; and was struck with the remark, that man cannot make a law; he can only discover and interpret God's law, and apply it to the wants of human society.

On Friday evening we lectured in the Mahoning United Presbyterian church, Rev. A. P. Hutchison, pastor. This brother is one of the "first three mighties." He is sound to the core. His name in this neighborhood is as ointment poured forth. The last two meetings were arranged by W. D. Beggs, one of Bro. Hutchison's elders, a man whose zeal in this cause is a pillar of fire in this community. We should be derelict if we failed to mention the efficient work done in the Youngstown Y. M. C. A. by their secretary, W. H. Wagner, although we run the risk of using too many names in this letter; for, as Coleridge says, "Unfamiliar names are non-conductors—they destroy the interest." Yours,

J. M. FOSTER.

Youngstown, O., Nov. 27, 1886.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The thanksgiving sermon of Elder J. L. Barlow in the College Chapel, Wheaton, was voted to be printed by the congregation, and it appears in the Wheaton Illinoian of last week.

—Rev. A. J. Chittenden of the College church, Wheaton, has been called suddenly to the side of a sick brother in Boulder, Colorado.

—There has been a quiet but blessed interest in religion among the students of Wheaton College during the whole fall term. Quite a number of conversions have resulted, and a large daily noon prayer meeting has been maintained. Special meetings have been held in the Wesleyan church of the place for two weeks, and a number are seeking Christ, or have found him the life, the truth and the way.

—Bro. William F. Davis, the evangelist from Chelsea, Mass., after a brief visit to the lumber regions in the vicinity of Manistee, Mich., with a Bro. Penney, who has come on from Pennsylvania to aid in the work, returned last Thursday to Chicago on his way to begin a union meeting at Racine, where we pray his labors may be abundantly blessed of God.

—Bro. Marsh of the Chicago South Side Free Methodist church reports a gracious revival in his church. Many are seeking the Lord with all the heart.

—Dr. R. M. Hatfield, of Chicago, has been secured to supply the pulpit of the Summerfield Methodist Episcopal church, Brooklyn, left vacant by the acceptance of a call to a Congregational church by the Rev. I. J. Lanseng. Dr. Hatfield will give up his agency of Northwestern University at Evanston, to take up pulpit duties anew.

—A minister of the Sandusky [United Brethren] conference writes us that they have five Odd-fellows in their ministry now. Two of them were taken into the conference as Odd-fellows, and three have joined the Odd-fellows since entering the ministry. They have also G. A. R. preachers. So the Commission is producing its legitimate fruits there, in subordination and violation of the constitution. We find that members of secret societies in the church are the most zealous advocates of the Commission. It is their shield and protection.—Conservator.

—A better report is that of Bro. Shaw of the Michigan Holiness Record, who went to Parmelee, Mich., to hold meetings some time since in the United Brethren church. He says: "We found the church here standing in many respects on radical ground. The following conditions were contained in their conditions of subscriptions and donations for their new church recently built: 'There shall be no instrumental music, no festivals of any kind, no donations or Christmas trees. Lectures on moral reform and singing schools are to be allowed when conducted by a religious person in a religious manner, but no one who is a member of a secret society will be allowed to occupy the pulpit.'" That means thorough work.

—An Anti-Atheistic Society has been organized among the young men of the French Universities, founded on the broadest basis, so as to include Roman Catholics and Protestants. This society should be strongly Anti-masonic as Masonry is atheistic in Europe.

—At the eighth Synod of the Old Catholics in Austria, it was resolved to request the British and Foreign Bible Society to supply the body with Bibles.

—Colonel Robert Lincoln has presented to the Lincoln Memorial Protestant Episcopal church of Chicago President Lincoln's Bible, which he frequently read while in the White House.

—The Supreme Court of Massachusetts has just confirmed, in the case of Frank Dextra, of Worcester, the previous decision of the Superior Court that the keeping a barber's shop open on the Lord's day is a criminal offence.

—The International Lesson Committee has issued a plan for 1888. The first six months are given to a continuation of Matthew's Gospel and the last six months to Old Testament lessons, running to the book of Ruth inclusive. Texts for temperance and missionary lessons are suggested for the last Sunday of each quarter, in addition to the ordinary suggestion for review.

—By the provisions of the will of the late Margaretta S. Lewis, a wealthy Philadelphian, some $200,000 are to be donated to religious and charitable enterprises. Thomas Hill, a colored citizen of Austin, Texas, recently deceased, left $30,000 to different churches and colleges for his race.

—The fourteenth anniversary of the foundation of Jerry McAuley's Water Street Mission in New York city was celebrated Nov. 21. There were meetings in the afternoon and evening at which General Clinton B. Fisk presided. Addresses were made by R. Fulton Cutting, the Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst, the Rev. Henry T. Satterlee, J. F. Shorey, former superintendent of the mission, and Trustee James Talcott. Superintendent Hadley spoke of the present work of the mission.

—A series of farewell services to a body of missionaries who sailed last Thursday for Bishop William Taylor's mission in the Congo region were held in the Central Methodist Episcopal church, New York, one on the Sabbath, two more were held on Monday, two on Tuesday, and two on Wednesday. The lack of a steamboat has been much felt in the Upper Congo, and at Bishop Taylor's request the Transit and Building Fund Society here has undertaken to get one.

LODGE NOTES.

The Grand Jury in Plymouth, Mass., indicted Peter McGeech, of Lynn, and William Boker, of Salem, for conspiring against the firm of Charles Harrington & Co. The defendants, representing the Knights of Labor, came to Plymouth and ordered out the men employed by F. M. Emery, boot and shoe dealer, until Emery agreed not to use Harrington's leather. The case is without a precedent in the New England States.

The Superior of the Oblate Fathers of Montreal has announced that no Knight of Labor will be allowed to partake of the sacrament.

The Knights of Labor in Detroit have boycotted the beer of five breweries in that city. The owners are trying to prosecute for conspiracy.

A "general convention" of the Fenian Brotherhood was held in New York lately. Their sole business seems to have been the dismissal of O'Donovan Rossa from the leadership.

At Memphis, Tenn., a thief named Jones, a colored preacher, is under arrest for swindling as Grand Supreme Agent of the Sons and Daughters of Jacob. He has formed a number of lodges and farms them assiduously for dues which fill his pockets.

The vote of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers on joining the Knights of Labor shows a heavy majority against the scheme. This society which is secret, has also refused to take any part in the convention of national and international trade unions to be held in Columbus, O., this week.

The great strike of the tanners and curriers of Peabody and Salem, Mass., which began on July 12 with a demand that fifty-nine hours constitute a week's work, was officially ended by the Knights of Labor Nov. 28. The surrender was most complete, every point at issue being yielded, but it comes too late to be of much service to the strikers, the great body of whom have not only lost their places, but will now lose even the pittance they have been receiving during the strike from the district assembly of the Knights of Labor. They ask to be permitted to return to work at the old terms, but, except in the case of a few skilled men, this is now impossible, as the tanners have long been running with non-union men, and the manufacturers will adhere strictly to the plan mapped out in the first place, and refuse to place themselves in the hands of the Knights.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Nov. 29 to Dec. 4 inclusive:

H. Holt, S. I. White, Mrs. E. A. Yerkes, A. S. Boyd, Mrs. E. Brooks, W. Culbertson, W. A. Hyle, H. G. Judson, M. Shay, S. Beseker, M. E. Brown, G. L. Frizell, A. Whitmore, J. C. Ferguson, E. F. McCloskey, S. Rowley, R. P. Downing, J. McCone, S. Snyder, G. B. Starkweather, A. C. Staples, A. F. Ternell, G. D. Mark, J. A. Reley, S. G. Crocker, W. F. Davis, J. Ball, J. B. Bennett, J. H. Sedgwick, J. P. Donahoe, J. P. Pinkerton, R. Fry, D. Scham, R. Platt, A. Ooon, J. Finney, J. Thyme, S. Beatty, B. Cornwell Sr, A. Kingsbury.

D. NEEDHAM'S SONS
116 and 118 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.
Red Clover Blossoms
and Fluid and Solid Extracts of the Blossoms. BEST BLOOD PURIFIER. Known Cures Cancer, Catarrh, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Whooping Cough, Constipation, Piles, etc. Send for circular. Mention the "Cynosure."

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.
Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS
OF
MORGAN MONUMENT.
20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

OUR PARTNERS.

There are hundreds of places where only one Cynosure is taken. If the subscription list is enlarged in these places, it must be done by our resident partners. If you need the enthusiasm of a crowd to enable you to push the Cynosure successfully, think of the companies and battalions of workers situated just as you are, and fighting the same kind of a fight. You are one of a battalion! God grant you victory in the good work, and at least one new subscriber from each post office.

A GENEROUS OFFER!

Four Entertaining Books
GIVEN AWAY.

To each subscriber for the CYNOSURE who sends in a $2.00 subscription for one year in advance on or before

JANUARY 1st, 1887.

See Special Offer Below.

GEN. O. O. HOWARD, The Salient Characteristics and Leading Events of His Life, illustrating his Career as a Christian Soldier. By Laura C. Holloway. 12 mo, 325 pp., paper.

OUT OF EGYPT. Bible Readings on the Book of Exodus. By George F. Pentecost, D. D. 12mo, 214 pp., paper.

"To him who wishes a spicy, lively set of notes on the events of Exodus, both readable and attractive, this book will be most acceptable."—Louisville Christian Advocate.

"Many fresh, interesting thoughts are to be found on almost every page."—Toronto Globe.

WYCLIFFE. Patriot and Reformer. "The Morning Star of the Reformation." By John Laird Wilson. 12mo, 247 pp., paper.

"This is the fullest, fairest, most accurate and most connected memoir of the great reformer of reformers to be found anywhere within the compass of so small a volume. Nothing essential is omitted, and scarcely anything extraneous is permitted to take its appearance. The author has used his authorities with an independent judgment, and has never allowed himself to be seduced into the merely pictorial."—William M. Taylor, D. D.

WORKING PEOPLE AND THEIR EMPLOYERS. By Washington Gladden. 12mo, 241 pp., paper.

"This book we cordially commend. It is sound and economic in principle and Christian in spirit."—N. Y. Examiner.

Special Offer.

To any one who will send us $2.00, the subscription price of the CYNOSURE, on or before January 1st, 1887, we will send the paper one year and THE ABOVE FOUR BOOKS FREE! The retail price of the books alone, in paper, is $1.00; in cloth, $4.00. Don't miss the chance! Accept quickly!

Berea College History

PP. 87, CLOTH, 40 CENTS.

The establishment of a College for the education of colored children and the white children of the mountaineers in a slave State at a time when the whole country was shaken by the discussion of abolition, was a sublime act of faith in God who "hath made of one blood all nations of men."

This is what REV. JOHN G. FEE did at Berea, Ky., and the friends of reform cannot spend 40 cents better than to send for this

HISTORY OF PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY, of faith tried, and of precious deliverances that read like a chapter from the book of Daniel.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	75 3/4
No. 3.....	72
Winter No 2.....	80
Corn—No. 2.....	37 1/2
Oats—No. 2.....	28 @ 31
Rye—No. 2.....	11 @ 34
Branner ton.....	10 @ 00
Flour.....	2 00 @ 5 00
Hay—Timothy.....	7 75 @ 10 00
Mess pork per bbl.....	10 @ 8 90
Butter, medium to best.....	16 @ 27
Cheese.....	10 @ 11 1/2
Beans.....	10 @ 1 50
Eggs.....	17 @ 20
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 75 @ 1 79
Flax.....	02 @ 91 1/2
Broom corn.....	30 @ 42
Potatoes.....	30 @ 42
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	06 1/2 @ 14
Lumber—Common.....	11 00 @ 18 00
Wool.....	11 @ 33
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 00 @ 4 75
Common to good.....	3 75
Hogs.....	2 75 @ 4 20
Sheep.....	1 65 @ 4 35

NEW YORK.

Flour.....	3 20 @ 5 50
Wheat—Winter.....	85 @ 94
Spring.....	87 @ 94
Corn.....	46 @ 50
Oats.....	35 @ 42 1/2
Mess Pork.....	10 00 @ 11 00
Eggs.....	25 @ 25
Butter.....	12 @ 29
Wool.....	13 @ 37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	2 25 @ 4 50
Hogs.....	3 70 @ 4 00
Sheep.....	1 50 @ 3 25

The Christian's Secret
OF
A Happy Life.
28th THOUSAND.

Baptist Commendation.
"I am delighted with this book. It reaches to the core of Christian experience, and is eminent and important in its teaching. It meets the doubts and difficulties of conscientious seekers after the truth and water of life, but whose efforts have often in alternate failure and victory. The author, without claiming to be a theologian, sends out the results of a happy and happy life, and help others into a happy Christian life."—Baptist Weekly.

Presbyterian Endorsement.
"The book is so truly and reverently devout in its spirit that it demands criticism. It contains so much that is sound and practical, so much that, if needed, will make our lives better, happier and more useful; that the intelligent reader who really wishes to lead a life 'hid with Christ in God' can scarcely fail to derive profit from its perusal."—Interchurch Telegraph.

Methodist Word of Praise.
"We have not for years read a book with more depth and profit. It is not a theological book. No effort is made to change the theological views of any one. The author has a rich experience, and tells it in a plain and delightful manner."—Christian Advocate.

United Brethren's Approval.
"We have seldom met with a more interesting volume, abounding throughout with any illustrations; we have failed to find a dry line from title-page to note."—Religious Telescope.

Congregational Comment.
"It contains much clear, pungent, reasoning and interesting incident. It is a practical and experimental lesson taught of God's word, and is worthy of universal circulation."—Church Union.

This enlarged edition is a beautiful large 12mo volume of 240 pages.

Price, in cloth, richly stamped, 75 cts.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform
Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of
George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Mental Gymnastics;

OR Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;
THE STUDENT, His Lessons;
THE BUSINESS MAN, His Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:

"The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young."—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

"I cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject."—INTERIOR.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's memory resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions for the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR ILLUSTRATED.

"ADELPHON KRUPPTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE
"UNWRITTEN WORK"

AND AN
Historical Sketch of the Order.

Price 25 Cents.
For Sale by NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO.

SONGS
FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED
CHOICE AND SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS,
ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—Jo(—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY
TO TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to
HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and
MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
22 W. Madison Street Chicago.

Suggestive Outline

BIBLE STUDIES
AND
BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,
Author (with S. S. Riggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as

George F. Pentecost, A. J. Gordon,
Horatius Bonar, William Lincoln,
Henry Morehouse, J. H. Vincent,
George C. Needham, Chas. M. Whiteley,
D. L. Moody, R. C. Morris,
D. W. Whittle, L. W. Munnell,
J. H. Brooks, Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY

candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MOR-

GAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece, illustrating the capture of the monument, is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canadian jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only authorizes his name to the letter, but ATTACKS HIS OPPONENT.

In closing his letter he writes: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the 'Anti-Masonic excitement' by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influence of 'secret societies.'"

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 6 cents.

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar

LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.

Revised Old-fellowship, the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.

"Freemasonry Illustrated," the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.

"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies," a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sawyer, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Preses. George and Blanchard

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOME HINTS.

INTERFERENCE IN PARENTAL MANAGEMENT.

Not the least of the trials that the mother has to contend with is outside interference. It begins before the baby comes, and says, "If I were you I would" and "If I were you I wouldn't," with wearying chatter which has the form but lacks the spirit of advice. Also it says, not infrequently, "Do you dare do that?" with a disapproving emphasis quite indescribable. After the nurse has gone, and the mother, distrustful of herself, and often weak and disturbed by fears, takes up the sweet burden of care and goes about what will therefore be an unceasing duty then begins, "Don't you feed your baby anything?" "Do you rock her?" "Does he sleep with you?" "Don't you dress it too warmly?" and so on indefinitely. A more serious thing is the meddling with the mother's manner of discipline. While the mother, alas! is not infallible here, it is better that she make mistakes than that she be by others moved from that course of action which she believes is for her child's good. The intelligent, conscientious mother will probably find her way through her mistakes to better thinking and wiser ways. There are plenty of unthinking people who do not hesitate to remonstrate, and suggest, and make excuses for the childish delinquent in the presence of the little offender. A child out visiting is perhaps cautioned by parents not to touch certain articles of adornment; instantly the hostess says: "Why, let him have it. You can take it if you want it, dear!" The embarrassed mother will need nerve if she insists he can not have it, when insisting may seem ungracious. Again, at meals it is often a fact that she must combat the pleadings of every individual at the table if she decides to deny her child some article which he would like, but which she feels would be hurtful. Illustrations might be multiplied. Ordinarily no one but a parent knows a child from first to last, and what that child's needs as to indulgence and discipline are. Except in rare instances no outsider has any right to attempt to influence a parent's decisions. Unobtrusively as may be, but above all firmly, parents should exercise the privilege which is theirs by divine right, of doing for and by their own what seems to them good.—Babyhood.

ROUGH HANDLING OF CHILDREN.

In passing along the streets of cities, and even of our country towns, one often sees distressing cases of rough handling of children. A tiny child, hardly large enough to walk, was lifted on a ferry-boat the other day by one arm, and swung over an obstruction, with the remark, "Here, why don't you get along?" The child's arm hung limp and painful for a moment, and he cried and patted it. I have often seen mothers give their children severe boxes on the ear—enough to deafen them for life. A writer on this subject says:

"The cause of joint diseases in childhood is frequently obscure, but this much is certain, that the rough handling which children receive at the hands of ignorant parents or careless nurses has much to do with the matter. Stand on any street corner and notice how children are handled. Here comes a lady with a three year old girl. She is walking twice as fast as she should, and the child is over-exerting itself to keep pace. Every time the child lags the mother gives it a sudden and unexpected lurch, which is enough to throw its shoulder out, to say nothing of bruising the delicate structures of the joints. A gutter is reached. Instead of giving the little tottler time to get over in its own way, or properly lifting it, the mother raises it from the ground by one hand, its whole weight depending from one upper extremity, and, with a swing which twists the child's body as far around as the joints will permit, it is landed, after a course of four or five feet through the air, on the other side. Probably not one child in a hundred is properly handled."

A PRETTY PAPER-HOLDER.—Procure a common wire broiler from the tin-shop; the largest size is preferable, though the tiny ones make very cunning little letter holders. Gild the wires with gold paint or bronze powder and then weave gay ribbons through them, basket fashion. Black and yellow with red are popular and serviceable colors. Pale blue and pink are especially dainty. Place two or three bows at the bottom of the rack and also at the handles, which are held slightly apart by ribbon loops.

These little articles may be made very elegant by the use of velvet and brocade ribbons, adding plush and gilt pendants at the bottom, with gold cord to lace up the sides.—Ladies' Floral Cabinet.

A very pretty letter-holder may be made by procuring from your hardware merchant a wire sponge holder, and gilding it with gold paint. Put on the inside red plush lined with old gold silk. In each of the wire loops around the top of the holder, hang an old gold silk tassel; and on the raised portion at the back, fasten a bow of satin ribbon to match the plush. E.L.B.

If a happy home is desired, every one must try and cultivate a large supply of patience, courage, and much perseverance.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-aching, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the Pillow-Inhaler, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or saline on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cures. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

Don E. L. HENDER, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchitis and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

MA. H. O. TERRY, 59 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh, coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual remedies of the disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.

Central Music Hall, Room 12, 109 State St., Randolph St., Chicago.

Main Office: 1509 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR

Illustrated.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN or SECRET Work."

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

PRICE 25 CENTS.

For Sale by

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 CENTS each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association,

221 West Madison St., Chicago.

NATIONAL SUCIDE, AND ITS PREVENTION.

BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For as Goldsmith said to his Vicar of Wakefield,

"Even his fallings lead to virtue's side."

—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has within it an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticise. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Index Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

"A THRILLING WARNING."

THE

Man Traps of the City.

BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons. It treats of

The Tiger and His Den.

Cups of Flame.

The Scarlet Sin.

Embezzlement.

The Devil's Printing Press.

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or bold figures of speech, but from the facts that show like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a timely warning where sin and crime are shown the dark mazes of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the purulent literature of the day. It is a book that is true, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delicate, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

The Medical and Surgical SANITARIUM

LARGEST SANITARIUM IN THE WORLD.

This institution, one of the buildings of which is shown in the cut, stands without a rival in the perfection and completeness of its appointments. The following are a few of the special method employed: Turkish, Russian, Roman, Thermo-Electric, Electro-vapor, Electro-hydric, Electro-chemical, Hot-air, Vapor, and every form of water bath; electrically in every form; Swedish movements—manual and mechanical—Massage—Pneumatic treatment, Vacuum treatment, sun baths. All other remedial agents of known curative value employed.

An artificial climate, possessing the advantages of perfectly pure air and an equable temperature, is produced for the benefit of those invalids who annually visit the South and other warm climates. Porches enclosed in glass afford the opportunity for promoting without exposure, and a fine gymnasium offers every facility for thorough and systematic physical training.

Pure water, good ventilation, steam heating, perfect sanitary and medical departments for the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, etc. For circulars with particulars, address

SANITARIUM, Battle Creek, Mich.

FIFTY YEARS AND BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by

REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.

(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "front beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of the life that now is, and to give comfort and help as to the life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the old man a burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveler to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

WHAT IS NATIONAL REFORM?

A RIGHT ANSWER TO THIS LEADING QUESTION INVOLVES THE SOLUTION OF

SOCIAL, MORAL AND POLITICAL PROBLEMS.

Can the Question be Answered?

SEND $2 FOR ONE YEAR'S SUBSCRIPTION TO THE CHRISTIAN NATION.

252 BROADWAY,
NEW YORK.

AND

READ AND LEARN FOR YOURSELF.

BESIDES ITS INTELLIGENT AND POPULAR DISCUSSIONS OF THESE QUESTIONS OF INTEREST TO EVERY MAN AND WOMAN, THE CHRISTIAN NATION S

A Home Paper in the Fullest Sense.

Light and Life S. S. Supplies.

We are prepared to furnish anything in the line of Sunday-school supplies, including a choice line of new and second-hand books, which we sell at low rates. Teachers' requisites, Library Registers, Maps, Wall Motives, and Charts.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS.

It is our aim to produce papers that will not only interest the children by their attractive appearance and readability, but by sound, evangelical and wholesome teaching to lead them to Christ. All sensational and worldly-minded views are carefully avoided. Please give them a trial.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 4 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE LILY (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE SUNSHINE (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

PURE WORDS (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

Single copy of each of the four monthlies to one address per year 75 cents. No single subscription taken for less than one year. SPECIAL PEN COPIES FREE.

Price per quarter 3 cents; per year, 12 cents.

LESSON HELPS.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON QUARTERLY CONTAINS: 1. Common version arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 3. Lesson Readings. 4. Lectures, including Review Questions, Conclusions, and Opening Remarks. 5. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time, places, persons and occurrences of the lesson, with the proper pronunciation of the names and places. 6. Notes and Explanations. 7. Questions. 8. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 9. Next Sunday's Lesson, including references to memory verses and Golden Text. 10. Eleven pages of instructions and suggestion, for teachers. 11. Light and Life Lesson LEAF CONTAINS same as quarterly except the instructions and suggestions to teachers.

SAMPLES FREE. Be sure and send this leaf before you order for the next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year.

CATALOGUE SENT FREE

T. B. ARNOLD, PUBLISHER, 104 & 106 Franklin St., CHICAGO, ILL.

FARM NOTES.

WATER FOR STOCK IN WINTER.

A large proportion of the food of our animals is used to keep up the temperature of the body to about one hundred degrees. Cold weather, damp barnyards, cracks in the barn or sheds, want of bedding and exposure to storms, greatly increase the consumption of food to no good purpose. Much more regard is now paid to the comfort of our stock in these respects than formerly. We think, however, many fail to realize the loss of food sustained by compelling animals to drink ice-cold water. Water as it comes fresh from the well has a temperature of about fifty-five degrees. When allowed to stand until frozen over and the ice then broken and pieces of ice suffered to remain in the water, the temperature speedily falls to thirty-five degrees. Experiments are reported which seem to show that it pays to artificially warm the drinking water for milch cows. Be this as it may no one can doubt that water at fifty-five degrees is cold enough for health. The water that an animal drinks has to be raised to the temperature of its body, say one hundred degrees. And, of course, it requires much more fuel in food to raise a pailful of water from thirty-five degrees to one hundred degrees than a pailful of fresh water from fifty-five degrees to one hundred degrees. If the heat required to warm the pailful of water twenty degrees was derived from hay, or straw, or grain, the loss would not in many cases be severely felt. But, as a matter of fact, this heat is obtained from the consumption of fat and flesh, or butter and cheese. This is expensive fuel. We are well aware that it is not always easy to furnish animals water free from ice. We fill the trough with water, and the cows and horses do not drink as much as we expected, and the next morning there is a thick layer of ice upon the water. In such a case, break the ice in as large pieces as possible and pull them out with a potato hook or rake. Do not leave them to melt in the water. Pump plenty of fresh water for the animals.—American Agriculturist.

HOW TO BECOME A FARMER.

In closing a most excellent article on "Farmers' Boys and Girls," Mr. H. L. Lealand says: "Farmer boys often say they like farm work, and enjoy some special branches of it, but they cannot see how they are to get the means to purchase a farm, as it would take a long while to earn enough to buy and stock a farm, working at such wages as farmers can afford to pay. By the census our Maine farms number 64,000, and the total number set down in agricultural labor is 83,130. Is it possible that with an average of less than one and a half laborers to each farm, the full productive capacity of our farms can be reached? Observation and personal experience teach us that comparatively few farmers employ sufficient working force to carry on their farms in the most profitable manner. For the encouragement of the young, let me say to you that there are many special branches that might be pursued with a certainty of profit upon the home farm, that would not require the purchase of additional land, and but a small outlay of capital at the start. Among these specialties are the breeding of poultry, the keeping of bees, the growing of small fruit, the growing of nursery stock, market gardening—these, or such of them as are adapted to the locality, might be carried on in connection with general farming with but a small additional capital, and if intelligently pursued would give both employment and profit to every member of the family circle. I ask you, intelligent farmers, who is there not of you found a co-partnership between father and son in carrying on the business of agriculture? Is there any real cause why such business arrangements should not prove advantageous and profitable? Those engaged in trade and in manufacturing enterprises almost invariably carry forward their business in co-partnership with other individuals. If this practice were introduced and made common in farming, would it not be an incentive with our children to stay at home?"—N. B. Farmer.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington, in a letter written a year before his death: "I preside over no lodge, nor have I been in one more than once or twice during the last thirty years."

President Millard Fillmore, J. C. Spencer and others: "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Chief Justice John Marshall: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned as one capable of much evil and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

John Quincy Adams: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

General A. W. Riley: "I hold that the difference between the Christian and a heathen religion is, that one has morality and the other has not. And when our churches refuse to speak of such subjects as slavery, liquor-selling and secret societies, they are becoming heathen religions; that is, religions without morals."

Charles Francis Adams: "Every man who takes a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, or that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment were to prove a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield: "In conducting the governments of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but secret orders to be considered, which have agents everywhere—reckless agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

General J. W. Phelps: "All secret organizations are links of one and the same chain which binds men to evil and not to good. The Masonic lodge is the parent source from which all similar modern organizations have emanated and this lodge is now in active operation in every city and considerable village of the country swaying our parties and churches; filling our offices, secular and divine, with its partisans; shaping our political destinies; and teaching a spurious and corrupting morality subversive both of the Christian religion and of free institutions."

Thurlow Weed: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

A. M. Sullivan, Irish Leader: "I had not studied in vain the history of secret, oath-bound associations. I regarded them with horror. I knew all that could be said as to their advantages in revolutionizing a country, but even in the firmest and best of hands they had a direct tendency to demoralization and are often on the whole more perilous to society than open tyranny."

Hon. Edward Blake, leader in Canadian Parliament, March, 1884: "I am not in favor of State recognition of any secret societies. I have never joined one, though many of my best friends are members of secret societies. But I believe the tendency of secrecy itself to be injurious. I believe that it brings with it the possibility of evil; I believe that it involves a certain amount of sacrifice of individuality and independence, and gives very great facilities for the misleading of members by designing leaders—very great and mischievous facilities for that purpose." "I believe that a great deal of the trouble, social and political, that has occurred in those countries [Europe and America] is due to secret societies."

THE INTER-OCEAN OF CHICAGO
In Circulation and Political Influence is the Leading Republican Newspaper
IN THE NORTHWEST.

THE INTER-OCEAN has from the beginning been the leader of the modern era of American Journalism. It is the advocate of equal rights for all before the law, of protection to American labor, and of the idea that America is for Americans—not necessarily Americans by birth, but true citizens of the Republic. It believes in the West and Western men, holds to the idea that the future seat of empire will be in the Mississippi Valley, and is bold and aggressive in its opposition to the unholy alliance between the money-changers of New York City and the States lately in rebellion.

THE INTER-OCEAN is earnestly in favor of the Republican party because it believes the principles of that party are correct and that honestly carried out, they will protect the rights and advance the interests of the whole people. It is not, however, a blind follower, but is always ready to denounce Republican wrong-doing, either in high or low places.

THE INTER-OCEAN has always maintained that the Nation is under an obligation to the soldiers of the Associated States, in which it holds a membership, it keeps a large body of Special Correspondents, both in this country and in the Old World, and has SPECIAL LEADS OF TELEGRAPHIC WIRE connecting its Chicago office with WASHINGTON and NEW YORK, in both of which cities it has SPECIAL NEWS BUREAUS and maintains Branch Offices.

The INTER-OCEAN is not excused in the United States. Aside from the service it renders to the Nation, it has a large and influential membership, it keeps a large body of Special Correspondents, both in this country and in the Old World, and has SPECIAL LEADS OF TELEGRAPHIC WIRE connecting its Chicago office with WASHINGTON and NEW YORK, in both of which cities it has SPECIAL NEWS BUREAUS and maintains Branch Offices.

The INTER-OCEAN is published every day in the year.

Price, exclusive of Sunday, - - - $ 8.00 per Year
" Sunday included, - - - 10.00 "

The Semi-Weekly Inter Ocean

Is published on MONDAYS and THURSDAYS, and contains the News condensed from the Daily.

Among other features, THE SEMI-WEEKLY INTER-OCEAN publishes the Sermon of Prof. Swing and other leading Ministers of Chicago.

Price, $2.50 per Year.

The Weekly Inter Ocean

Has the LARGEST CIRCULATION of any weekly paper West of New York.

In 1884, before the reduction of postage, it paid for POSTAGE ON CIRCULATION alone over $25,000.

Price, $1.00 per Year.

Every effort is used to make THE WEEKLY INTER-OCEAN a MORE FAMOUS NEWSPAPER, one that can be taken into any family with profit to each of its members. The Stories and other literary features are from the pens of the ablest and most approved writers. Among them are MRS. BURNETT, MISS PHELPS, MISS JEWETT, and MISS ALICE BRIDGES, and others. LATHROP, BOYSEN, SIDNEY LUSKA, and E. P. ROSS, have made it SO POPULAR IN THE HOME CIRCLE will be continued and improved, and nothing will be left untried to keep it at the front rank as a SOUND, WHOLESOME NEWSPAPER.

★ SPECIAL OFFERS. ★

There is a great demand from all parts of the country for a correct but cheap History of the United States. Most of such books are so large and expensive as to be out of the reach of most families. Yet every boy and girl ought to be familiar with the history of their country. It can hardly fail to make them better citizens. THE INTER-OCEAN has made a special arrangement by which

Brown's History of the United States

Can be offered with THE WEEKLY INTER-OCEAN.

one year, at the very low price of

ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS

For both the History and paper.

BROWN'S HISTORY is a well-written story of our country, from the earliest settlement to the present day. It is well printed in clear type, on good white paper, and bound in cloth. It contains more than SIXTY ILLUSTRATIONS and over SIX HUNDRED PAGES.

A PREMIUM TO AGENTS.

The price of THE WEEKLY INTER-OCEAN is $1.00 per year, and any person sending four yearly subscriptions for that edition, accompanied by the full subscription price, FIVE DOLLARS, will send them a COPY OF THE HISTORY FREE. Almost any boy or girl can secure four subscribers, and in this way obtain a copy of this valuable book.

The price of THE SEMI-WEEKLY INTER-OCEAN and BROWN'S HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES in TWO DOLLARS AND NINETY CENTS.

Sample copies of each edition of THE INTER-OCEAN will be sent on application. The Editors, Remittances may be made at our risk, either by draft on Chicago, postoffice order, express order, postal notes, or registered letter. Money sent in any other way is at the risk of the person sending it. Any Address

THE INTER OCEAN,

85 Madison St., Chicago.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from the following headings:—I.—Associations on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Crime. VI.—The Traits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DAKOTA ADMITTED

as well as all States and Territories into our Great Family of Readers.

A great list of new Western writers will specially adapt (during 1887) the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST to Western Agriculture, making it, with recent additions and improvements, the acknowledged authority, as for forty-five years past, in all matters pertaining to Agriculture, Horticulture, and the Household.

THE JUVENILE, HEALTH and HOUSEHOLD DEPARTMENTS have been enlarged, and HUMBOLDT Exposures are to receive additional attention.

1,000 Original Illustrations.

Every issue of the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST contains nearly 100 original illustrations of animals, plants, new farms and household conveniences and appliances, out-door scenes, etc.

Splendid Engravings Free!!

HOMES OF OUR FARMER PRESIDENTS

It is noteworthy that a majority of our Presidents were reared on farms, or retired from public life to rural scenes. The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is now publishing and sending free to all subscribers, as an outlay of over $4,000, superb Engravings (18 by 24 inches in size) of these Homes, together with special descriptive papers by James Parton, Donald G. Mitchell and other eminent living American authors. These engravings constitute a magnificent portfolio collection of ornaments for the artist, the farmer or peasant's home. Subscriptions for 1887 immediately forwarded are entitled to all the series, beginning in May last.

Endorsed by the U. S. Government.

Vol. 8th, Tenth Census, U. S., says: "The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is especially worthy of mention, because of the rural and agricultural character of the unique and unifying efforts of its proprietors to increase and extend its circulation. Its contents are duplicated every month for a German Edition, which also circulates widely."

Price, $1.50 a year; Single Numbers, 15c.

State of the Year, 1886, all subscribers immediately. Send Six Cents for mailing your Grand Double Number, just out, 32-page Premium List, and Sample From our immediately succeeding Farmer Presidents," together with description by James Parton. Address

AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

DAVID W. JUDD, Pub., 751 Broadway, N. Y.

CANVASSERS WANTED EVERYWHERE.

We will club the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST with the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE for $3.50 per year, every person who immediately subscribes to either the engravings free for next year and this year also.

Talks

ON THE

Labor Troubles,

BY REV. C. C. BROWN.

The Danger—The Laborer's Grievance—The Laborer's Fallacy—The Laborer's Hope—Mind and Muscle—Co-Laborers.

TIMELY TALKS ON AN IMPORTANT SUBJECT.

The Papers Say of this Book:

"It is well to remind the world of the great law of human brotherhood, but how to make the 'more general application of it.' After that, the 'how' of our author contributes his mite in that direction, and his voice and reasoning which reach some ears and perhaps touch some understandings and move some selfish hearts that are hurried up very closely and belted around by such respectability and comfortable prosperity."—Chicago Tribune.

"The writer does his work in a way remarkable, alike for its directness and its simplicity. Its impartiality, its lucidity and its force. He has no theories to support; he deals with facts as he finds them; he fortifies his assertions by arrays of demonstrative statistics. The work is among the best of the kind, if it is not the best we have had. It is so clearly and so powerfully put in the hands of all who wage war with evil, that it can be read by every one of them."—Chicago Interior.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND

FRIENDLY GREETINGS

Is a FORTY-PAGE, ILLUSTRATED, monthly family magazine edited by J. F. AVERY, Halifax, N. S.

Price, 75 Cents per Year if Prepaid.

Its columns are devoted to TEMPERANCE, MISTAKEN INTERESTS, THE SUNDAY SCHOOL, SHORT STORIES and ILLUSTRATIONS, making 25 pages of reading matter, suitable and profitable for young and old, with an average of twelve illustrations in each number, this will give a magazine of 40 pages monthly for 5 cents a year, and will, therefore, be one of the cheapest sold. Specimen copies sent for two 5-cent stamps.

A $5 GOLD PIECE

will be given if you get 20 subscribers.

"Buds and Blossoms" is endorsed by Christians and ministers of all denominations. It is a "good thing." "The cover has been a comfort and blessing to me. Every page is calculated to bring one nearer to the Lord." "We will ever be indebted to you for the 'Buds and Blossoms'." "To see B. & B. is to want and to love." "It should be in every home."

A Record of Faith Work.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-sect reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

COUNTRY.

The steamer Westernland, which arrived at New York Thursday morning, reports that during a terrific hurricane on Nov. 27, an immense wave struck the vessel, killing four seamen and two passengers, and severely injuring fifteen other sailors and passengers.

At Hartford, Conn., the proprietors of eight second rate hotels and restaurants have been arrested for putting oleomargarine on their tables without displaying the tag that it was not butter.

Teams are able to cross the Mississippi on the ice at Clinton, Iowa.

A visitor to Robert Hall's store, near Bellaire, Ohio, stepped upon a match Thursday, the sparks communicating with a powder keg, resulting in an explosion which blew the end out of the building, fatally wounding three persons and severely injuring four others.

The saengerfest of the Northwestern Saengerbund, which was to have been held at Dubuque, Iowa, will be held at Freeport, Ill., instead, the change being made on account of the prohibitory law in force in the Hawkeye State.

The November fire losses in the United States and Canada are estimated at $10,000,000—one third greater than the November average since the great Boston fire.

Two of the crew of the schooner Ariadne, ashore at Mexico Bay, Lake Ontario, were frozen to death in the rigging, the captain was washed overboard and drowned, and the three men who were rescued are believed to be beyond recovery.

The greatest excitement prevailed in mining share operations Thursday at San Francisco. Crowds thronged the brokers' offices, and thousands were purchasing shares. The Frankells at Virginia City failed for $915,000 and later the failure of R. C. Hooker, one of the staunchest brokers of the city, was announced. Greenbaum & Straus suspended for $400,000, and later two other prominent speculators, R. F. Morrow and Maurice Schmid, went down, depressing values to a disastrous extent, and wiping out the small operators.

One of the heaviest defalcations in the history of Chicago came to light last week. Theodore S. Mize, cashier, bookkeeper and confidential manager for Miner T. Ames, President of the Chicago and Minook Coal and Coke company, is a defaulter in a sum said to exceed $100,000.

In the case of the National Soldiers' Home against General Butler the jury found a verdict for $16,587.50 against General Butler.

A mail train and an east-bound passenger train on the Northern Pacific were in collision Wednesday morning near Muskado, Minn., the locomotives being wrecked and a mail car burned. Four employees were painfully wounded and a part of the mail was destroyed.

The law compelling stores of all kinds to be closed Sunday was strictly enforced in New York yesterday.

At Philadelphia a convention to arrange for a celebration of the centennial anniversary of the promulgation of the Federal Constitution was held last week, and a permanent organization was formed, with Hon. John A. Kasson, of Iowa, President, and Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, and Colonel James A. Hoyt, of South Carolina, Vice-presidents.

War is brewing between Mayor Becker and the Citizens' Reform Association of Buffalo, growing out of the action of the association in pushing charges against saloon-keepers, who have sold liquor on Sundays.

A few days ago E. B. Brown, teacher of the district school in Boone Township, Harrison Co., Ind., dismissed his school and locked the doors because three colored children had come to his school, declaring that he was not employed to "teach niggers." A number of the white children pounced upon the colored children and gave them a severe beating, and for this they were all fined.

The month of November was 23 degrees colder than the average for November for twenty-two years.

A severe shock of earthquake on the night of the 23rd ult. disturbed the foundations of the new dam of the Langley Cotton Works, in South Carolina. The dam gave way Monday afternoon, flooding the adjacent country and causing heavy damage to railway tracks and other property.

A collision of trains took place Tuesday morning between Parker and Lennox, D. T., the locomotives being wrecked, and engineers and firemen instantly killed. No passengers are reported injured.

Fifty-seven head of fancy stock were burned to death Tuesday morning in the barns of J. W. Allen, at East Syracuse, N. Y. Farming implements and a large amount of grain and hay were also destroyed. The total loss is $40,000.

FOREIGN.

Police statistics of Berlin on the operation of the anti socialist law, from May to August, show that out of 150 requests to sanction meetings 124 were refused, and that ten professed socialists were expelled from Berlin, making the total 173 expulsions since passing the law in 1878.

German, Italian, French and Swiss delegates will take part in the convention of socialists and anarchists to be held at Chaux de Fonds, Switzerland, early in December. Prince Krasotkin will preside.

Fifty-four members, centre, will support in the German Reichstag the bill for the suppression of dueling, especially what is known as the American method.

General Kaulbars, late Bulgarian agent, arrived at St. Petersburg Dec. 1. He was met at the depot by a great crowd, who received him enthusiastically. The idea is growing that a conference of the powers regarding the Bulgarian question will be resorted to. The London Standard says that Russia is negotiating with Parisian bankers for a loan of 75,000,000 rubles.

A member of the geological survey has reported to the Canadian Government that the coal deposits in the Saskatchewan region are inexhaustible.

King Milan of Servia Saturday received the deputation of Bulgarian notables at Belgrade. It is rumored that the regency will propose that he be a candidate for the throne of Bulgaria, in order to arrange a union.

SPECIAL

HOLIDAY OFFER!

For December 1886 only!

To all who send $2.00 for the Cynosure for one year in advance we will send a copy of BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS, free!

—Florida! Florida!—

A package of Cyclotiles, containing Florida Grey Moss, Alligator Teeth, Sea Beans, and shells, will be sent to any one on receipt of 25 cents. Festoons of the "Beautiful Grey Moss," for decorating churches and private houses. Address H. M. WOODRUFF, Winter Park, Fla. (Jeweler and Dealer in Florida Curiosities.)

JOYFUL News for Boys and Girls!! Young J and Old!! A NEW Invention just patented for Home use!
Fret and Scroll Sawing, Turning, Boring, Drilling, Grinding, Polishing, Screw Cutting. Price $5 to $50. Send 6 cents for 100 pages.
EPHRAIM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.

LEPAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Respected GOLD MEDAL, London '76. Pronounced strongest and most durable. Send card of order who does not keep it, with five 5c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE.
Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

THE PHYSICIAN'S FAVORITE!

A predigested, non-irritating, easily assimilated food indicated in all weak and inflamed conditions of the digestive organs, either in infants or adults.

It has been the positive means of saving many lives, having been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

The Most Nourishing, Most Palatable, Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

150 MEALS for an Infant for $1.00.

EASILY PREPARED. At Druggists, 25c.

A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," sent free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

EMPLOYMENT GOOD SALARY AND ALL EXPENSES PAID. At home or to travel; state which preferred also salary wanted. SLOAN & CO., Manufacturers and Wholesale Dealers, 294 George St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED IN FIVE DAYS. No pain. Warranted. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFFER Altoona, Iowa

EUTOCIA A Book for every woman.

Introductory preface by ROBERT GURNESEY M. D. also preface by Dr. Geo. E. SURVEY, and chapters on the care and management of infants by the same experienced author. Mothers, Wives and Daughters. Not a compilation of other work and clichés, but the careful, practical study of Mrs. Dr. E. G. Cook, for over a quarter of a century. It is ENDORSED by the Ministers, Physicians, Daily, Weekly, Religious and Medical Press.

COMPLETE LADIES GUIDE. It treats fully on easy child-bearing, and health of children. In short a complete manual for the household. Mailed free on receipt of price where we have no Agents. Alphabetical table of contents. Find a ready sale for it. It is a treasure.

AGENTS. Handsomely bound in English Silk Cloth, $2.00. Morocco $2.75. Address for terms ARCADE PUB. CO., 143 La Salle St., Chicago.

LADIES TO INTRODUCE

our Ladies' Journal in the best homes. We make you the following Liberal Offer: We will send the paper, postpaid, from Sept. 1 to Jan. 1, 1887, on receipt of ONLY 10 CENTS.

AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING

Is decidedly a ladies' journal. Published monthly, handsomely illustrated, filled with original Stories, Poems, with departments on Home Cooking, Bric-a-brac, Artistic Needle Work, Window Gardening, Flowers, Mothers' Corner, Children's Book, Household Pets and all Home Subjects. By many of our best writers. Subscription price, 50 cents per year. Samples free.

THE P. B. Combined Tracing Wheel and Scissors. An indispensable article for every woman, made of the best English steel, hand-forged, oil-tempered. Every pair warranted. Sent postpaid, on receipt of price. Or we will send the scissors to any one that will send two subscriptions to AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING and $1.00. American Housekeeping Co., 143 La Salle Street, Chicago.

Price, 75c.

disposable article for every woman, made of the best English steel, hand-forged, oil-tempered. Every pair warranted. Sent postpaid, on receipt of price. Or we will send the scissors to any one that will send two subscriptions to AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING and $1.00. American Housekeeping Co., 143 La Salle Street, Chicago.

Provident Book Clubs

ORGANIZING all over the continent. Books for RETAIL buyers direct far BELOW ordinary WHOLESALE prices. Sold on easy monthly payments if you wish. Immense list to choose from—nearly 2000 authors, of all ages, nations, and languages (translated into English). Complete Descriptive CATALOGUE and full particulars on request, free.

JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl St., New York.

The Alden Book Co.: Clark and Adams Sts., Chicago; 430 Yonge St., Toronto.

OUR LATEST BOOK. HARVEST FOR THE HOLIDAYS. NOW IN PRESS.

WITH PICTURES.

Carver's outfit now ready. New, original, and taking. Heavy, super-colored paper, superb binding, new and instructive illustrations. Prices low, to meet the times. Discounts large, to meet the agents. Sample pages and full particulars sent free on application. Our territories are open for the acquisition of exclusive territory to both general and local agents. Complete canvasser's outfit, $1.00. General Agents wanted for Colorado, Dakota, Kansas, Iowa, Pennsylvania, New York, and Southern States. For discounts and full particulars, address The J. E. WHEAT PUBLISHING CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series. BIBLES!

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for thirteen years. 100 styles, $22 to $500. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 46 pp., 4to, free.

PIANOS.

The Improved Method of Stringing, introduced and perfected by MASON & HAMLIN, is sanctioned by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Piano construction. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO

164 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chinese Secret Laundry Glossing. Good. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 28 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED in every city and town for Ladies' Favorite Tracing Wheel. Will sell in every household. Two dozen mailed on receipt of $1. Sample 15c. NOVELTY WHEEL CO., 24 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Copies are mailed free. Circulars sent 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

HOMES between Atlantic Ocean and Chesapeake Bay. Mild climate. Productions, fruit, vegetables, grain, grasses, fish and oysters. Send for circular. BROWNE, JACOBS AND CO., Accomack Co., Va.

CATARRH SAMPLE FREE

So great a cure that we can cure you, free. If successful, we will mail you our certificate. J. B. S. LAUDERBACK & Co., Newark, N. J.

RO KY MOUNTAIN GOVES

Made from Fawn Skin Kid, a very durable and hand some material, unknown elsewhere. Prices from $1 to $1.50 for Common Length; $2.50 for Button Cuff Driving Gauntlets made to order for Ladies or Gents, every stitch sold. Postage paid. Also Indian Tan-dered Gloves, Morocain, Buckskin Clothing (fringed and plain), Leggings, Money Belts, etc. Buckskin for sale. Samples of Leather with stitching free. Also Catalogue of hundreds of styles of Gloves and Leather Novelties, and directions for measurement. Discount to agents. Reference, Union Bank, Denver. Denver, Colorado.

FLORIDA.

ACADEMY AND COLLEGE, AT DE LAND, FLORIDA.

A first-class academy for both sexes. Five Courses College Preparatory, Higher English, Normal, Business, Industrial Drawing, First-class Arithmetic and Departments. Fine new Dormitory Building, enabling us to furnish board and tuition at reasonable rates. The temperate climate of Florida, so thorough and liberal an education as can be secured in the best New England schools. DE LAND COLLEGE will also receive students of both sexes, prepared to enter the Freshman Class. Send for catalogue to J. F. FORBES, President, De Land, Florida; or H. A. DE LAND, Fairport, N. Y.

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS & COPYRIGHTS

Obtained, and all other business in the U. S. Patent Office attended to for MODERATE FEES. Send MODEL OR DRAWING. We advise as to patentability free of charge; and we make NO CHARGE UNLESS WE OBTAIN PATENT. We refer here to the Postmaster, the Superintendent of Patents, and to officials of the U. S. Patent Office. For circulars and references to actual clients in your own State or county, write to

C. A. SNOW & CO., Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XIX., No. 13

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1886.

WHOLE No. 865.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. L. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR.....$2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.....$1.50.

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. L. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments..... 1	Outlook for the Knoxville Anniversary; Among the Southern Mountaineers; Noble Men Back of the Iowa Work; The Wisconsin Campaign; The Outlook in Alabama 4,5
Important Meetings..... 8	Secret Societies Condemned 7
Labor in Politics..... 8	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
The Millennium..... 8	NOTICES..... 9
T. T. Gurney..... 9	THE HOME..... 10
CONTRIBUTIONS:	TEMPERANCE..... 11
The Liberty Statue and God's Law..... 1	LITERATURE..... 12
The Infidel Lodge..... 2	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Sabbath Desecration..... 2	LODGE NOTES..... 13
SELECTED:	FARM NOTES..... 14
Press Comment..... 2	IN BRIEF..... 15
Winter (poetry)..... 3	THE N. C. A..... 15
THE SERMON:	LECTURE LIST..... 15
Masonry vs. the Church..... 3	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
CORRESPONDENCE:	MARKETS..... 16
A National Reform Convention for Chicago; The Ministers of New Orleans; Three River Cities; Pitt and Point..... 6

The disgraceful sequel of the foot-ball game between Princeton and Yale Colleges on Thanksgiving day has roused old Dr. McCosh, who believes the faculties must meet the crisis that is now reached in the matter of athletic games. These contests are coming to have all the evils of the race-course with their betting, gambling and drinking. He invites Harvard, as the oldest college, to take the lead, call a meeting, and propose some arrangement by which the benefit of healthy exercise may be secured without the abuses which have so flourished of late years. All who believe in American colleges hope this suggestion will ripen into a wise and wholesome agreement.

Powderly ordered the Stock Yards butchers back to work because he had not been consulted about their strike. Saturday the papers announced boycotting by the wholesale, ordered by the Knights of Labor lodges without waiting for word from Philadelphia headquarters. The boycott is directed primarily against a firm of box manufacturers, and then against eight other firms who use their boxes. A boycott is also proclaimed against a large clothing firm of New York and their branches in this city. The labor lodges can hardly prevent adopting such illegal measures, as they are legitimate to their character and constitution. A secret labor organization is in the nature of a declaration of war, and strikes and boycotts naturally follow.

The London Illustrated News reports one result of the explorations of the African Boundary Commission to be an accurate measurement of the immense rock-hewn statues of Bamián on the road between Cabul and Balkh which have long been known to Indian archaeologists, but their exact size has never been known. The largest of these is 173 feet high, more than 20 feet higher than our Liberty statue at New York, upon which Elder Callender has a criticism in this number. He will pardon the suggestion that the Bartholdi statue is not necessarily a goddess nor the image of a goddess, any more than a thousand statues and busts which we admire are in any sense deified, the image of William Morgan, for instance, at Batavia, which is necessarily in large degree an ideal work.

Prof. Whipple's record of the intelligence and tractableness of the Apache youth in his department of the University of New Mexico at Santa Fe, has an interesting corroboration from Mr. Lee, agent for the Cheyennes and Arapahoes in the Indian Territory. Although these tribes were accounted among the most warlike, they have taken readily to agricultural pursuits and have many well-tilled farms. He says he had hard work to induce these Indians to abandon their ancient customs, and especially their yearly medicine dance, to which they are passionately attached. For years these Indians would abandon home, crops, and everything else to attend this dance, which seems to have had for them the singular religious fascination which a Masonic initiation has upon a credulous, weak and morally unbalanced mind. Of late years, however, they have given up the dance and find it more profitable to keep up their farms; and labor is no longer a reproach.

Our Washington letter notices the Knights of Labor Bureau established at the capital to influence legislation in favor of the projects of that order. This idea of Congressional influence will be carried to its logical end when all the other secret lodges have their offices in that city, and the Jesuits and the Protestant sects all scheming for personal advantage, and against each other. There is a lawful work of this kind which the composition of our Houses of Congress, unhappily makes necessary, but if our legislators must be shadowed by gangs of lodge men, the country some day will be aroused to clean out Washington as Christ cleansed the Temple. The Southern members are quite hostile to this domination of Powderly's lodge, since it is having some influence on the negroes, and is likely to give them a more independent spirit. This is not a bad effect. Only it should arise from a more noble source to be in itself truly ennobling to the colored race.

President Cleveland's message has this year probably a wider circulation than such a document ever before attained. The local papers, even, all print it. It is not a remarkable paper, but very conservative, dignified and abounding in vague generalities. It will stand as a fair document, however, if Mr. Cleveland will explain some omissions. The labor organs are raising the outcry that he ignores the labor question. Perhaps he considered that others were saying enough on that topic, and that the whole discussion was yet in too chaotic a state to demand the attention of the executive. We can imagine, however, that a man of force and originality would have ventured some opinion to Congress. A more unpardonable omission is the Mormon question. It would have cost little to have recommended the measure now before Congress, approved by the best and truest men of Utah, and this neglect must arouse suspicion of Mormon influence in high places. Already Governor West is coming on from Utah to look after the Territorial interests at Washington. The lodge question is also, we believe, of sufficient national importance to have received attention from Mr. Cleveland. Its impious and arrogant influence is felt throughout the land from the White House to the hovel. President Cleveland would have done well had he made a little history on this subject by recommending such legislation against lodge oaths as Webster long ago approved.

It is prophesied of prohibition and other good causes that they are doomed when they appeal to the ballot. Their ruin is in politics. These chronic forebodings seldom result in anything but dyspepsia; but when an evil takes its place before the ballot box and organizes its supporters into a party there is always hope of good. It is the dangerous disease that hides within the system; it can be managed when it comes out to the skin. If the liquor power would form a party, instead of hiding among the luggage of the others, and working its sharpshooters from the rear, it would be a good day for the nation. The Mormons seem to be working toward such an end. In Idaho they have formed a party with the name "Independent," and have held a Territorial convention, organizing permanently to vote their detested system into power. Their platform is cunningly drawn with abundance of patriotic sentiment, and statement of principles in which people are agreed. They ask support for Mormonism in the name of religious liberty, invite all good men to join them and invoke the blessing of God upon their iniquity. In Utah the Mormons have all the power in politics of a majority party, but the work is all done by the church, and concealed thus by their fanatical oaths, they are hard to fight. If their line of battle could be maneuvered out to the line of a political party, Governor West, ex-Governor Murray, Judge Zane, Dr. McNiece, Editor Goodwin, and their compatriots would find the battle approaching to the end.

THE LIBERTY STATUE AND GOD'S LAW.

BY ELDER N. CALLENDER.

Let the conscientious Bible student read Ex. 20: 3, 4, 5 as critically and as carefully as he would a human law involving his fortune. God's law does involve all fortunes of all worlds. After the most impartial reading of the First and Second Commandments let the careful student read the accounts of the "Liberty Statue," the American "GODDESS," and discriminate, if it can be done, between the idolatry forbidden in God's law and that involved in this goddess. Can the talent of a Whittier so construe this image as to escape condemnation under God's Word? Surely that Word "is sharper than a two-edged sword piercing to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit.... and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

What is a god but a thing to worship? Is a female deity any better than Dagon? Divine attributes and powers are always associated with a god or a goddess. Suppose many of our people are too well instructed in divinity to pay homage to Bartholdi's dream of liberty going round the world, formulated in the Statue, does this make it wise and safe for American Christians to "set up" such an image? Will not future generations interpret our images as we interpret those of past generations? And for the reason that there is no substantial difference between them. What idea our French neighbor has of liberty we know not. What Christian liberty is we ought to know. That Bartholdi's dream embodied in his goddess of liberty does not embrace the only true liberty for man, is to us quite certain. "He whom the Son makes free is free indeed." Does the liberty statue represent this freedom? Evidently not. In all the human dreams of liberty is there any other real freedom. What is it?

Notions of liberty, vague as the dreams of insanity or of disturbed sleep, are as plenty as subjects of bedlam. What is real liberty? Can words define it? When man's will merges into God's will, perfectly, then "he is free indeed." He is as free as God himself, and God is absolutely—perfectly free. There is after all we may dream, and say of liberty, but one free government. That government is a kingdom of which the Son of God is the King. For this reason the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom that shall break in pieces all other kingdoms—and all other governments. This, the only liberty kingdom, will grind to powder all antagonisms in the forms of merely human ideals of government. Then "the image of Nebuchadnezzar, the Sphinx of Egypt, the Colossus of Rhodes, the Statue of Athens, of Charles Borromeo," and our Franco-American idol will meet a common and deserved doom. Away, idols, away! "Thou shalt not bow down to them nor serve them." We are inclined to think that "the Masonic farce is at the foundation of the pedestal" in unholy harmony with the whole grand scheme. The Masonic part in the godless is perhaps as good as the rest. American idols are just as good as those of Egypt while deeper guilt attaches to the more enlightened nations.

In my views of true freedom, and the only free government, I do not deny God's supervision over all governments, however imperfect and oppressive. It may be less criminal, perhaps, to symbolize a merely human government in a god or goddess, than that of the reign of Christ. Barthold's conception of "liberty going round the world" we presume falls far below the Christian conception of freedom.

While I hold myself open to criticism in these remarks, I humbly suggest that this nation preserves in too large a degree, the idolatry of the ages and of the nations of the past and present. The symbolism of this nation is not clear of this charge. Witness the interior of the dome of our Capitol in Washington. This is in harmony with the dream of "Liberty Statue"

Whether God would be pleased with having his name on the headstone of this Republic I am not prepared to say. That we ought to be a Christian nation I do not doubt. It seems to me that we "must be born again" to make us so, in any sense; could the prophecy, "a nation shall be born in a day," be verified in us we should be most happy in taking on the Christian name. With the debauchery by lodgery, whisky, Mormonism, and infidelity, now disgracing us, would the name of the Triune One look well on our banners? Would it not be too much like the Knights Templars' banners over gin mills and bagnios in Chicago in 1880? These queries are submitted in humble mood to those better posted.

Thompson, Pa.

THE INFIDEL LODGE.

BY REV. C. F. HAWLEY.

Ancient Craft Masonry is a perfected system of organized infidelity, through which Satan works more effectively, perhaps, than through any other agency, to supplant Christianity, and introduce a universal system of deistical philosophy.

So true is this that a Boston pastor, a doctor of divinity, and an adhering Mason of 33 degrees, gave it as his deliberate conviction, after carefully studying Freemasonry, that it, more than anything else in the world, stands in the way of the coming of the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The design of God, as foretold by the prophets, is to fill the world with the church of Christ. The design of Satan is to make Freemasonry the universal religion of the world; and thus forestall and supplant Christianity with a system of organized deism, or infidelity. Yet the watchmen on the walls of Zion sleep! Some of them, like the Congregational pastor at Winthrop, Iowa, teach the young men that it will not do to depend upon the religion of Freemasonry for salvation; that they must be Christians, as well as Freemasons, if they would be saved. But few testify to the truth that Masonry is a false, and therefore a Satanic religion, whose votaries come into fellowship with devils; and are, therefore, by the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God, cut off from all access to God through Christ, except they renounce the Satanic worship of the lodge. As well might the ambassadors of the Cross teach Mohammedans and pagans, that it will not do to depend on their false religions for salvation: that they must be Christians as well as Musselmans, or pagans.

The Holy Ghost, through Paul, in the 10th chapter of 1 Corinthians, has settled the matter by the authoritative declaration, "ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils: ye cannot be a partaker of the Lord's table and the table of devils."

Here we have the doctrine of one religion, and one only, for one man; just as clearly as we have the doctrine that a Christian bishop should be the husband of one wife, and one only.

How can Masonry, I ask, maintain its standing and recognition in the churches, when it is so clearly proved to be a system of organized infidelity. The Lord God calls on those who profess his name to come out and be separate from such an unclean thing. Soon the whole Christian church, with a voice like the sound of a mighty waterfall, will be crying in chorus to the men of the lodge, COME OUT, if you would come into fellowship with the saints; for why should those who have fellowship with devils be received into the communion of saints.

Men of the lodge, clear the way. Christ's truth is marching on; and in the light of his truth you will not be allowed to partake of the Lord's table, if you persist in partaking of the table of devils. Who in the church but a hypocrite, or an apostate, would refuse to take a stand with Christ against Freemasonry, who knows what Freemasonry is?

SABBATH DESECRATION.

BY REV. A. SIMS.

This great sin is sadly on the increase. We wish to point out what constitutes the breaking of the Sabbath law, and the various forms in which it is done.

"Remember the Sabbath-day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man servant, nor thy maid servant, nor thy cattle, nor the stranger that is within thy gates." "Thus saith the Lord, Take heed to yourselves, and bear no burden on the Sabbath-day, neither carry forth a burden out of your houses on the Sabbath-day, neither do ye any work." "Ye shall keep my Sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the Lord." "Six days shall work be done: but the seventh day is the Sabbath of rest, an holy convocation; ye shall do no work therein: it is the Sabbath of the Lord in all your dwellings." "Ye shall keep the Sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you: every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death: for whosoever doeth any work therein—that soul shall be cut off from among his people." "From one Sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord." "Thus saith the Lord, Blessed is the man that keepeth the Sabbath from polluting it. . . . even them will I bring to my holy mountain, and make them joyful in my house of prayer." "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable; and shalt honor him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth."

From the above, and other portions of God's Word, it is clear that any deed—not a work of mercy, piety or necessity—is not to be performed upon the Sabbath. Buying or selling is not allowed. Yet thousands, who profess religion, think it a small matter to buy their milk, meat, cigars, Sunday papers (?) and other things on God's own day! Traffic in such things we have found quite common in the United States, and Canada cannot cast the first stone.

"There dwelt men of Tyre also therein, which brought fish and all manner of ware, and sold on the Sabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem." "Then I contended with the nobles of Judah, and said unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the Sabbath day? Did not your fathers thus: and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? yet ye bring more wrath upon Israel by profaning the Sabbath."

Sunday visiting and pleasure taking are also condemned. Professors of religion can be frequently seen driving or walking to visit their friends, during the very hours of divine service. We have often been told by such persons, in answer to the inquiry, "Why were you not at church last Sabbath?" "Well, so and so came from a distance to see us; and you know we had not seen them for a long time; and we really did not like to leave them just as they had come to our house. Just as if man were of more consequence than God and his house; and a mere gossip with a friend of more value than the eternal interests of the soul.

Again; there are multitudes who would shudder at the very idea of opening a store for the sale of goods, or driving a team to market on Sunday; yet they can, without apparent compunction, do other things equally as bad. What, are the writing of business letters, shaving, blacking boots, reading novels, secular papers, taking excursion trips—very probably using the cars—and lounging about half the day, doing nothing? I say, what is all this but a gross and wicked violation of the Fourth Commandment? God once commanded the children of Israel to stone a man to death for gathering sticks upon the Sabbath. Numbers 15: 32-36.

But there is yet a more common species of Sabbath breaking, which, I am sorry to say, is not unknown in Christian circles—which is looked upon as being quite innocent—but it is, in the sight of God, tantamount to the most open profanation, I mean the discussion of worldly matters. If a man were seen felling a tree on the Sabbath, there are plenty of people who would be very ready to exclaim, "What a wicked fellow!" And yet these very persons can be heard on the Sabbath discussing politics, the state of the markets, the prospects of trade, and their own probable success or failure. What is the difference between them and the man denounced for felling a tree? None; for if their bodies do not follow the plough, or go to market, their hearts do. In regard to a large number of professing Christians, it is very difficult to detect any difference between their week-day and Sabbath conversation. Ridiculous nonsense, empty trifles, and foolish anecdotes, are not with them exceptional themes. With those who delight in Sunday visiting this is almost universally the case. Religious conversation is not very palatable to them. They do not go to talk of good things, but to have gossip. And thus they commit the double sin of pleasure-taking on God's day, and engaging in wordly conversation. But God often beholds the desecration of his day, when it is invisible to the human sight; when it is done not by words or by actions—when, not the letter but the spirit of the Fourth Commandment is broken. His penetrating eye sees that soul in the pew, or in the chair at home, diligently studying, pondering over his worldly matters, arranging his affairs for the ensuing week, and planning the best schemes for carrying on his secular business. Though his body is not actively engaged about his calling, his mind is. And before the judgment seat of Christ he will be held responsible for having broken the Sabbath.

O, how many hours of the Lord's day are spent in this profane manner? With what anxiety is the question often mentally discussed on that blessed day, "What shall I eat, and what shall I drink; or wherewithal shall I be clothed?" O, reader, if you once give over caring for the Sabbath, before long you will cease caring for your soul. Judge Hale once said, "Of all the persons who were convicted of capital crimes, while he was upon the bench, he found only a few who did not confess that they began their career of wickedness by a neglect of the Sabbath." He that will not give God his day is not fit for heaven. Therefore, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

Uxbridge, Ont., Nov. 26, 1886.

PRESS COMMENT.

The Supreme Court of Iowa has given a decision declaring that the reading of the Bible and the singing of sacred songs in the common schools are not prohibited by the clause in the constitution of that State which says that taxes shall not be levied to support any place of worship. The decision admits that such exercises in schoolhouses are in a certain sense worship, but denies that they add anything to the burden of taxation.—Telescope.

Nine out of ten (we speak on the authority of a business man in Boston who is a Mason in good and regular standing) of the owners of New York gambling houses sport the square and compass on their shirt-fronts, and have too many "worthy brothers" on the police force to be in any danger of conviction. Without doubt the proportion of Masonic saloonists is full as great. When we take in consideration the lodge vow to protect each other right or wrong, and the tendency of all great evils toward mutual affiliation, we see a reason why the prosecution drags its slow length along, and justice fails to strike the murderers. But it is a reason generally ignored by the prohibition press in its comments on the affair. Will the Prohibition party ever get its eyes open to see the masked foe behind the saloon.—Conservator.

It is said that some 8,000 women and children are without fire or sufficient food as one result of the great strike in the Chicago packing-houses. The men are now trying to find out who is responsible for the strike, which many of them did not approve, though they took part in it in obedience to orders. Some say that it was a political move on the part of District-Master Workman Butler. The green-glass-blowers of Baltimore are also indignant that they were ordered out on a strike when they were getting $4 to $7 a day, and had no grievance to complain of. The object of this strike is said to be to limit the number of apprentices, so as to maintain these high rates of wages indefinitely. The time will come when workmen will no more submit to such dictation from other workmen than they would now if it was attempted by their employers.—N. Y. Witness.

Good Templarism bears the same relation to Masonry that light wines bear to rum. Don't fool with it. Mystical, ritualistic secrecy is the foundation of all, or nearly all, heathen religions. It is a poison to the soul like rum is to the body. It creates a thirst within and throws a spell over a man and places him under the control of a strange power. Total abstinence is the road of safety. If organizations are needed to carry on the temperance work, let them be open societies, conducted on the Christian plan. Let ritualism be thrown overboard. Then can Christians conscientiously bid them God speed?

What if a Good Templar's lodge in your town should be the means of rescuing a drunkard, but while doing it should bait a dozen souls with the spiritual intoxicant of secret ritualist worship, lead them to join the higher orders, deny their Christ, cast out his name and be lost. One soul stopped in a course of ruin and you hope he may be saved, but a dozen lost for all eternity. Such is the possibilities of the baby lodges.—Western Crank.

In his first annual message to Congress Mr. Lincoln dwelt at some length upon the question then bruited of the relations of labor and capital. It may be interesting, twenty-six years later and in a time when the thoughts then held have ripened into the fruitage of agitation, to know how the rail-splitter regarded the question. He said: "There is no such relation between capital and labor as assumed, nor is there any such thing as a free man being fixed for life in the condition of a hired laborer. Both these assumptions are false and all inferences from them are groundless. Many independent men everywhere in these States a few years back in their lives were hired laborers. The prudent, penniless beginner in the world labors for wages awhile, saves a surplus with which to buy tools or land for himself, then labors on his own account another while, and at length hires another new beginner to help him. This is the just and generous and prosperous system which opens the way to all, gives hope to all, and consequent energy and progress and improvement of condition to all."—Chicago Evening Mail.

The labor unions have killed off all the old race of master workmen, and have produced a race of butchers in all trades. If you hire a carpenter to do a job, unless he is an experienced boss the result in most cases is a most unsightly and unsatisfactory piece of work. If a plumber, nine times out of ten the case is even worse, for the job will not only be poorly done, but in a manner prejudicial to the health of the inmates of the house. So it is all around. The trades are full of poor journeymen, wretched botches, who are too ignorant, too careless and too incompetent to be able to produce a piece of thorough work. The trades unions have effected this state of things by driving ambition out of their members. It is a cardinal principle with the trades unions that one man is just as good as another—whether he is or not—and that all workmen in a trade must receive the same rate of wages. So the miserable scrub is just upon a level with the thoroughly skilled and conscientious mechanic, whose hand and eye and brain have been trained in his calling to perfection. The remedy for this state of things is industrial schools. The old apprentice system, excellent and thorough in its day, has disappeared, and a new race of first-class mechanics can only be reared in the schools of the trade.—Philadelphia Price Current.

WINTER.

He comes! the tardy Winter comes!
I hear his footsteps through the nights!
I hear his vanguard from the heights
March through the pines with muffled drums!

His naked feet are on the mead;
The grass blades stiffen in his path;
No tear for child of earth he hath,
No pity for her tender seed!

The bare oaks shudder at his breath;
A moment by the stream he stays—
Its melody is mute! A glaze
Creeps o'er its dimples, as of death.

From fettered stream and blackened moor,
The city walls he silent nears;
The mansions of the rich he fears,
He storms the cabins of the poor!

The curtained couch, the glowing hearth,
The frost-rimmed graybeard's power defy;
He curses, as he hurries by,
And strikes the beggar dead to earth!

For every gleaming hall he spares,
A hundred heartless hovels hold
Hearts pulseless, crisp with ice and cold,
Watched by a hundred grim Despairs!

The forests grow by His command,
Who saith: "Ye lendeth to the Lord,
Who giveth to the poor!" Your hoard
Is His! Ye stewards of the land!

Here is your mission! ye who feed
Your lavish fires! Not afar,
But at your doors your hearthen are!
God's poor—your creditors—take heed!

The path is long to Pagan shores;
Their skies are sunny; God's o'er all!
The Winter's deadly harvests fall
Around you. Deal your Master's stores!

—Selected.

THE SERMON.

MASONRY VERSUS THE CHURCH.

PREACHED BY REV. A. SNYDER IN THE BAPTIST CHURCH, CORUNNA, MICHIGAN.

"Say ye not a confederacy to all them to whom this people shall say a confederacy."—Isa. 8: 12.

Nothing is more noticeable in the Jewish economy than the strong and clear line of separation drawn between them and other peoples, and the great care taken to impress their minds with the idea that they were ever to be consecrated to the Lord alone as they were to put their trust alone in him.

What was the object of this separation from the rest of the peoples of the earth? Obviously the preservation of the knowledge of the true God, and faith in his name.

Whenever the people began to mingle with the idolatrous nations around them they began to fall into their ways, and to adopt their notions and worship at their shrines.

When they formed alliance with other nations for war they put their trust in horses and chariots, and other superior equipment and tactics, and forgot to trust in the Lord of Hosts alone. And even the wisest of their kings, forming marriage connections with the courts of Egypt, and other nations, fell into idolatry and infidelity to the God that had raised him up to great eminence. There is not one instance on record where the people departed from the policy of complete separation that did not result in corruption of religion, and turning aside of the people from their trust in God.

Let us now inquire, Was there one reason for the distinctions made and preserved by so many safeguards, that does not apply with equal force to the present economy of the church of Christ?

Was it to prove the descent of Abraham's son? How shall we prove that we are the sons of God? "We are the children of Abraham by faith in Christ Jesus." Begotten of God by the Word—born of "Zion which is from above, which is the mother of all God's children." But if the mother prove a harlot, who shall be able to prove his descent from the Father in heaven?

Was it to guard against the tendencies to infidelity, and false trust? There is needed no plainer proof of the influence of the world upon the church than we have seen both in the church of Rome, and all national establishments in the Old World. Did the Jews trust in the appliances of their confederates and forget God? So does the Christian church when it becomes allied to earthly and carnal inventions of men for the rescuing of men from sin and moral pollution. Was there danger of the people turning aside from the doctrine of God? What has been the result to Christian churches that have become liberalized, and have formed affinities with unbelievers? Through this door have crept in the most dangerous heresies and scisms, sapping the vitality and spirituality, polluting the doctrines, corrupting the morals of the churches so liberalized, until the Lord has "spewed them out of his mouth."

A pure life, a pure faith, and pure associations are mutually dependent, as the several positions of an arch, bottom, top, and sides all depend; the key stone cannot support itself, the sides fall without it, and all must rest on the foundation: it is true there may be foundations without side or top, but it is not an arch. So there may be a good creed without personal faith, or holy living, as many nominal Christians and so-called Christian churches prove.

Does the New Testament require separation from worldly affinities?

In Rev. 2: 20, the Lord of the church said: "I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach, and to seduce my servants to commit fornication and to eat things sacrificed to idols." Compare this with Ex. 34: 15: "Lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land and go a whoring after their gods, and do sacrifice unto their gods, and one call thee and thou eat of their sacrifices." This latter passage forbids a covenant with the Canaanites; and the former in nearly the same language, condemns the practice in the church of Thyatira. In a similar manner the Spirit rebuked the church of Smyrna: "But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, that taught Baalak to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed to idols, and to commit fornication." So also thou hast them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate." By these examples we see the church should keep herself clear of such corruptors.

We now invite attention to an explicit rule, and reasons therefor, found in 2 Cor. 6: 14: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." All alliances that give unbelievers undue influence over Christians must be avoided. All combinations that bind as a yoke; not the marriage contract alone, as some think, or church covenant, but it must apply to all unions where the worldly mind can hold a controlling influence over the believer. Or where fellowship is implied; "for what communion hath light with darkness? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols, for ye are the temple of the living God." "For God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them, and I will be their God and they shall be my people." Wherefore, come out from among them, and be separate saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you and will be a father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord God Almighty." Rev. 18: 4: "I heard a voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her my people, that ye be not partaker of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." Take note of this. While we remain in any connection we are held accountable for their sins, and are liable to their punishment.

The church of believers should be the one and sufficient organized agency, her covenant the only bond of union, Christ's yoke the only yoke believers should wear. "She is the pillar and ground of the truth." Her mission the salvation of the world. The only God-appointed agency to rescue men from sin and destruction. She alone, unaided by any combination, and any confederacy formed by her or her members, will prove what Egypt did to the Jews, a broken reed to pierce the hand. The moral and religious elevation of mankind must come by this God-appointed agency, and can come by no other. The believer working in any moral reform should do it as a Christian. If there is any charity the church is the proper almoner. Is there any personal work to be performed, visiting the sick, clothing the naked, helping the needy, why should Christians perform such work in the name of any other than that of Christ? Why should they give their glory to another? Why should the members of the church of Christ go aside to do through another agency what she is abundantly able to perform? and thus help to establish an influence that will be regarded by many as a rival of the church, a successful rival in good works, charities so called.

The charity that Jesus taught, and illustrated in his own life, was altogether a different thing from that which is called charity by the secret societies.

"He that was rich became poor, that we through his poverty might be made rich." Mutual obligations are assumed by the members of these secular organizations, to visit and care for the sick. What reward or merit here? They take the chances of health or sickness together; they ask credit for taking care of their own, and would have the world esteem them charitable, though they should never enter the sick room of any one not under their obligation to serve them in return.

Shall we entertain strangers and open our doors to the wayfarer? Yes, if they give us the correct sign of the brotherhood.

Is that hospitality, that says I will oblige you now, and when I come your way shall expect as much in return? Bible hospitality is, "Be ye careful to entertain strangers." And the Saviour teaches in the parable of the good Samaritan the character of good neighborhood.

The abuse of sacred names, and the assumption of virtues, is not all that the Christian will find in these confederacies; he will find the use of Bible lessons, intended or calculated to induce men to believe that the institution must be good because their lessons are drawn from the Sacred Scriptures. Satan can quote the Scriptures, but is none the less a devil.

But what sober-minded Christian man ever entered blindfold into the lodge-room amid noise, confusion, and clattering chains, without feeling a doubt pass over his mind whether all this confusion was consistent with his dignity as a child of God, a disciple of Christ? Having entered he must proceed to take the vows, of what and for what he knows not. Jesus said, "Thou shalt not forswear thyself;" but now he must swear to what he does not know. More degrees follow, more fees, more oaths, more biting of conscience. He hears the Bible say, "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." He cannot well retreat; his pride and his conscience hold fierce debate; generally conscience has to yield, but is not convinced.

What next? The lodge must be flattered. But all hope for help to the cause of Christ from such confederacies are failures, first or last. I knew a church that had a Masonic building committee, who thought to secure help from that quarter, by getting Masons to lay the cornerstone of their house of worship. They came; their marshal was a miserably sot who was so drunk that he could scarcely keep his feet or use his tongue. After this insult and humiliation, the aid from that quarter was less than it would have been if they had not conferred this distinguished favor on the church, as it had cost the Masons so much to meet the expenses in securing the attendance of the officiating dignitaries.

It is true beyond question that the union of professors of religion with these confederacies confirms many in the opinion that these societies are doing a work that the church cannot do, for they ask, Why should Christians join them if the church is competent to do this work? "We have," say they, "the good of the Scripture in our lessons, and the practice of charity in our lives, and we excel the church in our good works: for the best of the church come to us; therefore, we have no need to go to the church." So many are cheated out of their soul's eternal welfare; hugging a delusion to their unbelieving hearts they perish, and their Christian brother stands by utterly helpless, quite unable to convince them of the error, because he himself, by his position, has confirmed this error.

We are told, "A man cannot be a good Mason or Odd-fellow without being a Christian, as the lessons are drawn from the Bible, and a man must have the grace of God to help him keep these precepts." If a man must be a Christian to be a good Mason, then the institution that qualifies him so to be, is better than the other, for it has no power to make him a Christian, and he has no power to do any Christian work in the order. In the ante-chamber the candidate is told the order will not interfere with his religious or political opinions, be they what they may. A Turk, a Jew, and a Mormon stand beside the Christian and hear the same assurance, enter and receive the same lessons, get the same instructions, and take the same oaths, and find no fault. Tell me, then, is only one of these four a good Mason? or a good member of the order into which they have all entered? If so, then three are bad members, and the rule of the majority must place the government in the hands of the bad, and the good minority must submit. Will such a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit?

Christ says, "Make the tree good and the fruit will be good." These say, keep your own religion but obey the rules of the order, and all will be right; but the Christian member will say he cannot obey the rules of the order without the grace of Jesus Christ, but he dare not say it in the lodge, for these orders have no Christ—cannot have, for it would be a stumbling-block to the Jew, and an insult to the Mohammedan, an interference with their religious opinions, a violation of the pledge given at the door of every such confederacy.

Now the disciple has gone where his Master's name must not be mentioned. Shall this compromise of the foundation of our holy religion be made with the hope that the few fragments of truth culled from the Bible will make men good Christians? God pity the blindness of such hood winked Christians.

The pretensions of Masonry exceed all others. She pretends great antiquity, great dignity, great purity, and very great efficiency. Were it possible for the order to keep its secrets, it cannot keep from the light of day its outside character; and as to its pretensions there is no secret, for the boastful proclamations of them are smile-provoking.

One of her most profound and eloquent eulogists, from a Christian pulpit in my hearing, said, "It could be traced back into the remote ages of antiquity, almost to the days of Noah." Then lest we should think to the building of Babel, he said, "at least to the days of Moses." He also claimed for it the patronage of John the Baptist; and asserted that, "in his day, Jesus had constituted more lodges than any man before him." The only answer such blasphemy requires is to state it. John in the wilderness building up Masonry! Christ, whose kingdom was not of this world, constituting Christless lodges! How Christian men can confederate with an order that can so insult the name of Jesus is more than I know. No Christ in its ritual, and boasts of a world-wide membership, Jew, Pagan, or Mohammedan, all alike good Masons!

Allow me to quote still more from the same eloquent expounder of the beauties and boasts of Masonry. The speaker was an accredited officer who came to install the officers of a lodge, and is said to be one of "the highest of them all." He said that Masonry was an oblong square "reaching from the center of earth to the center of heaven; it takes men from the quarry of earth, educates them up into the moral law, and makes them fit for the kingdom of heaven."

"Is that Masonry?" I asked him. He answered me that it was. This question has been answered in the affirmative by every high Mason that I have asked. If it is sound Masonic doctrine, Christ has died in vain. A higher than Masonic authority has said, that "by the deeds of the law no flesh can be justified."

If this is correct Masonry, I cannot see how any man professing to be a Christian minister can fellowship it, and remain in such a confederacy. And how can any man with a Christian conscience preach Christ as the only way of salvation in his pulpit, and in the lodge swear to such anti-Christian doctrine? He may pretend to "mental reservation," but neither God on the one hand nor Masonry on the other have made any provision for such mental reservation. The non-professing Mason laughs to scorn the exhortation of such a preacher, and must hold in contempt the character of professing Christians who thus set aside Christ, and put the keys of heaven's gate into the hand of a confederacy that has no part or lot in Christ.

Let us see how they keep the Fourth Command of the moral law. A high Mason in the city of Fort Wayne died on Monday, and by his order the corpse was kept for interment till the next Sunday, that the fraternity might gather from all the country round, with great pomp and parade, to give to the earth the corrupting carcass of an aged sinner. Special trains are run on all the railways for a hundred miles around, breaking up the Sabbath quiet of the churches along the several lines, and, with bands and banners, parade and confusion, disturbing all the congregations in the city. This posing pageant is at the funeral of a man who by Masonry had been educated, as supposed, "up into the moral law," but by his own request provided that that law should be set aside that his vanity might be humored; and he that is a violator of one of the least is guilty of all.

So are men "beguiled from the simplicity of Christ" into the pomp and vanities of this wicked world, that they give more to the lodge to be spent in room rent, or building, expenses of officials, fees, equipment, insignia of office, and regalia, music and banqueting, by a hundred fold, than is spent in pure Gospel charity by the same, or than the same church member even thought to give for the Gospel's spread in the world. God will not give his glory to another, nor his praise to graven images. Is he not displeased when his people thus scatter their ways to strangers, and hinder the effect of the Gospel, weakening the force of truth by such deceitful alliances, which must lessen the attachment to the church and throw discredit on her fair name?

Do you stand at the church door on prayer-meeting evening and look up and down the street for comers, but look in vain? You had forgotten this is, "lodge night," and Deacon B. and brother C. hold offices, and must be there at the special call for the meeting of the lodge. The preacher and the sisters may hold prayer-meeting, but the brethren have business to attend to. "Come out from among them," says God, "lest ye be partaker of their sins and plagues." "No man can serve two masters." "One is your Master even Christ." To please and obey Master Mason, will certainly displease Him who alone has the right to your services; and if Christ is served and despised first and all the time, Master Mason cannot be.

The genius and spirit of Christianity and Masonry are wholly unlike and opposed. Christianity is meek and lowly; Masonry haughty and pompous. Christianity loves its enemies and seeks the good of all men; the other loves them that love it, and honors those who bow down to it. This is hospitable to strangers; the other to the brotherhood. Christianity protects the rights of all men; Masonry of the order. Pure religion keeps itself "unsponsored from the world," the other is of the world, and for the world. The religion of Jesus is benevolent, disinterested; were the prospects of selfish, personal advantage taken away from all these secret institutions they would crumble into ruins more rapidly than they have risen. Jesus says, "Except a man deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me, he cannot be my disciple." The church welcomes to its fellowship and help, the poor, the aged, the halt, the blind, throwing its shield around the defenseless and the orphan; but not one of these could enter the circle of secret fellowship; its charities are for those who are not likely ever to need aid.

In the foregoing we see:

1. God, for wise and high purposes, has called his people out of the world, setting them apart and consecrating them wholly to himself, that they should serve him alone, trust in him alone, loving him and serving him in "spirit and in truth."
2. We have seen that all confederacies made with the world by the church have proved, like the shrines and images adopted by the people of Israel to accommodate their neighbors, to be gins and snares.
3. That whatever makes us servants of men, makes us so much less the servants of Christ.
4. We find them proved boastful, pompous, unlike Christ, the meek and lowly.

REFORM NEWS.

OUTLOOK FOR THE KNOXVILLE ANNIVERSARY.

President J. S. McCulloch writes: "I shall assist Bro. Hinman all I can in making arrangements for a successful convention. I hope we may have both judicious and forcible addresses, and at the same time, not lacking in popular attractiveness."

Pres. E. M. Cravath writes from Nashville: "I trust the Knoxville convention will be a great success. I have written inviting Pres. C. A. Blanchard to spend Sabbath, the 26th, with us, and address the students in the evening. Should be glad to have a visit from yourself or any of the friends," etc.

Bro. B. A. Ives, from Memphis, writes that his expenses are all that is in the way of his attendance, and inviting speakers to Memphis.

Pres. E. H. Fairchild, of Berea, writes words of approval and cheer, but pressure of college and home duties, increased by the illness of Bro. J. G. Fee, will prevent his attendance.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., Xenia, O., writes: "It would afford me great pleasure to be present at the place of my birth and many friends.... Without either accepting or declining I will just say that if health and home duties permit I will try and be there, but you must not depend upon me."

Elder J. F. Browne, now in Wisconsin, will take in the convention on his return to Berea. Rev. V. P. Clark, of Athens, Ga., is hindered only by lack of funds. Bro. Hinman has been enlisting recruits for months and will report with his grand army at the opening session. There will be a delegation of six or more purchasing tickets in this city, and with faith in God, prayer for a divine baptism, and works proportioned to the interests at stake, there seems nothing in the way of a grand victory at the opening convention of what we expect to be a grand campaign in the South. The Masonic rallying cry is,

"Onward! and all earth shall aid us.

Ere our peaceful flag be furled,

Masonry at last shall conquer,

And its altar be the world."

Let us take for our motto the 121st Psalm, and be as bold and aggressive for Christ and his church as the craft is for Satan and his secret pagan worship.

J. P. STODDARD.

AMONG THE SOUTHERN MOUNTAINS.

From Talladega to Atlanta.—A faithful Pastor and a Christian church.—The Prohibition City of the South needs more and better prohibition.—Discourteous and un-Christian reception of Bro. Hinman.—Over the ridge into North Carolina.—Miss Prudden's School for Girls.

ALL HEALING, N. C., Dec. 6.
DEAR CYNOSURE:—I left Talladega, Alabama, Dec. 2nd and went to Anniston, twenty miles northeast. This is a flourishing manufacturing town, with three turnaces and rolling mills, and one of the grandest hotels in the South. A large proportion of the laborers here are white, and they have about the usual proportion of secret societies. Not so with the colored. The oldest and most successful colored church is the Congregational, under the care of Rev. Mr. Conley, a graduate of Talladega, and in earnest sympathy with our work. He had done what he could to discourage the organization of such societies, and has kept them out of his church. They have about 80 communicants. The congregation has outgrown their first house of worship, and a new one is nearly completed, which will be a fine building. I was greatly interested in this dear brother and his excellent wife, who is also a Talladega graduate. I met here Prof. Wilson who is teaching the colored public school. He is a graduate of the State Normal School at Marion, and a member of Mr. Conley's church.

It did not seem practicable to have a meeting at that time, and at 3 o'clock next morning I took the train on the Georgia & Pacific railroad for Atlanta, Ga. Though it is quite an inland city, yet there are sharks even there and they lurk in restaurants. It was my misfortune to get into one of these places, where all kinds of wine are advertised to be sold in bottles. I had to pay 50 cts. for a lunch that would have cost me 10 cts. in Chicago. I went to the Atlanta University and attended the morning exercises, after which I called on the acting president, Prof. Bumstead. Hear I struck the first iceberg I have found in the South. Instead of the kind reception and generous hospitality I have met with at all the other schools of the A. M. A., and heretofore at this place, I was very politely—bowed out. Prof. Francis, however, received me most kindly and expressed a cordial sympathy with our work. A Masonic professor, who I had hoped had forgotten his unholy covenants, seemed rather to have forgotten his accustomed civility.

I next went to the Baptist Theological Seminary, under the care of Rev. Dr. Graves. I found him busy with his recitations, but kind and sympathetic. He said he could arrange for me to address the students next Monday. It did not seem practicable for me to stay till Monday, with nothing meantime to do; so I bought a ticket and at 2:30 p. m. started for King's Mountain, N. C. The Piedmont Route, from Atlanta to Washington and the North, passes through Virginia and the Carolinas. It is much patronized, has good coaches and makes quick time. We reached King's Mountain at 11:30 p. m., and in the morning found it snowing and severely cold. I would have been glad to visit the military school at this place. It has about 150 young men who are being prepared for the business of homicide. I hope they learn something else, and better than this. A brisk ride of five miles over the hills brought me to this place, with its romantic, but indescribable scenery; its twelve springs of different kinds of water, which are called "All Healing"; its grand hotel, and, perched on the mountain side, the excellent young ladies' seminary under the care of Miss E. C. Prudden. About sixty-seven young ladies are here receiving the instruction usually given in such institutions. It is a much needed and excellent work, and not less important than the colored education to which the A. M. A. devotes its energies. I had the pleasure of preaching to the assembled school, and am assured that every one is a professed Christian. As they have no place of religious worship nearer than two miles they are a little religious world by themselves, a sort of Protestant nunnery, with the exception of things of popery left out. The storm still continues and the snow is of unusual depth for this region, but shows signs of thawing. I expect to leave here for Charlotte in Mecklinberg county, where I hope to find friends to our reform.

Dec. 8, 1886.—The storm has ceased and the skies are bright, but the snow still lies heavy on the ground. I lectured last night to the assembled school and had excellent attention. There are some excellent minds and hearts here, which well repay the culture bestowed on them. The great need of the people of the mountain region is better facilities for education. North Carolina is much behind Tennessee in this respect. I go to Charlotte, N. C., and thence west to Knoxville, Tenn.

H. H. HINMAN.

NOBLE MEN BACK OF THE IOWA WORK.

A striking incident.—Shameless falsehood proves the parrotage of Masonry.—A Noble Church.—Future Work.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—After the meeting held by Bro. Gault and myself at Quasqueton, Buchanan Co., I went to Fayette county. I had sent an appointment to lecture to the Norwegian Lutheran churches. But the friend to whom I sent the appointment failed to see the Lutheran minister, and so notice was not given. I, however, preached twice in the village of Elgin, and then took the train for Hopkinton, Delaware county.

While at Elgin, an old friend related a conversation with a Freemason of Fayette county. Said the Mason, "You remember the time Pres. C. A. Blanchard lectured at Clearmont?"

"Yes," said my friend. "I was there."

"Well," said the craftsman, "you know several of the Masons contradicted Mr. Blanchard; called him a liar, and affirmed there was no truth in what he said when they knew that every word Mr. Blanchard uttered was true, and they were lying when they denied it. I was in the congregation," said this accuser of his brethren, "but I would not give myself away, by denying what Mr. Blanchard said, when I knew he was telling the truth."

What a dreadful thing it is that Masonry goes right on swearing men to ever conceal what they know has been revealed; and hence, can not now be concealed except by duplicity and falsehood! What a brazen falsehood that Mason tells, who affirms that Masonry has not been revealed; that only those who have been made Masons can know anything about it! Is it worth while for Masons to brave the wrath of Almighty God, who declares that all liars shall have their part in the lake of fire, which is the second death, by denying that Masonry has been correctly revealed, when candid, adhering Masons have repeatedly testified under oath that the ceremonies, oaths, and penalties of Freemasonry are as Morgan, Bernard, Ronayne, Doesburg and others have revealed them to be.

Just the other day a friend told me how a tricky young man, who had posted himself in Masonry, by studying Mr. Ronayne's expose, put on Masonic jewelry, and gave Masonic signs, and when Masonically tested demonstrated to the craftsmen that he was a Son of Hiram. Yea, so arrogant did this student of Ronayne become, that he badgered old Masons, who were not as bright as himself, telling them that he doubted whether they were Masons at all. The old tools were obliged to own that they were rusty, and to accord to this book worm the singular pre-eminence of being the brightest Mason in the country.

In the light of such facts, what a burning shame it is that some Masonic ministers of the Gospel will still affirm, "If you have not been made a Mason you can't know anything about it." Happily the number of those who will unblushingly lie, to conceal the fact that Masonry has been revealed is growing less and less, and let us hope that soon they will be an extinct species of men, as the mastodon is of animals.

At Hopkinton I spent a day among the Covenanters. I received $3.50 cash donation for the Iowa Association and took six new subscriptions to the Cynosure. When you remember that I took twelve new subscriptions when I lectured in the Covenanter church of Hopkinton a week before, and that all but one were members of that church we have seventeen new subscribers to the Cynosure from that one Covenanter church of 100 members. (Grand!—Ed.) And, but for the fact that my arrangement required me to go forward, I might have taken several more subscriptions in Mr. Acheson's congregation.

When the Scotch Irish Covenanters' attention is called to the fact that Ancient Craft Masonry ignores and rejects Christ Jesus as the one mediator between God and men; and binds by oath its votaries to sin and Satan, instead of to Christ, his old time loyalty to Christ as king of saints and nations is stirred; and you may expect to find him in the front rank, battling with Christ against this great Masonic anti-Christ. When Dr. A. M. Milligan, with whom in Western Pennsylvania I had fought the battle of Christ against the Masonic dragon of paganism and infidelity, passed to his reward, I mourned, feeling that a mighty man, and a prince in Israel had fallen. That great and good man won my admiration for his heroic devotion to Christ and truth. Since I have become acquainted with the Iowa Covenanters, I can but feel that the mantle of the illustrious dead has fallen upon them; and admire in them the same pre-eminent devotion to principle.

I am now at Andrew, the former county seat of Jackson county, where I expect again to meet with Sec. M. A. Gault of the National Reform Association. From here I expect to go to Jefferson county, and thence to Van Buren, Monroe, Wayne, Ringgold, Taylor and Page counties. Will friends on that route, who wish lectures, immediately address me at Wayne, Henry Co. Iowa. C. F. HAWLEY.

THE WISCONSIN CAMPAIGN.

The Situation Around Portage.—Lectures far Below Zero.—Brethren Collins and Lowe, and Masonic "Benewolence."—Work in Waushara and Columbia Counties.

FRIENDS OF THE CAUSE:—November 29 I lectured for the third time in the Seventh Day Baptist chapel south of Berlin to a small, but evidently interested audience, and the next evening gave a Gospel talk at the same place. The friends there made a kind donation to the cause, and my visit was very pleasant to me and, I trust, not unprofitable to them. The Clarks, Burnside, Bakers, and Wellses rendered me special favors.

Dec. 1 I went to Springvale north of Rio, going first to Portage, where there was no immediate opportunity for anti-secrecy work. But though there is but little reform sentiment in Portage itself, if we except Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Hurlburt and Father Whitney, yet there is a very considerable anti-lodge sentiment in the country around, some of it active and much more of it mostly latent, and I here record a pointer for my successor in the Wisconsin work; make Portage a base of operations, and spend months in working around it, lecturing, preaching, and organizing, and close with a convention in Portage itself.

Dec. 2 I lectured in the Jennings school-house, Springvale. Here is a community in which our reform lecturers always find aid and comfort. The school-house was well filled, though but a few hours' notice was had, and the weather was still very cold. As more time was needed by friends to arrange for further work, I went to Coloma on the 3d, starting two hours or so before sun-rise and riding sixteen miles to Portage in order to get there in time for train. The weather was intensely cold, and my suffering assured me of the wisdom and need of going to Kentucky soon. At Coloma station I was met by our old and tried friend, Thomas Lowe. All will be glad to hear that though his Masonic "brethren" have injured him much financially, though they have succeeded in preventing him from getting the pension he deserves for the crooked and weak spine he got in the service of his country in the war, yet they have not succeeded in their long attempt to defraud him of the title to his little farm, and by the favor of our covenant-keeping God, Bro. Lowe is in a fair way to secure a comfortable home for himself and family in his declining years, though the country there is poor, and settlers can hardly hope to much more than live. But this is the rule for Christians, "Having food and raiment let us therewith be content."

Bro. Lowe had received very short notice of my coming, by telegraph, and the cold weather continued over Sunday, the 5th, as low as 22 deg. below zero being reported, yet a fair audience gathered on Friday, Dec. 3, to a lecture in the Congregational chapel, Coloma Corners. Here I was gladdened again at meeting our long-tried fellow-reformer, Bro. Enos Collins, who in spite of much loss by Masonic intrigue and shameless perversion of justice in courts, still holds his ground and maintains his old-time testimony against the lodge "mystery of iniquity."

Saturday afternoon I gave a Bible-reading at a meeting of Seventh Day Baptists at the house of Bro. Richmond at Coloma Corners, and in the evening lectured in the school-house at Coloma station to a good-sized and attentive audience. Sunday morning I preached at Coloma station, when two persons professed a desire to become Christians. That evening I preached at the Corners. It having been previously asked that I should lecture in Deerfield township, if possible, I went there (12 miles northeast of Coloma) on the 6th, with Bro. Richmond, and lectured in a school-house that evening to a good congregation gathered on short notice. Here I made the acquaintance of brethren Hamel and Green, and took Bro. Hamel's subscription for the Cynosure.

Dec. 7 I returned to Portage, expecting to lecture that evening to the congregation of Bro. A. P. Gillett (Free Methodist pastor) out in the country, but the plan for some reason failed, so I preached in the Free Methodist chapel in Portage, where a protracted meeting was in progress. On the 8th I lectured in Rio, and on the 9th in Wyocena, by arrangement of Springvale friends assisted by Dr. A. J. Townsend, of Wyocena, whose hospitality I enjoyed while there. I was assisted financially by Bros. Geo. Cowley and A. C. Jennings.

To-night, Dec. 10, I am stopping at Kilbourn City, on my way to Menomonie, waiting for the early morning train. I find that our old friend, W. H. Peabody, of this place, died last August.

My remaining appointments are, after spending the Sabbath at Menomonie, as follows:

Buck Creek, Richland County.....	December 14, 15;
Excelsior, " " " " " " " " " "	16, 17;
Bethel, Spring Grove and Martin, Green County	18-20;
Oxfordville, Rock County.....	21, 22.

Pray for God's blessing on the work.

J. F. BROWNE.

THE OUTLOOK IN ALABAMA.

SELMA, Ala.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—It gives me pleasure to communicate to you an account of the reviving of the work of the National Christian Association in Alabama. We have recently had a visit from Bro. Hinman. He spoke in four different churches of the city. In one of these he also lectured. He had very good audiences at each time and was listened to with excellent attention. On the evening of the 25th a meeting was held in the basement of the R. P. church, which was a reorganizing of the Alabama Association opposed to secret societies. New members were enrolled, and officers elected for the ensuing year. The officers are as follows: President, J. H. Pickens, Selma; Vice-Presidents, Rev. G. W. Andrews, D.D., Talladega; Dr. Jesse Ward, Partridge; Rev. F. G. Ragland, Mobile; Rev. A. W. Curtis, Mobile. Secretary, G. M. Elliott, Selma. Treasurer, Rev. C. B. Curtis, Selma. While the meeting was not largely attended yet we feel that good was done. The discussion of topics, and the removing of objections by Bro. Hinman encouraged those already in the field and did much to lead others to see their duty with reference to the lodge.

We feel that another nail has been driven in a sure place. We think the lodge power is waning among the more intelligent colored people. They are beginning to feel and see that secret societies are evil in their tendency and are not true to what they profess. Every year members are leaving them and pronouncing them a fraud. We feel that the Cynosure is doing a good work among the colored people. Wherever it goes and is carefully read it will blockade the way of lodge success. Sincerely yours,
G. M. ELLIOTT.

CLEARING AWAY THE COBWEBS OF IDOLATRY.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Closed meetings last evening at Batavia; had a fine congregation of at least six hundred of Batavia's best citizens. It was a pleasure to talk to such an audience. Although a large number of Masons and their families were present, close and respectful attention was given to the lecture and exhibition throughout. Many of them listened with their mouths open and seemed to be fully absorbed in the subject as one after another, pictures of the "Sixteen Crucified Saviours" were thrown on the curtain and the death and resurrection of each was described and explained. The thought had never before occurred to them that all of these, even the death and resurrection of Hiram the builder, as well as that of Baal, Osiris, Adonis, etc., were all allegories, based on the great phenomenon of nature, the sun killed by winter, and as the tears of the three ruffians were shed and moanings uttered because they had killed their Grand Master Hiram Abiff, they could see repeated the ancient custom of "Women weeping for Tammuz," people crying aloud to Baal, etc., that these were to imitate the weeping of nature, as in the winter, (the death period of the sun) the earth is covered with rain, snow, ice, or tears. The distinction was clearly shown between natural religion, or idolatry, and the revealed religion of the Bible.

Although Music Hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, there was not the slightest attempt to create any disturbance. An Old fellow came to me after it was over and said, "That was a center shot and no one could dodge it." I would suggest that as soon as practicable a convention be held at Batavia, and think it would be well attended.

From here I go to Elgin, where, although there is much going on preparing for holiday excitement, I hope to drive at least an entering wedge under the great mass of Masonry that seems to hang like a dead weight on the churches.

Yours in Christ, I. R. B. ARNOLD.

BE FILLED WITH THE SPIRIT.—I would advise you to keep short accounts with God. If you think you have grieved the Spirit, go to God and find it out and get restored. As the Spirit always testifies of Christ, so a man filled with the Spirit will exalt Christ; he will not be talking much about himself. Sometimes it is a very fine line that separates the leading of the Spirit from the promptings of our own feelings and emotions; we must, therefore, keep ourselves well acquainted with God's Word, so as to be guided by its principles in any particular course. Be careful in choosing the time and place when you speak to individuals about spiritual things; great harm is sometimes done by speaking at the wrong time. If you are guided by the Spirit you will know how to act. Remember that you can draw people, but you cannot drive them. It takes much wisdom to win men to the Saviour. We should not have to wait long for this baptism of the Spirit, if we did not have to come to the end of ourselves; sometimes that is a long road.—D. L. Moody.

At the recent Convention of State Liquor Dealers, at Troy, N. Y., resolutions were presented asking the Legislature of 1887 to repeal obnoxious restrictive laws, and to pass a law authorizing the sale of liquor after church on Sunday.

A NATIONAL REFORM CONVENTION FOR CHICAGO.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Seven cities competed for the honor of being the birthplace of Homer. The National Reform Association is seeking to have this nation enjoy the honor of being the first to bring back King Jesus whom the Jewish nation rejected, and exalt him to the throne in this land. Our hope is that this nation will soon lift up its soul to him in loyal subjection and say:

"Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown him Lord of all."

Last Sabbath morning I preached in the Trinity M. E. church, Youngstown, O. This is an old and substantial congregation. They have 505 members and a Sabbath-school of 560, the children of their own families. They have a new stone church, costing $80,000. It is a little given to what Douglas Jerrold calls "loud embellishments." But it is admirably adapted to their needs. Their pastor, Rev. D. C. Osborn, a whole-souled, earnest worker, is in his third year and must soon part with it. The seats were filled and a finer audience I never saw. At noon and again in the evening I preached in the Welch church, of which Rev. Lot Lake is pastor.

On Monday morning I met with the city pastors in the Y. M. C. A. parlors. Their subject was: "The relation of the minister to politics." Rev. Chas. S. Long, of the First Disciple church, read the paper. From a literary standpoint, it was a good production. His first position, that the minister's work lies in the sphere of morals, was correct. But his second, that politics is a field outside of this which he may not enter, was not well taken. The preacher should not go as a politician; but as a preacher of righteousness he must. The trouble with our politics is, we do not have enough morals in them. What we need is a severe application of the Ten Commandments to them. His third position, that the pulpit must not deal with politics, because there are Republicans, Democrats and Prohibitionists in the pews, and it would create divisions among them, does not savor much of the John Knox sentiment: "I am in a place where I am demanded of conscience to speak the truth, and therefore the truth I speak, impugn it whoso list." The brethren generally coincided with the paper. Said one: "Hold up the life and teachings of our Lord before the people and let politics take care of themselves. It is like the Dutch preacher. He said his text yesterday had been, 'Be ye smart as snakes and kind as pigeons,' and he told them they ought to have one ounce of snake to a pound of pigeon." There were a few, however, old-fashioned enough to think that the preacher ought to apply the moral law to political as well as domestic, social and commercial life.

The executive committee of the National Reform Association met in the parlors of the Y. M. C. A., Pittsburgh, Pa., Tuesday, 2 p. m., and continued until noon the next day. Mr. John Alexander, the father of the movement, and Rev. T. P. Stevenson, D. D., Cor. Sec., were in from Philadelphia. Hon. Felix R. Brunot, presided the first session. Feeble health prevented his attending subsequently. Mr. Alexander presided in the evening and morning. Revs. Leiper and Weir and the other secretary gave encouraging reports. The treasurer, Prof. D. McAllister, reported nearly $3,000 collected this year thus far. The Christian Statesman Co. has been incorporated and has obtained its charter. Mr. Alexander holds the larger portion of the shares. It was resolved to hold the next National Reform Convention in Chicago, the last of April, 1887. It is expected that Rev. Joseph Cook, the Boston Monday lecturer, will be one of the speakers.

On Thursday evening I lectured in the United Presbyterian church at Stewart, Rev. A. D. McCarrall pastor. Although the night was intensely cold, quite a number of brave hearts came out. As Rev. S. S. Gilson, an editor of the Herald and Presbyter, Cincinnati, said: "Western Pennsylvania is full of National Reformers, and they give to the collection every time." A very creditable collection was lifted. They remember the visit of Bro. Coleman five years ago, as also Bro. Weir's last winter. I was entertained at Bro. McCarrall's home in a princely way. His earnest prayers for the cause and the hearty approvals from his people and their wishes that God would bless the good work, cheered and strengthened my heart.

Not long since I visited Cannonsburg, Pa. On Sabbath evening I preached for Rev. Smiley, of the First United Presbyterian church. Rev. Speer, of the Second church, assisted in the service. We had a fine audience and received a good collection. We drove down by the old Jefferson College building. It suggested many thoughts. Here Drs. Hays and Sloane, and Revs. Gregg, R. D., and J. W. Sproull were educated. Here Drs. Sloane and Willson had their celebrated debate on the question: "Was the destruction of the Roman Pagan Empire a blessing?" And here Dr. Sloane delivered his famous oration in 1861 on "The Three Pillars of the Republic, Religion, Law and Liberty." He closed with a reference to the raising of an Eastern obelisk, at which the emperor enjoined absolute silence. It was death to speak while it was going up. When it reached a certain point it ceased to rise. All was breathless suspense. A workman mounted a pillar and shouted "Wet the ropes!" The North has lifted the South as far as she can with slavery. At the peril of my life I say it, "Free the slaves!" The house was about equally divided between friends and foes. The hisses and cheers were about half and half. The Doctor walked the stage like a lion at bay. He triumphed. The following morning the students met to determine whether they would ask for a copy of the speech for publication. The vote was a tie. At this juncture Rev. D. Gregg came in and gave the casting vote. The address was published. We passed the birthplace of Rev. Geo. P. Hays, D. D., an old-time friend of National Reform, whose name in that community is as ointment poured forth.

On Monday evening I attended a prohibition meeting in Hickory, and was called out first. You know the little elephant is sent out first to try the strength of the ice. Rev. Smiley followed. He said, Miss Willard had carried the white flag to the Republican convention in Chicago and they rejected it. Then she took it to the Democratic convention and they would not have it. And last she brought it to the Prohibition convention and they accepted. And there it will remain until they carry it to Washington and place it in the hand of the statue of Liberty on the Capitol, where it will abide until the last trump shall sound. On Tuesday evening I attended another prohibition meeting at McDonald. The town hall was filled. The first hour was given to me. The audience seemed to recognize that National Reform was the under current of prohibition. Mr. W. H. H. Bartram, of Buffalo, N. Y., editor of the XVth Amendment, followed. He told us he had delivered 4,100 lectures in the last ten years, more than one a day. One year ago there were two prohibition voters in McDonald. This fall there were twenty. Thus prohibition is being set back.

THE MINISTERS OF NEW ORLEANS.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 30, 1886.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Peace be unto thee and unto all the true Israel of God. Inasmuch as I know you to be struggling on and on in truth amid enemies on every side, you will wish to know how the truth is marching forward in the land of Dixie. Thank God and the N. C. A. for sending so valiant a warrior as Rev. H. H. Hinman down here to New Orleans to preach and lecture. I had just prayed God the day before Bro. Hinman came that he would send through the N. C. A. some one to lecture on lodgism. Since I have been writing and preaching against secretism, I have been upbraided and pointed at and evil spoken of, and indeed many other wrongs they (the secretists) have attempted to do me. Some said it is old negroism. Others said it is old fegism, and no intelligent man says they would dare speak against secret societies, notwithstanding the evil here before their eyes that secret societies have done. But what gives the secretists such a stronghold here, many ministers preach Masonry from their pulpits. In the midst of all this I am fighting on, knowing the battle is not given to the strong. "The battle is the Lord's and he will give it to whom he please."

Thank God, the following ministers (colored) are preaching against the lodge: Rev. S. S. Jackson, Common St. Baptist church; Rev. H. C. Green, Shiloh Baptist church; Rev. John Mart, Sixth Baptist church; Rev. Chas. Williams, Amizion Baptist church; and some others. The above named are of the most intelligent colored ministers in the city. Numerous others are becoming disgusted with the lodge; but many of them are either ashamed or afraid of their throat-cutting obligations; and therefore they fail to obey God and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness but rather reprove them," so they are content to come out themselves and warn no one else.

I am much encouraged to see your efforts for the N. C. A. convention in December and the Christian Congress of Feb'y, '87. God permitting I would be indeed glad to attend either, but being so very scant of financial matter, I cannot. This has been the dullest season for business for many years; acknowledged to be so by the oldest and best citizens. It is largely and almost entirely due to the Labor Unionists, and other combinations. A laboring man, with few exceptions, cannot work here this season of year except he is either a longshoreman, cotton-yard man, screwman, drayman or teamster or loader, or some other Knight of Labor, or something like. Therefore you can see that these unionists will dictate to the employer whom he must employ and they (the unionists) will not permit another man out of the unions to work.

I was in hope to start this winter out on a lecturing tour against the lodge, but, dullness of the season and scarcity of means will prevent. You and all Christian readers of the Cynosure pray for me and for the churches generally in this part of the land, that God may soon grant that we may be free from our worst enemies, strong drink, tobacco and the secret societies.

FRANCIS J. DAVIDSON.

THREE RIVER CITIES.

MOLINE, Ill., Dec. 4, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—As an interested reader of your valued paper, I will with your leave send you a few jottings from the Three Cities. As all know, Davenport, Rock Island and Moline are each growing steadily; and combined, number nearly 45,000 souls. The principles for which the N. C. A. contends are beginning to assume prominence here. The friends of temperance are holding monthly union meetings this winter. Their first was held on the evening of Nov. 28 at the large hall of the Y. M. C. Association. The audience numbered fully one thousand and was addressed by Rev. Bollen of the First M. E. church and Prof. Olson of Augustana College. Each spoke effectively and forcibly on the dangers of our saloons and the need of their extermination from our midst. The Illinois side of the river will not long consent to have the traffic increased by the refuse of Davenport thrown over to them, when Iowa's governor cleanses that drink-polluted city.

The Knights of Labor are gathering in force in Moline. They have a well-furnished hall and are busily engaged in adding to their numbers, denouncing the Chicago packers and capitalists generally, and almost every week desecrating the Sabbath in one way or another. On Sabbath, Nov. 28, a lady speaker from abroad delivered a political harangue of two hours' duration to the assembled Knights. The address, though containing some redeeming features, could just as well have been given on some week-day evening.

On Saturday evening following almost a tragedy occurred at the same hall. The Knights and their wives to the number of three hundred were enjoying a basket supper when some evil-minded person without raised a false alarm of fire which was quietly hushed. As the means of exit from the third story are of the poorest kind, we trembled for the possible result of a panic.

At a future time I will notice the strength and influence of the fraternities in the above cities. The sentiment on this question is quiet. OBSERVER.

PITH AND POINT.

OUR PAGE OF TESTIMONY.

The 7th page of the Cynosure for a few numbers back should be especially noticed by every American citizen. The notice it contains of those great men ought to be carefully preserved and kept in every family. I have cut it out and put it in a nice frame, for our children and grandchildren to look at. I lived in the days when most of those men did, and knew several of them personally, and well remember when they gave their opinion of Freemasonry and all secret societies. I repeat, that page is worthy a place in every family. When I see the picture of the Morgan Monument, it is a satisfaction to think that I have a little stock in it, and in the Carpenter building, also the publishing house at Washington. If any man ever deserved a monument it is William Morgan, who died for truth's sake.—A. C. MOFFATT, Albion, Iowa.

WORK FOR WINTER EVENINGS.

I am visiting all the intelligent men I know, of evenings, and giving each one a few of the very strongest facts and arguments against secretism and Romanism. I first ask them if a half hour's talk on these subjects will be agreeable to them; and so far I have talked to about twenty, and have not met with a refusal. If Anti-masons will adopt this plan, they can do much good. I make a list of the facts and arguments I desire to give, and find it works well. Many anti-secret people might do more to push our cause. All cannot lecture; but all can visit and talk with much effect, if they will only adopt this plan. Now let us have a grand rally all along the line.—E. J. CHALFANT, York, Pa.

—A committee has been appointed by the National W. C. T. U. to institute an investigation into the present status of the Bible in the schools of the United States. The ladies of the W. C. T. U. purpose using their influence to have the Bible read in all the schools in this country.

SECRETSOCIETIES CONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington, in a letter written a year before his death: "I preside over no lodge, nor have I been in one more than once or twice during the last thirty years."

President Millard Fillmore, J. C. Spencer and others: "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Chief Justice John Marshall: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned as one capable of much evil and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

John Quincy Adams: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

General A. W. Riley: "I hold that the difference between the Christian and a heathen religion is, that one has morality and the other has not. And when our churches refuse to speak of such subjects as slavery, liquor-selling and secret societies, they are becoming heathen religions; that is, religions without morals."

Charles Francis Adams: "Every man who takes a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment were to prove a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield: "In conducting the governments of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but secret orders to be considered, which have agents everywhere—reckless agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

General J. W. Phelps: "All secret organizations are links of one and the same chain which binds men to evil and not to good. The Masonic lodge is the parent source from which all similar modern organizations have emanated and this lodge is now in active operation in every city and considerable village of the country swaying our parties and churches; filling our offices, secular and divine, with its partisans; shaping our political destinies; and teaching a spurious and corrupting morality subversive both of the Christian religion and of free institutions."

Thurloe Weed: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-Masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

A. M. Sullivan, Irish Leader: "I had not studied in vain the history of secret, oath-bound associations. I regarded them with horror. I knew all that could be said as to their advantages in revolutionizing a country, but even in the firmest and best of hands they had a direct tendency to demoralization and are often on the whole more perilous to society than open tyranny."

Hon. Edward Blake, leader in Canadian Parliament, March, 1884: "I am not in favor of State recognition of any secret societies. I have never joined one, though many of my best friends are members of secret societies. But I believe the tendency of secrecy itself to be injurious. I believe that it brings with it the possibility of evil; I believe that it involves a certain amount of sacrifice of individuality and independence, and gives very great facilities for the mislading of members by designing leaders—very great and mischievous facilities for that purpose." "I believe that a great deal of the trouble, social and political, that has occurred in those countries [Europe and America] is due to secret societies."

Hon. Ezra Butler, ex-Governor of Vermont: "One Masonic obligation requires that a Mason shall vote for a brother in preference to any other person of equal qualifications. Is not this political Masonry? The Masons in Vermont are about one-twentieth part of the freemen, and they hold about three-fourths of all the important offices in the State. Is this owing to their superior fitness, or to political Masonry?"

Philo Carpenter: "This saint of God (Moses Stuart) like the old prophets, was satisfied with the institutions and ordinances of God's house, and consequently did not give his influence or aid in supplementing the same with human ordinances and worldly alliances; in other words, he was opposed to secret, oath-bound societies, into which many good men, and even clergymen, have been, and are being 'ensnared.'"

Charles P. Sumner, father of the Senator, and a renouncing Mason: "Masonic engagements, whether they are called oaths, obligations, or promises, ought never to be made. They are not sanctioned by law and are not obligatory. They make it a Masonic crime to divulge that which the good of the community requires should not be concealed."

Hon. Cadwallader C. Colden, Mayor of New York and M. C.: "It is true that I have been a Mason a great number of years, and that I have held very high Masonic offices and honors. It is equally true that I have for a long time ceased to have any connection with the Institution because I have believed, and do now believe, it is productive of much more evil than good. . . . I have long entertained my present opinion, that a man who would eschew all evil should not be a Freemason."

Hon. Seth M. Gates, ex-Mason: "Profoundly convinced by long experience and observation that Freemasonry is an evil and pernicious institution. I wish once more in my advanced age to lift my warning voice publicly against it and all kindred organizations, and to beseech Christian men to have no connection or fellowship with them. Jesus is not, and cannot properly be recognized in Freemasonry. He must be ignored in the lodge-room, in his lectures, instructions, and in his prayers."

Hon. Heman Lincoln, ex-Governor, Mass.: "Freemasonry, as a distinct, independent government within our own government, and beyond the control of the laws of the land, by means of its secrecy and the oaths and regulations which its subjects are bound to obey under penalties of death, has occupied much of the attention of the committee."

"We believe, in the language of the Edinburgh Review, that all secret societies are justly deemed odious, wherever the government is tolerably free, and can only be excused where the existence of arbitrary power, foreign or domestic, leaves no other means of escaping from hopeless slavery."

Henry Dana Ward: "The Masonic fables are told to cover the meanness of Freemasonry's origin; for she, too, sprung from a confederacy of lawless plunderers; and it mortifies the pride of the high priests, it tops the vanity of the Grand Masters, and makes the puissant sovereigns of Freemasonry to tremble for the security of their thrones, to be told that their boasted order sprung from the mire of the Rosicrucians, and spread over the face of the earth upon the licentious cupidity of its speculative fathers,—that it originated in the 18th century among men capable of the most atrocious falsehoods, and base enough to strew their reputation for money, and to barter a good conscience for the delusion of a lodge room."

Gen. Henry Sewall, a companion of Washington: "I was initiated an Entered Apprentice to the Masonic rites in October, 1777, at Albany, soon after the capture of Burgoyne, being then an officer in the American army."

"I was led by the influence of this 'perfect rule of faith and practice,' during the year 1784, to view speculative Masonry in a shape still more deformed. Its charity appeared to be selfishness, because restricted to its own members; its religion deism because entirely devoid of the Gospel. Its history appeared fabulous; its claims to antiquity unsupportable; its titles fulsome; its rites barbarous and absurd; its oaths extra-judicial, unlawfully imposed and blindly taken, and the penal sanctions annexed, horrid and impious."

George Washington (to Gov. Trumbull): "Masonry is a benevolent institution, which may be employed for the best or worst purposes."

Edward Everett: "A secret society so widely diffused and connected as this puts a vast power, capable of the most dangerous abuse, into hands irresponsible to the public."

Richard Rush: Hooker, personifying law, eloquently exclaims, 'her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; everything on earth does her homage, the highest is not beyond her control, the least as claiming her protection.' Masonry has overset this primordial system. She has dethroned this image of God upon earth. To reinstate it over so insolent a victor, we must have a political organization. There is no other way of assaulting, there is no other hope of vanquishing, there need be no other dream of humbling such a foe. It fights with desperation."

Wendell Phillips: "History shows them perverting justice, stopping at no crime to protect and conceal their mummeries; controlling politics for selfish and personal ends, and interfering with great danger in national emergencies. Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are forbidden by law and rooted out of existence."

John Hancock: "I am opposed to all secret associations."

James Madison: "From the number and character of those who now support the charges against Masonry, I cannot doubt that it is at least susceptible of abuse, outweighing any advantages promised by its patrons."

General U. S. Grant: "All secret, oath-bound political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first bring them together."

Myron Holley of New York: "Such a rebellion Freemasonry has raised. It has violated the dearest rights of nature, and the most sacred enactments of our laws, and this in a spirit manifestly treasonable, for it has done this in pursuance of solemn, deliberate and voluntary obligations to a foreign government,—I mean its own—a government far more alien to that which claims our allegiance than any which has ever afflicted mankind."

Gerrit Smith, in an address, 1870: "Masonry murdered Morgan. If it could not conceal his murderers, it nevertheless protected them. It overrode the laws of the land and ruled the courts and the ballot-boxes. Moreover, it is capable of repeating the crimes. Why then should we not dread secret societies, and do what we can to bring them to an end?"

William Wirt: "If this be Masonry, as according to uncontradicted evidence it seems to be, I have no hesitation in saying that I consider it at war with the fundamental principles of the social compact, and a wicked conspiracy against the laws of God and man, that ought to be put down."

Joseph Ritner, governor of Pennsylvania, 1837: "If it be true as the lamented Colden (himself one of the initiated) declared that many a Mason became a great man but no great man ever became a Mason, how nearly does it concern the youth of our country to pause and reflect before they commit their present standing and future reputation to the keeping of a society, which for its cold-hearted and selfish purposes could immolate even the fame of Washington at the shrine of its abominations."

Levis Tappan, private journal, 1814: "Dr. Dixwell gave me lectures on Masonry at his house." "In September left the lodge." Letter, Jan. 21, 1820: "I am free to say that I henceforth renounce Freemasonry, considering it a useless and profane institution."

George Washington, to friends in 1794, quoted by Myron Holley: "The real people occasionally assembled in order to express their sentiments on political sentiments, ought never to be confounded with permanent, self-appointed societies, usurping the right to control constituted authorities, and to dictate to public opinion. While the former was entitled to respect, the latter was incompatible with all government, and must either sink into general dis-esteem, or finally overturn the established order of things."

Charles Francis Adams: "A more perfect agent for the devising and execution of conspiracies against church and state could scarcely have been conceived."

Thaddeus Stevens: "By Freemasonry, trial by jury is transformed into an engine of despotism and Masonic fraud."

Judge Pliny Merriek (a seceded Mason): "If ever a Chapter or a lodge shall establish laws in conflict with those of the state the Masonic requisition is obedience to the lodge and conflict with the state; and if a member hesitates at this humiliating obedience, his heart must be 'torn from his bosom,' his 'vitals plucked from his body,' and Masonic vengeance, not satisfied with this bloody immolation, denies a resting place to the motionless remains, but they are to be 'burnt to ashes and scattered to the winds.'"

Samuel C. Pomeroy, in an address, 1883: "There may be a broad distinction between the good and the bad in secret societies, but as they all alike have oath-bound obligations to complete oblivion of all they do or say, I have no means of judging the good from the bad. So I turn away from them all to the great Teacher who said, 'In secret have I said nothing.'"

Judge Daniel H. Whitney, (renouncing Mason): "While professed ministers of the Gospel and members of churches are permitted to associate themselves with these organizations, the task to apply a remedy will be a hopeless one; and just so long will the declaration made to me not long since by a high Mason and a worthy man prove true, that 'a Masonic lodge is the strangest medley of priests and murderers—deacons and whoremasters—church members and gamblers—decent men and loafers—drunkards and rowdies, that the All Seeing-Eye ever looked down upon.'"

Hon. Samuel Dexter, in an open letter to the Grand Master of Mass., 1798: "If there be no very important reason for upholding Masonry at a moment like the present, there is a reason against it. The system of the destroyers of human virtue and happiness is to undermine in the dark the castle that cannot be carried by storm. Secret agency has overthrown all the republics of Europe, and an extended, secret, leveling, self-created society, without any valuable object of pursuit, and embracing bad characters as well as good, cannot be the subject of approbation of an anxious patriot."

William H. Seward: "Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men in a secret lodge, order, class, or council, and, bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow-men."

Wendell Phillips: "I wish you success most heartily in your efforts to arouse the community to the danger of secret societies. They are a great evil; entirely out of place in a republic, and no patriot should join or uphold them. Considering the great forces which threaten the welfare of the nation in the next thirty years, and how readily and efficiently they can use any secret organizations, such should not be allowed to exist."

George Washington's Farewell Address: "The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government. All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency."

Daniel Webster: "All secret associations the members of which take upon themselves extraordinary obligations to one another, and are bound together by secret oaths, are naturally sources of jealousy and just alarm to others; are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions, and are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government. Under the influence of this conviction it is my opinion that the future administration of all such oaths and the formation of all such obligations should be prohibited by law."

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD.

HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1886.

THE LEVER says Illinois has one member of the Prohibition party in its Legislature. We understand that there are three, endorsed, if not nominated by that party; and there are some others, as Hon. C. G. Dixon of Chicago, of the Union Labor party who will vote for prohibition steadily.

It is amazing that the Lever, which is an able print, and other prohibition leaders do not see their wisdom, as well as duty, in a firm union with the American party, by dropping the divisive and ruinous secrecy of the lodges.

MARTIN LUTHER in his commentary on Genesis and Exodus, says: "1. The Sabbath was founded on nature. 2. Ordained before law in the beginning. 3. Obligatory on man in innocence. 4. Sanctified by special appointment. 5. Enforced by God's example. 6. Enacted into a universal law. 7. Changed from the seventh to the first day, and that it is a command for all the world."—United Presbyterian.

But in his Table Talk published after his death, he is made to scout "keeping the day holy for the mere day's sake." So do we. There is no inherent sanctity in mere duration; and it takes two days to keep one Sabbath around the globe.

THE DUPAGE COUNTY meeting at Elmhurst, Ill., December 18th inst., is of special importance since German as well as English addresses are to be given, a feature seldom heretofore introduced. In and near Elmhurst are two important collegiate institutions, Lutheran and German United Evangelical. It is expected the large body of young men in these two colleges will attend this meeting, and learn the tactics and get on the armor of the army of God for the field of Armageddon.

THE UNITED PRESBYTERIAN says: "Mr. Joseph Cook, in his lecture on Property and Poverty, takes a serious view of the outlook. . . . He presents it gloomily enough to startle any but the most Utopian of his listeners." A glance over our exchanges gives us similar views of the future. The mammoth armies of France and Germany consuming the morals and money of those great nations; rural populations swarming in cities; hunger, vice and disease dogging their footsteps; the border ruffians of the Pacific States regurgitating and rolling back East; and decayed aristocrats of Europe who have learned every thing but how to work for an honest living, become anarchists, the brigands of civilization. These auguries of evil are marshaled and presented by the religious press and platform with power. But why do not these able and good men remember that "When Jupiter left his skies, virtue forsook the Senate and people of Rome." Or, if they believe their Bibles, why do they not see and say that nations which forsook the one living and true God, for the mongrel worships invented and got up by men, are as sure of destruction as unsupported bodies are to fall? Will these good men speak?

IMPORTANT MEETINGS.

THE N. C. A. National Anniversary at Knoxville, Tennessee, December 28 and 29th inst., is the first invasion in force upon the lodge power of the South, in whose rooms was organized the rebellion, and which drove eleven States into antagonism with the Union which they loved, and now love better than ever. But our warfare is love, and our weapons "not carnal, but spiritual, and mighty through God" to the pulling down of every stronghold of Satan. Secretary Stoddard engineers the meeting, and Presidents H. H. George and C. A. Blanchard are among those who address it.

Next comes the National Congress of Christians at Chicago, Feb. 22, 1887, Washington's birthday.

No meeting has had such endorsement for its call as this congress has had. Cook, Pentecost, McCosh, Storrs, Talmage, Hodge, the Collinses, Stevenson, Kerr, Goebel, Gross, and the Scandinavian leaders of thought, with the first minds in the Congregational, Presbyterian, and United Brethren Theological Seminaries; these, with others too numerous to mention in a brief notice, compose a mass of intelligence and piety which for diversity, breadth, power, and patriotism, has not been, and cannot be excelled. These all have said by their signatures, "We are pleased;" "Give our voices decidedly in favor of;" "Hope the call will have issue and the meeting be held."

Let us not be startled at the answer of our prayers as to the disciples when Peter stood at the door. The argument is all against the lodge and the saloon. Neither does any public good. Every road leads to their condemnation, and there is no bad way of arriving there. But we must remember that men are no match for devils; and, "Cursed be the man that trusteth in man." If we go into these meetings looking only at "things seen," we shall meet humiliation and defeat.

LABOR IN POLITICS.

The December North American Review gives twenty solid pages to the above subject. The Cynosure has had, thus far, strong reasons for abstaining from a thorough discussion of it. The chief one is that the vast interests and numbers embarked in it ensured its discussion, and that by many who had more time and better means of sifting it than we. Then when the wind of discussion has blown away the chaff, the Cynosure can give the pure wheat.

But we have looked far enough into Mr. Henry George's book, Progress and Poverty, to know some of his fundamental tenets which we cannot accept; as:

1. We do not believe that "want and suffering" among the working classes is owing to "the fact that the land on which all must live is made the exclusive property of some." (p. 362.) Mr. George's 68,000 voters in New York city own no land to speak of, and do not care to. Besides, the rich farms of Tonawanda Valley, N. Y., have, three times over, gone down the throats of their owners in strong drink. In the face of such facts as these, in Wyoming county, N. Y., it will not do to assume that want of farms makes the misery of the working classes in cities, where the Labor party will get the most of its voters.

2. We do not believe that, "abolishing all private titles at one stroke, declaring all land public property, and letting it out to the highest bidders," (p. 362) would remedy and remove the want and poverty of the working classes, which, we see and know, are not caused by want of land, either among white people or Indians; but to other causes. These two main pillars of Mr. George's scheme are utterly false and fallacious; and all built upon them must be so.

3. Nor do we believe in "abolishing all taxation save that upon land." (p. 360.) To tax is to discourage. Therefore Mr. George would discourage agriculture from which, he says, all men must live. His scheme is therefore suicidal.

Then, as Mr. George's 68,000 voters own little or no land to be taxed, to tax land only would relieve them from taxes; and his scheme would make them a privileged class, exempted from taxation! It thus operates as a bribe; and, like gambling, gives his party the hope of getting something for nothing.

Money tends to centers of population, simply and solely because they are centers, and men follow money. This makes wages higher in cities, and men rush to cities because wages are higher there, which inevitably produces gluts, as spring produces freshets; and gluts produce the misery of "no work" and starvation; and idleness produces vice, and vice misery. Mr. George's scheme therefore changes the place, but keeps the pain. His taxing land alone would lower wages in the country and increase the rush for higher wages in the city; and swell the number who can get no work, and so be driven to starvation or the poor house. Thus it would aggravate the misery he would cure. "But Mr. George would have the government own the land and collect rent for it by taxing it in the hands of the present owners; own the railroads also, and prevent the accumulation of large estates by the Astors, Vanderbilts and Goulds; distribute surplus accumulations, and thus make want impossible; and thus become a governmental mother to all the people."

But when the new poor law went into effect in Ireland, O'Connell showed by accurate figures that for every pound raised by the tax, sixteen shillings of it went to officials and only four shillings went to relieve the pauper. In Chicago, after the great fire, Freemasons raised ninety-one thousand dollars for relief, but paid, by their own published report, only thirty thousand for relief, and kept the other sixty-one thousand for their own Masonic and personal uses. And report after report of the Odd-fellows Grand Lodge of the world, shows three dollars received to one paid for relief. Mr. George's project of putting the land of the whole United States into the hands of the men who compose our Congress and the State Legislatures, would sink the country in a sea of corruption in less than ten years. The amount of surplus revenue, now in the treasury at Washington, is a good enough barometer to determine the amount and pressure of corruption on Congress, and the amount of fraudulent appropriation certain to be made. Those who seek offices will get offices. And Mr. George's scheme of relief for the working classes by putting the income of the soil of the United States at the disposal of office-seekers, Federal and State, is weak and worthless, and ought not to delude men of sense and reason: those whose faculties have been shattered by the false oaths and lying legends of secretism, we might expect to be affected by it.

We shall look into this discussion as we have leisure, and give our readers the means of judging of its merits.

THE MILLENNIUM.

Mr. Moody asked of the senior editor of the Cynosure, at Northfield during the day given to the millennial discussion, "Do you hold the pre-millennial or post-millennial theory of Christ's coming?"

"Both, and neither," was the reply.

The deluge, the 430 years bondage, the ten dire plagues, which ended it, the seventy years bitter captivity, the destruction of Jerusalem to break up ritualism,—these are some specimens of God's methods of destroying sin. When "righteousness goes before him to set us in the way of his steps," "a fire goeth before him and it is very tempestuous round about him." This is pre-millennialism. We shall not be rocked into a thousand years of earthly bliss in cradles of self-indulgence followed by Christ's coming in clouds. The Holy Spirit has less and less to do with our great missionary anniversaries, and the power of piety is in a steady decline. Satan's wrath increases as his time grows short. Dr. Chalmers was not far out of the way when he said, "This dispensation will end in a smash." And the Adventists are right in insisting that we "look for and haste unto the coming of the day of the Lord." They have preached three years more than half a century with great fervor and their labors have produced two sects: Soul-sleeping, and Saturday for Sabbath. But they have done immense good by their truth, as well as harm by their errors, which are many:

As 1st. They divert the minds of Christians from removing obstructions to gazing at proofs and tokens of Christ's coming. Moody, Pentecost and some others are exceptions to this. Major Whittle is not.

2. False literalism. This was the error of the Jews. They literalized prophecy, and looked for a literal king-conqueror, a universal monarch, and Jews his prime ministers. We say false literalism. Christ was just as literal and personal when Joshua saw him, when Peter, James and John saw him in the mount, and John the Divine in Patmos, and Stephen when being stoned, as when he shall come in clouds. So he comes literally and personally to saints in death as he promised (John 14:3). Major Whittle in a late charming article in "Moody at Home" (a book lately published by Revell) tells of a dying negro woman, who, when told the angels would soon come for her, said, "No! The Lord himself will come for me." Yet Major Whittle opens that very article with the proposition that "the coming of Christ is not at death." So the coming is not. But there is a coming of Christ at death, real, literal, and personal, as his story of the negro woman and the death of Stephen show.

3. So in their zeal to literalize prophecies of "the Jews," "Palestine," and Jerusalem, they forget or omit to say that "he is not a Jew who is one outwardly;" and that there is a real, literal Canaan and Jerusalem of which that small country and city on the map are but outward and material types, mere "figures of the true." The "Jerusalem which is above" and which John saw descend to earth (Rev. 21:2) "is the mother of us all." So Christ's throne is David's, real and eternal. Macbeth said of his witches:

"Who palter with us in a double sense,
Keeping the word of promise to the ear
But break it to the heart."

So doth not God. He may sometime break the promise to the ear, but always keeps it to the heart. Paul's "grace sufficient" was better, far better, than removing his thorn in the flesh.

Prophets looked down the vista of the future; saw a person or scene, and described them as best they could; in words, if they had them, "if not by tableaux or pantomime. They could not say "locomotive" or "switch" if they had predicted railroads for no such terms existed. Nor would they have been understood had they said, "John the Baptist" will come before Christ. They therefore called John Elijah, whose picture answered well for John.

The phrase, "Second Coming of Christ," so frequent in pre-millennial writing, does not occur in the Bible, though he is once spoken of as to come a "second time." And the danger of our being misled by pre-millennial writings is proportioned to the vast importance of the theme. The grand, essential thing is, that he will come in an hour when we think not, taking vengeance on the adversaries; and it becomes us to be watching, working and waiting for his appearing.

T. T. GURNEY, lately buried with much Masonic ceremony in this city, is yet more honored by the Egyptian Masons to whom a proclamation is issued that they wear a "mourning button" for a month. (See Lodge Notes.) Among the titles he assumed in getting through to the 95th degree were: Knight of the Luminous Ring, Doctor of the Sacred Vedas, Knight Sublime Magi, Prince Brahmin Sublime Scalde, Prince of the Sacred Name, Prince of Truth, Prince of the Covenant, Sage of the Three Fires, Sage of Eleusis, Priest of the Sphinx, Pontiff of Serapis, Pontiff of Isis, etc. Had the eminent clergymen who pronounced his eulogy as a Christian had repeated over the Masonic titles he had taken during his life it would have nearly filled up their time, to say nothing of the disgust that would have filled their souls.

—A eulogy is to be given to the memory of Charles Francis Adams by order of the city of Boston, which thus honors one of her most distinguished citizens. It is understood that Carl Schurz of the New York Evening Post will make the address.

—Dea. M. R. Britten of Vienna, Wisconsin, passed through Chicago last week Monday on his way to Southern California. He expects to spend the winter on the Pacific Coast. Other callers on us lately have been brethren Green and Smith of Rossville, Ill., and A. J. Loudenback of Glidden, Iowa.

—Rev. William Dillon, editor of the Christian Conservator has again been visiting Coleta, Ill., of late, and looked in upon the Cynosure as he passed through Chicago. Rev. Halleck Floyd, the agent of the movement to preserve the United Brethren church in its integrity to Christ, is quite active in visitations of various conferences and is much encouraged in many localities.

—When one reads such evidence of the immorality of Masonic teachings as are given by Bro. Hawley this week, the involuntary exclamation is Why was Hiram and not Ananias chosen for the lodge deity?

—Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea College, is seriously ill and cannot attend the Knoxville convention. This will be a great disappointment to old friends who would have gladly welcomed him at the national convention.

—Rev. J. M. Foster, lecturer for the National Reform Association, whose interesting letters from the South and Ohio have been given to the Cynosure readers, writes again on the sixth page of this number, but by some accident his name was left out in making up the paper.

—The effect of Bro. Arnold's illustrated lectures in St. Charles, Ill., was so good that there is now a call for a convention in the place. Rev. John Haddon of the Free Methodist church writes for Secretary Stoddard to give them his aid soon for such a meeting.

—Bro. R. J. Williams, for a time State lecturer in Minnesota, is now living at Moose Lake in that State, over 200 miles from his address as lately published in our lecturers' list. His name is dropped from that list as he is unable to lecture or to preach. But he wishes some one to speak for him, and sends $2.00 for Bro. Countee and $2.00 for the expenses of the Christian Congress.

—Rev. Myron H. Wilcox, for five years missionary at Foochow, China, spoke in the College chapel, Wheaton, last Sabbath. His address was of great interest. This consecrated missionary is on his return with his wife and little girl in his chosen work under the charge of the Methodist Missionary Board. He leaves San Francisco in January, and will write for the Cynosure on his return to Foochow.

—Secretary Stoddard with his wife left Chicago for the South on Monday evening. He will turn aside to Greenfield, Ohio, and the State Convention, but Mrs. Stoddard will go on to the vicinity of Knoxville, Tenn. She is accompanied by a niece, Miss Rollins. This is the first part of the Chicago company for the National Convention. President and Mrs. C. A. Blanchard follow by way of Nashville next week, and others later. We hope to recruit a pleasant company from the Northwest for this important meeting. Please read the call on another page, and secure a delegate from your church, if possible.

—The recent sudden death at Englewood, N. J., by neuralgia of the heart, of the beloved wife of Rev. Dr. George B. Cheever, is the occasion of a wide-felt interest and sympathy with the bereaved husband, so long and favorably conspicuous in the public eye. We were tempted, therefore, to take from our editorial portfolio, where it has sometime lain, a sketch of the life and labors of that distinguished preacher, writer, reformer, patriot, and prophet of the Lord. But the hope of securing a fine portrait to accompany the article makes us delay a fortnight for the New Year's number, Dec. 30th, when our readers may expect a paper they will value. We have in preparation for the first issue of 1887 a Seward number with a portrait, a fine paper by Senator Pomeroy containing personal recollections of the great Secretary, and other articles on his life, his work, and his character.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

At an early hour Monday morning the Capitol was the objective point of hundreds of pedestrians, who thronged the streets and avenues of the city. The opening of Congress always attracts a large crowd. Half of the people cannot get seats, of course, nor can more than a small proportion of them get standing room in the galleries of the Senate Chamber and Hall of the House, but they go to the Capitol all the same, well aware of this fact. They loiter about the rotunda and in the Statuary Hall, gaze at the paintings in the corridors and make a deafening clatter with their feet on the smooth marble floors.

The Senate, sedate, grave and dignified as usual, proceeded to business after a few preliminaries, in as quiet a way as if it had adjourned over from Saturday. The railing of the galleries are enclosed in black in respect to the memory of the late ex-President Arthur, and the doors are also draped in mourning. On the floor there were two new faces, that of Mr. Williams of California, who comes by election of the Legislature to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Miller, and that of ex-Governor Cheney, of New Hampshire, who occupied the seat of the late Senator Pike.

In the House of Representatives but few changes were noticeable. The doors were also draped in black, and the chairs and desks of the two members who died during the Congressional recess, Messrs. Beach and Arnot, were covered with mourning to denote that their former occupants were dead. But Congress is the same boisterous, restless, turbulent mass that adjourned last summer. It is the same heterogeneous mixture of Democrats and Republicans, of Democratic free traders and Democratic protectionists, of Republican revenue reformers and Republican high tariff men, of Republican and Democratic prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists, labor men and anti-labor men, lodge men and, if any have the courage of their convictions, anti-lodge men, and men of all other kinds of conflicting aims and schemes and ambitions.

For several weeks the air has been full of predictions that nothing will be done this winter beyond passing the necessary appropriation bills. That sounds pessimistic, and there is too much that ought to be done to indulge in such forebodings. It will give you an idea of what Congress will be asked to do, to tell you what one single Territory alone wants. In answer to some inquiry a delegation from Dakota, which arrived several days ago, said, "We are here to secure from Congress the opening to settlers of 10,000,000 acres of the Sioux reservation. We want Dakota divided this winter, also, and we need two more judges in the Territory, and need them badly." "What else does Dakota want?" was asked. "Well, we will wait until we get something before we ask for any more. There is plenty of time for that."

"The virtuous are not resentful." This is substantially the plea of almost every Congressman, when interviewed about the scheme of the Washington police force to keep an eye on the whole fraternity. None of them take the attack seriously. "Oh, my habits are unimpeachable," said a certain convivial member from Indiana; "no detective could get his telescopic eye on me." "I lead a most exemplary life, as everybody knows," said Representative McCreary of Kentucky, with a smile and a twinkle in his eye, "and, of course, I am not afraid." "I always keep carefully in doors," said a member of the District Appropriations Committee, "and so I am safe." Thus with varying phrase, all the law-makers place themselves above reproach, and declare they are not concerned in the scandal.

Among the Congressmen on the floor of the House to-day I noticed Mr. Price, of Wisconsin, whose pale face indicated the incurable malady from which he is suffering. He has recently abandoned all medicines and placed himself in the hands of the "faith healers," despite the protests of his friends and physician. If the exercise of the will on the part of the patient has any effect at all, Mr. Price would have a better chance for his life than most sufferers, because of his remarkable force of character. He is the Congressman who, when the bill putting the widow of General Grant upon the pension list was proposed, cast the only negative vote in spite of the appeals of his associates to make the gift unanimous. He then declared that so long as there were claims of private soldiers and their families still unadjusted, Congress had no right to make special recognition of the case of an officer's widow, who already had enough to live upon. He declared he would vote against it if he were the only citizen in the United States who looked at the matter from his point of view.

The Washington Bureau which was agitated at the Richmond meeting of the Knights of Labor, is to be formed, though the press was not informed that the measure was voted. This lodge will be active here this winter, and they will endeavor to influence legislation in many directions. Ralph Beaumont is their manager, and will draw well upon their funds. He says their programme for the present session will be to secure the forfeiture of railroad land grants. There are bills already pending in a conference committee of the House and Senate forfeiting upward of 30,000,000 acres of land granted to railroads, besides an additional 13,000,000 acres on the House calendar which have been reported favorably by the House Committee on Public Lands. The government telegraph system will also be urged by this Bureau. These objects are approved by the people. Why is it necessary for a secret society to maintain a committee to urge them, unless there is some sinister purpose back of the published programme to promote the interests of the order at the public expense? *

NOTICES.

THE SIXTEENTH NATIONAL CONVENTION.

TO BE HELD AT KNOXVILLE, TENN. DEC. 28TH AND 29TH, 1886.

Nearly three years have passed since the friends of our reform gathered at Washington City in National Convention. We have now another opportunity of meeting to greet each other as we come together from the various sections of our moral battle-field, to look in each other's faces, to clasp the hand, renew the zeal, encourage by experience, and increase the power, the faith and the efficiency of every soldier of Christ. The place is well chosen. For the first time the National Christian Association holds its convention in the South, where for several years the most remarkable victories have been gained for the truth we uphold. Nowhere in the North is the Cynosure more welcome; nowhere are our lecturers more eagerly heard; nowhere has there been more self-denial for Christ in this work; nowhere has the lodge lost more adherents than among the colored churches of the South. The churches and schools of the American Missionary Association are on God's side of this great question, the 800,000 Baptists are rapidly and happily joining them, and other churches must follow. The appointment of this meeting must be regarded as a great and providential opportunity for our work, to give it a new impulse in all the Southern States, where already the Prohibition cause is receiving greatest encouragement. We should keep pace with that movement.

All Christian churches and local associations are urgently requested to appoint delegates and arrange for their expenses, or at least send a contribution to the N. C. A. Treasurer to defray the expenses of colored pastors from Southern churches.

Let, therefore, everyone, without regard to sectional lines turn toward Knoxville; and if it is not possible that your steps may go thither, let your prayers and offerings come up for a memorial before God, that a great blessing may come to all the land from this convention.

S. COLLINS, President.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, Secretary.

KNOXVILLE R. R. NOTICE.

Round trip tickets to Knoxville, Tenn., can be secured through W. I. Phillips at the Cynosure office for something less than $30. Much depends on the number going. Send your names to W. I. Phillips at once and you shall have first class accommodations and company at the lowest rates obtainable. This is your opportunity and time to go South and do something personally for those who have been set free in answer to your prayers.

J. F. STOWARD.

A REQUEST.

The undersigned requests all who subscribed money for C. F. Hawley, our State Lecturer, to pay all now due to the receiver in each locality, and he to forward to me as soon as practicable, as Bro. Hawley must have money to go on with the work. Also let readers of the Cynosure and others in favor of the reform in localities where subscriptions have not been taken, get up a subscription, give notice of the amount subscribed to me, send for Hawley to come and lecture, and pay him the money when he comes, so he will not have to beg his way, or say anything about money to his congregations.

JAMES HARVEY, Treasurer of State Association.
Pleasant Plain, Iowa.

THE HOME.

"GREEN PASTURES AND STILL WATERS."

O, Father dear,
 Whate'er betide, no more I'll doubt and fear,
 Unreconciled;
 So sweet to-day the rest I feel in thee,
 So sweet the peace thou givest unto me—
 Thy wayward child.
 Thy way was best,
 Though oft I doubted, in my wild unrest,
 Thy guiding hand.
 Though weary with the desert way, I see
 Through paths unknown thou wert but leading me
 To this fair land.
 With joy complete,
 Once more, with trust, I sit at thy dear feet,
 To know thy will.
 In thy great, loving care, all things I leave;
 Thy word is sure, O Lord, I do believe
 Thou wilt fulfill.

—Selected.

IN THE POWER OF THE SPIRIT.

In the answer to prayer comes the revelation of such a renewal of the Holy Ghost as had never been dreamed of before. It is like the dawning of a day of peace upon the troubled sea after long hours of toilsome and exhausting struggles with the elements. Or, rather let us say it is like the introduction of some new form of force, and superhuman force at that, into the poor little life-boat, which hitherto has been tossed about in sore distress, while weary and exhausted human hands have struggled hard, but struggled all in vain, to bring the helpless bark to its haven through stormy and opposing waves.

Oh, what a glorious coming to land is that when the tired human will surrenders all to the Holy Spirit, and then, simply trusting him, finds that in the place of a weak and hopeless human energy there is a superhuman power at work to dash the waves aside, to cleave a passage for the endangered boat, and to bring it safely, swiftly and without a moment's loss of time to its desired haven.

This is not an uncommon experience in the Christian life. It is embodied in one of our most familiar hymns, when we sing:

"Let the water and the blood
 From thy wounded side that flowed,
 Be of sin the DOUBLE CURE,
 Save me from its guilt AND POWER."

It is the work of the divine Spirit to save us from the power of sin as well as from its guilt. And yet practically how few there are who realize this truth. How few who learn from their experience that the Spirit is to sanctify as well as to justify the heart; that he has not only to introduce us into the life of love and trust towards God, but to break the power of reigning sin. Paul expresses the truth when he says, "Strengthened with all might by his Spirit in the inner man," "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me;" and again, "He is able to do exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think according to the power which worketh in us."

It is the power of omnipotence. It is infinite and irresistible power. And if we learn to trust it, we shall find that what was once hard is easy, and that what was once impossible becomes the common and familiar experience of the soul which, far from being exhausted in its conflicts with sin, is daily and hourly renewed in strength by this inflowing of the divine strength through and in with the human.—Rev. G. S. Payson.

REPEATED HOLY GHOST BAPTISM.

Rom. 15: 32: "That I may with you be refreshed."

The apostle here assumes that he would need spiritual refreshing when he reached Rome. He had just made, in the 29th verse, the remarkable affirmation, "I am sure that when I come unto you, I shall come in the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ," and immediately expresses the thought that he would need, at the same time, a refreshing. This is a very important statement, and involves a great practical truth to be carefully studied by all who would maintain a satisfactory experience and live a useful Christian life. Paul wrote the Epistle to the Romans some twenty-five years after he was filled with the Holy Ghost upon the imposition of the hands of Ananias, and had always been faithful to the grace then given to him. What, then, are some of the lessons?

Believers may be filled with the Spirit, as a set-ed religious state or habit of the soul, and yet need occasional or frequent gracious refreshings. This is as reasonable as it is Scriptural. Persons may be free from physical disease of every kind, and filled with natural vigor, and yet must have continual re-freshings. Two and three times every day healthy persons must supply the waste of their vital forces by food, or they become exhausted and unable for service. The soundness and health of the laborer is indicated by the readiness and avidity with which he receives his regular meals. Should he be indifferent about them, and especially should he loathe them he is unfit for work, and needs medical attention. So believers may have the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel and yet need refreshings; and their spiritual soundness will be indicated by the keenness of their appetite for soul nourishment. But should Christians be indifferent about spiritual food, and especially should they feel a sense of qualmsiness at an invitation to come to an altar of prayer, or at doing anything proper to be done for the purpose of spiritual strengthening, they should be alarmed at their condition. They need special and prompt attention before spiritual life shall become entirely extinct. Spiritual sickness has set in, and will end in certain death unless the gracious remedies be taken. What a spectacle of sick and dying and dead people the church of to-day must present to the Eye that can take it all in!

Paul did not reflect upon the religious character of the believers at Rome when he assumed, in his statement, that they as well as he, would need refreshing. Nor should it be taken as an insult by members of the church when the pastor invites them to some exercise for the purpose of stirring up their gifts and graces. Many look upon such invitations as expressions of doubt in their piety, and assumptions of backslidings and spiritual deadness. But such requests of the pastor rather assume the spiritual wholeness of the membership, and their wish for quickening because of existing spiritual relishes. To invite a neighbor to sit down and take a meal at the table with us is to assume that he is well, and may need the refreshments; and to invite to an altar of prayer assumes nothing that ought to offend, but rather to please believers. Our apostle, in the twelfth chapter of this same letter, declares that such an exercise is a "reasonable service" of Christians. That is, it is in accord with the nature of things, with the relishes and spiritual intuitions of true believers.

The statement implies that the joint effort of the apostle and brethren would be favorable to such refreshings. Though closet devotion is essential to Christian life, and though God blesses the private worshiper, the full reward is made "openly." Hence great stress is placed upon open and public worship. We are taught to "not neglect the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is," but to imitate the one hundred and twenty, and collect "all together, in one place, and with one accord." Hence, practicing what he preached, we find Paul "striving, together with the churches, in prayer, and constantly forgetting the things which were behind, and reaching forth to the things which were before, he pressed towards the mark for the prize." He felt, as all Christians should feel, that there is no safety except in incessant use of the means by which the soul is continuously refreshed.

It is a great mistake to suppose that in advanced Spiritual life there are no sudden and marked up-lifts to be experienced; that the experience is to be a dead level of peace with no elevations of new raptures, and that the neophyte believer only may expect ecstasies in religious life. Paul had many marked epochs in his experience after he received the fullness of the Holy Ghost, and that, too, while retaining that fullness. And no one can retain the freshness and power of holiness without frequent spiritual refreshings, secured by fastings, wrestlings, and waitings under the light and drawings of the Holy Spirit. Here is the secret of so much impotence, even among holy people—so few refreshings.—Rev. Sheridan Baker in Beulah Land.

ARE WE TO WAIT FOR THE SPIRIT?

The command of the risen Lord to his disciples was, "Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." Is this command appropriate to us? It was uttered at a time when the Holy Ghost was not yet given for Jesus was not yet glorified. The first disciples were to "wait for the promise of the Father." They were to tarry, until they were endued with power from on high. But is the church of Christ still waiting for that promise? Has it not long ago been fulfilled? Has not the Comforter come, and made his abode in the church, to depart thence no more? If this be the case, then there is no command for the church to await the coming of the Comforter who is already here; nor to tarry for the outpouring of that Spirit, which long ago was poured "upon all flesh."

The presence of the Holy Spirit is to be recognized in the earliest dawns of conviction for sin; for he convinces "of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment." And those who are truly thus convinced and are converted have felt the power of the Holy Ghost; for "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." Hence those who really confess him as their Lord, do it under the power and direction of the Holy Spirit. "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." This guidance of the Holy Spirit is one of the marks of sonship and heirship. "The love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost;" and if we are destitute of that indwelling love, we are unsaved; for "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his." Hence to deny the presence of the Holy Ghost in our hearts is to confess ourselves "none of his."

Surely, then, no Christian is justified in waiting for the coming of the Holy Spirit. Persons who have not been converted, whether in the church or out, should seek the Lord, and wait for the Holy Ghost, but Christians have something else to do. A better understanding of the word of God should teach Christians to "quench not the Spirit" which so often prompts to service which they refuse to perform; and to "grieve not the Holy Spirit of God," by which they are sealed unto the day of redemption, and which doubtless is often grieved by worldliness, frivolity, vanity and sin. There is no need to wait for the coming of some new, strange power. It is for us to confess our sins and shortcomings, and honestly seek as in his own presence, to know and do the will of God.

The Holy Spirit is here! It is only because our eyes are blind, and our ears are dull of hearing that we fail to catch the impulse of his ever-present power, and to be humbly led in obedience to Divine control. And if men, instead of crying to God to send the Holy Ghost—as if he had forgotten to be gracious, and failed to fulfill his promises—would turn from the forbidden paths which they tread, and from the worldliness in which they are absorbed; they would find that God is not very far from every one of them; and that the Holy Ghost, ever present in that church which is builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit," still helpeth the infirmities of the people of God, and guides and keeps and sanctifies his saints.—The Christian.

"HALLOWED BE THY NAME."

Charlie came rushing home from school in a great state of excitement, his cheeks aglow and his eyes shining with indignation.

"Oh, mamma," he explained, "that Harry Ellis is the worst boy! What do you think!" and down went his books in one place on the floor and his cap and mittens in another.

"I think that isn't just the place for your things," said his mother gently.

Charlie's face flushed again as he put his books away in their right place.

"But he is, mamma," he went on eagerly. "He is indeed the very worst boy I ever knew. He says real swear words. I heard him say them my own self. Now what do you think of that?"

"I think it is very wrong, and I am very sorry to hear it," answered mamma.

"I'm glad I'm not as bad as he is," continued Charlie. "I'd never say such things as he says, never!"

Mamma's face was very sober as she looked at her little boy in silence for a moment. She was sorry to see him exhibiting such a self-righteous spirit.

"I am very sorry that Harry uses bad language," she said, "but we must remember that he has no mother or father, and no one to teach him any better, and perhaps he does not know how wicked it is. I know a little boy who has been very carefully taught, and who prays every morning and evening that God's name may be hallowed, who is not much better than Harry sometimes."

"Who is it, mamma?" inquired Charlie eagerly. "I know it isn't me, for I never say bad words—never!"

"Don't you think there are any other ways of dishonoring God's name besides taking it in vain by using hard words?" asked mamma. When he knelt down in prayer this morning I heard a little boy rattling the marbles in his pocket for awhile, as if he was very anxious for prayers to be over so that he might play with them; then when he stopped doing this, he tied knots in a string that was hanging on the back of the chair; for when we rose from our knees I saw the knotted string and knew that it had been done while we were praying."

Charlie looked very conscious, as if he knew who the little boy was, but he did not say anything, and mamma went on:

"Last Sunday, in Sunday-school, while we were engaged in the opening prayer, the same little boy counted his missionary money, looked over his catechism lesson, and finally whispered so loudly to the little boy who sat next to him that he disturbed every one around him, and had to be reprov'd. Then this very morning he was in a great hurry to get down to breakfast, and I heard him read over his Bible verse for the day just as fast as he could, and then kneeling down he hurried over his prayers without once remembering to whom he was speaking. I don't think that little boy was hallowing God's name, even though he was not taking it in vain, when he took the time that was set apart to God and used it for his own thoughts and pleasures. Yet this boy has been very carefully taught, and when he stops to think about it he knows how reverently he should act when he is praying to his heavenly Father. If he was a poor, neglected little orphan, without any good influences around him, we could not wonder at it so much. I should not like to hear him boasting of his goodness because he did not dishonor God's name in just the same way that some one else did."

Charlie's cheeks were very red, but this time he was blushing for himself.

"I didn't think about it that way before," he said. "And, mamma, I guess I had better look after my own self another time before I talk so much about any other boy."

"I think so," said mamma, putting her arm around her boy and giving him a loving little hug.

I need not tell you that after this little talk Charlie tried very hard to remember always to be reverent and attentive during prayer, and the next time he heard Harry use bad words he bravely told him that he had been as irreverent in another way, but had resolved to turn over a new leaf, and begged him to do so, too. This confession of his own fault accomplished more than any burst of self-righteous indignation could have done, and Harry tried to break himself of the evil habit which had already, young as he was, obtained a powerful hold upon him.

He went to Sunday-school with Charlie and soon learned to love his heavenly Father, and to speak the name reverently, instead of taking it upon his lips in vain, and he could join with all his heart in the petition, "Hallowed be thy name."—Early Dev.

TEMPERANCE.

THE CAPITOL SALOONS.

There are two restaurants in the Capitol, one in the House wing and one in the Senate wing. They have all the appliances for elegance and convenience, and both sell liquors of all kinds. The Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate respectively have charge of these saloons and appoint keepers. They also have authority to suppress the sale of liquor. At times they have made a show, at least, of stopping the sale, but at no time have they earnestly determined to enforce regulations against it. When pressure is brought to bear on the keepers, the liquor is sold under the name of "cold tea." A year ago there was some talk of suppressing the saloons, and this "cold tea" subterfuge was for a time resorted to. As to who gets the rent of the rooms we are not informed, but suppose the rent is free, it being considered a favor to employes at the Capitol to have a lunch room near at hand. The Speaker and President of the Senate appoint and dismiss the keepers at will, and are responsible for the facts given above. But each House is also responsible, because it is within the power of Congress to adopt new regulations at any time. Members of Congress are the best patrons of these saloons, and are not unfrequently too drunk to behave respectably. These facts are a burning disgrace, but they are notorious and can be substantiated.—Washington American.

"TAD DRAHAM."

With this drop of ink at the end of my pen I will undertake to show you a pretty country town, surrounded by great high hills covered by time honored forest trees.

It would be a dull, stupidly quiet place, but for the mad little stream which roars and tosses and tumbles over its rocky bed as it runs and rushes so tumultuously through the center of the town, turning the wheels of the mills scattered along its banks, and waking the sleeping villagers to activity and industry by the merry clatter.

Further on the stream has made a deep gorge or ravine by its wild impetuous force, which furnishes the material for many beautiful pictures, and attracts many artists to its side, with sketch-book and pencil, in the long days of summer. So, owing to the power of the water forces and their sparkling beauty, the town otherwise so dead and listless is not without interest.

Overhanging this stream, so close to the bank that in summer its shadow may be clearly seen in the water, is the poorest, most desolate of board huts. At its one small window several tangled heads and dirty, childish faces appear; shrill cries, fretful voices, and loud, angry tones come from the opening door. From a line suspended from the corner of the hut to a tree are always to be seen wet clothes, freezing and flapping in the rough winter weather, for "Jack Frost" has stopped the hurrying stream, sent away the warm breezes, and picked all the flowers.

A faint, tiny thread of smoke creeps up feebly from the pipe which projects from the roof, serving as a chimney, in pitiful contrast to the wreath which rolls and curls so airy and rapidly from the broad chimney of the pretty brick school-house just in sight and further down the stream. Here you may see brightly blossoming plants in the deep windows, comfortably-dressed, happy-voiced children in the warm, pleasant rooms, with a sense of comfort everywhere.

On the particular morning of which I am telling you, a teacher came into one of these rooms bringing with her an atmosphere of breezy good cheer, and a breath of frosty air from the sharp, stinging cold without, appreciating the warmth, the rapturous greetings all the more for the uncomfortable walk.

As she turns from the cloak room, she sees by the door the most forlorn little object, but whether child or woman she is at a loss to decide. A large shawl is held tightly by fingers encased in a man's leather glove. A scarlet hood is on the head, and from its many openings wisps of yellow hair crept out. The ends of the old, ragged shawl reach the floor, nearly hiding the large pair of old shoes, tied only at the top to keep them from falling off.

The face raised to hers is that of a child, a child not more than six years old. Yet one look shows you she is older in experience, and feels perfectly capable of taking care of herself.

"Where did you come from, little girl, and are you going to be one of my scholars?"

"I tomed from home; where did you tome from?"

"My home is a long ways from here, but I came from Mrs. Marshall's, where I board, and it was a cold walk; are you cold?"

"Yet, I'm told. I tome betause I was"—

"And your name is what?"

"Tad Draham. I live by the trick. My ma washes for the boarders, and my pa works in the mill and dets drunt. Sometimes he brings us tobs to burn, but they's most gone to-day, and I'm told, awful told."

"Poor child, so you are; you shall stay and get warm. You can come every day, can't you, and learn to do ever so many things, and perhaps some day you can be a teacher. Would you like to be a teacher, dear?"

"Yet, if I could be warm all the time; but my name ain't dear, it's Tad—Tad Draham."

"Yes, Cad, but I may call you Caddie, may I not? I like it better. Now it's time for the bell. I'll help you off with these wraps." But a scream from the little object stops her.

"If I take them off they'll teal 'em. I always teal all I tan."

"I am sure no one steals here. Didn't you know it was wicked to steal?"

"No, not if you are told. Ma says we'll freeze if we don't, when pa fordeets the tobs to burn."

Do you wonder at the tears in the teacher's eyes, and the pain in her heart? And there flashes through her mind the words she had listened to that morning from an advocate of temperance reform. "The temperance movement must be carried forward more slowly, with less impulse and more careful study and deliberate planning. The people must be educated to the idea." And as she looks down upon this wretched little dot she thinks, while these pretended workers are educating, and while others are wondering what fuss the temperance fanatics will make next; this child may freeze to death—or worse—go on in the sinful path she has begun to tread. The bell away up in the tower warns her to begin her work, the work destined to tell on the life of that school, on the life of the child, and on and on, when she in the dust is forgotten.

For the days went by on their frosty wings bringing the little creature to the school each morning, not to study, but always for the same reason—"to det warm."

She had no desire save this, no ambition, no longing, and would sit close to the fire all day unless aroused and sent to her seat.

Slowly and reluctantly she was persuaded to join in the pretty exercises, and motion songs of the other pupils. With great effort she learned the prayer the school recited each morning, and by degrees she began to be interested in reading the printed words from the blocks in the chart. She still continued a terror to the children, for more than one child went dinnerless, and more than one basket was found empty, while Caddie sat demurely by the stove getting warm.

It was in vain to threaten, to coax or to whip. She had not touched the basket, had not even seen it, had not tasted anything in days, and would open her mouth in proof of her statements, with molasses cake still sticking to the small teeth. If caught with her hands in the basket, she always said, "I'm so hungry and told, and it makes me warmer."

One windy, disagreeable March night, she knocked at Mrs. Marshall's and asked for the teacher. In each hand is an egg which she is taking to the little grocery to buy tobacco for her father, she says, "who swears awful if he don't have some; and I am afraid of the dark, and want you to go too and tell about where the place is where you said I could be warm and dood always." And the teacher goes, waiting on the walk for the child's return from the inside, the snow clinging in wet flakes to her shawl, and settling in sleety slush, and muddy pools at her feet, wondering as she waits, what the folks at home would say if they could see her there with that wretched child buying tobacco for a miserable drunken man.

Reaching her boarding place she unfastens the shawl from her neck and pins it carefully around Caddie, telling her to run quickly home, and praying silently for her protection from the abuse of the drunken father.

Next morning she hears as she reaches the school-house, "Oh, Miss Payne, Caddie Graham's house is all burned up, and Caddie is burned awful, and wants you."

Surely the hut has disappeared. The two eggs which were to have been cooked for supper were sent to buy tobacco, to help satisfy and lull the thirst, only partially gratified at a saloon in the neighboring city.

The naturally kind and loving father had smoked the tobacco he had sent his little daughter out into the night to procure, and in his half drunken stupor had dropped his ashes down among the cobs on the floor, which slowly ignited and crept farther on into the floor, until the whole place was in flames. All had escaped save poor little Caddie, who, in her great desire to get warm had crept so near the fire, sleeping so heavily that she was forgotten in the first general rush for safety. When she was carried out, a little burned, charred figure with the remains of the shawl still clinging to her, no one dreamed life could remain in the little form, but the blue eyes opened and her weak voice gasped, "Tell Miss Payne I want her."

When the teacher stood beside her she said, "I did not teal your shawl, it's burned up, truly 'tis; it tept me warm and made you feel close to me; are you tross tause it's burned?"

"No dear, I am glad you kept it on. They tell me you would have been burned to death but for it. Do you know, Caddie, I am afraid you are not coming to school any more. I am afraid you are going to die. Are you afraid to die, dear?"

"I don't know, I never died, did you?"

"No, but I know of One who did, who died for us, and He told us if we would follow Him, doing as He did as nearly as we could, trusting in Him to save us, we could go to live with Him when He sent for us. I think He is going to send for you. Do you know who He is now, Caddie?"

"Yet; the One we pray to at school; but you said he did not lite drils who toot dinners and said they didn't, and if I died I could not do to heaven, and O I'm doing to die now." And a moaning, wailing cry come from the childish, suffering lips.

"If you are sorry, and tell Jesus so, he will forgive you and take you to his home."

"You tell Him for me, Miss Payne."

And as the quiet figure of the girl teacher kneels by the dying child's bed, she tells the loving, tender Shepard all the temptations, and asks him to take the uncared-for lamb into his own warm, bright fold. The child's voice breaks in with—

"Tell Him I was told, and I'd be sorry only I'd freezed if I hadn't tealed. Tell Him my pa dets drunt, and I want to do to live with Him."

Later in the day she stands again by the same bed, but the burned lips give her no greeting. "Caddie is dead," they said; "how sad, how horrible." She thinks of her short, young life; of the sin-cursed, rum-cursed future in which atmosphere she must have grown to girlhood and womanhood; and her last words—"Tell Miss Payne I am sorry I was bad, and I wouldn't took dinners only I was told, so told when my pa was drunk, and I am doing to heaven to det warm."

Had the Lord Jesus taken her to his beautiful home from the wretchedness to come?

"This is only a story." Yes. You could have written a better one. I believe it. But will you heed the lesson?

"You don't believe in prohibition?" Do you believe in suffering, neglected, sinful children? "No." Well, neither do I.

I have only told you a poorly constructed story. I will tell you more. I have seen the strange little creature in her ragged shawl, whose crooked tongue called herself "Tad Ibrahim," and have heard the words, "I've come to det warm."—Grace E. Crossman in the Genevaan.

While at Clarinda, Iowa, lately, we asked a leading attorney there how prohibition worked in that place. He replied, "It is destroying the practice of lawyers. The last year of license in Clarinda there were five saloons who paid the city $2,500. That year we had 149 cases of criminal prosecutions; a marshal at $50 a month, two deputies at $45 each per month, three policemen at $40 each per month—ten mill taxation and seldom any money in the treasury. The second year, under prohibition, there were only 40 cases of prosecution, a five mill taxation, and from $2,000 to $3,000 in the city treasury; one marshal, and he does all the road commissioner work at $50 per month, no deputies or assistants or policemen, and only one criminal case in the District Court. Other towns in the county make a better show than this,—Advocate, Floyd county, Iowa.

The town of Whately, Mass., having voted to license liquor-selling at the last election, the school-house which was directly opposite the tavern was closed, as the State law forbids the selling of liquor within a certain distance of a school-house. Some school-houses in Boston also have been closed for this reason, at the impudent demand of grog-sellers, and Boston obeyed!

John Schumann, a saloon-keeper on the Tennyson town road, D. C., about half a mile from the President's villa, has been refused a renewal of license to sell liquors by the Excise Commissioners. Schumann feels that his rights have been shamefully limited. He states that there are twenty saloons within two squares of the White House.

The people of Newark, N. J., are waking up to a sense of duty and intend to have the Sunday laws enforced against the hundreds of saloons that are kept brazenly open on that day, in defiance of the State law.

The Annual Football Contest between the College teams of Yale and Princeton was played at the latter place Thanksgiving Day, and resulted in a draw. The rain, cold and mud removed every element of pleasure from the game itself. After it was stopped on account of rain and darkness, the students of both colleges indulged in a disgusting orgie of intoxication and fighting. The saloons and hotel bars were crowded with young men wearing the color-badges of both time-honored institutions, and drunkenness and riot prevailed. In the course of one fight, Robert S. Green, Jr., son of the Governor-elect for New Jersey, had an arm broken in two places by a hackman. His fellow-students tried to avenge his injuries, and scoured the streets in drunken frenzy, failing, however, to find their man. In one hotel, the Nassau, the proprietor had to turn off the gas to stop a free fight. The heathen Greeks conducting their Olympian games were not in any particular as un-Christian or degraded as these disgraceful representatives of what should be the best type of our present civilization.

LITERATURE.

FOURS WITH THE BIBLE; or the Scripture in the Light of Modern Discovery and Knowledge. From Moses to Judges. By Cunningham Geikie, D. D. Illustrated. Pp. 384. Price 60c. John B. Alden, New York.

This second volume in the series of six by Dr. Geikie is in some respects perhaps the most interesting of all, since nearly the whole volume is taken up by the history of Moses "the man of God," the Hebrew warrior and statesman who by faith chose "rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt." The career of this wonderful man is here explained and portrayed with all the accessories of Egyptian history, and knowledge of the character, customs, habits of life and modes and philosophy of worship which the most favored modern research has given us. The discoveries in the tombs have turned back the leaves of time so that we may as clearly see the life of Egypt in the time of Moses as we do that of the Romans in the time of Christ. It will be of special interest to our readers to know that this learned volume in which the most complete and accurate knowledge of Egypt is epitomized, makes little account of the Egyptian mysteries of which Drs. Weisse, Mackey, Oliver and other Masonic writers, who depend much on imagination and tradition for their facts, have made so great account. The "wisdom" of the Egyptians in which Moses was learned does not imply that his mind was full of the confusing mysteries which were the stock in trade of the Egyptian priests. Instead of being an Egyptian Mason as these lodge pretenders assert, he was an opposer of their teachings and their occult rites. Wilson, Burt, Gurney, and the rest can find no satisfaction in searching the life of Moses for approval of their modern heathenism. The contest of Moses with these jugglers of Egyptian Masonry forms an interesting paragraph which we would quote but for its length. It is enough to say that whatever of Masonry there was in the time of Moses was fully represented in the Jannes and Jambres whom he withstood and vanquished in the presence of Pharaoh. (See Exodus 7:11 and 2 Timothy 3:8.) This small, compact and handsome volume is the second in the set of six which the publisher sells for the very low rate of 40c. each, or $2.25 for the six in cloth.

The Century for January will contain a brief biography of George Bancroft, the distinguished historian. The article is written by Professor William Sloane, son of the late lamented Professor J. R. W. Sloane, editor of the Princeton Review, and formerly the historian's private secretary. The article is written with the assistance of Mr. Bancroft, and contains, among other things, an account of his career as Secretary of the Navy under President Polk, and an authorized statement of his interviews with Goethe and Byron.

The Columbia Bicycle Calendar just issued by the Pope Manufacturing Co., of Boston, is a truly artistic and elegant work in chromo lithography and the letterpress. The calendar proper is mounted upon a back of heavy board, upon which is finely executed in oil color effect an allegorical scene representing Thomas Stevens circumcycling the globe.

An interesting illustrative feature of the first instalment of Mr. Washburne's "Reminiscences of the Siege of Paris," which are to appear in Scribner's Magazine, will be a fac simile of the written draft of the original proclamation, sent to Mr. Washburne, announcing the disaster of Sedan, and signed by the Council of Ministers.

Vick's Magazine for December gives its readers articles of value on topics of seasonable interest to florists and small fruit growers: "Value of White Grapes," "Raising large Potatoes," "Protecting Orchards and Vineyards," "Notes from a Southern Garden," are among them.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Dr. A. A. Hodge, of Princeton, was preparing a work on the Andover controversy at the time of his death, which will probably be published shortly, though unfinished.

—The churches of all denominations in South Carolina, since the earthquakes, have had a harvest of new converts. About 1,000 persons have united with the Presbyterian churches during the summer.

—In Philadelphia, union evangelical meetings are to be held during the coming winter, and a permanent organization is to be effected to carry on evangelical and benevolent work. In this plan the pastors and congregations of the various denominations have combined.

—An order has just been promulgated at Cincinnati, as a decision of the council of Catholic prelates recently held in Baltimore forbidding Catholic musicians or vocalists to play or sing in Protestant churches. This is perfectly right and the Protestant churches ought to thank Archbishop Elder for the order. When they come to their religious senses, they will see how inconsistent it is to employ unconverted persons to do their praising God in his worship.

—The synods of the Southern church, without exception, and some of them unanimously, sustain the action of the General Assembly in condemning the teachings and course of Dr. Woodrow, of Columbia Seminary. They, also, kindly, but positively, request his resignation.

—The Jews are talking of transferring their Sabbath to our Sunday, beginning with the year 1900. The matter is exciting much attention in England.

—For ten years past the evolutionary teachings of Dr. Woodrow, a professor in the Columbia Theological Seminary, have disturbed the Southern Presbyterian church. Presbytery after presbytery and synod after synod have devoted days to debating the matter, and many have adopted resolutions demanding the professor's dismissal. Last Friday the board of trustees of the seminary settled the trouble by demanding Professor Woodrow's resignation, and elected Dr. J. L. Girardeau to succeed him.

—A recent collection in two Swedish churches in Minnesota, in response to an appeal for a missionary church there, resulted in $40, all in coin, over 1,500 pieces being pennies, and only six coins were as large as a twenty-five cent piece. Almost every one of the 2,000 persons present gave something.

—At its recent meeting the Synod of Baltimore overtured to the next General Assembly an inquiry whether the reading of the Revised Version of the Holy Scriptures in public worship is consistent with the Presbyterian Directory for Worship which directs the reading of the Scriptures "from the most approved translation."

—At a conference of Baptist ministers in Philadelphia a few days ago, resolutions were adopted on divorce legislation, urging "that divorces shall not be granted for any other cause than adultery; that divorces for adultery shall not be granted when the offence is committed by the procurement or connivance of two parties, nor where the plaintiff has not resided in the State for at least one year immediately preceding the action."

—Statistics of Christian work accomplished in the Sandwich Islands have been given various place, but the following facts brought together by the Rev. Mr. Forbes, Secretary of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, will be of interest. The first Hawaiian pastor was ordained in 1849. Since that time 95 Hawaiians have been ordained, of whom 38 are as pastors in the home field and 9 in foreign service, making 47 native Hawaiians who are now either pastors or missionaries in active service. Since 1852, when the first Hawaiians went to Micronesia in company with Messrs. Snow, Gulick and Sturges, not less than 75 Sandwich Islanders have gone as foreign missionaries, 39 of them males, 36 females. The total sum contributed at the islands for foreign missions has been $170,149.45. Of this amount $134,015.86 were contributed by native Hawaiian churches, the remainder by foreign churches and individuals at the island. The contributions of the Hawaiian churches for all purposes from the beginning, so far as can be ascertained, amount to $818,270.35. This record should awaken our gratitude and stimulate our faith.

—The evangelist Davis, in whose labors for the neglected lumbermen the Cynosure readers are interested, is finding appreciative hearers in Racine, Wisconsin, where he led a union meeting last week. The following high but just commendation is from the Racine Daily Times of the 6th and 7th inst.:

"Mr. Davis, (or Brother Davis, as he prefers to be called,) the Boston evangelist, preached with great acceptance to a very large audience last evening in the Presbyterian church. His methods were not open to objection on the part of the most fastidious. He has no time to spend in scolding the churches into a spiritual state. He comes to spend but a short time and recognizes the importance of expending all his energies upon the non-church going people of the city, so far as they can be persuaded to give him a candid hearing. A graduate of Harvard College, and in college at the same time with Joseph Cook, he reminds his more scholarly hearers of the argumentative methods and the close, logical analysis of his subject which characterizes that distinguished lecturer. But there is such a wealth of illustration and such force of closely compacted argument in what he presents that all classes are at once deeply interested, and none find it difficult to retain the thread of his original and very effective discourses. He especially aims to meet the intelligent and wide awake working men of the city. He has no narrow creeds to discuss, but he has some very important practical truths to tell which it must be of advantage to all to hear."

"A rich intellectual treat, aside from all religious bearings of the discussion, was that enjoyed by those who were present at the Presbyterian church last evening. Many times have our citizens paid the largest prices for lectures not approaching that of Evangelist Davis on the being of the one Jehovah of Jews and Christians, the only true God. For intellectual grasp and spiritual power as a convincing reasoner we have seldom if ever heard it surpassed. Those who fail to attend these lectures are losing a rare opportunity to listen to a remarkably able statement of the foundation truths of all rational religious belief."

In commending Bro. Davis and his work we would ask all who are able to assist such a missionary to read his reports. Send for them to Wm. F. Davis, Mt. Washington, Chelsea, Mass.

LODGE NOTES.

The Trades-Union Congress, in session at Columbus, has adopted the name American Federation of Trade and Labor, and will hold its next meeting at Baltimore.

Powderly's late appeal for 25 cents from each member of the Knights of Labor is expected to bring $300,000 into the treasury. Laboring men, look out! Remember how the farmers enriched the National Grange with funds by the hundred thousand. Those funds yet support a few officials of that practically defunct lodge.

The Masonic World of Boston, organ of Egyptian or Memphis Rite Masonry of which Dr. Darius Wilson is the head, contains the following proclamation, set round with mourning:

SORROW! SORROW!! SORROW!!!

Office of the Sovereign Grand Master General Royal Masonic Rite,

Boston, Nov. 12, 1886.

SIR KNIGHTS, ILLUSTrious, VERY ILLUSTrious, AND MOST ILLUSTrious BROTHERS:—It is with deep sorrow that I officially proclaim to you that Very Ill. Brother Theodore Tutthill Gurney, 33°, 90°, 95°, died at his home, Chicago, Ill., on the 9th inst., of paralysis, and all members of the Rite of the obedience of the Sovereign Sanctuary, U. S. A., are earnestly requested to wear the mourning button of our Rite for 30 days, commencing Dec. 9, 1886. Bro. Gurney in the "York" or American Rite, was Past Master, Past Grand Master, Past High Priest, Past Eminent Commander, and Past Most Eminent Grand Commander, and one of the ablest committeemen on Foreign Correspondence. He was Past Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Consistory of Illinois, and honorary 33d degree member of the Scottish Rite. He was a charter member of the Sovereign Sanctuary of the Memphis Rite, organized at Chicago, in 1867. He subsequently denounced the Rite because its then Grand Master (Burt) claimed the right to work the first three degrees of Masonry, and never thereafter looked with favor upon any of the Egyptian Rites until after the formation of the Union Sovereign Sanctuary of the Royal Masonic Rite, December, 1884. The legislation there adopted renouncing all right, title and control to and of the first three degrees of Masonry greatly encouraged Bro. Gurney, and led him to believe that the Rite would be long more popular and successful than any other Rite of high degree Masonry. It was at his suggestion that I issued an edict declaring that it was impossible, for our Sovereign Sanctuary to ever change its constitution so that it might have the right to work or control the craft degrees. Bro. Gurney himself read the proof of our new diploma and wrote important amendments to the same, and although it was not publicly proclaimed that he was a member of our Sovereign Sanctuary, yet both directly and indirectly he wielded a powerful influence in our behalf, and we sincerely mourn his loss, and remain,

Fraternally yours,
DARIUS WILSON, 33°, 90°, 95°,
Grand Master.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Dec. 6 to Dec. 11 inclusive:

T Kingsnorth, G Avery, C Clark, J C Hetzel, Mrs J B Nessell, J M Bishop, W Constance, J Jones, Miss C Kingsbury, C A Ashley, H Richey, M R Britten, F Tilton, T Schaaf, B Hsieh, A Dorcas, B F Searies, E J Hayes, Mrs M Gaddis, B Hickinson, J D Stoner, A Small, Rev H Damp, Ira Green, A Shaddock, A Skinner, Eld Knapp, W H Bussard, J B Crall, G Harvey, W Holdman, Rev Farry, Rev I W Morton, L C Gregg, A Putnam, A M Lundstrom, J W Barnlund, Rev A C Stevens, T H Gault, A Carlton, O C Blanchard, A C Palmer, E S Bogle, Mrs E A Rowley, M H Truesdell, J B Dodds, A Andre.

SPECIAL
HOLIDAY OFFER!

For December 1886 only!

To all who send $2.00 for the Cynosure for one year in advance we will send a copy of BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS, free!

BUSINESS.

OUR PARTNERS.

There are hundreds of places where only one Cynosure is taken. If the subscription list is enlarged in these places, it must be done by our resident partners.

If you need the enthusiasm of a crowd to enable you to push the Cynosure successfully, think of the companies and battalions of workers situated just as you are, and fighting the same kind of a fight. You are one of a battalion! God grant you victory in the good work, and at least one new subscriber from each post office.

Those who receive the Cynosure with this item marked, will understand that the subscription is paid for by some friend, and will be stopped when the time expires unless ordered to be continued.

SOUTHERN MINISTERS' FUND.

This is the fund from which the colored ministers of the South have received the Cynosure. It seems very desirable to continue this fund, and hence the special appeal in the Cynosure of Aug. 12th.

The following named persons have contributed to this fund this year, 1886, and such names will be added from week to week as donate to it in the future:

Jno Dorcas, J F Icke, Mrs A E Tyler, H Holbrook, Wm Mathews, O Hansen, Mrs S B Skeel, Mrs A F Rider, F W Capwell, A Hamilton, Mrs C H Richardson, N Martin, R Johnson, J Aylsworth, Mrs T S Couch, I Bancroft, S A Pratt, J Rutley, A Hamilton, H A Fischer, Mrs N E Kellogg, Mrs A B Kellogg, T Kingsnorth, M Phillips, Susannah G Reed, Lemuel Lester, W O Percival, Prof E Whipple, A G Laird, Prof H A Fischer, L Woodruff, L M Sampson, H Wykhyser, P Bacon, H Preston, Rev J P Rogers, J Brandt, J A Austin, Mrs S H Nutting, D Hyde, Mrs M W Bingham, L E Lincoln, Rev Wm. Leuty, J. Rutty, O C Blanchard, H G. Hanson, Mrs. Jas. Hair, R. J. Williams, Benj. Harper, Wm. Matthews, M M Morse, Rufus Johnson, Wm D Houston, Ira Green, Geo M Freese, Rufus Johnson, O C M Bates, Rev C C Foote, Moses Plummer, Mrs Aaron Lewis, Ira Mettler, Mrs W. Ainsworth, S. M. Neff, Peter Howe, Rev. A. A. Stevens.

Not reported before: Jno. Hogue $1.50, S. J. White $1.00, S. A. Pratt $2.50, E. Sutton $3.47.

Readers ordering goods, or making orders concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	71	@	78
No. 3.....	70	@	75
Winter No. 2.....	73	@	78
Corn—No. 2.....	27½	@	30½
Oats—No. 2.....	54½	@	54½
Rye—No. 2.....	11	@	12½
Bran per ton.....	2	@	5 00
Flour.....	7 75	@	10 00
Eggs—Timothy.....	8	@	9 00
Mess pork per bbl.....	10	@	26
Butter, medium to best.....	66	@	11½
Cheese.....	80	@	1 50
Beans.....	17	@	23
Eggs.....	1 73	@	1 79
Seeds—Timothy.....	92½	@	92½
Flax.....	30	@	42
Broom corn.....	60½	@	14
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	11	@	61 00
Lumber—Common.....	11	@	33
Wool.....	45	@	70
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	1 80	@	3 85
Common.....	2 80	@	4 30
Hogs.....	1 80	@	4 30
Sheep.....	1 30	@	4 30

NEW YORK.

Flour.....	3 30	@	5 50
Wheat—Winter.....	84	@	92½
Spring.....	90	@	91
Corn.....	46½	@	48½
Oats.....	35	@	45½
Mess Pork.....	10 00	@	11 00
Eggs.....	12	@	25
Butter.....	13	@	37
Wool.....	1 50	@	4 30

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 50	@	4 30
Hogs.....	3	@	4 05
Sheep.....	1 50	@	4 30

A GENEROUS OFFER!

Four Entertaining Books

GIVEN AWAY.

To each subscriber for the CYNOSURE who sends in a $2.00 subscription for one year in advance on or before

JANUARY 1st, 1887.

See Special Offer Below.

GEN. O. O. HOWARD, The Salient Characteristics and Leading Events of His Life, illustrating his Career as a Christian Soldier. By Laura C. Holloway. 12mo, 225 pp., paper.

OUT OF EGYPT. Bible Readings on the Book of Exodus. By George F. Pentecost, D. D. 12mo, 214 pp., paper.

"To him who wishes a spicy, lively set of notes on the events of Exodus, both readable and attractive, this book will be most acceptable." Louisville Christian Advocate.

"Many fresh, interesting thoughts are to be found on almost every page."—Toronto Globe.

WOLFEIFFER. Periodic and Reformer. "The Morning Star of the Reformation." By John Laird Wilson. 12mo, 247 pp., paper.

"This is the fullest, fairest, most accurate and most connected memoir of the great reformer of reformers to be found anywhere within the compass of so small a volume. Nothing essential is omitted, and scarcely anything extraneous is permitted to make its appearance. The author has used his authorities with an independent judgment, and has never allowed himself to be seduced into the merely pictorial."—William M. Taylor, D. D.

WORKING PEOPLE AND THEIR EMPLOYERS. By Washington Gladden. 12mo, 241 pp., paper.

"This book we cordially commend. It is sound and examined in principle and Christian in spirit."—N. Y. Examiner.

Special Offer.

To any one who will send us $2.00, the subscription price of the CYNOSURE, on or before January 1st, 1887, we will send the paper one year and THE ABOVE FOUR BOOKS FREE! The retail price of the books alone, in paper, is $1.00; in cloth, $1.00. Don't miss the chance! Accept quickly!

DAKOTA ADMITTED

as well as all States and Territories into our Great Family of Readers.

A great staff of new Western writers will specially contribute to the CYNOSURE, the American Agriculturist to Western Agriculture, making it, with recent additions and improvements, the recognized authority, as for forty years past, in all matters pertaining to Agriculture, Horticulture, etc., etc.

ILLUSTRATED and ANNUAL HOUSEHOLD DEPARTMENTS have been enlarged, and HUMBUG exposures are to receive additional attention.

1,000 Original Illustrations.

Every issue of the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST contains nearly 100 original illustrations of animals, plants, and farm and household conveniences and appliances, out-door scenes, etc.

Splendid Engravings Free!!

HOMES OF OUR FARMER PRESIDENTS

It is noteworthy that a majority of our Presidents have taken up the pen and relieved from public life to rural scenes. The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is now publishing and sending free to all subscribers, as an outlay of over $200,000, superb Engravings (25 by 24 inches in size) of these Homes, together with special notices of the same, by James Parton, John Mitchell and other eminent living American authors. These engravings constitute a magnificent portfolio of the homes of the Presidents, and are a price of peasant's home. Subscriptions for 1887 immediately forwarded are entitled to all the series, beginning in May.

Endorsed by the U. S. Government.

Vol. 8th, Tenth Census, U. S., says: "The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is especially worthy of mention, because of the remarkable success that has attended the unique and untiring efforts of its proprietors to increase and extend its circulation. Its contents are duplicated every month for a German edition, which also circulates widely."

Price, $1.50 a year; Single Numbers, 15c.

Balance of this year free to all subscribers immediately. Send $1.50 for the year, and the balance of the year, just out, 32-page Premium List, and Sample Proof of Engravings of "Homes of Our Farmer Presidents," together with description by James Parton. Address

DAVID W. JUDD, Pub., 751 Broadway, N. Y.

CANVASSEES WANTED EVERYWHERE.

We will club the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST with the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE for $2.50 a year, every person who immediately subscribes to either the engravings free for next year and this year also.

Light and Life S. C. Supplies.

We are prepared to furnish anything in the line of Sunday-school supplies, including a choice line of reward and tokens, which we sell at low rates. Teachers' registers, Library Registers, Maps, Wall Maps, and Charts.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS.

It is our aim to produce papers that will not only interest the children by their attractive appearance and readability, but by sound, evagelical and wholesome teaching to lead them to Christ. All sensational matter and worldly concerns are carefully avoided. These papers are published by

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

THE PEARL (monthly). Single copy per year, 25 cents; to Sunday-schools, five copies or more, per quarter, 3 cents each; per year, 12 cents.

FARM NOTES.

WASHINGTON'S ECONOMY ON THE FARM.

(From an Unpublished Letter.)

"I do in earnest terms enjoin upon you to see that the hay is used with the greatest economy at the Mansion House, and particularly to guard against Mrs. L. Washington's Charles and her boy in the stables, both of whom are impudent and self-willed, and care not how extravagantly they feed or even waste; for I have caught the boy several times littering his horses with hay. Except her blind horse (which may be endangered by running at large,) I see no sort of necessity there is for feeding with either grain or hay when they are not used, or any other horse that is at liberty and able to provide for itself. * I can plainly perceive that, in a little time (after saving what oats I want for seed another year,) there will be nothing either for my negroes or horses to eat without buying, which will neither comport with my interest or inclination. By Stuart's report, I find he still continues to feed horses with corn instead of cut oats, as I directed. What two saddle horses are those which stand in the Mansion House report? I know of none but the one Mr. Whiting used to ride."

"What country gentleman of our day, on his city absences, puts this particularity and sagacity into his queries?"—Donald G. Mitchell in American Agriculturist.

FOR THE PROTECTION OF HORSES.

Mr. Payton Ranney, of Kalamazoo, Mich., has, in a convenient locality near the business center of the town, erected 157 horse-sheds. Connected with them is a waiting-room and restaurant, where ladies and gentlemen coming into town on business can leave their bundles and extra wraps and get a comfortable meal, while the horses are tied under cover and away from exposure. Ten cents pays the man who takes your team (or 12 tickets for $1), when you get out of the carriage, ties and covers up your horse, and waters and brings him to the door when ordered. Another time will get him a feed of oats. It is worth all it costs, not only as protection and care of the animal, but also as a convenience to the owner, and for ladies it is a great accommodation. Before the establishment of this convenience it was usual for the farmers to come into town on business, hitch their teams at the sides of the streets, and there let them stand for hours in the hot sun, rain, wind or cold; the same is now so common in other market towns of the country. Now all this is changed. The streets are no longer thronged with teams. Mr. Ranney finds his enterprise profitable. The farmer who brings along the feed for his team is waited upon and his team fed without additional charge.

As a practical, necessary provision for deserving animals we give this scheme our hearty approval. We commend it to the American Humane Association and to all Humane Societies. We desire to have such an enterprise inaugurated in every considerable village, and invoke the village councils to make the care of teams obligatory. We are not sorry to add that Mr. Ranney takes the Humane Journal and keeps it on the table of his waiting-room.

HOW TO DESTROY RATS.

An attempt to catch rats by traps or by poisoning them suddenly will fail. Old rats know too much, and can only be caught by kindness. To destroy them give them a good meal every day. Do not put any poison in the food, but simply prepare a dish for them daily, as a free lunch, composed of corn meal moistened with milk, into which an egg and a little salt, to season, has been beaten. At first they may not touch it, but keep it before them, making it fresh daily. They will soon try a little, and if not injurious their suspicions will be allayed. In a week or ten days they will expect it, and every rat on the place will be at the appointed spot for the treat. Give plenty of it, so as to induce all the rats in the neighborhood to join. Do not be in a hurry to poison them. If they eat all the food, give them a larger quantity next time. As soon as they have thrown off all suspicion, go to your druggist, get some phosphorus paste or other rat poison, mix it with the food, and be sure you give them enough and something to spare so as to induce all to eat. They will either be killed or become so suspicious of all other food as to leave, and not a rat will remain. Hence to destroy rats, take plenty of time, gain their confidence, and finish them when they least expect it.—Farm, Field, and Stockman.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours of a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or saline on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cures. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified by a hundred-fold. There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

Res. R. L. HENNER, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchitis and Catarrh of the throat, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such malady."

R. L. HEDDEN, 28 West 49th St., New York, says: "I suffered from years from a severe case of Catarrh, coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone, my lungs are no longer great and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and it is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO., Central Music Hall, 210, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago. Main Office: 1329 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR Illustrated.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN or SECRET Work."

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

PRICE 25 CENTS.

For Sale by

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SONGS OF PILGRIMAGE.

A HYMNAL

FOR THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

Probably the most extensive collection of hymns in the English language.

- It contains 1533 hymns, with music for them all.
- It contains 344 tunes from 112 known authors.
- It contains old hymns you have hunted for.
- It contains old tunes your grandmother sung.
- It contains hymns you learned when a child.
- It contains old tunes you have wanted so long.
- It contains new tunes you have never heard.
- It contains plenty of solid standard music.
- It contains numerous grand old minor tunes.
- It contains some 500 hymns you never saw.
- It contains 131 hymns from Watts.
- It contains 149 of Wesley's hymns.
- It contains over 300 new hymns from H. L. H.
- It contains hymns for all occasions.
- It contains hymns of the blessed hope.
- It contains old hymns from the Latin and Greek.
- It contains hymns from the French and German.
- It contains hymns from the old and new.
- It contains hymns for the old and young.
- It contains hymns for sick and well.
- It contains 528 pages of hymns and music.
- It contains the names of authors and composers.
- It contains the index of both hymns and tunes.
- It contains an index of subjects.

It is printed from type like this line.

YES YOU CAN CARRY IT IN YOUR POCKET!

Price in flexible cloth, $1.00, cloth extra, $1.25.

Address orders to the publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.,

OR TO THIS OFFICE.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Advertisers who wish to secure the advantage of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

Talks

ON THE

Labor Troubles,

BY REV. C. C. BROWN.

The Danger—The Laborer's Grievance—The Laborer's Foe—The Laborer's Hope—Mind and Muscle—Co-Laborers.

TIMELY TALKS ON AN IMPORTANT SUBJECT.

The Papers Say of this Book:

"It is well to remind the world of the great law of human brotherhood, but how to make the 'more general application of it?'—Aye, there's the rub! Our author contributes his mite in that direction, and his voice and reasoning will reach some ears and perhaps touch some understandings and move some selfish hearts that are battered up very closely and hedged around by over much respectability and comfortable prosperity."—Chicago Tribune.

"The writer does his work in a way remarkable, alike for its directness, its common sense, its impartiality, its lucidity and its force. He has no theories to support; he deals with facts as he finds them; he fortifies his assertions by arrays of demonstrative statistics. The work is among the best of the kind. It is not the best that we have seen. While it is scarcely possible for it to be put in the hands of all our wage-workers, we would not could be read by every one of them."—Chicago Interior.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood,
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN or SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association,

221 West Madison St., Chicago.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND

FRIENDLY GREETINGS

Is a FORTY-PAGE, ILLUSTRATED, monthly family magazine edited by F. J. AVERY, Halifax, N.S.

Price, 75 Cents per Year if Prepaid.

Its columns are devoted to TEMPERANCE, MISSIONARY INTELLIGENCE, HOUSEHOLD HINTS, SHORT STORIES and ILLUSTRATIONS, making 28 pages of reading matter, suitable and profitable for young and old, with an average of twelve illustrations in each number; this will give a magazine of 40 pages monthly for 75 cents a year, and will, therefore, be one of the cheapest sold. Specimen copies sent for two 8-cent stamps.

A $5 GOLD PIECE

will be given if you get 20 subscribers. "Buds and Blossoms" is endorsed by Christians and ministers of all denominations. One writes: "The copy has been in my hands and blessing to me. Every page is calculated to bring one nearer to the Lord." "We wish you ever-increasing success as you deserve." "To see B. & B. N. to want and to love." "It should be in every house." A record of Faith Work.

Mental Gymnastics;

OR

Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize any thing they choose—THE CLERGY, Their Sermons; THE STUDENT, His Lessons; THE BUSINESS MAN, His Affairs of Business. The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test.

The author, an American, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best hook obtainable on that subject.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system to produce an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

KNIGHT TEMPLAR ILLUS-TRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Sacred Master, Sublime Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 31 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $0.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at.

The Christian's Secret

OF

A Happy Life.

28th THOUSAND.

Baptist Commendation.

"delighted with this book. It reaches to the core of Christian experience, and is eminently practical in its teachings. It meets the doubts and difficulties of conscientious seekers after the bread and water of life, but whose efforts result only in alternate failure and victory. The author, without claiming to be a theologian, sends out the results of a happy and rich experience to help others into a happy Christian life."—Baptist Weekly.

Presbyterian Endorsement.

"The book is so truly and reverentially devout in its spirit that it draws criticism. It contains so much that is sound and practical, so much that, if heeded, will make our lives better, happier and more useful, that the intelligent reader who really wishes to lead a life 'hid with Christ in God' can scarcely fail to derive profit from its perusal."—Interior.

Methodist Word of Praise.

"We have not for years read a book with more delight and profit. It is not a theological book. No effort is made to change the theological views of any one. The author has rich experience, and tells it in a plain and delightful manner."—Christian Advocate.

United Brethren's Approval.

"We have seldom met with a more interesting volume, abounding throughout with apt illustrations, to which we have failed to find a dry drop from title-page to title."—Religious Telescope.

Congregational Comment.

"It comes most happy, practical, reasoning and interesting incident. It is presented and experienced lesson taught out of God's word, and is worthy of universal acceptance."—Church Union.

This enlarged edition is a beautiful large 12mo volume of 240 pages.

Price, in cloth, richly stamped, 75 cts.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Suggestive Outline

BIBLE STUDIES

AND

BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,

Author (with S. R. Briggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as George F. Pentecost, A. J. Gordon, Horatio Bonar, William Lincoln, H. H. Vincent, Chas. M. Whitely, George C. Needham, R. C. Morse, D. L. Moody, J. H. Munhall, E. B. Broome, etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wishes to understand and how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped in study? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry among the Grown People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY

candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,

ELDER DAVID BERNARD.

CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and

PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

MORGAN MONUMENT.

20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.
VICE-PRESIDENT.—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.
COR. SEC'Y AND GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.
REC. SEC'Y AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is: "To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to render the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform. FORM OF REQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of _____ dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.
SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Bathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Rudbeck, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Williamantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Williamantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Senj. Ullsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birminghams; Rec. Sec., H. W. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., James Harvey.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Torrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning Jr., Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Waseja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec., Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., E. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmont; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec., John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Rev. R. M. Smith, Piquette; Rec. Sec., Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Cor. Sec., Rev. A. M. Campbell, Cedarville; Treas., W. B. Clark, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Betts, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. B. Laird, St. Johnsbury; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

IN BRIEF.

The Prussian Minister of Public Works has recently published a report whereby it appears that the entire length of railroads of the world up to the end of 1884 was 201,000 miles, of which very nearly one-half is that of the American railroads, mainly in the United States.

A lady became frightened when a heavy storm came in the night. The constant flashes of lightning and deafening peals of thunder alarmed her, and she begged her husband to get up, saying, "We shall be killed!" He said, "Wife, there's no use. We may as well lie still. It's got a-going so we can't stop it if we do get up."

On its present peace footing, the German army consists of 427,274 men and 18,118 officers. On a war footing, for which the estimates are always made, the army proper would consist of 1,456,677 men and 35,998 officers, served also by 312,731 horses and 2,808 guns. In addition to this great force there is the landsturm, or militia reserves.

It costs a little more than twenty cents a mile to run a locomotive, on an average. Nearly eight cents of this for fuel, seven and a quarter cents for pay of engineer and fireman, and a half cent for oil and waste, and more than four and one-half for repairs. A ton of coal will run a locomotive twenty-four miles, a pint of oil will run eleven miles, a pound of waste 123 miles. The locomotives of a railway like the Northwestern run 500,000 miles a month.

Mr. Webster used to tell a story at the expense of Peter Little, who had in early life repaired clocks and watches, but who had for some years represented a Maryland district in the House. One day he had the temerity to move to amend a resolution by John Randolph on the subject of military claims. Mr. Randolph rose up after the amendment had been offered, and, drawing his watch from his fob, asked the Hon. Peter what o'clock it was. He told him. "Sir," replied the orator, "you can mend my watch, but not my notions. You understand tie-tacs, but not tactics."

The Chinese Government has put down its foot in solid earnest, and declared its intention of no longer acknowledging the French protectorate over Roman Catholics in China. It appears curious that a Republic which threatens to withdraw the subvention to the Roman Catholic church at Rome, and vaguely hints at the confiscation of church property, should without treaty provisions assume to itself the right to protect Roman Catholics in China, irrespective of their nationality. Hereafter, each European government will look after its own citizens in China, and France will have to forego a power which she has always turned into a political engine.

SONGS

FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE AND SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—o—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

In the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents (one postage stamp) each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. H. H. Hinman, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Iowa, C. F. Hawley, Wayne, Henry Co. Care Rev. Geo. Fry.
Illinois, I. R. B. Arnold, Wheaton.
Wisconsin, J. F. Browne.
Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tazewell, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. May, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
T. S. Walter, Kit. Jay Co., Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Wheaton, Ill.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill.
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsville, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
Wm. R. Keach, Pickington, Ont.
T. J. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
E. Barnston, Hannville, St. Louis Co., N. Y.
Wm. R. Keach, Pickington, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Families are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming year. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We still send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE AND—
The Christian	$2 50
The American (Washington)	2 50
Western Rural	3 00
The Missionary Review	3 00
Christian Herald N. Y.	2 75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2 50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3 30
New York Witness	2 50
Union Signal	3 00
Christian Statesman (Phila.)	3 50
The Interior	3 85
The Independent	4 25
The S. Times	3 50
Gospel in All Lands	3 50
The Nation	4 50
New York Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Inter Ocean, Weekly	2 50
Harper's Magazine	4 75
North American Review	5 75
The Century	5 25
Scientific American	4 25
Buds and Blossoms	2 10
Pansy	2 35
Vick's Magazine	2 50
American Agriculturist	2 00

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Values and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-Fellowship," the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated," the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies," a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Pres. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR ILLUSTRATED.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN WORK"

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

Price 25 Cents.

For Sale by NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform

Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH.

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason—and especially by HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTY CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Subordinate Bodies, preserved, illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, 810; per dozen, $3.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen $1.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WOOD ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Wood, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canadian jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribed his name to the letter, but ATTACHED HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.
In closing his letter he writes: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a consciousness of having been governed through the 'Anti-Masonic excitement' by a sincere desire first to vindicate the violated laws of my country and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influence of 'secret societies'.
The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the most historical article which this great journal and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Price, 5 cents.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The citizens of Washington having subscribed a guarantee fund of $50,000 to insure the payment of prizes and expenditures for a National drill and encampment, the executive committee now gives notice that such drill and encampment will begin in Washington May 23, 1897, and will end May 30.

The House of Representatives passed a bill extending the laws of the United States over the public land strip south of Kansas, and throwing the region open to homestead entries.

A young man in Nebraska, desiring to marry an educated daughter of Standing Bear, has requested from Secretary Lamar permission to live on the reservation with the girl's relatives.

The House has passed the bill forfeiting the unearned land grant of the Ontonagon and Brule River Railroad Company of Northern Michigan, involving 384,600 acres of land.

COUNTRY.

Snow fell twenty-seven inches deep at Asheville, N. C., early last week. The roofs of the Asheville Tobacco Works, the Shelton Factory, and of Dickson & Watson's wholesale provision house have been crushed in, entailing heavy losses. At Knoxville, Tenn., the snow-fall was twenty-two inches.

A paralytic woman at Akron, Ohio, jumped from her bed Monday to render aid to her attendant, a young girl, whose clothing had caught fire, and thus saved her life. The aged woman forgot her paralysis for the moment and seemed greatly improved by her wonderful exploit.

The United States Supreme court Monday affirmed the decision of the lower court in the case of Ker, the defaulting cashier of Preston, Kean & Co., of Chicago, now serving a sentence of ten years at Joliet. Ker ran away to South America and was got back by detectives.

A discovery of iron ore, said to be of excellent quality, has been made near the village of Medford, Wis.

The Scandinavian immigration to this country is now a marked feature of ocean travel. In this month 3,000 hardy Norwegians have already been landed at Castle Garden.

Near Minneapolis Tuesday a large eagle, measuring nearly ten feet from tip to tip, attacked two surveyors, Professor W. F. Carr and Samuel Chute, severely wounding the former and making a desperate effort to bear him away. Timely aid arrived, and the bird was captured. His talons are over four inches in length.

An unknown three-masted schooner is sunk off Salem, Mass., and there are no tidings of the crew. The two-masted schooner John T. Long went ashore early Tuesday morning near Seabright, N. J. The life-saving crew boarded the craft, but found only a dog, and it is believed that the crew perished.

Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, announces that under decrees of the Baltimore Council bulls for charitable purposes are prohibited by the Catholic church.

Mrs. Sadawaten died from voluntary starvation, Tuesday, at Rockford, Ill. She had made several attempts to commit suicide.

Thomas Morrison went to the township school at Henderson, Mich., Tuesday morning, intent upon assaulting Fred Joslyn, the teacher, for severely punishing Morrison's son. The teacher drew a revolver and shot Morrison dead.

At a Mill Creek (Ind.) crossing Tuesday afternoon, Reuben Hill and his three sons, aged 14, 16, and 18, were killed by a train. Hill's little daughter escaped with a broken leg, and the horses are uninjured, but a dog which was tied under the wagon was cut in halves.

Captain Bartholomew and four of the crew of the steamer Knickerbocker, plying between New Orleans and New York, were drowned Tuesday morning off the New Jersey coast, while trying to aid a disabled schooner.

An earthquake shock at 4:20 Wednesday morning aroused sleeping citizens in Columbia, S. C., the oscillations lasting fully a minute.

The McClure family, mother, daughter, and son, living at the corner of Myrtle and Fullerton avenues, Maplewood, died from escaping coal gas Saturday night. The mother and daughter retired early, leaving the son, a young man aged 21, to attend to the stoves. In filling them with coal he forgot to replace the top on one, and the escaping gas asphyxiated the trio during the night.

Judge Duffy, of Baltimore, has imprisoned a reporter named Morris for exposing Grand Jury proceedings.

The New York Tribune says that Mayor Harrison's visit to that city was to interest Mr. George in the next campaign for the Chicago Mayoralty.

Oscar A. Simons, President of the First National Bank of Fort Wayne, Ind., suddenly stopped while conversing Friday with his brother-in-law, and going to his dressing-case, opened a drawer, took out a revolver, and shot himself dead. He was a prominent politician, the wealthiest man in the city, and 53 years of age. Overwork crazed him.

Three men have been arrested at Findlay, Ohio, charged with plotting to burn and plunder the city. One of the men has made a confession, detailing how each was stationed in a different locality for the purpose of applying the torch.

Snow fell Dec. 6, to the depth of twenty-seven inches, in Asheville, N. C. Traffic and travel of all kinds are suspended. The weight of the snow crushed in the roof of the Asheville tobacco works, and a large stock of smoking tobacco was ruined. In the Harrisonburg (Va.) district the snow, which fell continuously for sixty hours, was about 15 inches deep. At Winchester it was 12 inches deep. At Knoxville, Tenn., letters report 22 inches of snow, a depth unknown for thirty years.

A locomotive exploded Thursday at Jersey Shore, Pa., killing two engineers and severely injuring four other men.

FOREIGN.

In the vicinity of Banff, in the Canadian Northwest Territories, seven seams of anthracite coal have been discovered, sufficient to supply the entire Canadian Northwest for fifty years.

General von Schweinitz, the German Ambassador to St. Petersburg, complained to Count Tolstoi, the Russian Minister of the Interior, of the hostile language of the Russian journals in referring to Germany. Count Tolstoi expressed regret, but said that, in view of the malevolent tone adopted by the German press against Russia, he did not see how he could interfere.

The schooner Edith foundered on a reef near Miguelon Island, off the south coast of Newfoundland, Sunday, the crew, numbering thirteen, perishing.

From the altar of Notre Dame, in Montreal, Wednesday morning, the Rev. Father Struble denounced the pastimes of tobogganing and snow-shoeing.

The Porte has issued a circular to the powers to the effect that the Sultan consents to the candidacy of Prince Nicholas of Mingrelia for the Bulgarian throne, and invites the powers to co-operate for a speedy settlement of the Bulgarian question.

M. Goblet has finished the formation of the new French Ministry, to succeed that of DeFreycinet, which is announced as follows: M. Goblet, President of the Council and Minister of the Interior, and ad interim Minister of Foreign Affairs; M. Dauphin, Minister of Finance; M. Berthelot, Minister of Instruction; M. Sarrien, Minister of Justice; General Boulanger, Minister of War; Admiral Aube, Minister of Marine; M. Granet, Minister of Posts and Telegraphs; M. Lockroy, Minister of Commerce; M. Milhaud, Minister of Public Works.

General Von Schellendorf, the Prussian Minister of War, gave a detailed comparison of the strength of European armies before the Septennate Commission. His remarks implied that the government is preparing for a hostile coalition against France and Russia.

An earthquake was felt in Smyrna and throughout the island of Chios. The disturbance made fissures in the walls and in fronts of houses in all parts of the territory.

Cholera is increasing in the Argentine towns. On Dec. 7, there were twenty-two deaths at Rosario. In the past twenty-four hours there were ten deaths and seventeen new cases at Cordova.

THE PHYSICIAN'S FAVORITE!

A predigested, non-irritating, easily assimilated food indicated in all weak and inflamed conditions of the digestive organs, either in infants or adults.

It has been the positive means of saving many lives, having been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

The Most Nourishing, Most Palatable, Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

150 MEALS for an Infant for $1.00.

EASILY PREPARED. At Druggists, 25c., 50c., $1.00.

A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," sent free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

EMPLOYMENT and ALL EXPENSES PAID. At home or to travel; state which preferred by Mason & Hamlin Org. & Piano Co., Manufacturers and Wholesale Dealers, 294 George St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

—Florida! Florida!—

A package of Curiosities, containing Florida Grey Moss, Alligator Teeth, Sea Beans, and Shells, will be sent to any one on receipt of 25 cents. Festoons of the "Beautiful Grey Moss," for decorating churches and private houses. Address H. M. WOOD, 515 E. 5th St., Fla. (Jeweler and Dealer in Florida Curiosities.)

LEPAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, Etc. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Org. & Piano Co., Putnam Palace Car Co., Etc. Mfd only by the RUSSIA GUM CO., ROCHESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. 62 Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

LADIES TO INTRODUCE

our Ladies' Journal in the best homes. We make you the following Liberal Offer: We will send the paper, postpaid, from Sept. 1 to Jan. 1, 1897, on receipt of ONLY 10 CENTS.

AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING

Is decidedly a ladies' journal. Published monthly, handsomely illustrated, filled with original Stories, Poems, with departments on Home Cooking, Art, Recipes, Etc.—brac, Artistic Needlework, Window Gardening, Flowers, Mothers' Corner, Children's Nook, Household Pets, and all Home Subjects. By many of our best writers. Subscription price, 50 cents per year. Samples free.

THE P. B. Combined Tracing Wheel and Scissors.

Price, 75c. A dispensable article for every woman, made of the best English steel, hand-forged, oil-tempered. Every pair warranted. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. Or we will send the scissors to any one that will send two subscribers to AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING and $1.00. American Housekeeping Co., 118 LaSalle street, Chicago.

EUTOCIA A Book for every woman.

Introductory notice by ROBERT GUERREY, M.D. Also preface by Dr. GEO. E. SHIPMAN, and chapters on the care and management of infants by the same experienced author. Mothers, Wives and Bachelors. Not a compilation of other works and clippings, but the careful, practical study of Mrs. Dr. E. G. Cook, for over a quarter of a century. COMPLETE Leading and Medical Press. ENDORSED by the Ministers, Physicians, Bachelors, Weekly, Religious and Medical Press. COMPLETE LADIES GUIDE. It treats fully on easy child-bearing, and health of children. In short a complete manual for the household. Mailed free on receipt of price where we have no Agents. Alphabetical table of contents. AGENTS find a ready sale for it. Agents for the Eastern States: H. M. Wood, 515 E. 5th St., Chicago. Silk Cloth, $2.00. Morocco $2.75. Address for terms ARCADE PUB. CO., 124 La Salle St., Chicago.

OUR LATEST BOOK. HARVEST FOR THE HOLIDAYS. NOW IN PRESS.

WITH PICTURES.

Canvasers' Outfit now ready. New, original, and tempting. Heavy, super-calendered paper, superb binding, new and in full particular sent free on application. Our territorial record books are now open for the assignment of territory to best men and good agents. Complete canvassers' outfit, $1.00. General Agents wanted for Colorado, Kentucky, Kansas, Iowa, Pennsylvania, New York, and Southern States. For discounts and full particulars, address The J. E. WHITE PUBLISHING CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

Fac Simile Series.

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years, 100 styles, $20 to $500. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 46 pp., 4to, free.

PIANOS.

The Improved Method of Stringing, introduced and perfected by MASON & HAMLIN, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Piano-forte construction. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO

154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago, 46 E. 14th St., (Union Sq.), N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED Every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chinese Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 238 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED In every city and town for A Ladies' Favorite Tracing Wheel. Will sell in every household. Two dozen mailed on receipt of $1. Sample list. NOVELTY WHEEL CO., 24 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, Academies, Newsstands, Churches, Sample postpaid. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

CATARRH TREATMENT FREE

So great a cure that we can cure you, dear sufferer, we will mail enough to convince.

See B. S. LACROIX & Co., Newark, N. J.

FLORIDA.

ACADEMY AND COLLEGE, AT DELAND, FLORIDA.

A first-class academy for both sexes. Five Courses College Preparatory, Higher English, Normal, Business, Industrial Drawing, First-class Art and Music Departments. Fine new Dormitory Building, enabling us to furnish board and tuition at reasonable rates. The purpose of this institution is to give, in the delightful climate of Florida, as thorough and liberal an education as can be secured in the best New England schools. DELAND COLLEGE will also receive students of all classes, prepared to enter the Freshman Class. Send for catalogue to J. F. FORBES, President, DeLand, Florida; or H. A. DELAND, Fairport, N. Y.

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS & COPYRIGHTS

Obtained, and all other business in the U. S. Patent Office attended to for MODERATE FEES. Send MODEL OR DRAWING. We advise as to patentability free of charge; and we make NO CHARGE UNLESS WE OBTAIN A PATENT. Send your letter to the Postmaster, the Sup't. of Money Order Div., and to officials of the U. S. Patent Office. For circulars, advice, terms and references to actual clients in your own State or country, write to

C. A. SNOW & Co.,

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

JOYFUL News for Boys and Girls! Young and Old! A NEW INVENTION just patented for Home use! Fret and Scroll Sawing, Turning, Boring, Drilling, Grinding, Pulley, Screw Cutting. Price $5 to $50. Send 6 cents for 100 pages. EPHRAIM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.

OUR LATEST BOOK. HARVEST FOR THE HOLIDAYS. NOW IN PRESS.

WITH PICTURES.

Canvasers' Outfit now ready. New, original, and tempting. Heavy, super-calendered paper, superb binding, new and in full particular sent free on application. Our territorial record books are now open for the assignment of territory to best men and good agents. Complete canvassers' outfit, $1.00. General Agents wanted for Colorado, Kentucky, Kansas, Iowa, Pennsylvania, New York, and Southern States. For discounts and full particulars, address The J. E. WHITE PUBLISHING CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

Fac Simile Series.

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

Fac Simile Series.

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XIX., No. 14.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1886.

WHOLE No. 869.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.
SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR.....$2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.....$1.50.

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.....	1
The University of New Jersey.....	8
Party Names.....	8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Kansas Struggle and its Sequence.....	1
Autobiography of Asa Mahan.....	2
The Secret Orders and the Saloon [Address of Miss E. E. Flagg.....	3
A Noble Enthusiasm in Worcester.....	4
REFORM NEWS:
The Knoxville Convention: First Word from the Ohio Meeting; The Southern lecturer in the Old North State; Wisconsin Work.....	4.5
BIBLE LESSON.....	6
CORRESPONDENCE:
Good Letter from Denver; A National Reformer in the Metropolis; The Iowa W. C. T. U.—A Correction; Pith and Point.....	5.6
OBITUARY.....	7
Secret Societies Condemned.....	7
THE N. C. A.....	7
LECTURE LIST.....	7
WASHINGTON LETTER.....	9
LITERATURE.....	9
NOTICES.....	10
THE HOME.....	10
TEMPERANCE.....	11
Press Comment.....	12
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....	12
LODGE NOTES.....	13
HOME AND HEALTH.....	14
IN BRIEF.....	15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....	16
MARKETS.....	13

In these days of agitation about labor, instead of in labor, and abundant condemnation of working men who have been financially successful, it is well enough to remember the truth stated so well by Ruskin: "Many a beggar is as lazy as if he had ten thousand a year, and many a man of large fortune is busier than his errand boy. There is a working class, strong and happy, among both rich and poor; there is an idle class—weak, wicked and miserable—among both rich and poor."

A pitiful story from Lafayette, Indiana, shows that the Orangemen's order is no exception to the other lodges in its murderous spirit of revenge. An old Irishman was found the other morning dead in his bed. He was once a prosperous farmer near Lake Simcoe, Canada, a community where Orangism has full sway. His expressions of Irish opinion angered the lodgemen, who burned his house and destroyed his stock and crops. The old man was reduced to poverty, and, leaving his children with friends, he came back to Indiana, where he formerly lived, to begin again amid a less savage people. Men who become familiar with the brutal and bloody oaths of the lodge must be expected to show the effect of their education.

Harvard College is offered a half million bribe to immortalize a miser. E. Price Greenleaf, a miser and a hermit, died at 96 a few days since, leaving the bulk of his fortune to the institution, with the provision that his portrait should be hung on its walls. This is but a strongly drawn picture of a frequent occurrence. Hundreds who have lived as uselessly as this poor man, who have worshipped no God but their gold, have endowed a college or seminary with the wealth their dying hands could no longer hold, in hope thus to buy that favor from God and their fellows which they took no care to deserve while living. Alas! say these self-seekers, that my name should perish since I have spent a life-time of grasping and hoarding to make it of some account. Such names should not perish, but should live to be a detestation and a warning that their fate be not shared by our young men.

The "blue-blood" snobbery which is popularly supposed to prevail in some parts of New England and New York had no friend in the late Charles Francis Adams. Being introduced to speak at a political meeting as the grandson of President John Adams, and son of John Quincy Adams, he at once said: "The fact of my ancestry has been referred to several times during the evening. I am proud of my father and grandfather, but I wish it distinctly understood that I appear before you as myself, and not as the son and grandson of any man." He then went on and made one of the most powerful speeches of the day. The moral is obvious. Let every tub stand on its own bottom, and every American be his own ancestor.

"Honor and fame from no condition rise, Act well your part, there all the glory lies."

A dispatch from Amsterdam, New York, tells of a great excitement among the Knights of Labor in that vicinity, over an exposition of their signs, grips, oaths, etc., in the Democrat of that city. The exposition was taken from official documents, sent out by the General Secretary of the order, and do not seem to differ from the exposition published by Mr. Cook, and for sale at this office. This introduction of the public to their so-called secrets is causing some of the more radical and sensible members to show their desire that the entire lodge ritual, secret signs and passwords, be abolished. It is not likely their advice would be heeded. As Stevens, the Masonic founder of the order, observed, the false oath and false worship are needed to hold the consciences of men down to the despotic demands of the order for secrecy and obedience.

It will be many years before P. P. Bliss, our loved Chicago singer, and his "Hold the Fort for I am coming" will be forgotten. It is an interesting fact that General J. M. Corse, formerly of this city, the hero of the incident which inspired the song, has lately assumed the duties of Postmaster of Boston. After his appointment he was in a quandary about his bond, not wishing to ask business acquaintances as a mere act of friendship to become personally responsible for $200,000; but to his surprise his friends were before him in the matter and without his knowledge had the bond made out for the full sum. How often does our best Friend, the Lord Jesus Christ, answer our prayers before we frame the words, and how does he willingly offer himself as our surety before God!

The Grand Lodge of Masons of Kentucky at their late meeting voted to condemn the use of intoxicating drink as a detriment to the growth and prosperity of the order, and saloon-keeping was declared a Masonic offense to be duly punished. This reads well and shows a spirit of reform in the order; but it will fail to convince men who know the spirit of Freemasonry to believe such resolutions will ever be carried into effect until Masonry ceases to be Masonry. The resolution itself is a selfish one. Liquor is condemned not because the drunkard is condemned by God, but because it hinders Masonry. The Kentucky Freemasons at the same time take barrels of whisky to St. Louis to treat their friends, and in Illinois their lodge brothers vote in favor of liquor, and there are plenty of lodge buildings in our cities which have a saloon in the basement.

As if the hundreds of open army associations, the secret Grand Army of the Republic for the rank and file, Loyal Legion for the officers, Relief Corps for women, and Sons of Veterans for the children, were not enough to keep alive the memory of war, some "silly women" of Camden, New Jersey, have conjured up a "Society of the Ladies' Grand Army of the Republic," and have issued their manifesto. What excuse they can have for such a society, now that twenty years have passed since the war, and a large proportion of its veterans are drawing pensions, it is not easy to conjecture. But that the foul lodge spirit, like unto an angel of light, is deceiving them there can be no doubt. "Our platform is purity, patriotism, and the honor of the Grand Army of the Republic," they say; "though we may not ask to join their inner, and to them, holier circle," etc. This is a slavish pretence. American women should sweep into the sea a society which puts them into such an abject condition. But this is the mark of the lodge. It would turn back our civilization to the mummeries of Egypt and Chaldea, and give women a Turkish harem or an Indian zenana instead of a Christian home.

THE TIMES OF WAR AND RECONSTRUCTION.

REMINISCENCES BY HON. S. C. POMEROY.

THE KANSAS STRUGGLE AND ITS SEQUENCE.

The rebellion of 1861 was nothing short of a revolution. The results consequent upon it were not less important than from the Revolution of 1776. The latter gave the United States an independent government, while the former gave to these States nationality, freedom, and a Union, indissoluble forever. The student of history reads with deep interest all the preliminary steps which led the fathers to revolt from the mother country, and all the causes leading to it. So, too, the leading steps to the war of 1861 can now be viewed from the standpoint of a quarter of a century removed.

Among the events of that period there will always be noted the repeal of the "Missouri Compromise," so called, leading to the conflicts between freedom and slavery in the Territory of Kansas. While this struggle was pending, all efforts made by the nation for peace and union, by compromise, failed. The National Convention, which assembled in Washington, D. C., for that purpose, (February 5, 1861,) adjourned, after a stormy session, and effected nothing. The door of reconciliation then closed and left but one resort—the last resort, "To arms." Those who were the first to see this, and the first to repel the attack upon national authority, retake and defend the forts, arsenals, and other public property which had been captured or stolen, will deservedly have their place in impartial history.

The leaders of all great movements are entitled to pre-eminence, from the fact they stood and did their duty in an impending crisis. That the conflict in Kansas lead to the war is now admitted. That this conflict was the "irrepressible" one that Mr. Seward spoke of years before, the sequel leaves no room to doubt. For if the slave power had then succeeded, there would, for the time being, have been no cause for their revolt. Stephen A. Douglass "built better than he knew" when he took the conflict from the halls of Congress and left it for the decision of the people "when they came to form a State Government." I am sorry to quote the following instance, taken from his great speech, but he said it: "I don't care whether slavery be voted up or voted down; but their votes shall decide it."

The question of the freedom of the Territories was made an issue in the Fremont campaign of 1856. But Mr. Buchanan was elected by carrying a bare majority of his own State, and during his administration of four years Kansas was his chief trouble. I remember to have made some disturbance in Kansas during those four years, and some antagonism to his election during the canvass in his own county in Pennsylvania. So that, being in Washington while he was President, when a friend asked me to go with him to the White House and be introduced to Mr. Buchanan, I hesitated, as I had just escaped from arrest by one of his Territorial officials. But being urged, I consented.

The friend introducing me alluded to my being from Kansas. Mr. Buchanan, in taking me by the hand, said, "I have heard of General Pomeroy before!"

"Yes," I replied; "but perhaps you never heard any good of me?"

To this he replied, with his head a little to one side, "I don't think I ever did!"

A few days before the close of Mr. Buchanan's administration, Kansas was admitted into the Union. But even then it had become a dissevered Union. Few public men then thought there would be a war; at least, they did not apprehend its near approach. Mr. Buchanan did not see it. And I may not say too much if I say that neither Mr. Lincoln nor his Cabinet—either the outgoing or the incoming—anticipated war.

The South said, "The North would trade, but not fight." The North said, "The South dare not break up a Union in which their safety alone depends." And yet seven States had seceded before Mr. Lincoln had taken the oath of office, viz.: South Carolina seceded Dec. 20, 1860; Mississippi, Jan. 9, 1861; Florida, Jan. 10; Alabama, Jan. 11; Georgia, Jan. 18; Louisiana, Jan. 26; Texas, Feb. 11. And four more: Arkansas, Virginia, Tennessee and North Carolina soon followed.

I remember ex-President Tyler was here in Washington on the 22d day of February of that year, as a member of the Peace Committee; and Mr. Buchanan promised him there should be no display of the military (what little they had) on that holiday, and that no troops should parade the streets "to irritate" the rebels. But Joseph Holt, his Secretary of War, had given the order, not even consulting the President. So Mr. Buchanan had to write Tyler the following most humiliating letter. I copy from my old scrap-book:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 22, 1861.
MY DEAR SIR:—I find it impossible to prevent two or three companies of Federal troops from joining the procession to-day, without giving offense to the ten thousand people who will assemble to witness the parade. The day is the anniversary of Washington's birthday. It has been particularly marked by the House of Representatives. These troops everywhere else join such processions in honor of the birthday of the Father of his country. It is hard to assign a good reason why they should be excluded from this privilege in the Capital founded by himself. They are simply a posse comitatus to aid the civil authorities in case of need. Besides, the programme was published in the National Intelligencer this morning without my knowledge, the War Department having considered the celebration by the military arm of the Government as a matter of course. I am your friend very respectfully,
(Signed) JAMES BUCHANAN.
To Mr. TYLER.

Look at this! President Buchanan had to apologize for celebrating Washington's birthday at the Capital named for him! Mr. Tyler, it is said, was mortally offended, and left Washington never to return.

Mr. Buchanan said constantly that secession was wrong, but he was powerless to prevent it. He was then advised that the Constitution of the United States did not authorize the General Government to "coerce a sovereign State," so he said he "was powerless." Thus he sat day by day, while one State after another, and one fort after another, in the South, was severed from their relations to the General Government and prepared to make war upon it.

When the sunlight of early morning entered his chamber at the White House on the 4th day of March, 1861, Mr. Buchanan is said to have exclaimed, "Thank God, the day of my release has come!" That night he vacated the Executive Mansion to Mr. Lincoln, turned his back upon Washington, retired to Pennsylvania and from public view altogether.

For days there was a calm. Public attention had a new attraction. But it was a lull which precedes the cyclone.

Mr. Lincoln had reached Washington disguised and unrecognized, on the train from Harrisburg. One fact gave great relief. The Government at Washington had, at last, an executive head, and the inauguration was everywhere recognized and acquiesced in. So that it could be said, "The Nation lives; and God reigns!"

Changes in office were a necessity, as in a large portion of the country officers resigned the service of the United States and joined the secessionists; and others sympathized, and were suspected of remaining to report and reveal the actions of the Government toward those in revolt. Hence, no civil service rules could be applied. New men and women, too, were soon put into the public offices. In the place of able-bodied men, Mr. Chase was the first man who ever employed females as Government clerks, and the experiment has proved a success.

Mr. Lincoln was so occupied with "the public patronage," he could do, for a time, little else. I once heard him say he was "like a man who was venting rooms in one end of his large house, while the other end was all on fire!" He begged applicants to help him put out the fire, then take the offices. But some were so persistent they would not wait; and vacant places, at least, had to be filled.

Indeed, I remember once introducing a gentleman to Mr. Lincoln, who immediately told him that he was glad to see him, and added, "I did not come for an office, only to see you." Mr. Lincoln took him warmly by the hand, saying, "I want your photograph to hang up in my room. It's refreshing to see one face that wants no office."

For the first few weeks of Mr. Lincoln's administration, there was a profound anxiety in the loyal States, because they saw, or thought they saw, a blindness to threatened danger. The impression deepened that there would be no war, and the South would acquiesce and support the new administration. One of the Cabinet is known to have said, "I should never need a greater fortune than to be able to collect twenty-five cents a head for all the Southern men who come across the Potomac after office."

Mr. Lincoln had wisely chosen for his Cabinet Messrs. Seward, Chase, Cameron, Wells, Smith, and Blair, who were each well qualified for their allotted places. So much anxiety was manifested for places and stations made vacant by so many resignations, that the threatened danger was overlooked.

"Oh, blindness to the future, kindly given,
That each may fill the circle marked by heaven."

Mr. Seward, in a public speech, said, "It would only be a ninety-day affair." Horace Greeley said, "Let them go. They will be glad enough to come back." Up to April 12, 1861, there was little apprehension of immediate war. On that day General Beauregard opened fire on Fort Sumter. The first shot penetrated the hearts of all loyal men "the country through." Electricity flashed it round the civilized world. Eager ears bent to the earth to listen for the next sound. It came—"Fort Sumter surrendered this day,"—April 13, 1861.

Then war became inevitable; and the administration of Mr. Lincoln awoke to their responsibilities. The trial hour for testing the experiment of a free government had now arrived. Judge Holt and General Scott met within the first hour, and called upon Colonel Stone to prepare the defenses of Washington; and he sprang into his saddle, doing all he could.

Men in office, and out of it, left Washington by hundreds to "join the fortunes of their States," and no obstacle was presented to their leaving civil or official life to engage in the rebellion. Old comrades separated only to meet again in bloody strife.

The first State Legislature of Kansas met at Topeka on the 26th day of March, and on the 4th of April elected their first United States Senators. The choice fell upon General James H. Lane and myself. Both of us held most advanced and radical views upon the issues of the war. We had published a pocket edition of the great work now being written. That work was the freeing of Kansas: this was to be the freeing of the Nation! Our sentiments had been intensified by a three years' border struggle, while our opponents had been sustained at Washington, and supported by the United States Army. But upon our admission to the Union all conflict ceased, and the future of Kansas was assured.

The two Senators-elect left their homes on the 11th day of April for Washington, where a conflict of arms seemed inevitable. The questions of peace and of war had been thoroughly canvassed in our stump speeches made upon every gopher hill in Kansas. Buchanan's acting Governor, Mr. Beebe, in his annual message to our Territorial Legislature, on the 10th day of January, 1861, said: "Kansas should, under a constitution of her own creation, establish a government, to be separate and independent, among the nations of the earth!" Not much loyalty to the United States there. This recommendation, a dogma of executive impudence, Kansas despised and rejected. That was the last one of our Territorial messages, whereby the executive power was used to keep the State from being loyal to the Union and in supporting a government, which, notwithstanding Buchanan's administration, was the best and truest under the whole heavens.

While en route for Washington, we saw a telegram "that General Beauregard had demanded the unconditional surrender of Fort Sumter." The excitement on the train and at the stations ran very high; and upon arriving at Willard's Hotel in Washington, the first paper displayed to our anxious eyes was "Fort Sumter has Surrendered!" Major Anderson was allowed to salute his flag and march out, with his one hundred and fifty men, eighty of whom were just from Fort Pickens; so that Mr. Buchanan, afraid to reinforce Sumter, or ship supplies, left Sumter with one major and seventy men.

At the hotel there was a scene of wild excitement. Men from all places congregated whose countenances, either elated or grave, seemed to decide the loyalty or disloyalty of the parties. The crowd thickened, and became noisy. Speeches were called for; and, being just in from Kansas, I was designated to open a subject which was upon all lips. I undertook to speak from the balcony of the hotel. The proprietor soon took hold of me, begging me to desist; and said they would mob his house. "Some cried one thing, some another." At last, one of our men, Dr. R. Anthony, of Leavenworth, Kas., who never yet dodged a fight, or surrendered because of one, got a dry-goods box, placed it in the middle of the street, and I mounted that, while the street filled with men from side to side. I spoke as best I could, upon the "folly and crime of secession." It developed a scene of loud talking and heavy swearing.

I soon saw I was surrounded by J. H. Lane, Cassius M. Clay and General Nye, all of whom were on fire for a speech! When I closed General Lane took the dry-goods box for his stand. I had denounced the firing upon Sumter as an overt act of treason and rebellion, and arraigned the leaders as traitors to the Constitution they had sworn to support, declaring the whole secession movement to be blackened all over with perjury and treason. I named it then and there as a "Slaveholders' Rebellion." This was the first time that term had ever been applied. The other speeches will appear more at length in my next.

Washington, Dec. 10, 1886.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ASA MAHAN, D. D.

BY REV. W. W. BLANCHARD.

Dr. Mahan still lives in London, nearly ninety years of age, yet still able to preach and write. He has no charge, but fills appointments, where he can promote the doctrine of holiness and writes almost exclusively for the promotion of this theme. His autobiography is carefully written and is written with specific reference to the investigation, illustration and promotion of the doctrine of holiness or perfect sanctification. He is surely a remarkable man. He is an earnest thinker, more than an average scholar, wonderfully tenacious, and persevering, has large experience and observation, and of great purity and piety. The biography of such a man cannot but be valuable. It holds up and illustrates and enforces a doctrine that it is not only plainly taught in the Bible, but a doctrine almost lost sight of by the churches of the present time. I now live on borrowed time, and I have always been a constant attendant on public worship, and I never have heard an earnest thorough discussion and enforcement of the doctrine of sanctification in my life.

When Dr. Mahan was president of Oberlin College, I listened to sermons often that opposed his views, but never to one showing what the doctrine was, how it was to be obtained, or urged to seek or obtain it. So far as I could understand, we were told that it was impossible to become holy until death—that some—how death would complete the work. But never in all my most faithful and prayerful study of the Word of God could I find any such teaching there. Dr. Mahan in his biography attempts to teach and enforce the Bible doctrine of perfect sanctification in this life.

He strips the doctrine from all its misstatements and misrepresentations and shows just what it is, how it is to be obtained, and most earnestly and faithfully persuades to seek and obtain its full possession and enjoyment. No one can thoughtfully and prayerfully read his book without very great profit, especially ministers of the Gospel, college faculties and students, and Christian workers generally. But it is a human work and not divine, and hence defective. There are other doctrines he does not treat with the fairness and thoroughness that he does the doctrine of sanctification. So wholly is he engrossed in this, that others very greatly suffer, though he attempts to investigate them. He gives them more the same treatment the doctrine of holiness receives in the churches.

He was educated and trained from youth to past middle age in the Calvinistic views of foreordination and unconditional election, and for the most of his ministry taught these views. Instead of treating those doctrines as he did the doctrine of sanctification—strip them of their misstatements and misrepresentations and show just what they were and show the unity of sentiment in all schools of theology respecting them, he takes a partisan side of the narrow views, and brings God's sovereignty and the creature's freedom and responsibility into conflict, and thereby eclipsing and obscuring God's agency in saving and sanctifying lost men. All schools in theology and intelligent Christians hold and teach that men have a free will, and are perfectly responsible for what they do. They hold and teach that they are sinners and by sin are perfectly helpless; that God must save them if they are ever saved; that he has undertaken the work of saving the lost and perishing; and that he uses means adapted to influence and purify free, accountable, intelligent beings. He has a comprehensive plan by which he does it. His only begotten and well-beloved and crucified Son is the center and pervading power of his whole plan. All instrumentalities are but simple applications of this plan. He does all he can for the salvation of every sinner limited only by his own attributes. Not one of all his attributes will be violated though all men perish. Should he violate one of his own holy attributes, he could save none; no one could trust him. Should he do it, the universe would be in ruins. He never will do it for the salvation of any; but all that he can do without violating these he will do for the salvation of every one. He will not do an unwise thing. He will not do an unjust thing. He will not do an unkind or unfaithful or an untrue thing. Limited by these and all his glorious attributes, he has done, is doing and will do all he can to save every lost sinner. He is at work now with all his infinite attributes to save every sinner of the lost race, according to his most wise and glorious plan by which he can save any one; and if this will not do it, they will be lost, not because God has neglected them, but because of their own willful neglect.

But how about fore-ordination. Well, this involves a question that all intelligent beings must grapple with alike. No differing school of thought can throw the responsibility over onto another. No angel, no mortal can evade it. They need not worry and wrangle with each other about it; they must meet it for themselves. God's infinite greatness can never be measured by a created mind. Who can comprehend infinite wisdom? Who can tell how it is that every thing in a whole eternity is present with him; and if present, then all his decisions are made in view of all the facts in the case just as they are. There is no progress in God because he is perfect. He has no new decisions to make because he has all the facts in the case just as they are. Here all must stop, for no one can comprehend God and never can to all eternity. "Though clouds and darkness are round about him, righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne." Every case will be decided rightly and no injustice done. All are free and will be treated as free—all done for them that God can do without violating his own nature, and if they are lost it will be their own choice and not any neglect of God. No injustice will be done. The great trouble is, not that God in his infinite perfections has every decision made, but that God is God, wonderful in his being, infinite in his goodness and greatness.

Parson, Ill.

THE SECRET ORDERS AND THE SALOONS.

THE ADDRESS OF MISS E. E. FLAGG BEFORE THE 10TH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE NEW HAMPSHIRE CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

[Ordered to be printed by a unanimous vote.]

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is fighting to-day the very same national sins that destroyed Tyre and Rome and Babylon;—that wrote with the handwriting of doom on their palace walls, and made their marble courts a haunt for dragons, their sculptured pillars only the funeral monuments of their dead and buried greatness. The Serpent that lurked in the Garden of Eden six thousand years ago, though he may coil himself into a great variety of shapes and forms can never be anything else but the same old Serpent. Let me give a single illustration. Five centuries before Christ, traders from the Roman colonies of what is now France, as well as from the mother country of Italy, carried the curse of strong drink among the barbarian Gauls to work their destruction and enslavement, just as to-day from Christian America—aye! even from the old Puritan Bay State, cargoes of rum are shipped to Africa, with exactly the same results.

But if evil can show nothing new under the sun, this grand movement for its overthrow, this mustering of the womanhood of the nation with "For God and home and native land" inscribed on their banners, is something which it may be safely said no age of the world ever witnessed before. And it has been continually rising like a vast tidal wave till now it has touched even heathen strands, binding together in its blessed baptism of faith and hope and prayer not only the Christian women of England and America but of Russia, Japan, India and the farthest isles of the sea.

Setting out with but one idea, to battle with the vice of intemperance, we have discovered that all evils are bound together by a law of natural affinity; and the thirty-nine different departments now embraced in the work of the W. C. T. U. do not mean a dispersion of our energies but the most intense concentration. It means that we have found out nearly forty different avenues through which to attack the saloon.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore publicly states that she has been offered one hundred dollars per night if she would advocate in her lectures the free use of beer and ale. I do not believe there is a single worker in the W. C. T. U. ranks who would not have indignantly rejected the offer if it had been a thousand dollars a night. And why? Because we know that ale and beer are the right hand allies of whisky. Our White-ribbon legions are loyal to the core, but "as the Serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety," is it not possible that he may beguile some of us?

Mary B. Willard once said to Pres. J. Blanchard, "When my husband joined the Masonic lodge I thought I should die." Why did she say it? Why does many a wife and mother trace the ruin of her husband or her son to the time when they were initiated into a secret society? Because under its shield of darkness and secrecy that husband or that son drank his first glass of liquor! In the department of heredity and hygiene we are striving to hedge up some of the ways heretofore neglected or unthought of that lead to the dramshop. Shall we overlook one on which thousands of souls for whom Christ died have traveled to their own eternal undoing and the life-long sorrow of some loving woman's heart? It is certainly time to inquire what relation secret organizations bear to our work when the secular press is filled with accounts of lodge parades and banquets and speeches; when the revenues of the leading secret orders equal, if they do not far exceed, the receipts of all our mission boards, home and foreign; and their temples rival in expense our costliest churches. By no possibility can they occupy a neutral ground. He that is not with us in our holy warfare is against us. Let us apply the Bible test, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Odd-fellowship has often been extolled as a strictly temperance organization, yet White, its standard authority, assures us that "total abstinence"—and the women of the W. C. T. U. believe that as regards alcoholic drinks total abstinence is the only true temperance—"is a principle never intended by its framers to be grafted on the order." The Knights of Labor exclude the saloonist, but beer flows at their parades and picnics much more freely than water, and resolutions prohibiting it on such occasions were lately voted down by an overwhelming majority. Masonry, as it is well known, excludes our sex from any participation in its mysteries, but search Masonic authorities through and you will find no law that excludes liquor sellers. Knight Templar excursions are welcomed by the saloon-keepers in every city they visit. Would they welcome a Sunday-school excursion or a convention of churches? It is true that vice is often wiser than virtue in that she generally knows her friends from her enemies; but it behooves us women of the W. C. T. U. to be at least as wise as the saloon-keepers.

But what of the secret temperance orders? Dr. Jewett and John B. Gough have left emphatic testimony that they hinder much more than they ever helped the cause of temperance. But even if this were otherwise would the end justify the means? There is great danger in using Satan's weapons against himself even with the purest intentions. We have the command, "Be ye not unequally yoked with unbelievers," and we have the example of Him who initiated no secret band of followers, but "ever spake openly" to the world.

There are other points of which I might speak where the doctrines of the lodge come in direct conflict not only with temperance but with important departments of W. C. T. U. work; but I will not dwell upon these as time will not admit, but will proceed at once to consider a question more vital than any because it includes all others in it.

We love our grand organization; we belong to it heart and soul, but we belong to Christ first. We want the rum traffic put down, but, oh, we want his kingdom to come infinitely more. Daily we pray for the coming of that kingdom; daily we listen for the roll of those chariot wheels that in their triumphal progress shall grind every evil and every wrong to powder. And so to-day, our eyes dim with gazing, our hearts faint with longing for that blessed time, we feel that the question which most deeply concerns us is not, "How does the lodge stand related to our work?" but "How does it stand related to our Redeemer and his cause?"

"Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God, because many false prophets are gone out into the world." So wrote St. John in the dawn of Christianity. Even then there were specious forms of error, lying spirits who pretended to come from God but whose real birth-place was the bottomless pit. And he goes on to tell us how we can try these spirits,—a test that even the veriest babe in Scripture truth may use, so clear is it, so plain, so divinely simple. "Hereby know ye the Spirit of God; every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God; and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God; and this is that spirit of anti-Christ whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world."

Does the lodge own Christ? The Word of inspiration sounding down through the centuries tells us that this is the real, the only test question; but we are met at the very outset by this astounding fact. Masonry does not allow Christ's name in her prayers, and carefully expunges it even from those texts of Scripture included in her ritual. Odd-fellowship does the same, and even goes so far as to steal one of our Saviour's most beautiful parables without even the slightest mention of the Author! Ask any intelligent Mason or Odd-fellow the reason for this strange omission and he will tell you it is to avoid giving offence to members who may be Jews or deists, and consequently not believers in that name. But if this is one reason it is by no means all the reason.

I once received a letter from a Mason in which he eulogized his order in terms like this:—"I do not now recall the exact words but I give the exact substance—"Masonry is the only formulated religion which is destined finally to encircle the globe and supersede all others." What better was the man than an infidel, you ask. But he was right in calling Masonry a religion, for it certainly is one. It has an altar, a chaplain, a set form of prayers; besides, every Masonic authority plainly affirms this fact, and tells us that the practice of its precepts alone are enough to save the souls of its followers. Of course if this is so they need no Christ, and in their prayers his name would be as superfluous as the name of Confucius or Socrates. Furthermore all Masonic writers trace its origin to the secret false worship of Egypt, Phœnicia, and other heathen nations of antiquity, while its ceremonies are directly borrowed from the Eleusinian mysteries, of whose secret abominations St. Paul told his Ephesian converts it was a shame even to speak. Now it is clear that the lodge must of necessity ignore Christ, or else be false to all the traditions of its heathen origin. How can it consistently admit a Saviour who came into the world on purpose to destroy the very foundations on which the lodge claims to stand? Can darkness admit the light and not be itself annihilated?

"But there are so many good men in the lodge." I shall stop for a moment to consider this argument, because it is one so common and so specious as to deceive even the very elect. In the reign of Louis XV. the plague desolated Marseilles. When every doctor fled, one heroic Christian man, the bishop of the diocese, refused to abandon his flock. Day and night he stood like an angel of God between the living and the dead. He penetrated into the foulest slums of the city, wherever he could find dying victims of the plague who needed his comforting; he reduced himself to poverty to alleviate their sufferings; and abandoned souls, who were forgotten of man and deemed themselves forgotten of God, while he pointed them to the atoning cross, looked and were saved even at the eleventh hour. Our hearts thrill at the story of his apostolic courage, his Christ-like devotion, yet this heroic bishop of Marseilles was a Jesuit! Would you argue from such an instance, looking at mind-shackled Mexico, and Spain, still wrapped in the night of the Middle Ages, that Jesuitism cannot be the dark and evil thing it has been painted? Would you not rather say that such heavenly self-forgetfulness was the fruit of his Christianity, and his Jesuitism had nothing to do with it at all? It is time that all intelligent minds had torn this slimy argument to shreds. If there are good men in the lodge, let us give the credit of their goodness where it belongs. Let us not give that which is holy to dogs. Let us not lay on the altar of the lodge, as its legitimate fruits, even a mere moral excellence of which Gospel principles and Christian teaching sowed the seed.

One last question remains. What is our duty as Christian women towards the lodge? Our first duty plainly, is to investigate it; to examine it prayerfully by the light of Scripture, and find out exactly what it is and what it claims to be. We are commanded to prove all things, and in the flood of light which is now being poured on the various secret orders it is our own fault if we are ignorant of their true character. A trifling expenditure of time and money and a sincere desire to know the truth is all that is needed. Our second duty let me put before you in the words of President Finney: "God demands and the world has a right to expect that the church will take due action and bear a truthful testimony in respect to this institution.... Fidelity to God and the souls of men require that the church which is the light of the world should speak out."

That is exactly what is demanded of the W. C. T. U., that we speak out; that having received the light we let our light shine. Shall we have smiles and smooth words for a system that robs Christ of his honor, that tramples under foot the blood of the covenant and counts it an unholy thing? Shall we not rather combat such a system with all the powers of brave, intelligent, Christian womanhood; and when the lodge god claims our homage, when he tempts us with offers of aid in our temperance work as he once tempted Christ by offering to help him set up an earthly kingdom, "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."

A NOBLE ENTHUSIASM IN WORCESTER.

BY REV. HENRY T. CHEEVER.

We are just in the heat and enthusiasm of the noblest work for God, the home and humanity ever wrought in the heart of the Old Bay State. Yesterday, the holy Sabbath, was a red-letter day in the annals of Worcester. For the people thereof rose in their might and united to chain the tiger of the saloon, to draw his teeth and cut his claws. The now historic Mechanics' Hall never witnessed a sublimer sight than the grand assembly of more than 3,000 resolute voters, there convened in the afternoon of the Lord's day to listen to addresses from leading clergymen and business men on no-license, and to take action preparatory to the municipal election tomorrow.

The whole day was given in nearly all the churches to the cause of prohibition. The city is roused as never before. Speeches of great pith and significance were made by leading men of the city, and it was the place and privilege of your correspondent to move a rising vote of confidence and thanks to the intrepid general, Rev. Hugh Montgomery, who has been conducting this extraordinary campaign against the saloon with such signal courage, wisdom and ability. He was pronounced brave and heroic as his namesake, if not his ancestor, who fell on the heights of Abraham more than a hundred years ago, in the act of storming the citadel of Quebec. With him have co-operated the No-License Leagues in all the churches, marshaled most effectively by A. M. Stone. Victory for tomorrow is in the air, although the Prince of the power of the air rages and is strong, and money flows in like water from the frightened brewers of Portsmouth, Boston and New York (to the amount, it is affirmed by a liquor-seller, of $50,000), resolved to keep the market another year for the 57,000 barrels of beer that have been all along doing their dire work of demoralization and death in this city. God of his mercy grant that I may write you to-morrow night that our fair city stands redeemed, regenerated, disenthralled from the withering curse of the saloon. Christianity and the church and her ministry at length are one against the "gigantic crime of crimes," and it will have to hang, a solemn warning in the sight of all mankind.

"Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of Truth with Falsehood
For the good or evil side:
Some great cause, God's new Messiah,
Offering each the bloom or blight,
Parting the goats upon the left hand,
And the sheep upon the right.

"We see dimly in the Present
What is small and what is great;
Slow of faith, how weak an arm may
Turn the iron helm of fate:
But the soul is still oracular,
And amid the market's din,
List the ominous storm whisper
From the Delphic cave within,
They ensnare their children's children
Who make compromise with sin."

Worcester, Dec. 13th, 1886.

REFORM NEWS.

THE KNOXVILLE CONVENTION.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Dec. 16, 1886.

TO THE READERS OF THE CYNOSURE:—Library Hall in the city of Knoxville has been secured for our National Convention, December 28th and 29th. It is a large, new hall on the corner of Gay and Vine streets, only a block from the depot, and on a street car line. I have also engaged board in a first-class boarding house at one dollar per day or six dollars per week. Free entertainment will be provided to a limited extent, but cannot be depended on. Rooms can be had at reasonable rates, and meals at usual prices. No pains will be spared to make the convention a success, and all true reformers are assured of a cordial welcome. Let there be a grand rally in the name of the Lord.

H. H. HINMAN.

Agent of the N. C. A. for the South.

FIRST WORD FROM THE OHIO MEETING.

GREENFIELD, O., Dec. 15, 1886.

DEAR BROTHER:—The convention opened with a cold snap and slight snow, and light attendance, both local and from abroad. Interest and numbers have been constantly increasing, and all felt encouraged by the arrival of Dr. McDill, Rev. Geo. Richey, Capt. J. M. Scott and Bro. Spear about the middle of this evening's session. President Smith presides with his accustomed efficiency. Secretary George is detained at home by sickness in his family, very much to the regret of all who know and love him for his work's sake. His place is well filled by Rev. Mr. Coleman, whose experience and ability render him an exceedingly useful member in any reform convention. Daniel Hill's address in the afternoon was a model of perspicuity and points enforced by apt quotations from the Scriptures. Dr. Spencer is enthusiastic, and we hope to hear from him and Father Taylor to-morrow; the latter is looking vigorous and younger than when I last saw him. Dr. McDill is to occupy to-morrow evening, and we expect a good speech and a good time generally.

CINCINNATI, DEC. 17TH, 1886.—Delay in trains renders a stop-over here inevitable. It is storming, and I forego the pleasure of calling on friends to give a sketch of the State Convention.

Greenfield is not modern in style of architecture, but like most towns has been struck with the secret society craze. The "Dragon Flood" of rum and lodge is undermining health, character, home, business and the church as in other places where the devil's religion and morals are tolerated by sentiment and protected by law. There are those, however, whose garments are not defiled with the pollutions of these sink holes of iniquity and who have the courage of their conviction upon all moral questions. It was my happy lot to meet with this class, and without listing names, I wish to express gratitude to all for kindnesses received during a brief stay as a guest in their hospitable homes.

The "cold wave" reached this region just in time to deter many who would otherwise have added interest, numbers and strength to the convention by their wisdom, their presence and their prayers. President Smith was at his post and showed himself equal to the duties of his position, and was endorsed by a unanimous re-election. Secretary George was detained by sickness in his family much to the regret of all not thus Providentially hindered. Rev. Mr. Colman of Utica performed the duties of secretary pro tem so acceptably that he was elected scribe and custodian of the records for the next year. Mr. Clark's financial report was satisfactory, and to avoid unnecessary labor the two offices of Treasurer and Corresponding Secretary were combined and committed to Rev. S. A. George of Mansfield. The State Agent, W. B. Stoddard, submitted his report, which was referred to the committee on state work, and on their recommendation adopted, and his services continued, provided necessary funds could be obtained to assure the Association against embarrassing debts. A portion of each session was occupied with devotional exercises which were made "free" by the Spirit and very helpful.

Daniel Hill gave the address on the afternoon of the first day. It was logical, transparent and Scriptural, showing why as a husband, as a man, and above all as a Christian he could not affiliate with any secret order, and why as a minister he was bound to testify against them. His sentiments were well received, and after a few well-timed words of commendation by Bro. Colman he moved a vote of thanks which was unanimously endorsed.

The evening session was assigned to the writer, whose address was apparently received with interest and commended by a vote of approval. The forenoon of the second day was given largely to a kind of free interchange of thoughts and experiences and reports of committees. This was a very happy feature of the convention as it gave opportunity to get acquainted and enter into sympathy one with another.

Eleven propositions were submitted by the committee on resolutions, and after discussion and slight modifications the convention adopted the paper as a whole, which contained the following points:

1st. The secret lodge system is hostile to Christianity and free government; 2. We controvert not the members but the orders; 3. We advise all to inform themselves; 4. Labor and capital should maintain a friendly alliance, and where difficulties occur that cannot be adjusted by the parties, arbitration should be called in to effect a final settlement; 5. Unflinching faith in the ultimate triumphs of truth; and 6. Exhortation to a renewed and entire consecration to God and his service.

Father Warren Taylor gave a sketch of his experience as a clergyman in the Presbyterian church and with ministers whom he had sought to induce to preach against the lodge. His recitals showed the power of the lodge over good men whose convictions were very decided but who were nevertheless "in bondage through fear." His brief address upon the oath was lucid and unanswerable. He thrilled every Christian heart and riveted the attention of every intelligent mind while he defined a lawful oath, and spoke of the awful profanation of the sacred name and holy attributes of Jehovah, in assuming to make God a party to the infamous covenants imposed by the secret orders. He received, as he richly merited, hearty commendation and undivided approbation.

Dr. McDill was greeted by the most diversified audience of the convention, who were well repaid for their respectful attention to the address of the closing session. The doctor gave no "flourish of trumpets," but spoke in an easy, off-hand style that brought us all very near to him and made us all "feel at home" from the first. His first point was the "exclusiveness of the secret orders." Enumerating different classes debarred from membership, confirming each statement by reading from standard authors in the orders, he clinched each nail as he proceeded and closed with excellent effect by calling attention to the shameful association of women with idiots and madmen in the "rejected material." His second point was on the professed benevolence and insurance features of the secret orders, which he showed to be deceptive, fraudulent and fictitious; that the insured paid his money not for his own but for the benefit of the insurer. His third position was that the secret orders are "intensely adverse to Christianity." Masonry and Odd-fellowship taught a sham religion and every lodge is a kind of sham church." The array of facts presented were ample in confirmation of this grave charge. Standard authors were offered in proof of its claim to be a religion, and these were supplemented by personal observations and the testimony of zealous members with whom the doctor had conversed and quotations from the Bible, mutilated and perverted so that Christ was excluded from his own Gospel and plan of salvation. The speaker dwelt forcibly upon the inherent wickedness of the oaths and the barbarous penalties by which they were enforced, and closed with a fervent appeal to all both free and bound to have no fellowship with these unfruitful works of darkness.

Besides a vote of thanks many sought an opportunity at the close to take Dr. McDill's hand and thank him for the matter of his address and the kindly spirit in which it was given. The convention was adjourned with prayer and the benediction by Rev. Colman.

J. P. STODDARD.

THE SOUTHERN LECTURER IN THE OLD NORTH STATE.

A happy union of Prohibition and Anti-masonry.—The United and Associate Reformed Presbyterians.—Charlotte and the Gold Region.—Biddle Institute.—Friends and helpers.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Dec. 10.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I left King's Mountain Wednesday, the 8th, and came twelve miles to Gastonia, where I was most kindly entertained by Rev. R. E. Boyce, who has pastoral care of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church. I found him a man of culture, of long experience in the ministry and of most excellent spirit. He was born in Mecklenburg county, educated in Pennsylvania and has inherited the earnest, practical character of his Scotch ancestors. Politically he is a Prohibitionist and urged the election of St. John. He says that their candidate for the Legislature received over 900 votes at the late election, and is confident that ere long the old North State will adopt prohibition. He is a decided anti-secrecy man and has been doing some aggressive work in our reform. He says the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church of the South has a testimony, urging all its members to abstain from connection with secret societies, but it is not a term of membership. Overtures for union with the United Presbyterian church have been favorably entertained, and but for a small faction would have been consummated. It is highly probable that the union will be effected in the near future. I am invited to address his people on the secrecy question on the 18th and 19th inst.

On the evening of the 9th I reached this city, twenty-one miles northeast, and one of the old cities of the State. It is a fine town and does an important wholesale and retail business. Though the ground is still covered deep with snow considerable quantities of cotton are being brought in. It is in the center of the gold region of the South, and the gold mines in this vicinity have been worked for many years. In 1837 a mint was established at this place which continued to make gold coin up to 1861. After the close of the war it was made an assay office and is now doing a large and increasing business. I to-day visited the courteous manager, who gave me much information. The entire amount of gold coined here previous to the war was about $3,000,000. During the last year he assayed over $240,000. The rate for the coming year, if continued, would amount to between $300,000 and $400,000. He says that the gold mines of the South have only just begun to be developed. I visited a mine on the border of the city that had recently been opened. It is 190 feet deep. They have brought a large quantity of mineral to the surface, and a set of stamps worked by steam are just ready to begin operations. Another mine (very productive and but a mile away) is 400 feet deep. In grading the streets of this city it is not uncommon to find traces of gold. I was shown many fine specimens of gold-bearing mineral and was told that it is found in five counties, all in this part of the State.

There are other things "more precious than fine gold," and sad to say, quite as rare. The wisdom that "can not be gotten for gold and whose price is above rubies" is dispensed at Biddle Institute, a fine collegiate and theological institution, under the patronage of the Freedman's Aid Society of the Presbyterian church. I called on President Johnson and Prof. Mattoon, of the theological department. They received me most kindly and expressed a desire that the principles of our reform should be laid before their students, but said it would be best to postpone my lecture for a time. They had not given the subject special attention, but on general principles were opposed to secret societies. I was glad to learn that this school, with its fine buildings, is being well sustained. I called on Rev. R. P. Wyche, a graduate of this institution, and pastor of the colored Presbyterian church of this city. I found him in hearty sympathy with our work, and doing what he could to keep secret societies out of his church. Masonry and Odd-fellowship are strong here and govern the churches. Large numbers of the colored people are joining the Knights of Labor, and this will inevitably bring on a crisis on the secrecy and labor questions. I expect to speak in the colored Presbyterian church on Sabbath at 3 p. m.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Dec. 13, 1886.—I preached here yesterday in the colored Presbyterian church. They have a nice house of worship, and are the leading and most cultured of the colored congregations. I gave a faithful testimony against the unfruitful works of darkness and am sure that a good impression was made. The pastor thanked me heartily. I go from here to Knoxville to prepare for the convention. H. H. HINMAN.

WISCONSIN WORK.

At Menominee.—Apology for a Lodgite.—Forced Marches.—In Richland county.—Among United Brethren.

On the 11th I lectured to a small audience in Concert Hall, Menominee, and on the 12th preached morning and evening in the First Baptist church, where Bro. W. W. Ames is stationed. On the evening of the 13th I lectured in the court-house. Bro. Ames had been diligent in extending notice of the meeting, and a fair-sized audience assembled, who gave me a very good hearing. I was somewhat nettled by what seemed to be an attempt on the part of a lodge-man present to turn aside the force of my arguments by laughing, and I made a somewhat sharp but just remark for his benefit; but on speaking of the incident afterwards to a lady who was there, I was a little chagrined to hear her say, "Oh, he had been drinking!" I'll try and remember in future what I ought to have already well learned from past experience, that when a lodge man misbehaves in public it may not be best to pay much attention to his performances, for he may only be drunk.

Many of our workers who have been there will appreciate what I say when I acknowledge the very kind treatment received from Capt. Wm. Wilson and family, at whose home I stopped while in Menominee.

On the night of Dec. 13 I went to LaValle, and from there walked to Ironton, (Tuesday morning, 14th) and called at the home of Bro. O. C. Blanchard. He gave me a donation for State work, and I went on by stage to Cazenovia, where I was kindly received at the home of sister Sarah Warner and her son Orange. Here I was surprised to learn that father Wm. Durand of Fond du Lac is dead. Bro. Orange very kindly took me on to Buck Creek, Richland county, where I spoke in the town hall on the evenings of the 14th and 15th. On the first evening there was a fair-sized audience, and the second evening all the seats were filled, a large part of the audience being Odd-fellows, who listened respectfully.

I was kindly entertained by Bro. J. B. Coffrin, who subscribed for the Cynosure, and took me to Richland Center on the 16th. There I hired a team to the U. B. church near Excelsior. From Buck Creek there was a cold ride, 25 miles, 11° below when we started.

On the 16th and 17th I lectured in the U. B. church above mentioned. Meetings pretty good, but the interest not as active as it ought to be, especially considering the present troubles of the denomination with the lodge. But Bro. L. Pound and Bro. Haskins are square against secrecy, both old U. B. ministers. Both they and Bro. Wm. Dobbs showed me especial kindness.

Saturday morning, 18th, I start very early across country to Boscobel, where I take train for Woodman, thence back to Dodgeville, from there by carriage to Mineral Point, where I take train for Monroe, near which place I hope to speak that evening.

J. F. BROWNE.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GOOD LETTER FROM DENVER.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 5, 1886.

MY DEAR SIR AND BROTHER:—My hands and heart have been very full on the subject of secretism. I am almost daily confounded at its presumption and wickedness and am distressed beyond measure at the terrible apostasies and evils that it is making in the church of God. In all this I have declared the truth faithfully to my people, and I expect to have to suffer in consequence of it. I regard "Good Templarism" as a humbug and fraud, and I fully agree with my old friend, Dr. Charles Jewett, relative to the evil influences, as a whole, of all secret temperance organizations. When I was pastor of Congregational churches in Massachusetts, my native State, more than twenty years ago, he used to visit me, and has lectured from my pulpit more than once.

At a minister's meeting not long since in this city, I stated very frankly that I regarded the lodge as the chief cause of the increasing disposition to absent themselves from the house of God, on the part of a large portion of our male population. The twenty or more secret societies of this city embrace, as nearly as I can learn, from 5,000 to 8,000 men of lawful age. Again and again I have been told within the past year that "Masonry was better than Christianity," as we hold it, "and the lodge better than the church." And yet not a few of our ministers belong to these orders, as do the officers generally of most of our leading churches. Now when we remember that Masonry is at war with nearly every distinctive doctrine of the evangelical faith, and of necessity must be, in order to receive into good standing pagans, Jews, infidels, Indians, Mohammedans, atheists (as in France especially), drunkards, blasphemers, adulterers, etc., we ask in the name of common sense, and of all righteousness, how long are we called upon to fellowship and retain in good standing the members of such a company? In looking over the rituals and burial services of these different orders, Good Templars not excepted, I find that they all are devoid alike of that which is most vital and essential in the Christian's regard. Its general standard is about that of a respectable Phariseism, or a cold, deistical Unitarianism; and this is the upshot of this terrible delusion, which is everywhere eating as doth a canker, and which both in the pulpit and the pew is "destroying the church of God and wasting it."

But I must not say more now. Relative to the "National Conference," I am frank to say at the outset that I feel a deep interest in it, and if my way, financially, can be made clear, I would be glad to do all in my power to stir this nation, and make the ears of the Christian world tingle, if possible, on this subject. If I had the means, I have sometimes thought I would start a church here on the union plan, having no fellowship with the secret and unfruitful work of darkness. My church at Littleton, which I organized, and to which I have ministered for over three years, has members from seven different evangelical denominations. But I wait the leadings of Providence.

Munhall declared the whole counsel of God during his meetings here; but we have too many in this city who do not like that kind of preaching, and three of our "leading preachers" took exceptions to his preaching, publicly, on some subjects. I stood by him all I could. Two of the three are known to be members of secret lodges, and the other might as well be so far as any faithful testimony is concerned.

At the Prohibition State Convention I was nominated for Secretary of State, without my knowledge or consent, and when I was out of the city. But I was treated kindly by all parties, and made it the occasion of doing all the good I could.

T. E. BLISS.

A NATIONAL REFORMER IN THE METROPOLIS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10, 1886.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Naval officers in times of war often sail under "sealed orders." When they reach a certain point a package is opened and the inclosed directions carried out. At another given place a second package is broken, etc. I came to the metropolis last Saturday under "sealed orders." It was not until after my arrival that I learned just what was to be done in the line of the reform I represent. But it has since been made clear. There have been two lines followed. The first was visiting the educational institutions. On Monday morning I visited Columbia College, Madison avenue and 49th street. There are 1,000 students in attendance, 300 in the academic department. They have a library of 80,000 volumes. There are forty-eight professors and other officers. It is an Episcopalian institution, the wealthiest college in America. Their chapel exercises were conducted by Rev. Cornelius R. Duffie, S. T. D., the college chaplain. Only a modicum of their number attend. After chapel I had the pleasure of an interview with the president, Rev. Frederick A. P. Barnard. He is very deaf, so that we could not converse in chapel. But when I went to his room, and he gave me a seat beside his ear trumpet, all went well. There is no discount on his mind. It is a high tower from which he can take broad and accurate views. He is a grand old man, fit to be head of the first college in the land. When I mentioned the fact that the Hon. Felix R. Brunot was the president of our Association, he seemed to regard the National Reform movement as one in which he had a personal interest.

At noon I met with the Presbyterian ministers in Dr. Crosby's church. About one hundred were present. Their subject was "Funeral Services." The opening paper was read by Dr. Van Dyke, of the Brick Church. It was a scathing philippic against all such services. He never preached a funeral sermon. There is no authority for it in the Word of God. It is a modern innovation; the reformers knew nothing of it; and it gave occasion for infelicities which should never occur. It is an unnecessary burden on an already overworked ministry; the consolation would be much better given the bereaved friends in private; and as for funeral conversions, he had never heard of but one. His views were not generally endorsed. Most thought his arguments only proved that the services ought to be appropriate. There is no Scripture warrant for our marriage ceremony, and yet who would think of repudiating that? From the earliest times of which we have any records, some one spoke at the funeral. It is a good opportunity for preaching the truth if wisely improved.

Rev. T. P. Stevenson, D. D., editor of the Christian Statesman and corresponding secretary of the National Reform Association, visited this assembly some years ago and made the opening address on the subject of National Reform. The way was opened for him by Rev. D. Gregg, one of the members. They are not averse to discussing the principles of this great cause. Rev. D. G. Wylie assured me that a similar opportunity might be secured for me at a future day.

On Thursday morning I attended the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of Union Theological Seminary, Park avenue and 69th street. The building and ground cost about $750,000. They have nine professors and one hundred and forty students. The names of Drs. Hitchcock, Shedd, Schaff, and Briggs, indicate the strength of the faculty. They have graduated 2,220 students; 91 per cent of them were college bred, 8 per cent became missionaries. The library contains 50,000 volumes, 47,000 pamphlets, and 169 MSS. The exercises were conducted in the chapel. The president, Rev. Roswell Dwight Hitchcock, D. D., led in them. Rev. Marvin R. Vincent, D. D., read the Scriptures and offered prayer. The president occupied the central seat on the platform. On his right sat Rev. Prof. George L. Prentiss, D. D. Beyond him sat Hon. Charles Butler, president of the Board of Directors; and on the extreme right sat Chief Justice Daly. On the president's left sat Dr. Vincent, whose tongue and pen have electrified so many. Next came John Crosby Brown, a household name with thousands; and last, Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, founder of Roberts College. It was a representative array of men. Dr. Prentiss read the "Historical Address." After stating that there were 140 schools of Divinity in America; that only three dated farther back than the beginning of this century, and that more than half have been organized within the last forty years, he launched into the history of Union, quoting extensively from her early records. Among its eminent founders he mentioned Knowles Taylor, and Richard T. Hawes, together with Revs. Absalom Peters, Henry White, William Patton, and Erskine Mason. It was planned for "men of moderate views." It naturally became New School in the division. It seems, he said, to occupy a middle position between New Haven and Princeton, laying its hands upon both. It has seen hard times. The great fire in 1836, which destroyed $72,000,000 worth of property in this city, interfered at the outset. In 1852 Prof. Robinson was behind in his salary $4,200 for the ten years' preceding. When the name of Charles Butler was mentioned as the only survivor of the worthy founders, Dr. Hitchcock arose and took him by the arm and lifted him up, and the whole audience arose and cheered most heartily. It was an affecting scene. The old father broke down before this sudden ovation. The iron man wept. At the close a collation was served in the library below. I was pleased to meet Rev. Josiah Strong, D. D., author of that excellent work, "Our Country."

Wednesday morning I visited the University of the city of New York, Washington Park and 6th street. Rev. John Hall, D. D., is Chancellor, and Rev. Henry M. MacCracken, D. D., Vice-Chancellor. He is the personal friend of Drs. A. Ritchie, J. G. Monfort and George P. Hays of Cincinnati. They have some seventy-five professors and instructors, and 900 students. It was delightful to join with them in singing the 100th Psalm in chapel exercises. Prof. John J. Stevenson, whose old father was one of the most successful pastors, able preachers, and radical reformers the church ever had, showed me much kindness. He is a chip off the old block. In his line he bears the image and superscription of his father. The Y. M. C. A. has a fine building on 4th avenue and 22d street. Their reading room and library are in keeping with the great city which they serve. I noticed the Christian Cynosure there, as at all the young men's buildings I have visited.

The second line followed this week was calling upon the friends of National Reform here, who have furnished all along so large a part of the vital fluid of this movement, and endeavoring to secure more extended effort. I found their hearts still warm toward the cause. They do not intend to see it fail. The fruit of this work I hope to reap in the near future. The obelisk that stands sentinel in Central Park binds together the distant past and the present. If the history of the past and the prophecies are compared, they run in parallel lines. The prospective view of the prophet and the retrospective view of the historian coincide. That fact alone ought to forever silence our infidel lecturer, whose objections are "half chaff and half chaffing."

J. M. FOSTER.

THE IOWA W. C. T. U.—A CORRECTION.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

DEAR SIR:—In your issue of December 9 you have the following: "The Iowa W. C. T. U. have voted unanimously never to acknowledge as leader a woman who does not wear the triple crown of Christianity, wifehood and motherhood." And you add, "This sneer at Miss Willard's single estate excels in meanness, malice and bad taste all that we ever heard or read from the pen or voice of woman. Surely corruptio optimi pessima—the best thing spoiled becomes the worst."

Your censure is deserved and more than deserved, and we would not have it lessened in the least, but we are happy to say the Iowa W. C. T. U. did not take any such action. There are scores of noble women in Iowa who would arise in righteous remonstrance should any such thing be attempted,—women who are patiently awaiting the time when the mists of Iowa's blindness have cleared away and she shall arise and shine and the work go grandly on. Women who stand heart and hand by Miss Willard and the National W. C. T. U. And we are no small minority. Our numbers are increasing; such language only tends to swell the throng, for the words you quoted, or of the same import, were used at our State convention by the one who gave the response to the address of welcome, but never was an act of the convention. At the N. W. C. T. U. in Minneapolis twenty-two, a majority of the women present from Iowa, sent congratulations to Miss Willard on her re-election, and expressed their endorsements of the convention. This short explanation is written not to remove censure but to place it where it belongs. With best wishes for the Cynosure and the success of the work in which it is engaged. Yours in the Master's work,

M. J. G. D.

PITH AND POINT.

WEAK HEART, OR FAINT HEART?

Rev. Henry Siemiller of Mormontown, Iowa, several years ago, while talking with an elder in the United Brethren church in regard to Freemasonry, tried to induce him to preach against the abomination. "The good man was convinced of the righteousness of such a course, but dared not do it because of the heart disease. It is a pity that 'men of brains' in this church should be affected in the same way. There is no difficulty in locating the malady of liberalism.—CYRUS SMITH, Beaconsfield, Iowa.

EDWARD MATHEWS.

Brother Foote and I had a surprise visit yesterday from the veritable live Bro. E. Mathews on his way to "Old England" to visit the old places, the old friends of his childhood and youth, and the "spot where he was born," and to preach the Gospel of his Lord and Master by the way. There is no abatement of his "blood," or sparkle of his blazing black eyes, or in his fiery zeal. He has already received over a hundred orders for the book of his life in advance, and feels greatly encouraged. In his parting prayer he most earnestly commended us all and our cause to God and his boundless goodness. We wish him a safe and pleasant go and come, and a precious season with his loved ones "over the sea," and many jewels at last for that glittering crown.—GEO. W. CLARK.

ANOTHER TRAP.

Just now there is an effort being made to organize a new secret order here called the "Farmers and Laborers' Co-operative Union of America." I believe it's an "off-shoot" of the "Knights of Labor." Can you tell us anything about it?—E. S. BOGLE, Frederia, Kas.

This is the first notice we have seen of this order. But there is probably nothing new about it, but the name.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON 1.—January 2.—The Beginning.—GEN. 1: 26-31; 2: 1-3.

GOLDEN TEXT.—In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.—GEN. 1: 1.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Man Made in God's Image. vs. 26-28. If any one thing more than another seems to set the seal of inspiration indelibly on the Mosaic account of the creation, it is the sublimely simple way in which it tells the story of man's first appearance on the earth. It was not uncommon among the nations of antiquity, for families and whole tribes to claim to be descended from the gods. But the claim is here made for the whole human race without exception, which shows at once the radical difference between true religion and all the various forms of heathenism. No false religion ever had this grand universality. Man is said to be created in the image of God because he is to have dominion over the earth on which he has been placed; but his rule over the material world is the least part of the royal prerogative with which he is endowed. The most important part of his kingdom by far is himself. Sin is abdication of his crown, a voluntary self-dethroning; it is allowing some passion or inclination or desire to have the rule over him when he should treat it as all wise governments treat revolt—put it down with a strong hand. A man bound hand and foot to the indulgence of some vice like tobacco or strong drink, is a man no longer. And when he voluntarily surrenders his right to freedom of speech and action and becomes a lodge slave, who must obey every mandate of the secret power to which he has sold himself, by surrendering conscience and reason, those two prime ministers placed by God in every human soul, he tears from his own brow the crown of sovereignty. And this is the condition of thousands to-day—abdicated sovereigns who have sold their royal birthright for a mess of pottage.

2. The Earth Given to Man. vs. 29-31. As nothing is said of animal food until after the deluge it seems an inevitable conclusion that a vegetable diet was the food of the human race in its first stages, and modern times are beginning to learn the lesson that coarse and simple food not only cuts off the fuel which so largely feeds intemperance, but gives richer blood, clearer brains and firmer muscles. In nothing more than in things to eat and drink has man sought out many inventions, and by far the worst of those inventions is the distillery. Man as created in God's image knew nothing about fermented liquors, nothing about those "problems" created by human sin and misery for statesmen and philanthropists to solve. God, when he made this world and peopled it with human beings, and set the bounds to their habitations, knew exactly how many the land would sustain. If the great laws of social economy were thoroughly understood it would be found that they rest on the Golden Rule as their corner-stone. What the world needs to-day is not new social or political systems, but such a radical readjustment of society on Christian principles as shall give not only standing room but living room to every human being, room to develop into Christian manhood and womanhood, and thus fulfill God's original intentions in regard to the race.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"And God said." It has been observed by commentators, both Jewish and Christian, that the deliberation of the Creator is introduced to enhance the dignity of the last work, the creation of man. Man is that great "piece of work," concerning which God is described as taking forethought and counsel.—Students Companion.

"Man." Note that man's body is the highest animal form. A soul put in any other animal form could not do what the soul does through the human body. But the creation of the body is not the creation of man. An absolutely perfect body without a soul would not be a man. It was only when God gave the body he had formed from the dust a living soul, formed in God's own image, that the creation of man took place. The soul was not evolved; it was created. The soul is not an animal development; it is a direct impartation from God.—P.

"Make man in our image, after our likeness." It refers to the spiritual nature of man. Man's soul is like God's: spiritual personality with intellect, memory, reason, self-determining will, conscience, emotions, moral and religious faculties, immortality. He is like God as a candle is like the sun, which kindles it from its own light. It refers to the innocence and holiness of his nature, the right and true moral dispositions of the soul, undefiled with any taint of evil. It refers to the dominion of man over the lower creatures, as God rules over all. "So God created man." Created is used three times in this verse, as if to put a most emphatic denial upon that theory of evolution which would include man's soul as if that had been developed from lower forms.

"Male and female created he them." Luther sees an intimation "that the woman also was created by God, and made a partaker of the divine image, and of dominion over all." The story of the creation of woman is related in chap. 2: 21, 22. Note (1) that woman was taken out of man: not out of his head to top him, nor out of his feet to be trampled under foot, but out of his side to be equal to him, under his arm to be protected, and near his heart to be beloved.—Matthew Henry. (2) This method of creation expresses the utmost possible unity of husband and wife: unity of life, of soul, of feeling, of home. "They two shall be one flesh." (3) No more noble and worthy origin for the human race can be imagined than this.

"Be fruitful and multiply." The first family was now founded, and children were pronounced a blessing from the Lord. "Blessed is he who hath his quiver full of them." Their presence cultivates every virtue, and adds to every true joy. They tend to remove selfishness, to develop benevolence, patience, love, hope, piety, conscientiousness, self-government. It is almost impossible to attain to the best character without the influence of children. Family life is best also for the children. They need the care and training of parents; they need the training which comes from a large family of brothers and sisters. One of a large family has a great advantage in many ways over an only child.—P.

"And God saw . . . and, behold, it was very good." That is, everything perfect in its kind, so that every creature might reach the goal appointed by the Creator, and accomplish the purpose of its existence. The existence of anything evil in the creation of God is absolutely denied.—Keil.

"And he rested on the seventh day from all his work." God rests as Creator of the material world only to become active; nay, Creator in the spiritual world. His Sabbath is one of love to man—the redemption.—Guyot. Works of necessity—i. e., providence and mercy—he still carries on. "My Father worketh hitherto and I work." (John 5: 17).—Boardman.

PRACTICAL.

1. The creation is a revelation of God,—of his nature, his wisdom, power, knowledge, and goodness.

2. The book of Nature and the written Word must be in harmony since both were from the same Being.

3. We should study God's works as well as his Word, because each throws light upon the other.

4. The beginning of all life is from the Spirit. The Holy Spirit broods upon the chaos of human nature, and the soul is created anew.

5. Progress is God's law of nature, from the evening to the morning. Such should be the progress of each individual soul. Such is the progress of God's kingdom.

6. The glory of man is that he is made in the image of God. Herein is hope, joy, life, and immortality.

7. We should take the utmost care not to mar or defile that glorious likeness.

8. It is because we are made in the image of God that we are able to know God.

9. The family is the institution of God. It should be held sacred, and made a type of paradise.

10. Man is made ruler over nature. He should rule with a justice and wisdom and goodness like God's.

11. Man as yet has attained to but a small portion of the treasures of his kingdom; a few grains from the harvest; a few drops from the ocean. But as regards the image of God, he will gain his dominion over all nature.

12. The Sabbath was ordained of God, from the beginning, and for all men. Therefore, (1) its obligation is permanent; (2) its keeping is blessed; (3) we should deprive no person of its privileges; (4) we should devote it, after God's example, to the spiritual and moral improvement of ourselves and others.

OBITUARY.

SAMUEL CHARLES WHITE died at his residence at Bergen Point, N. J., on the 26th of November, of pneumonia, after a short but severe illness. Mr. White resided for some years at Port Richmond, S. I., and afterward purchased a fine place at Bergen Point, where he passed the remainder of his days. With his elder brother Thomas, he founded the Sulphur Works at Constables Hook, N. J., and with him purchased a large amount of property there which has become very valuable. He was also interested in the factory which produces the Greylock Parlor matches. In the business founded by the Messrs. White they attained success, and carried on all their affairs in such a manner as to hold the warm regard of their employees and the highest respect of all who had dealings with them.

Mr. S. C. White was born at Boylston, Mass., in the year 1820. When quite a young man he united with the church of the Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Adams in Boston, and gave himself from that time until his last sickness with untiring zeal and love to the work of his Divine Master. Imme diately upon taking up his residence at Bergen Point, he entered the Reformed church, and as a member of the consistory, a teacher in the Sunday-school, a participator in the meetings for prayer, and in the conferences for extending the benevolent work of the church, he was a power for good. In all that he did he was modest and unobtrusive, and many who were blessed by his kind acts were unaware of the source from which they came. He was a man of the most uncompromising integrity and fulfilled every duty with perfect exactness.

Appropriate funeral services were held in the Reformed church, at Bergen Point. On one side of the church sat the employees of the manufactories in which Mr. White was interested, while the rest of the edifice was filled, including the galleries, with relatives and sympathizing friends from the neighborhood, and also from New York, Brooklyn and Staten Island. The pastor, Rev. James F. Riggs, delivered an admirable address from the Word—"Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is." Jeremiah 17: 7. The text was an excellent statement of the condition of him whose loss the church and the community deplored, and this condition was presented as the only one in which humanity can truly and happily live.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.
H. H. Hinman, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Iowa, C. F. Hawley, Wayne, Henry Co. Care Rev. Geo. Fry.
Illinois, I. R. B. Arnold, Wheaton.
Wisconsin, J. F. Browne.
Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Trenton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
H. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. May, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
T. S. Walter, Kit, Jay Co., Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Wheaton, Ill.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill.
E. Matthews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton, St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. B. Ferry, Thetford, Ont.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
J. H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
E. Barnston, Haskinsville, Steuben Co., N. Y.
Wm. B. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.

Students ordering goods, or making any other business transactions, concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington, in a letter written a year before his death: "I preside over no lodge, nor have I been in one more than once or twice during the last thirty years."

President Millard Fillmore, J. C. Spencer and others: "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Chief Justice John Marshall: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned as one capable of much evil and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

John Quincy Adams: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

General A. W. Riley: "I hold that the difference between the Christian and a heathen religion is, that one has morality and the other has not. And when our churches refuse to speak of such subjects as slavery, liquor-selling and secret societies, they are becoming heathen religions; that is, religions without morals."

Charles Francis Adams: "Every man who takes a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment were to prove a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield: "In conducting the governments of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but secret orders to be considered, which have agents everywhere—reckless agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

General J. W. Phelps: "All secret organizations are links of one and the same chain which bind men to evil and not to good. The Masonic lodge is the parent source from which all similar modern organizations have emanated and this lodge is now in active operation in every city and considerable village of the country swaying our parties and churches; filling our offices, secular and divine, with its partisans; shaping our political destinies; and teaching a spurious and corrupting morality subversive both of the Christian religion and of free institutions."

Thurlow Weed: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

A. M. Sullivan, Irish Leader: "I had not studied in vain the history of secret, oath-bound associations. I regarded them with horror. I knew all that could be said as to their advantages in revolutionizing a country, but even in the firmest and best of hands they had a direct tendency to demoralization and are often on the whole more perilous to society than open tyranny."

Hon. Edward Blake, leader in Canadian Parliament, March, 1884: "I am not in favor of State recognition of any secret societies. I have never joined one, though many of my best friends are members of secret societies. But I believe the tendency of secrecy itself to be injurious. I believe that it brings with it the possibility of evil; I believe that it involves a certain amount of sacrifice of individuality and independence, and gives very great facilities for the misleading of members by designing leaders—very great and mischievous facilities for that purpose." "I believe that a great deal of the trouble, social and political, that has occurred in those countries [Europe and America] is due to secret societies."

James G. Birney, candidate of the Liberty party for President, was a Freemason, "but never entered a lodge after he joined the church, and, as his sons grew up, he cautioned them against joining any secret order."—Gen. Wm. Birney.

Hon. Ezra Butler, ex-Governor of Vermont: "One Masonic obligation requires that a Mason shall vote for a brother in preference to any other person of equal qualifications. Is not this political Masonry? The Masons in Vermont are about one-twentieth part of the freemen, and they hold about three-fourths of all the important offices in the State. Is this owing to their superior fitness, or to political Masonry?"

Philo Carpenter: "This saint of God (Moses Stuart) like the old prophets, was satisfied with the institutions and ordinances of God's house, and consequently did not give his influence or aid in supplementing the same with human ordinances and worldly alliances; in other words, he was opposed to secret, oath-bound societies, into which many good men, and even clergymen, have been, and are being 'ensnared.'"

Charles P. Sumner, father of the Senator, and a renouncing Mason: "Masonic engagements, whether they are called oaths, obligations, or promises, ought never to be made. They are not sanctioned by law and are not obligatory. They make it a Masonic crime to divulge that which the good of the community requires should not be concealed."

Hon. Cudwallader C. Colden, Mayor of New York and M. C.: "It is true that I have been a Mason a great number of years, and that I have held very high Masonic offices and honors. It is equally true that I have for a long time ceased to have any connection with the institution because I have believed, and do now believe, it is productive of much more evil than good. I have long entertained my present opinion, that a man who would eschew all evil should not be a Freemason."

Horace Greeley: "Many persons were brought to trial on account of the murder of Morgan, but no one was judicially found guilty of murder. It was established by seceding Masons that the oaths—at least in some of the highest degrees—that were administered, and taken by those admitted to Masonic lodges, disqualified them from serving as jurors in any case where a brother Mason of like degree was a party, and his antagonist was not."

Hon. Ethel M. Gates, ex-Mason: "Profoundly convinced by long experience and observation that Freemasonry is an evil and pernicious institution. I wish once more in my advanced age to lift my warning voice publicly against it and all kindred organizations, and to beseech Christian men to have no connection or fellowship with them. Jesus is not, and cannot properly be recognized in Freemasonry. He must be ignored in the lodge-room, in its lectures, instructions, and in its prayers."

Hon. Heman Lincoln, ex-Governor, Mass.: "Freemasonry, as a distinct, independent government within our own government, and beyond the control of the laws of the land, by means of its secrecy and the oaths and regulations which its subjects are bound to obey under penalties of death, has occupied much of the attention of the committee."

We believe, in the language of the Edinburgh Review, that all secret societies are justly deemed odious, wherever the government is tolerably free, and that government is tolerably free, and that only be excused where the existence of arbitrary power, foreign or domestic, leaves no other means of escaping from hopeless slavery.

Gen. Henry Sewall, a companion of Washington: "I was initiated an Entered Apprentice to the Masonic rites in October, 1777, at Albany, soon after the capture of Burgoyne, being then an officer in the American army. . . . I was led by the influence of this 'perfect rule of faith and practice,' during the year 1784, to view speculative Masonry in a shape still more deformed. Its charity appeared to be selfishness, because restricted to its own members; its religion deism because entirely devoid of the Gospel. Its history appeared fabulous; its claims to antiquity unsustainable; its titles fulsome; its rites barbarous and absurd; its oaths extra-judicial, unlawfully imposed and blindly taken, and the penal sanctions annexed, horrid and impious."

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.
VICE-PRESIDENT.—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.
COR. SECY. AND GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.
REC. SECY. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is: To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being leproyed, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform. FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of $—dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.
SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis, all of Selma.
CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. R. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. J. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. R. Ruck, Woodland.
CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.
ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.
INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Usher Silver Lake.
IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., H. W. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., James Harvey.
KANSAS.—Pres., J. F. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Torrence, N. Cedar.
MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning Jr., Worcester.
MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Secy., H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.
MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Palma, Waseola; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Secy., Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.
MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Atvalon.
NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. B. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.
NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Secy., John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.
OHIO.—Pres., Rev. R. M. Smith, Painesville; Rec. Sec., Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Cor. Sec., Rev. A. M. Campbell, Cedarville; Treas., W. P. Clark, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.
PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.
VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird, St. Johnsbury; Sec., C. W. Potter.
WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD.

HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1886.

OUR POLE STAR NEVER SETS.

THE CYNOSURE FOR 1887.

The readers who have welcomed our weekly visits for 1886 will be pleased to know something of the plans maturing for their benefit during the coming year.

The star beams of the Cynosure have shone upon the portraits and the characters of twelve noble men as the months of 1886 have passed: David Bernard, George W. Clark, John G. Fee, Charles C. Foote, John B. Gough, J. R. W. Sloane, George Thompson, Samuel D. Greene, Nathan Brown, Philo Carpenter, John Dougall, George F. Pentecost, and Charles Francis Adams—each a noble life, full of such excellencies as all should imitate.

We have in preparation biographies of other men as worthy, and fine portraits are already of such statesmen as: SUMNER, SEWARD, WEBSTER, GLADSTONE, with HOWARD CROSBY, and BISHOP HAMLINE, and "JOHN BROWN, OSSAWATOMIE BROWN."

The complete list we do not wish to promise, since the changes of the year will make calls that cannot be anticipated. But the biographical department will be as full and rich as ever.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED BY "Great Men in the State," will be completed; and will be followed by the condemnations of "Great Men in the Church," of "the Public Press," and "Out of their own Mouth." The compilation of these extracts will involve prolonged and patient labor, but the work will be made as perfect as possible. A list of papers which oppose the lodge is also preparing. This is also requiring much examination.

The center of interest for the year will be in the Christian Congress. This meeting will receive the most careful attention of the Cynosure, and the most complete report may be expected in its columns. The development of the work in the South will also be closely followed, and in every possible way encouraged, as well as the lecture work in the several States.

NO GENUINE ANTI MASON

can afford to be without the Cynosure next year. The growing list of contributors and correspondents constantly invites companionship with some of the bravest and noblest men living. Look back over the list of hundreds who have written and you may justly dread even a short separation from their estimable company.

The Christian Cynosure will be, God willing, the paper for Christian reformers in 1887. Let it have the patronage of thousands to whom it is now a stranger.

Supreme love to God and equal love to man make the whole moral code, as the proposition two halves of a thing make the whole of it, contains the essence of mathematics. Put both in practice and they need no other proof of their truth. One takes you through the universe; the other through number, time, and space without a jar; and these two include the whole Bible.

The sub-executive committee of the American party has met and considered Mr. Finch's official call on the Prohibition party to aid in filling the country with secret, temperance lodges. Their result will be published soon. The Wesleyan, of Syracuse, N. Y., the American, of Washington, and other papers call for his removal.

The Tory administration has returned to coercion of the Irish. There is no middle course between this and Gladstone's proposition for an Irish Parliament modeled after our State legislatures to rule Ireland in home matters. So the "long agony" is not over, and never will be while the Irish are ruled in religion by a priestly despotism, which promises them salvation by its ceremonies. Nowhere on the globe does liberty co-exist with priestism, not even in the shadowy priestism of secret lodges. Witness Powderly.

THE INTERIOR and the Herald and Presbyter are discussing at length the question whether Presbyterian elders can properly be moderators of General Assemblies. Fifty years ago there was a like labored discussion whether elders could lay on hands in ordination. The Interior, as did Dr. Chalmers, holds that "there is but one spiritual order in the church of Christ;" viz., kings and priests unto God.

This order includes all regenerated souls in whom Christ dwells. The American Constitution excludes all "orders of nobility," and even the power to confer their titles, from Congress and the State legislatures.

THE ADVANCE has changed owners and editors. Rev. Mr. Harrison, who had a business education, and theological course in Chicago Seminary, has become proprietor, and Drs. Noble and Gilbert are the new editors, the first of Union Park church, and the other a former editor of the Advance, who has been four years on the staff of the Boston Congregationalist. Both these papers have declared themselves hostile to the secret lodge system in years past.

THE UNIVERSITY OF NEW JERSEY.

We see in the papers a notice that the College of New Jersey is to become a University, under the brave and excellent Dr. James McCosh. We had designed, before this, to have given an extended notice of the College and Seminary at Princeton and their faculties. Since our visit there, Dr. Hodge, the son and successor of the Princeton theological professor for half a century, has died, after a brief illness. The Cynosure gave his obituary. Dr. Hodge was the first in Princeton to sign the strong endorsement of the Chicago call for a congress of Christians February 22d next. He then looked the picture of frankness, health and usefulness.

Dr. Paxton, Seminary Professor of Pastoral Theology, is "the beloved disciple" of that strong faculty. His father enjoyed the friendship of Thaddeus Stevens, and was his business partner. He is the favorite professor with the Presbyterian churches of New Jersey. Full fifty years ago Dr. Paxton, then a boy, saw the writer at a mob in Gettysburg court-house, composed of slave-holders' sons in Pennsylvania College. Our meeting was joyous.

Dr. Macloskie, Doctor of Science in the College, is one of the ablest teachers, and has the finest appointed department we have seen. He was presenting and explaining to his class an animal with three eyes: a New Zealand lizard of a foot or two in length. The third eye, however, was useless, or nearly so, as the eyes of the blind fishes inhabiting the streams in dark caverns. Dr. Macloskie was brought by Dr. McCosh from Dublin University. He almost alone inaugurated the Prohibition party in Princeton, but he has plenty of followers there now.

But the glory of Princeton is its President. He first gained his world-wide reputation by his "Divine Government, Physical and Moral," which the celebrated Hugh Miller said aided "to impart color and tone to the age's thinking." Several millions have been added to the finances of Princeton since his advent, and the sound judgment and good taste with which that part devoted to buildings has been expended, and in beautifying the grounds, makes Princeton now one of the fairest of University sites; leaving Yale, and even Cambridge, far in the rear.

Forty-one years ago the Princeton Review gave an admirable article on secret societies, endorsing and quoting largely from "A Sermon on Secret Societies" by the Cynosure editor. The article was written by the elder Dr. Hodge, who said of secret societies: "They are in their origin pagan, in their tendency popish, and in their spirit anti-Christian." This he declared of all lodges, "Whether Masonic, temperance, or Odd-fellow." Since that time the Greek-letter fraternities have invaded and taken possession of American colleges, debauching the students, demoralizing the discipline, and squandering the money of parents and guardians by hundreds of thousands. The good Dr. Hitchcock fought them at Amherst, but the faculty succumbed to them. Yale, though Evans and others have protested, is literally infested and ruled by them.

When Dr. McCosh came to Princeton, the two historical societies, "The Whig," founded by Madison, and "The Clio-sophic," had a useless and unnecessary pledge not to divulge their proceedings; but that was not sufficient. The secret "fraternities" came like a cloud of locusts, and demanded admission and tolerance. But they met Dr. McCosh, who, backed by one member of his faculty, drove them out. And they stay out. The result is, the young men (girls are not yet admitted) have increased from three and four hundred to six hundred strong. And those parents who wish to send their sons to an Eastern college, send them to Princeton for security of morals and success in all that constitutes a solid, liberal education.

Dr. McCosh has promised at least "five or six sentences" for the Christian congress. It is to be hoped the committee will persuade him not to write less than twice as many pages. Books and materials should be sent to him and Dr. Storrs.

PARTY NAMES.

Will the Prohibition party succeed? We answer, "No; but its principle will."

For a national party the name is narrow and unpopular. If a vote were to be taken now, the name Prohibition would not be adopted. The Voice and Lever have received many letters desiring a change. Gen. C. B. Fisk, who is likely to be the next candidate, prefers the name "National Reform" party. But as a party which aspires to administer the Government is to have and enforce opinions on topics besides "reform;" the parties which have had the administration since the Constitution was adopted have had national names. The first were "Patriots" and "Tories;" next "Federalists" and "Republicans," which name, against Jefferson's wishes, was changed to "Democrats," and has been retained ever since. Then the English name "Whigs" was adopted. The Whig party was dissolved, and the name "Republican" was taken by the party opposed to the Democrats.

The Abolitionists began to vote in 1840 as the "Liberty" party. In 1848 this name gave way to "Free Soil" and "Free Democrats," which in 1856 became "The Republicans," and held the administration from Lincoln to Garfield, 1860 to 1884.

A secret party calling itself "Native American" and Know Nothings elected a few members to Congress. But as the framers of our institutions were born Europeans, or of Europeans, the party soon died out, though an attempt is being made to revive it in California. It would be interesting to know whether Freemasons are not at the bottom of this movement to rob the anti-secret true American party of a popular name. The party which adopts American principles is properly entitled to the name "American" party. The American system of 1776 was born of reform. Up to that time government was hereditary, priestly, and monarchical. But America was a protest against all forms of aristocracy, and "titles of nobility" were forbidden in our national and federal Constitutions. The secret lodge system is a monarchical, priestly, aristocratic government of orders; in the language of their chief lexicon, "completely despotic;" which, in Webster's opinion, "should be prohibited by law," and would be but that it is administered secretly and in the night, though it flaunts its "titles of nobility" in the day time, and to the most disgusting excess. The American party formed at Oberlin, 1872, was prohibition from its birth; but its grand characteristic is that it insists that "men are created equal" in point of natural right. We voted for St. John in 1884 because he had quit the lodge seventeen years before, and because he represented our prohibition principle. We hope before 1888 the Prohibition leaders will, publicly, as most of them have done privately, adopt American principles.

MR. SAMUEL C. WHITE, whose obituary, taken from a Staten Island paper, is given in another column, was one of the loveliest of human characters. He came of a family of ten children, all of whom were superior men and women. The whole family, parents and children, were constructed upon the model of God's law of love to God and man, and were Puritans without fanaticism, and Christians without asperity or sect. And if the American churches had not been severed by slavery from American principles, the White family of Boylston, Mass., would have stood as lights in the New England churches as their ancestors had done in the best days of the Republic. Their grandmother, a niece and adopted daughter of Samuel Adams, "the father of the American Revolution," made them near descendants of the most remarkable family (the Adamses) which this or any other country has produced; and the whole American system revolved, naturally and easily, in their understandings. So when Boston court-house was surrounded with chains to keep the people from rescuing a guiltless, unfending slave, and Southern cotton had stopped the ears of ministers and churches to the cries of humanity and right, a host of New England families, this one among them, went with the New Testament, and American Declaration, that God had made men free. Nor did the "blindness in part," which had happened to New England, obscure their moral vision or darken their light. They were neither slavery nor come-outers. They knew that "the church of the living God" was "the pillar and ground of the truth," though some "wood, hay and stubble" had obscured it for a time.

Mr. Samuel C. White was the one least expected to be taken at this time. Of the younger half of his house, he was calm in his temperament, regular in his habits, happy in his family and successful in his life. "His sun has gone down while it was yet day," but he lived long enough to demonstrate, that were all employers like him, they would give no grief to laborers, but that caused by their death. The church at his funeral was appropriately filled, one half by his workmen and the other by his brethren in the church. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth. They rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

THE DUPAGE COUNTY MEETING at Elmhurst, near this city, was a meeting that will be recalled with pleasure by all who shared in its exercises. The town is nearly deserted by Americans in winter, but contains a sturdy and thriving German population, there being a hundred families in the congregation of pastor Irion (United Evangelical) alone. The meeting was held in the chapel of the Pro-Seminary, and was attended afternoon and evening by nearly all of the hundred or more young men in the institution. Inspector Goebel, with Professors Luders, Brodt, and Albert gave their presence and warm endorsement to the meeting. The business of the Association was quickly finished. Prof. H. A. Fischer was made president, and as he is fluent in both English and German, few chairmen have been more popular. Secretary Wylie was continued. Addresses were made in English by Pres. C. A. Blanchard and Elder J. L. Barlow, and in German by Prof. Fischer. Bro. Alexander Thomson of Bartlett read a poem and brief remarks were made by him, pastor Irion, and the assistant editor of the Cynosure. The evening audience filled the room. All entered with spirit into the meeting, and the grand German chorals swelled with praise and prayer from every heart.

—Secretary Stoddard reached Knoxville, Tenn., last Saturday, and is with Bro. Hinman making every possible arrangement for the National Convention next week.

—Bro. Hawley is announced for lectures in Birmingham, Iowa, and vicinity, in the Free Press. He writes that his engagements are already made for several months.

—A fire broke out in P. C. Hanford's building, Nos. 1 to 13 Wabash Avenue, this city, late Saturday afternoon which caused a loss of some $65,000. Mr. E. A. Cook, publisher of anti-lodge books, suffered slight loss. The fire broke out in the north end of the building, while he occupies the south part with a heavy fire wall between.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The preliminaries of an interesting tariff battle, the passage of some long pending bills, and the national convention held in this city to press to a great international exposition in 1892 at the Nation's Capital, were among the most important events of the week here.

While some interesting questions have been sprung in Congress already, but little was done during the first week. To the House is due all that was accomplished. When the Senate met on Thursday, the first thing it did was to agree to do nothing on Friday and Saturday. The House also took holiday on Friday according to a time-honored custom of adjourning when the death of one of its members is announced. Representative Dowdney, who was in his seat for the first three days of the session, apparently in perfect health, returning to his home in New York, was stricken down suddenly. Two members of the present Congress have died during the week, the other being Mr. Price of Wisconsin, which swells the death list of the forty-ninth Congress, beginning with Mr. Hendricks, the late presiding officer of the Senate, to twelve.

Before adjourning, out of respect to its deceased member, the House had passed two important bills during the week, and had discussed several others. The first measure adopted was the bill to extend the free delivery system to every incorporated city, village, or borough containing a population of 10,000, or to any postoffice which produces a gross revenue for the preceding fiscal year of not less than $10,000. There are one hundred and seventy-nine towns which will be benefited by this bill.

While the Senate was indulging in some tariff talk a few days since, the House was debating the bill to create a Department of Agriculture with a seat in the Cabinet for its head, and this subject unexpectedly led to the tariff. The proposal to dignify Agriculture with a position in the Cabinet, encountered sharp opposition from Arkansas, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia Congressmen, all of whom took the ground that the best thing that could be done for the farmers was to open the markets abroad, where they must sell their products to American purchasers, and take the import duties off the lumber, steel, iron and other materials needed by the farmers. It was a notable fact that all the States whose representatives took this position were agricultural States with the partial exception of West Virginia.

A tariff fight seems imminent, and it may commence this week. Representative Anderson, of Ohio, was saying that the time had come when these surplus millions had to be stopped, in some way, from piling in the treasury, and that mutual concessions would have to be made. For his part he was willing to let every penny of duty be knocked off Ohio wool. "Would you really favor a reduction on an article in which your State is so largely interested?" was asked. "Yes," replied Mr. Anderson, "I will favor anything that will relieve the people at large of this halter about their necks. I know such sentiments will not make me popular at home, but it is for the good of the country. It must come off somewhere," continued he, "and if everybody looks out for every little interest in his particular locality, nothing will ever be done." Mr. Anderson says he will vote for a bill to reduce the tariff thirty millions now, and more in the future.

An effort that promises success is being made to bring up the anti-Mormon bill in the House, already favorably reported from the Judiciary committee. Miss Kate Field, lawyer Baskin of Salt Lake City and a nephew of Brigham Young are prominent in this movement. Miss Field lectured a few evenings since on Mormonism and proved by quoting from the oaths taken on endowment day that the facts in the purpose of the Mormons is the destruction of the Republic. They bind themselves to regard their living prophet as the ruler of all the earth. She quoted utterances of the present Utah delegate, Caine—who, she said, received $5,000 a year from the government—in a speech made at Salt Lake City, congratulated the saints upon the death of ex-President Arthur because he had been their enemy, and called attention to it as an act of God who was gradually destroying all who opposed him. He also, according to Miss Field, has taken the oath binding him to undermine the country. "I know he will say I lie," said the lecturer, "but I only speak the truth."

Sure enough Caine did deny the accusation, but Miss Field is ready with strong proof. She published an able letter from Mrs. W. W. Wood, an ex-Mormon and daughter of the notorious Mrs. Wells, who is at present the high priestess of the Mormon sect and editor of the Woman's Exponent.

Patriotic speeches may be expected to begin soon in behalf of a perpetual United States fair, to be added to the already many spectacular and educational institutions of Washington. The exposition convention discussed and adopted resolutions which call for a committee of fifteen, that is to urge Congress to prepare for a celebration in 1889, to mark the one-hundredth anniversary of the Constitutional Government. Then the committee is to ask for buildings and money for a permanent exposition in 1892, in commemoration of the four-hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America. The committee is also authorized to get up a statue for Columbus on the exposition grounds.

Although Mr. Benedict, the Public Printer, has made every concession to the printer's union, and their organs have spoken very favorably, but he finds them untrustworthy friends. They are falling back on an old law which was proposed by the Typographical Union, so their leaders say, and enacted through their influence soon after the Covode investigation of fraud in the Public Printing Office. This law provides that the head of the office must be a practical printer. The Union is determined to control this branch of the public service and probably Eugene Hale and the other Senators who attempted to assert the authority of the Government over it a few years since have learned that a body of men who can work in secret to accomplish their ends, are not to be despised as antagonists.

—At Banza Manteka, Congo Mission, more than a thousand natives have been converted. At Mukimburger and Palabala there are also revivals in progress. Two of the king's sons have professed faith. The new converts are thoroughly in earnest in bringing others to Christ. Many bearing the glad tidings long distances, have led back converts to the mission stations. Persecutions seem to be only as storms that strengthen the oaks.

—Count Tolstoi told an American who recently visited him in Russia, that his novels are the least important work of his life, and can be understood only by his religious books. The distinguished author was plowing a field belonging to a peasant widow, and was dressed in a Russian peasant's shirt and drawers, his object being to put in practice the fundamental principles of Christianity as these were expounded by Christ. For this purpose he had abandoned his magnificent estate, and was laboring with his own hands for those who needed him.

LITERATURE.

Scribner's Magazine, Vol. I, No. 1, at length greets the reading public, and will not fail of a popular reception. The cover is of a plain, strong, inviting design, not overdone in art which few care to interpret; the type is good, and some of the illustrations excellent. Hon. Elihu B. Washburne of Chicago, minister to France during the Franco-Prussian war, begins the "Reminiscences of the Siege and Commune of Paris" with a paper on the "Downfall of the Empire" which will be eagerly read for its record of one of the most striking events of recent history. Annie Cary Morris begins another series, in "Glimpses at the Diaries of Gouverneur Morris," with "Social Life and Character in the Paris of the Revolution," which though treating of more remote occurrences, is scarcely less interesting in its sketches of French life and character than Mr. Washburne's paper. Mr. Morris was American minister also. Dr. William Hayes Ward writes instructively of the Babylonian seals and their value to Oriental students. Captain Greene of the U. S. Engineers has an elaborate and valuable paper on "Our Defenceless Coasts" which reviews the experiments in great guns, armor, land and water batteries, torpedoes, etc., which have been going on for twenty years in Europe at enormous cost, and urges that our own nation begin the same kind of folly by expending a hundred million or more on coast defences. A tenth part of the sum wisely expended would deliver us from any future fear of foreign war.

The English Illustrated Magazine for December is a superior number in size and in variety of contents. Swinburne and George Meredith and Du Maurier contribute poems; and the illustrated descriptions of Venice, of the mills of Surrey, of hop-picking, and of the London poor, though the topics are hackneyed or commonplace, will yet be read with interest. Especially the latter, by an attaché of St. Giles Mission, is a most graphic and touching story, lifting the curtain upon the dingy desolation in the heart of London which civilization or religion rarely penetrates.

—The Columbia Bicycle Calendar for '87, just issued by the Pope Manufacturing Co., of Boston, is a truly artistic and elegant work in chromo-lithography and the letterpress. Each day of the year appears upon a separate slip with a quotation pertaining to 'cycling from leading publications and prominent personages. As a work of convenient art, the Columbia Calendar is worthy of a place in office, library or parlor.

NOTICES.

THE SIXTEENTH NATIONAL CONVENTION.

TO BE HELD AT KNOXVILLE, TENN. DEC. 28TH AND 29TH, 1886.

Nearly three years have passed since the friends of our reform gathered at Washington City in National Convention. We have now another opportunity of meeting to greet each other as we come together from the various sections of our moral battle-field, to look in each other's faces, to clasp the hand, renew the zeal, encourage by experience, and increase the power, the faith and the efficiency of every soldier of Christ. The place is well chosen. For the first time the National Christian Association holds its convention in the South, where for several years the most remarkable victories have been gained for the truth we uphold. Nowhere in the North is the Cynosure more welcome; nowhere are our lecturers more eagerly heard; nowhere has there been more self-denial for Christ in this work; nowhere has the lodge lost more adherents than among the colored churches of the South. The churches and schools of the American Missionary Association are on God's side of this great question, the 800,000 Baptists are rapidly and happily joining them, and other churches must follow. The appointment of this meeting must be regarded as a great and providential opportunity for our work, to give it a new impulse in all the Southern States, where already the Prohibition cause is receiving greatest encouragement. We should keep pace with that movement.

All Christian churches and local associations are urgently requested to appoint delegates and arrange for their expenses, or at least send a contribution to the N. C. A. Treasurer to defray the expenses of colored pastors from Southern churches.

Let, therefore, everyone, without regard to sectional lines turn toward Knoxville; and if it is not possible that your steps may go thither, let your prayers and offerings come up for a memorial before God, that a great blessing may come to all the land from this convention.

S. COLLINS, President.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, Secretary.

KNOXVILLE R. R. NOTICE.

Round trip tickets to Knoxville, Tenn., can be secured through W. I. Phillips at the Cynosure office for something less than $30. Much depends on the number going. Send your names to W. I. Phillips at once and you shall have first class accommodations and company at the lowest rates obtainable. This is your opportunity and time to go South and do something personally for those who have been set free in answer to your prayers.
J. P. STODDARD.

THE HOME.

LET US GO FORTH.

Silent, like men in solemn haste,
Girded wayfarers of the waste,
We pass out at the world's wide gate,
Turning our back on all its state;
We press along the narrow road
That leads to life, to bliss, to God.

We can not, and we would not stay;
We dread the snares that throng the way,
We fling aside the weight and sin,
Resolved the victory to win;
We know the peril, but our eyes
Rest on the splendor of the prize.

No idling now, no wasteful sleep,
From Christian toil our limbs to keep,
No shrinking from the desperate fight;
No thought of yielding or of flight;
No love of present gain or ease;
No seeking man or self to please.

No sorrow for the loss of fame;
No dread of scandal on our name;
No terror for the world's sharp scorn;
No wish that taunting to return;
No hatred can our hatred move,
And enmity but kindles love.

No sigh for laughter left behind,
Or pleasures scattered to the wind;
No looking back on Sodom's plains;
No listening still to Babel's strains;
No tears for Egypt's song and smile;
No thirsting for its flowing Nile.

No vanity nor folly now;
No fading garland round our brow;
No moody musings in the grove;
No pang of disappointed love;
With the brave heart and steady eye,
We onward march to victory.

What, though with weariness oppressed,
'Tis but a little, and we rest.
This throbbing heart and burning brain
Will soon be calm and cool again.
Night is fast spent, and morn is near—
Morn of the cloudless and the clear.

—Bonar.

THE WEEK OF PRAYER.

This special season of prayer will soon be upon us again, and though we have had occasion to speak of it from year to year we are constrained again to call the serious attention of our churches to the consideration of important questions in connection with it. We presume that it will be observed by most of the churches, but how will it be observed and to what end? Will it be a real Week of Prayer, in which the bulk of professing Christians will gather daily to call upon God, and seek his face and favor with their whole hearts; or will it be the coming together of a little handful out of each church to go through the form of maintaining a meeting which has become traditional? We do not wish, for a single moment, to disparage the Week of Prayer, or to impeach the motives or sincerity of those who participate in it. On the other hand we are not free from anxiety, growing out of the stereotyped observance which we fear has become common. Why are we to meet and pray? What are we to pray for? And what is to be the outcome of the meeting?

If we are to keep up the form or habit of the Week of Prayer ought we not to put more point and meaning into it? There can be no doubt that any habit of real prayer is good; but there is always danger that a habit will degenerate into formalism. Would it not be well for the pastors of the churches to call to them, in conference, some of the most spiritual members of the churches, and carefully consider the whole matter, and agree upon some plan for the conduct of the meeting covering the three points we have suggested. If it is best to cut the Week of Prayer loose from the Alliance programme, well and good. Let us avail ourselves of the custom, and then adjust it to a current necessity. Let us say: "Here is a custom established by years of habit; now, how shall we quicken it into life and high spiritual usefulness? Let us take the custom and lay it before God for 'regeneration.'" Dr. Phelps says of old sermons: "They ought to be 'born again' before they are preached again." We certainly think the Week of Prayer ought to be born again every year. Then let the pastor and his brethren seek wisdom from on high as to what the aim of the season of prayer shall be. The special need of one church will not be the need of another. In one church the spiritual condition may greatly differ from that of another. We can imagine that, in some churches, the Week of Prayer might best be observed as a week of confession and humiliation, together with a cry for life and power from on high to put away sins which have been allowed to take root among us. In another, it might be best to organize a plan for the systematic hunting up and reclaiming of backslidden and wandering members. In another, the earnest review of the church covenant, looking toward a real fulfillment of it between the members of the church. In another, the conditions may be such that the church may at once begin the prosecution of a work looking toward the direct winning of souls to Christ.

One more suggestion. If we are to go into the Week of Prayer, let us do it with a determination to "tarry" and pray until God answers by fire. If fire shall come down from heaven, then will the work go on; but if we pray and then stop, because the week is closed, there is little reason to believe that any blessing will come. God has said, "Ye shall seek me and find me when ye search for me with all your hearts." —Independent.

SLOW AND SURE.

There inside the door of Thomas Toms' parlor sat Jim Tregoning, a well-meaning kind of a man. There he sat with an unmeaning smile upon his face, and large eyes looking on one place all through the hour but never seeming to see anything. When his turn came, he spoke with a sigh.

"How was he gettin' on? Well he feared he was only a slow traveler heavenward. But there—he had many troubles and trials—fightin' his without and fears within, and he hoped that his mother was Slow an' sure; slow an' sure; for the race wasn't to the wise, nor yet to the strong; but it were to the sure. If he couldn't fly he must walk, and if he couldn't walk he must creep; and if he wasn't as fast a traveler as some folks he hoped he was just as sure."

The little eye twinkled; and yet there was a tone of pain and grief in the reply:

"La, Jim, whatever do'e mean? 'Slow and sure, slow and sure.' Always the same. Never no forwarder, never no backwarder, but always a sticking in the same place. I'll tell 'e what, Jim, you 'slow and sure' folks be just like a faggot o' green furze 'pon the fire. You don't blaze nor burn; you do nothing but steam, and fizz, and go fillin' the house with smeach and smoke. Do 'e get out o' this here way. Strive to enter in at the strait gate; but goin' along so slow you'll be sure not to get through un. Slow and sure is sure to be too late. 'Tis what the folks said when they was a comin' to the ark; but the floods came quick and sure 'pon them before they got to the ark, and slow and sure was drowned. Serve him right, too. The virgins was slow and sure when they were agone to buy oil for their lamps, and when they came back the door was shut. Slow an' sure! 'Tis damp powder that do burn like that there, Jim,—it'll choke 'e all with smoke, but it won't ever heave a rock in two, or do anybody a morsel o' good.

"I've heard 'em say that horses that be stumblers be a'most sure to come down if you let them go along with a creeping kind of a dog trot. And that's how Christian folks fall in general; going along so slow an' sleepy, down they come all of a heap, knockin' theirselves all to bits a'most before they know where they are. An' then troubles and trials — of course you do have them—heaps of 'em. What else can anybody expect? Slow and sure! Why, 'tis 'xactly like when I be a walkin' to Redburn on a fair day, and every van and cart and lumberin' wagon, and donkeys, and all the riff-raff and sharpers, they do all overtake me. But when you get in the train you go whizzing over their heads, and leave 'em behind, every one of 'em.

"Go creepin' along? Why o' course there's never a trouble or trial but it comes up to you. Spread your wings, Jim, spread your wings out, and fly. 'They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; and shall mount'—mount, Jim;—'they shall mount up with wings as eagles.'

"Old Care is a black-winged, croaking old raven; but his croaking can't get up so high as the eagle, it's down, down ever so far below; down under the clouds, and the eagle is up above them all, in the floods o' sunshine. 'They shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint.'

"My dear Jim, there be'n't no such thing as this 'slow and sure' of yours. When the top do spin slow he's sure to come down. 'Tisn't the way the angels told Lot. 'Escape for thy life; tarry not in all the plain; and I don't think we shall get off easier than he did. And 'tisn't the way Paul knew any thing about; for says he, 'Run the race set before you.' He don't say anything about creepin', and it be best to stick to the Word, Jim.

"Slow an' sure!—seems to me that everything be the other way about. The old tempter, whatever other failures he've got, han't got; that there—he do go about like a great roarin' lion, seeking whom he may devour, an' if we go creepin' along he's sure to come springin' out 'pon us unawares—an' serve us right, for we tempt 'im even if he could have had enough afore we come by. Time is swift and sure, Jim; and death is swift and sure. And then the love of Jesus is swift and sure. Ah! bless the Lord, how swift and sure that is, you know, Jim, as well as the rest! 'When he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran,—ran.'"

And Daniel's voice spoke with a tenderness that brought tears to every eye.

"No creepin' then, or walkin' either. 'He ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him.' Ah, bless the Lord, that's his way always—and his way be always best." And he brushed away the tears as he finished—"Come, friends, let us sing a hymn.

'My soul, through my Redeemer's care,
Saved from the second death I feel;
My eyes from tears of dark despair,
My feet from falling into hell.

'Wherefore to him my feet shall run,'

"That's it—run.

'My eyes on his perfection gaze;
My soul shall live for God alone;
And all within me about his praise.'"

—Daniel Quorum's Class Meeting.

THE "BREAKING BOY."

It seemed that Geoff was the most unfortunate boy in the world, for he was nearly always in trouble. And yet he was not exactly a bad boy, he did not wish to displease his mother and father, and was a great deal happier when they praised than when they blamed him. Sometimes when he sat down to think, which was not often, he tried to find out the reason of his misfortune, and one day he thought he had it.

"I am too strong," he said. "That is what is the matter with me. As soon as I touch a thing it seems to break. Only to-day I took hold of a plate. I think it must have been cracked; but, at all events, it came in two in my hand, and of course I got the blame of breaking it. It must be because I am a great strong fellow. Fred is different; he would not have broken the plate if he had held it for an hour; but then he has no strength at all in his hands. Mother, the best thing you can do is to starve me a little, and then, perhaps, you would not have to call me the breaking boy."

Before Geoff's mother could answer, his sister spoke.

"It is very well for you to try to dispose of the matter in that way," she said; "but surely you know that it is not your strength, but your awkwardness, which is in fault."

"I don't know. Let me prove it to you," said Geoff. "Look here, I take up this doll—"

Geoff was interrupted by a scream. His little sister Annie flew to the rescue of her favorite.

"O Geoff, put down that doll! I believe if you only look at her she will break. Now see, she is broken."

Annie began to cry, and poor Geoff looked sheepish. But he tried to comfort his little sister, and wished fervently that he had a half crown in his pocket at the moment to give her.

"I declare, I only gently tried to straighten the doll's arms, and one of them must needs come out directly. It is too bad that doll's arms should be made so soft and weak. If I had a doll, she should be strong."

"Nothing but an iron doll would do for you," said Annie resentfully; "and I believe you would contrive to break that, somehow or other."

"Now don't be cross, Annie. A broken arm is not nearly as bad as a broken head. But it is not strange that I cannot touch a thing without breaking it?"

"That is not quite the case," said Geoff's mother. "You do not break everything that you touch, and I suppose it is only the fragile things that come to grief. But you need to practice gentleness, my boy. You have large and strong hands, and you use unnecessary force. Only this morning when you took my arm in the garden you seized it as if it were something that would slip away, or something heavy that needed all your power to retain it. If my arm had been soft, I am not sure that it also would not have been broken."

"O mother, I am sorry. Did I really hurt you?"

"A little, Geoff; but I did not mind it, and I only speak of it in the hope that you may be careful in future."

"I declare," said Nellie, "that if Geoff catches hold of my arm when we are at play, it is always black and blue for a day or two afterwards."

"Nonsense," said Geoff; but he looked very sorry and pained.

"I am sure, mother, something must be done," he said presently; "you must put me on short commons, and perhaps I shall get thin and weak."

"But, my boy, I do not want you to get thin and weak. Strong hands are needed in this world, and I hope yours will do some good and useful work when you are a little older. You must try to cultivate a kindly heart and a thoughtful spirit, and then you will know in time how much force is needed to do or to hold things. I shall be glad when that time comes, for it is very expensive to have a breaking boy in the family."

Poor Geoff did try; but the next day he was even more unfortunate than he had been before—for this time he broke himself!

He was in an apple tree, having volunteered to go up and gather the apples; but, instead of taking care of himself, he went to work with all the energy and carelessness that he would have exhibited if he had been on firm ground, and the consequence was that he fell.

His mother and sisters ran to see what was the matter.

"Nothing much," said he, trying to speak cheerfully, "only this time I have broken my leg and my nose, and perhaps it will be a warning to me."

Poor Geoff could say no more, for a faintness came over him. They carried him indoors, and sent for the doctor, who soon set his broken leg and plastered his nose. He had to lie in bed several weeks, and during that time he learned several lessons in gentleness. His mother's touch was so soft that it soothed his pain. His father's hand rested so lightly upon him that it never hurt him. And his brothers and sisters, sorry for his suffering, set him a beautiful example. He had time to think, and he thought to some purpose; for when he again grew well and strong there was a great change manifested in him. He had been taught how to use his hands, and he is in a fair way of exhibiting in his own life that most beautiful mingling of strength and gentleness which helps to make a really noble and useful character.—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

GOOD WORDS FOR BOYS.

There are temptations that come to boys at school which are seldom spoken of or alluded to, and for this very reason they are all unprepared to meet them; so I want to speak a few earnest words to you about the first beginnings that often lead to great sin.

You know that in every school there are some low, bad boys, who are forever talking about what they call "secrets." Yes—"secrets," that they would face a dozen canings rather than be forced to repeat aloud before their mother and sisters in the drawing room; "secrets," with which they poison the minds of boys younger or more innocent than themselves; "secrets," that they will think of with sickening shame and disgust, when lying on their death bed, or when called to stand before the judgment throne of "Him who is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity," and before whom "all hearts are open, all desires known, and from whom no secrets are hid." Boys—never listen to such secrets! shut your ears—turn away, as from something loathsome and venomous, for they are both.

Of course, there are secrets in life; "God's secrets," if looked at rightly. He works in a mysterious way, and there are holy mysteries surrounding birth and death, love and marriage, which should be among the most sacred things in life.

Boys, never joke on this subject! Think of your own mother who bore you, and suffered for you, and loved you; dare you, with her image in your mind, speak profanely and coarsely of this to other boys? Do you remember the story of Uzzah, the man who rashly put out his hand to steady the Ark of God, when it was shaken in the cart? It was not his business to do so; none but those appointed by God were to touch the sacred Ark. What happened? He fell down dead! I think this lesson is to teach us a reverential awe for "God's secrets." Remember this, and stifle any mean, prying curiosity about subjects which do not concern you. "Keep thyself pure" in mind as well as in body. The white robes are so easily stained. But do not be satisfied with looking after yourself. If it is devils' work to tempt others to wrong, it is angels' work to help them to what is pure and good!

Be strong in Christ! Influence those around you by bravely standing up for all that is right and pure and by showing a noble scorn for what is evil and impure.

There is one of our great men, of whom it was said, that when a boy, he entirely changed the tone of thought and conversation in the upper forms of the school he went to. He did not preach, but his innate purity was such that his school-fellows used to say "that it was simply impossible to say or do any bad thing in his presence." His own pure nature acted like a spell on those around him. What prouder testimony could he leave behind him? Are you like this, giving out a holy influence—or, are you one to whom a bad boy will naturally turn, knowing he will find a kindred spirit to enjoy his evil talk? Remember that the same Word of God, which says "Keep thyself pure," says also, "Be thou an example in purity." (1 Timothy 5:12).—Hazelwood.

ONE AT A TIME.

One step at a time, and that well placed,

We reach the grandest height;

One stroke at a time, earth's hidden store

Will slowly come to light;

One seed at a time, and the forest grows;

One drop at a time, and the river flows

Into the boundless sea.

One word at a time, and the greatest book

Is written and is read;

One stone at a time, and a palace rears

A loft its stately head;

One blow at a time, and the tree's cleft through,

And a city will stand where the forest grew

A few short years before.

One foe at a time, and he subdued,

And the conflict will be won;

One grain at a time, and the sand of life

Will slowly all be run;

One minute, another, the hours fly;

One day at a time, and our lives speed by

Into eternity.

One grain of knowledge, and that well stored,

Another, and more on them,

And as time rolls on your mind will shine

With many a garnered gem

Of thought and wisdom. And time will tell,

"One thing at a time, and that done well,"

Is wisdom's well proved rule.

—Golden Days.

TEMPERANCE.

CHICAGO MINISTERS

DENOUNCE THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

All the ministers' associations in the city adopted last week the following resolution, proposed by the Presbyterians:

We, the ministers of the Presbyterian church of this city and vicinity, view with profound concern the present evils of the liquor traffic. It is a constant menace to the best interests of society and the state. It is the constant, and often violent, disturber of the good order of our city. It is making fearful waste and ruin of the health and morals of thousands of our youth. Among the many startling facts that confront us are the following:

1. There are about three thousand seven hundred legally licensed saloons in the city.

2. The number of arrests for drunkenness and disorder is steadily increasing beyond the proportionate increase of the population.

3. The last Grand Jury of Cook county charged that "dives of the lowest order defy the city ordinances by keeping open from dawn till midnight and from midnight till dawn;" that there is "a toleration of dens of iniquity on prominent thoroughfares, under the guise of oyster and ice-cream saloons, but which are licensed to do a dram-shop business;" and that "to such places may be traced the ultimate ruin of thousands of young girls and unsuspecting females."

We believe that every possible legal restraint should be put upon this prolific and infamous source of disorder, vice, and crime. We rejoice in all lessening of the evil of intemperance, and of the temptation to it, that may be accomplished by law. But we are persuaded that renewed and emphatic attention should be called to the Scriptural foundations upon which the successful repression of this evil must finally rest. The sin of drunkenness, the impossibility of a drunkard's inheriting the kingdom of God, the woe upon those who cause the weak to stumble, the duty of making straight paths for our feet lest that which is lame be turned out of the way, the law of conscience and of love as higher than the law of liberty, the fearful responsibility of sharing in any way in that temptation by which so many are led to ruin—these, and topics like them, we believe should constantly have their proportionate place in pulpit ministrations and Sabbath-school instruction, and should just now have the emphasis of united and urgent presentation.

We, therefore, unanimously adopt the following:

1. That the third Sabbath in January, viz., Jan. 16, be set apart for special services in the interests of Gospel temperance, and that sermons be preached on that day in all our pulpits upon some important phase of this great question, to which may be brought the high sanction of the Word of God.

2. That the executive body of each of our churches formulate some action expressive of their sense, as the spiritual officers of the church, of the wideness and dreadfulness of this evil, and of the duty of God's people to avoid every possible countenance of it; and that said action be publicly read on the before-designated Sabbath, Jan. 16, in connection with the preaching of the sermon.

3. That church officers and members seek in every legitimate way to create a public sentiment and evoke a public conscience that will not only be an effectual barrier against the further aggressions of this fearful curse, but meet its tide of evil by an over-coming and overwhelming tide of righteousness.

4. We hereby call upon the municipal officers who are officially responsible for the toleration of the open and flagrant defiance of the city ordinances charged upon the liquor business by the Grand Jury to a discharge of their neglected official duty, so that the evils flowing from this recreancy to public trust, and from this gross defiance of law, may no longer curse the community and disgrace our city.

The above was concurred in by the Baptists, Congregationalists, and Methodists, all of whom will observe the day before mentioned.

The revenue from alcohol in England for 1885 was £1,179,000 less than in 1884, and the decrease has been steadily going on for ten years.

It cost England and Wales over $76,000,000 in 1884 to care for their paupers. "The one great cause underlying the whole of the matter," says one of the committee appointed to investigate the subject, "is the old, old story—drink."

The sale of liquor has been prohibited on property owned by the Northern Pacific Railroad by order of its President, Robert Harris. His wife is said to have inspired the order. Chicago people who know Mr. and Mrs. Harris will not be surprised at this order.

A Massachusetts law forbids the sale of liquor within a certain distance of any school-house. In the town of Whately, at the recent election, license carried the day, and as the hotel with its bar was directly opposite the school-house, the latter was closed.

The National Temperance Hospital, located at No. 3411 Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, is one of the most beneficent institutions in this country. Here some of the worst forms of disease have been successfully treated without the use of alcohol, where it would have been used in any other institution. Plans are being arranged for a literary and musical entertainment to be given for the benefit of the hospital, which is much in need of a fund for the care of indigent patients.

The Secretary of War has informed the Treasury Department in regard to the action of the commanding officer of the Division of the Pacific in issuing permits to land liquors in different parts of Alaska, that hereafter no permits will be issued by the War Department for the introduction of liquors into Alaska for use for medicinal, mechanical, or scientific purposes. The Collector of Customs at Sitka, Alaska, has been notified accordingly. He is instructed, however, to permit the entry of wine for sacramental uses upon the presentation of proof that it is intended for no other purposes.

The ruling passion never had an illustration quite so disgusting as was given in Atlanta, Ga., during the days when the last of the wholesale licenses were to expire under the local option law. Although under the local option law all bar-rooms were closed at the beginning of July last, there were still some eight or nine wholesale licenses in force, the validity of which could not be impaired. These allowed the sale of liquor in quantities of no less than one quart. It therefore became the custom of thirsty Georgians to "pool their issues" in groups of four or five, purchase a quart of whisky in the name of one, and divide it up. One by one these licenses expired, and when, a few weeks ago, there were only three extant, these latter became enormously valuable. The holder of one of them, Mr. Thorn, sold over $1,000 worth of liquor before it expired, and made under it a net profit of more than $10,000 since July 1. One of the remaining two had been purchased by the Kimball House. It expired Oct. 9, and on that day, as well as on each of a dozen days preceding, it brought in a revenue of about $2,500, the demand for liquor being constant up to the last moment, midnight. Then only one license remained, T. C. Mason's. His sales of liquor were more than $2,000 daily, and kept increasing as the license neared its time of expiration.—E.

PRESS COMMENT.

"Of the sixty-eight thousand men who voted for Henry George not one in a hundred believed what George said; he don't believe it himself; they are not anarchists or socialists. What did they mean? They meant something; they meant that they have a grievance. We don't exactly know what it is; they cannot clearly express it; but it exists."—Chauncey M. Depeu.

U. S. Attorney W. H. Dickson of Utah, says: "I can point you to a place in Utah called a home, where a man dwells with three sisters, and calls each sister his wife, is rearing children by each of the three, and all dwell under the same roof, called by the sacred name of home. I can point you to another place almost within a stone's throw of this building, where a man is dwelling under the same roof with a mother, a daughter and a grand-daughter, and calling each by the sacred name of wife, and has begotten children by each of them." As specimens of the perjury which Mormonism authorizes and commits, Mr. Dickson mentions the case of a woman who declared on oath that her daughter living in her home, was married and was a mother, but that she did not know who was her daughter's husband. Such perjuries the church defends and praises.—Independent.

The Knights of Labor will have more success in convincing good citizens that they have no sympathy with the anarchists, if they discountenance anarchistic proceedings, rather than make wordy professions. Any man who will assault and terrorize a man to keep him from going to work, is, so far, the worst type of an anarchist. The Knights are just now demanding the repeal of the laws which protect good citizens from malicious conspiracies. What would the breaking down of such guards of personal rights and liberties be but anarchy?—Interior.

Secret societies are a menace in Spain, and because existing in the army, which, filled with political ambition, uses them for dangerous purposes. The Knights of Labor in this country are wrestling with the subject, the point being that the Catholics cannot become good Knights so long as secrecy is part of their constitution and practice. Some of them wish to do away with it, but others think it cannot succeed unless it is retained—which is a humiliating confession to be compelled to make. Open honesty is better than organized skulking.—United Presbyterian.

If there is a more arrogant and at the same time a more un-American "monopoly" than is [Knights of Labor], we should like to discover it. In the first place its designation implies a title of nobility, and for these things we have no use in this country. Working men especially would do well to beware of them. They are monarchical and unrepugnant. Our revolutionary forefathers were jealous of all such imitations of royal technique and hence they inserted in the constitution a clause prohibiting Congress from conferring upon anybody any order of nobility. It is, in addition to this, a secret society, another circumstance which exposes it to suspicion.—New York Commercial Bulletin.

The Eastern glass-blowers, who surrendered their Knights of Labor charters rather than strike as ordered by their District Assembly, are reported as saying that they will not allow any one to work in New Jersey factories who violated agreements under which they are working. On the other hand the officers of the Knights of Labor are reported as saying that the seceding blowers will not be allowed to work outside the limits of their town. No State government, not even the National Government has power to say that a well-behaved man shall not work where it is his interest to work. Is it not possible that labor associations are going too far when they assume to do what the Government will not permit?—Inter Ocean.

The failure of the beef-packers' and butchers' strike in Chicago, following upon the previous strikes in the Southwestern railway system, will doubtless teach the workmen a lesson. They were not contented by their national organization. T. V. Powderly, the Grand Master of the Knights of Labor, has consistently opposed strikes. And, while the discontented workmen have had the sympathy, they have never had the co-operation of the great body of their fellows throughout the country. Undoubtedly, the agitation for fewer hours' work and better wages will keep right on; but reason, and not force will be appealed to. Employers will find it to their interest, in many cases, to treat their workmen better than they have done. But strikes are nearly always a mistake, and sometimes a little less than a crime. This last strike has called attention to the value of accumulated wealth in large industrial operations. Before these immense abattoirs were instituted, butchering was done in a retail and very wasteful way. An unnecessary number of small employers had to be supported, unnecessary rents were paid, and both consumer and producer were needlessly taxed. But the Armour's, Swifts, and other large employers now kill millions of cattle, literally for nothing, and make their profits out of the hoofs, horns, entrails, grease, and other parts of the animals killed, that were formerly thrown away. The breeder actually gets about all that the wholesale buyer pays for the dressed carcasses. Hence, under this system, while a few retail butchers have been driven out of trade, the vast bulk of the producers and consumers of meat are greatly benefited. The one gets his animal killed for nothing; the other procures his dressed carcass for cost price. The waste of the animal pays the expense of the transfer. It would be well to keep this fact in mind when demagogues complain of monopolies.—Demorest's Magazine.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The evangelical ministers of Cincinnati have passed resolutions that ballet exhibitions tended toward irreligion and immorality, and should not be countenanced by Christian people.

—At the regular annual business meeting of the Chicago Avenue (Moody) church last week, Mr. F. H. Revell was chosen chairman. The treasurer reported the receipts at $12,140, and the disbursements at $10,317.69, leaving a balance on hand of $1,822.31. With the extensive repairs following the late fire, a deficit will remain amounting to $813, which, however, is to be wiped out before the close of this year. The report of the Sunday-school for forty-eight sessions shows the total attendance to have been 68,843, and the average attendance 1,427. There are seventy-two teachers and seventeen officers connected with this branch of the church. The Chinese attendance averages thirty-three and that of visitors eighty-five. The receipts of the poor fund were $199.56. The church has a membership of 636, an increase of 120 during the past twelve months. F. H. Revell resigned his position as trustee.

—Every vessel in the British navy now has daily prayers, and on the Sabbath frequently two religious services.

—It is reported that Mr. Moody has received from D. M. Weston, of the Shawmut church, Boston, a donation of $50,000 to be applied to his educational work at Northfield and Mt. Hermon, Mass. With this gift another dormitory is to be built.

—The residents of Indianapolis, Ind., are rejoicing in the quiet which reigns in their city on the Sabbath day. The mayor and public superintendent have decided that the laws regarding the closing of the saloons on Sunday must be enforced, and enforced they are. The liquor league, after the closing of the saloons, insisted that all drug stores and cigar shops be also closed. This was done, and Indianapolis is now a model city for at least one day in the week.

—Methodist ministers at Cincinnati propose that church members who attend operas having a ballet annexed, be disciplined. The fact that a late opera in that city was endorsed by prominent church men, with its ballet accompaniment causes much discussion.

—Mr. Dow, author of the Ohio liquor law, is to be disciplined, it is said, by the Presbyterian church of which he is a member, for certain liberal features in that act.

—Dr. James H. Brookes, of St. Louis, is deeply afflicted in the sudden death of his daughter, Mrs. S. L. Warfield, of Lexington, Ky., who was visiting at his house.

—Rev. W. M. Wellmann, evangelist, is holding a successful series of meetings at Neligh, Nebraska, the seat of Gates College. During six nights over forty inquirers and thirty conversions were manifest, including several of the strongest business men of the place.

—The Evangelical Alliance is making preparations to extend its work and influence in meeting all Christian bodies in evangelical efforts, and has elected a general secretary, the Rev. Josiah Strong, of Cincinnati, who will make his headquarters in this city.

—In all parts of the mission field there are to-day not less than 13,000 schools of different grades, attended by from 600,000 to 700,000 scholars. There are about 25,000 native helpers, of whom the most are teachers; and there are 1,700 ordained pastors and evangelists whose support, for the most part, comes from the people they serve.

THE WEEK OF PRAYER.

The Evangelical Alliance of the United States suggests the following topics for the week extending from Jan. 2d to Jan. 9th, 1887:

SERMONS.—Sabbath, Jan. 2: "O Thou that hearest prayer, unto Thee shall all flesh come."—Psa. 45: 2.

PRAYER.—Monday, Jan. 3: For rich spiritual blessings; for the long-suffering grace of God; for manifold temporal blessings, private and public; for many tokens of the mighty working of the Holy Ghost, both at home and abroad; for the increase of missionary zeal among Jews and Gentiles; for new openings for the spread of the Gospel in many lands; for the preservation of peace among the nations.—Psa. 111; Luke 1: 67-79; Deut. 32: 1-14; Psa. 116; 1 Chron. 16: 1-34; Psa. 107; 1 Chron. 29: 9-20.

HUMILIATION.—Tuesday, Jan. 4: For personal sins, family sins, and national sins; for the spread of unbelief and atheism in various quarters; for the fearful extent to "which the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life," still prevail; for the large amount of intemperance, licentiousness, and other forms of immorality; for the formalism of many, and the cold indifference of others; for unseemly divisions and lack of love among those who are brethren in Christ.—Psa. 51; Jer. 13: 15-27; Phil. 2: 5-16; Ezra 9: 1-15; 1 Cor 5; Jude 1-16; 1 Cor. 2: 1-10.

PRAYER FOR THE CHURCH.—Wednesday, Jan. 5: That the people of God may know their high calling and responsibility; that they may be filled with the Spirit, and bring forth the fruit of the Spirit, and labor aggressively for the conversion of souls; that grace may be given to all pastors, teachers and preachers, to proclaim the Word in its simplicity and fullness, and that the Lord may open the hearts of men to receive it; that believers may walk in fellowship and holy love, remembering that they are one body in Christ, and members one of another.—John 17: 14-26; Ephes. 1; 1 Thess. 1; 1 Kings 8: 22-36; John 15: 12-21; Luke 6: 17-36; Ephes. 4: 1-16.

PRAYER FOR FAMILIES AND SCHOOLS.—Thursday, Jan. 6: That family love may be sanctified, husbands and wives walking together as fellow-heirs of the grace of life, and training their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; that the young may be early drawn to Christ, and kept from the evil that is in the world; that great grace may be given to all teachers of youth; that the blessing of God may rest on all schools, colleges, universities, and Sunday-schools; for all Christian associations of young men and young women; for the protection of woman and the home, the reformation of fallen men and women, and the equalizing of the scale of morality for both sexes; for all who are in affliction.—Deut. 6: 1-15; Prov. 4; Ephes. 6: 1-18; 1 Chron. 17: 16-27; 2 Tim. 1: 1-14; Col. 3: 12-25; Isa. 12.

PRAYER FOR MISSIONS.—Friday, Jan. 7: That the church of Christ may recognize the glory of the commission to "preach the Gospel to every creature," and may feel it a privilege to make sacrifices that it may be fulfilled; that far greater zeal for the Divine glory and far more pity for the perishing may be imparted by the Holy Ghost to all the people of God; that faithful laborers may be greatly multiplied, and that all converts may be comforted, up-held, guided and made useful; that the hearts of the unconverted may be opened to receive the truth; that Christian missionaries may be favorably received by heathen rulers and peoples, and that native Christians among the heathen may be kept steadfast and made zealous in seeking the salvation of their countrymen; that God's ancient people, Israel, may acknowledge Christ as the Messiah; that the time may soon come when, according to prophecy, the Spirit shall be "poured out like floods upon the dry ground," and "the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose."—Acts 2: 20-41; Isa. 44: 1-8; Matt. 9: 36-38; Rom. 11: 25-36; Isa. 35; Eccles. 11; Isa. 42: 1-16; Acts 10: 34-48.

PRAYER FOR NATIONS.—Saturday, Jan. 8: For the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the nations; for rulers and all in authority; for just and equal laws and righteous administration; for the better observance of the Lord's day; for the prevalence of the Spirit of Christ between employers and employed; that anarchism and all forms of lawlessness may pass away, and men live quiet and peaceable lives in all godliness and honesty; for peace among nations, and the removal of all race and sectional antipathies; for the abolition of slavery, the opium trade, the liquor traffic, and all immoral trades and practices; for the blessing of God on all efforts to remove the curse of intemperance; for the cessation of persecution for conscience' sake, and of all oppression.—Psa. 67 and 96; Joel 2: 23-32; Rom. 13; 1 Thess. 5: 12-24; Zeph. 3: 14-20; Rom. 14; Matt. 7: 1-12; 1 Peter 2: 13-25; Hosea 14.

SERMONS.—Sabbath, Jan. 9: "Thy Kingdom Come."—Matt. 6: 10.

LODGE NOTES.

The Voice of Masonry speaking of the general intelligence of the Hiramites, says that not 30,000 in all the lodges of North America are careful readers of the periodical press.

"Nova Scotia is cursed (yes, that's the term) with a lodge acknowledging allegiance to the Grand Lodge of England."—T. T. Gurney.

The Grand Lodge of Kentucky Masons reports a loss of 565 members last year.

Illustrious Albert Pike, Grand Commander of the Supreme Council of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite for the Southern Jurisdiction of the United States, has paid an excellent tribute to illustrious Robert Toombs, deceased. He was an active member of the Supreme Council from 1872 to 1880, and in his later years a communicant of the Methodist Episcopal church.—Voice of Masonry.

Zeredetha Lodge, Brooklyn, recently had among the visitors a Chinaman, a member of a lodge in the Celestial Empire. He is an intelligent man, and the master of twenty-five languages.

The Freemasons in Bombay, India, held their "Jamshed Noorze Festival" at Byculla recently. Upwards of a hundred Parsee, Hindoo, Mohammedan and European lodgemen were present, including Captain Morland, Grand Master of all Scottish Freemasonry in India. Hymns were sung in the Marathi and Hindustani languages, and a presentation, consisting of a rich electroplated tea and coffee set, a gold watch and chain, and cutlery, glass and china ware, was made to Darasha R. Chicharg, secretary to the Freemason's Joint Hall Company.

The richest lodge in the United States, per capita, is St. Andrew's Lodge, Boston. Its membership is limited to 26, and its property is valued at $30,000.

A woman's attachment to the G. A. R., called the "Society of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic," has issued a manifesto in which they say: "Our fathers, sons, and husbands have perfected an organization which demands the respect and admiration of the world. We, the inheritors of their glory, can do much toward keeping pure and unblemished that organization; and though we may not ask to join their inner, and to them holier circle, we can yet serve them and their interests as the picket guard on the outer lines."

Knights of Labor District Assembly, No. 101 of St. Louis, is to become a thing of the past. It is rapidly disintegrating and in a short time will cease to exist. The assembly included all the local assemblies of men employed on the Gould Southwest system of railroads, and on the authority of the executive committee the railway strike of last spring was ordered.

It is reported from Baltimore that Powderly has ordered all Knights of Labor assemblies to withdraw their delegates from federation of trades or trades assemblies. This action is said to be the result of the aggressive attitude of unions toward the knights.

The State Grange of Michigan opened its annual meeting Tuesday, at Lansing, the Grand Master was Governor Elect Luce, who was re-elected.

The Labor Tribune, of Pittsburgh, says: "The popular vote of the members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers on the proposition of General Master Workman Powderly to join the Knights of Labor, so far as heard from up to Saturday last, shows that 99 per cent are opposed to affiliation."

Great excitement has been created in the ranks of the Knights of Labor at Amsterdam, New York, by the publication in the Daily Democrat Dec. 16 of all the secrets of the order and the mode of initiation.

SPECIAL

HOLIDAY OFFER!

For December 1886 only!

To all who send $2.00 for the Cynosure for one year in advance we will send a copy of BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS, free!

BUSINESS.

OUR PARTNERS.

There are hundreds of places where only one Cynosure is taken. If the subscription list is enlarged in these places, it must be done by our resident partners.

If you need the enthusiasm of a crowd to enable you to push the Cynosure successfully, think of the companies and battalions of workers situated just as you are, and fighting the same kind of a fight. You are one of a battalion! God grant you victory in the good work, and at least one new subscriber from each post office.

Those who receive the Cynosure with this item marked, will understand that the subscription is paid for by some friend, and will be stopped when the time expires unless ordered to be continued.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Dec. 13 to Dec. 18 inclusive:

R. H. Shaw, J. W. Wood, C. E. Zeigler, J. A. Stegner, E. A. Whiting, A. Calhoun, E. H. Colling, F. M. Cude, C. C. Hayden, H. Fry, W. Richie, Mrs. H. Davis, W. S. Spooner, J. H. Wooster, J. C. Cole, M. H. Clark, Rev. G. R. Milton, J. W. Little, W. C. Wilson, J. E. Ross, W. W. Cheney, S. Wilder, A. Mayn, H. K. Waters, J. Stahl, G. Cutler, J. Augustine, T. D. Anderson, R. Hem-brough, Rev. A. H. Bennett, A. Merrill, Ed. Freeman, Mrs. M. B. Sherburne, J. H. Wilson, J. Westerlund, J. Beech, Mrs. S. G. Wilcox, J. Perkins, J. J. Miller.

D. NEEDHAM'S SONS
116 and 118 Dea.
born St., Chicago, Ill.
Red Clover Blossoms

and Fluid and Solid Extracts of the Blossoms. Bear blood purifier. Knows, Cures Cancer, Catarrh, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Whooping Cough, Constipation, Piles, etc. Send for circular. Mention the "Cynosure."

ROCKY MOUNTAIN GLOVES

Made from Fawn Skin Kid, a very durable and hand some material, unknown elsewhere. Prices from $1 to $1.50 for Common Length; $2.50 for Button Cuff. Fingert Gauntlets made to order for Ladies or Gents, every stitch silk. Postage paid. Also Indian Tan Leather Gloves, Moccasins, Buckskin Clothing (fringed and plain), Leggings, Moccasins, etc. Buckskin for sale. Samples of Leather with stitching free. Also Catalogue of hundreds of styles of Gloves and Leather Novelties, and directions for measurement. Discount to agents. Reference, Union Bank, Denver. Denver, Colorado.

REVISED "ODD-FELLOWSHIP" ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Khekekh (Ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate. A sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, authorities, showing the character and tenacity of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. B. Morgan. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. 16 cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers 75 cents per dozen. $1.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	71	@	76
No. 3.....			74
Winter No. 2.....			76 3/4
Corn—No. 2.....	28	@	31
Oats—No. 2.....			33 1/2
Barley—No. 2.....			12 1/2
Flour.....	2 00	@	5 00
Hay—Timothy.....	7 00	@	9 00
Meat per lb.....			8 1/2
Butter, medium to best.....	10	@	26
Cheese.....	06	@	13
Beans.....	80	@	1 50
Eggs.....	32	@	23
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 80	@	1 80
Clover.....	1 10	@	1 10
Broom corn.....	02 1/2	@	05 1/2
Potatoes.....	30	@	42
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	05	@	14
Lumber—Common.....	11 00	@	18 00
Wool.....	11	@	35
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 15	@	5 00
Common to good.....	1 50	@	4 00
Hogs.....	2 80	@	4 00
Sheep.....	2 75	@	4 75

NEW YORK.

Flour.....	3 20	@	5 50
Wheat—Winter.....			98 1/2
Spring.....			98 1/2
Corn.....	46 1/2	@	45 1/2
Oats.....	35	@	41
Mess Pork.....	10 00	@	11 00
Eggs.....			25
Butter.....	12	@	31
Wool.....	13	@	37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 50	@	4 35
Hogs.....	3 50	@	4 35
Sheep.....	1 50	@	4 35

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform
Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minister of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Suggestive Outline

BIBLE STUDIES

AND

BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,

Author (with S. R. Riggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as George F. Pentecost, A. Gordon, Horatio Bonar, William Lincoln, Henry Morison, J. H. Vincent, George C. Needham, Chas. M. Whiteley, D. L. Moody, E. C. Morse, J. W. Small, E. H. Brooks, etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.
Address,
W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Secretaries. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry and the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Forgery and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

After forty years' experience in the promotion of the interests of the United States and Foreign countries, the publishers of the Scientific American continue to act as solicitors for patents, caveats, trade-marks, copyrights, etc., for the United States and to obtain patents in Canada, England, France, Germany, and all other countries. Their experience is unequaled and their facilities ever improved. Drawings and specifications prepared and filed in the Patent Office on short notice. Terms reasonable. No charge for examination of models or drawings. Advice by mail free. Patents obtained through Munns & Co. are noted in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, which has the largest circulation and is the most influential newspaper of its kind published in the world. The advantages of such a notice every patentee understands. This large and splendidly illustrated newspaper is published WEEKLY at $3.00 a year, and is admitted to be the best paper devoted to science, mechanical inventions, engineering, works, and other departments of industrial progress, published in any country. It contains the names of all patentees and title of every invention patented each week. Try it four months for one dollar. All patents and titles of every invention patented each week. Address by mail free. If you have an invention to patent write to Munns & Co., 100 Broadway, New York. Handbook about patents mailed free.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,"
AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A
"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York Rite). Adoptive Masonry. Revised Odd-fellowship. Good Templars. The Temple of Honor. The United Sons of Industry. Knights of Pythias. The Grand United Order of Friendship. The Order of the Eastern Star. The Order of the Mystic Shrine. The Order of the B. O. E. F. The Order of the L. O. O. F. The Order of the M. W. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X. O. M. The Order of the Y. O. M. The Order of the Z. O. M. The Order of the A. O. M. The Order of the B. O. M. The Order of the C. O. M. The Order of the D. O. M. The Order of the E. O. M. The Order of the F. O. M. The Order of the G. O. M. The Order of the H. O. M. The Order of the I. O. M. The Order of the J. O. M. The Order of the K. O. M. The Order of the L. O. M. The Order of the M. O. M. The Order of the N. O. M. The Order of the O. O. M. The Order of the P. O. M. The Order of the Q. O. M. The Order of the R. O. M. The Order of the S. O. M. The Order of the T. O. M. The Order of the U. O. M. The Order of the V. O. M. The Order of the W. O. M. The Order of the X

HOME AND HEALTH.

HEADACHE.

A sick headache is oftentimes called a bilious headache, but this is incorrect; for a bilious headache there is a copious secretion of bile with yellow skin and jaundice, and when this is absent even if there be vomiting it is not a bilious headache. Sick headache results from imperfect digestion, and arises either in the stomach or intestines from the irritation of the nervous apparatus of the alimentary canal by the resulting depraved secretion. The nerves of the stomach are derived from an important nerve, the pneumogastric, which originates in the brain, passes downward and is distributed to the lungs and stomach, and any irritation in the latter organ may produce headache by sympathetic action.

The mucous membrane of the stomach in a healthy condition is of a pale color when at rest, but when food comes in contact with it the mechanical action induced by the friction and motion causes the blood vessels to dilate and the surface to become red. The secretion of gastric juices is effected by the state of the nervous system, and sudden mental emotion is able to stop it entirely. This it does through the pneumogastric nerve, for this controls the secretion of the gastric juice. Unwholesome food which disturbs digestion will cause acute dyspepsia in some persons, who are extremely prone to sick headaches; pain and uneasiness in the stomach, faintness, depression of spirits, lassitude or feverishness are the indications of an approaching sick headache.

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR HEADACHE.

We desire to call attention to a simple, and at the same time wonderfully efficient, treatment for many kinds of headache. We lay no claim to originality, nor do we know who the originator was, but having used it for a year or more, and in many cases with remarkable results, we feel disposed to give it our endorsement, and desire to make it more generally known. The remedy is nothing more nor less than a solution of the bi-sulphide of carbon. A wide-mouth glass-stoppered bottle is half filled with cotton or fine sponge, and upon this two or three drachms of the solution are poured. When occasion for its use occurs the mouth of the bottle is to be applied to the temple, or as near as possible to the seat of pain, so closely that none of the volatile vapor may escape, and retained there four or five minutes or longer. For a minute or so nothing is felt, then comes a sense of tingling, which in a few minutes—three or four usually—becomes rather severe, but which subsides almost immediately if the bottle be removed, and any redness of the skin that may occur will also quickly subside. It may be reapplied if necessary, several times in the day, and it generally acts like magic, giving immediate relief.

We believe this was the basis of a once popular nostrum. The class of headaches to which it seems especially adapted is that which may be grouped under the broad term of "nervous." Thus neuralgic, periodic and hysterical headaches, and even many kinds of dyspeptic headaches, are almost invariably relieved by it. True the relief of a mere symptom is quite another thing from the removal of the cause, yet no one who has seen the distress and even agony caused by severe and frequent recurring headaches (and who has not seen it?) but will rejoice to be able to afford relief in so prompt and simple a manner; besides it is sure to secure the hearty gratitude of the patient if he has suffered long. As to the modus operandi we have nothing more definite than a theory to offer, and that is that the vapor being absorbed through the skin produces a sedative effect upon the superficial nerves of the parts of which it is applied. We know by experiment that its influence is not due to its power as a counter-irritant. We, however, know that it does act, and if we do not clearly see in what way it acts, that is no more than can be said of several other remedies which are firmly established in professional favor and confidence.—Physicians' and Surgeons' Investigator.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 841 pages. In cloth, $1.00; 65¢ per dozen. Paper covers, 30¢; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Families are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming year. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We still send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian.....	$2 50
The American (Washington).....	2 50
Western Rural.....	3 00
The Missionary Review.....	3 00
Christian Herald N. Y.....	3 75
The Truth (St. Louis).....	2 50
Illustrated Christian Weekly.....	3 90
New York Witness.....	2 50
Union Signal.....	3 50
Christian Statesman (Phila.).....	2 00
The Interior.....	3 85
The Independent.....	4 25
The S. S. Times.....	3 50
Gospel in all Lands.....	3 50
The Nation.....	4 50
New York Tribune, Weekly.....	2 50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly.....	2 50
Chicago Inter Ocean, Weekly.....	2 50
Harper's Magazine.....	4 75
North American Review.....	5 25
The Century.....	5 75
Scientific American.....	4 25
Buds and Blossoms.....	2 10
Penny.....	2 35
Victor's Magazine.....	2 50
American Agriculturist.....	2 60

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for specialties.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

Talks

ON THE

Labor Troubles,

BY REV. C. C. BROWN.

The Danger—The Laborer's Grievance—The Laborer's Foë—The Laborer's Fallacy—The Laborer's Hope—Mind and Muscle—Co-Laborers.

TIMELY TALKS ON AN IMPORTANT SUBJECT.

The Papers Say of this Book:

"It is well to remind the world of the greatness of human brotherhood, but how to make the 'more general application of it?' 'Aye, there's the rub!' Our author contributes his little in that direction, and his voice and reasoning will reach some ears and perhaps touch some understandings and move some selfish hearts that are buttoned up very closely and hedged around by over much respectability and comfortable property."—Chicago Tribune.

"The writer does his work in a way remarkable, alike for its directness, its common sense, its impartiality, its lucidity and its force. He has no theories to support; he deals with facts as he finds them; he fortifies his assertions by arrays of demonstrative statistics. The work is among the best of the kind. It is not the best that we have seen. While it is scarcely possible for it to be put in the hands of all our wage-workers, we wish it could be read by every one of them."—Chicago Interior.

Extra Cloth 60c., Paper 30c.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

Berea College History

PP. 87, CLOTH, 40 CENTS.

The establishment of a College for the education of colored children and the white children of the mountaineers in a slave State at a time when the whole country was shaken by the discussion of abolition, was a sublime act of faith in God who "hath made of one blood all nations of men."

This is what REV. JOHN G. FEE did at Berea, Ky., and the friends of reform cannot spend 40 cents better than to send for this

HISTORY OF PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY, of faith tried, and of precious deliverances that read like a chapter from the book of Daniel.

DAKOTA ADMITTED

as well as all States and Territories into our Great Family of Readers. A great staff of new Western writers will specially adapt (during 1887) the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST to Western Agriculture, making it with recent additions and improvements, the recognized authority, as for forty-five years past, for all matters pertaining to Agriculture, Horticulture, etc., etc. The JUVENILE HEARTH AND HOUSEHOLD EXPANSES have been enlarged, and HUMBOLDT Exposures are to receive additional attention.

1,000 Original Illustrations.

Every issue of the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST contains nearly 100 original illustrations of animals, plants, new farm and household conveniences and appliances, out-door scenes, etc.

Splendid Engravings Free!!

HOMES OF OUR FARMER PRESIDENTS It is noteworthy that a majority of our Presidents were reared on farms, or retired from public life to rural scenes. The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is now publishing and sending free to all subscribers, an atlas of over 400,000 American Agriculturists (38 by 24 inches in size) of these Homes, together with special descriptive papers by James Parton, Donald G. Mitchell and other eminent living American authors. These engravings constitute a magnificent portfolio collection of ornaments for the walls of the peasant's home. Subscriptions for 1887 immediately forwarded are entitled to all the series, beginning in May.

Endorsed by the U. S. Government.

Vol. 8th, Tenth Census, U. S., says: "The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is especially worthy of mention, because of the remarkable success that has attended the unique and untiring efforts of its proprietors to increase the intelligence of the farmer. Its contents are duplicated every month for a German Edition, which also circulates widely."

Price, $1.50 a year; Single Numbers, 15c.

Balance of this year FREE to all subscribing immediately. Send for the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST the number, just out, 32-page Premium List, and Sample Proof of Engravings of "Homes of our Farmer Presidents," together with description by James Parton. Address

AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

DAVID W. JUDD, Pub., 751 Broadway, N. Y.

CANVASSERS WANTED EVERYWHERE. We will pay the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST with the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE for $2.50 per year, every person who immediately subscribes to receive the engravings free for next year and this year also.

"A THRILLING WARNING."

THE

Man Traps of the City.

BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons. It treats of
The Tiger and His Den.
Cups of Flame.
The Scarlet Sin.

Embezzlement.

The Devil's Printing Press.
Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that it discloses like melted lava from the crater of truth. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shown of their mark, robbed of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the prurient literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the prodigal is shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—Western Christian Advocate.

Price, postpaid, cloth bound, 75 cents.

Paper bound, 50 cents.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND FRIENDLY GREETINGS

Is a FORTY-PAGE, ILLUSTRATED, monthly family magazine edited by J. E. HALL, Halifax, N. S.

Price, 75 cents per year if prepaid.

Its columns are devoted to TEMPERANCE, MISSIONARY INTELLIGENCE, HOUSEHOLD HINTS, SHORT STORIES AND ILLUSTRATIONS, making 28 pages of reading matter, suitable and profitable for young and old, with an average of twelve illustrations in each number, this will give magazine of 40 pages monthly for 75 cents a year, and will, therefore, be one of the cheapest sold. Specimen copies sent for two sent stamps.

A $5 GOLD PIECE

will be given if you get 20 subscribers. "Buds and Blossoms" is endorsed by Christians and ministers of all denominations. One writes: "The cover has been a comfort and blessing to me. Every page is calculated to bring one nearer to the Lord." "We wish you ever-increasing success as you deserve." To see B. & B. is to want and to love." "It should be in every house." A record of Faith Work.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John O. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association,

221 West Madison St., Chicago.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR ILLUSTRATED.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN WORK"

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

Price 25 Cents.

For Sale by NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO.

The Christian's Secret

OR

A Happy Life.

28th THOUSAND.

Baptist Commendation.

"I delighted with this book. It reaches to the core of Christian experience, and is eminent practical in its teachings. It meets the doubts and difficulties of conscientious seekers after the bread and water of life, but whose efforts result only in alternate failure and victory. The author, without claiming to be a theologian, sends out the results of a happy and rich experience to help others into a happy Christian life."—Baptist Weekly.

Presbyterian Endorsement.

"The book is so truly and reverentially devout in its spirit that it dawns criticism. It contains so much that is sound and practical, so much that, if heeded, will make our lives better, happier and more useful, that the intelligent reader who really wishes to lead a life 'hid with Christ in God' can scarcely fail to derive profit from its perusal."—Interior.

Methodist Word of Promise.

"We have not for years read a book with more delight and profit. It is not a theological book. No effort is made to change the theological views of any one. The author has a rich experience, and tells it in a plain and delightful manner."—Christian Advocate.

United Brethren's Approval.

"We have seldom met with a more interesting volume, abounding throughout with apt illustrations, we have failed to find a dry line from title-page to final."—Religious Telescope.

Congregational Comment.

"It contains much clear, pungent reasoning and interesting incident. It is a practical and experiential lesson taught out of God's word, and is worthy of wide circulation."—Church of Christ.

This enlarged edition is a beautiful large 12mo volume of 240 pages.

Price, in cloth, richly stamped, 75 cts.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

SONGS

FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE AND SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—JO—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
22 W. Madison Street Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason—and especially by HIS WIFE. Set it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN BRIEF.

Edwin Lee Brown, of Chicago, president of the American Humane Society, commented upon the character of Mayor Carter Harrison, among other things saying: "Thieves, gamblers and scoundrels control the city and steal the ballot-boxes as well as stuff them. They were Democrats, and, though all Democrats were not thieves, all thieves were Democrats. Harrison associated with thieves and participated in the result of their thievery. They called him an honest man. Why not call him a thief, inasmuch as he was the consort of thieves? Harrison also divided with the gamblers. He is an old hypocritical thief. The thieves steal and Harrison gets his share from them." The sensitive Mayor has sued Brown for libel, placing the damages at some $200,000.

There are 700,000,000 cents in circulation. There was a time when, in certain sections of this country, small copper coins were unknown. Indeed, it is only within a few years that people on the Pacific coast have been using pennies. In the good old days a quarter dollar was the smallest coin, and for many years the dime was paid out with no expectation of change. The large use of cents shows the growth of small economies among the people. The very great demand for bills and coins of less denomination than five dollars is an evidence of the increased business activity to-day of the American people.

David Dudley Field thinks we have too many lawyers in this country. France has only one for every 4,792 of its population, Germany one for 6,466, while New York State has 11,000 lawyers, or one for every 455 men, women and children in the State. The excessive numbers of this one profession is doubtless because of the monopoly possessed by the legal fraternity of all legal positions in the United States. To fill any legislative or executive position it is a part of our unwritten law that you must be a lawyer. Mr. Field also calls attention to the verbosity of our legal documents. He says that every ordinary deed or indenture contains 950 words, of which 860 are absolutely superfluous. He says, also, that the people of the State of New York yearly pay $100,000 for recording this mass of needless words.

Of the 290,750 miles of railroad in the world no less than 274,016, or 60 per cent., are in English-speaking countries. The cost of railroads, as is well known, has been greatest in Great Britain, being there $205,842 per mile of roads; for the Belgian State railroads it is $123,986; for the French railroads, $124,642; for the German State railroads, $105,204; for the German private railroads, $17,877; for the Austro-Hungarian roads, $104,420. The cheapest system of Europe is the State railroads of Finland, $30,102; the other Russian railroads stand at $82,244, against $63,250 per mile for the railroads of the United States. The whole cost of the railroads of the world has been more than $24,000,000,000, which, however, is only about $24 per inhabitant. In this country the expenditure has been about $133 per inhabitant; in Great Britain, $107; in Germany, $47; in France, $57; in Austria-Hungary, $33; in Italy, $19; in Belgium, $41; in Sweden, $25; in Spain, $29; in Russia, $14; in Canada, $89. In this country we will build over 6,000 miles of road this year against 32,000 miles last year.

Twenty-one countries have an aggregate of over 5,861 million dollars in gold and silver, of which $3,274,367,000 (about 56 per cent) is gold; and $2,587,397,000 or 44 per cent is silver. Of the gold, four countries have very nearly three-quarters, viz: France, $873,540,000; United States, $406,197,000; Great Britain, $387,683,000; Germany, $342,720,000. Of the silver, four countries have over five-sixths (84 per cent) that is $2,104,000,000, viz: British India, $1,027,000,000 (40 per cent); France, $598,000,000 (32 1/2 per cent); United States, $265,000,000 (10 per cent); and Germany, $214,000,000 (8 per cent). Of total gold and silver, France has 1,471 million dollars; India, 1,021 millions; United States, 871 millions; Great Britain, 680 millions. If we include with Great Britain, British India, the figures would stand: Great Britain, 1,707 millions; France, 1,471 millions; United States, 871 millions.

Others were very near to secure the advantage of the best class of purchasers, who had it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!
"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and for the purpose designed, as valuable discovery as vaccination."
THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or saline on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cures. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold!

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

Box E. L. HASTINGS, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchitis and Catarrh of the Throat and Lungs. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies." E. L. HASTINGS, 88 West 40th St., New York.

Mr. H. G. TAYLOR, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered three years from a severe case of Catarrh, coughing incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is quiet, my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.

Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.

Mail Office: 1529 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR Illustrated.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN or SECRET Work."

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

PRICE 25 CENTS.

For Sale by

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SONGS OF PILGRIMAGE.

A HYMNAL

FOR THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

Probably the most extensive collection of hymns in the English language.

It contains 1533 hymns, with music for them all.

It contains 344 tunes from 112 known authors.

It contains old hymns you have heard of.

It contains old times your grandmother sung.

It contains hymns you learned when a child.

It contains old times you have wanted so long.

It contains new tunes you have never heard.

It contains plenty of solid standard music.

It contains numerous grand old minor tunes.

It contains some 500 hymns you never saw.

It contains 131 hymns from Watts.

It contains 149 of Wesley's hymns.

It contains over 300 new hymns from H. L. H.

It contains hymns for all occasions.

It contains hymns of the blessed hope.

It contains old hymns from the Latin and Greek.

It contains hymns from the French and German.

It contains hymns from the Welsh and Danish.

It contains hymns for the old and young.

It contains hymns for sick and well.

It contains 528 pages of hymns and music.

It contains the names of authors and composers.

It contains the dates of both hymns and tunes.

It contains an index of subjects.

It is printed from type like this line.

YET YOU CAN CARRY IT IN YOUR POCKET!

Price in flexible cloth, $1.00, cloth extra, $1.25.

Address orders to the publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.,

OR TO HIS OFFICE.

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Col. Wm. A. Morgan.

By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how the men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

Seeds or Books Free With This Paper!

To any of our subscribers or any other person we will send, for only $3.00.

The Christian Cynosure

AND THE

FARM, FIELD AND STOCKMAN,

both one year, and in addition we will present the subscriber with his choice of either 20 WELL FILLED PACKETS OF SEEDS are mostly new and rare novelties, the object being to introduce new and improved varieties. There are over 100 varieties to select from, comprising the rarest flowers and vegetables, and new varieties of thoroughbred grain, either imported from the best special sources of Europe or purchased from the originator in this country, especially for this distribution. Twenty packets of seeds of like quality cannot be bought at retail for less than $1.50.

The Seeds

The Farm, Field and Stockman is doubtless well known to our readers. Since its present publishers, Gen. C. H. Howard and Jas. W. Wilson, took it in hand it has been second to none of its class. It is an ably edited, neatly printed, reliable, 4-column, 16-page, agricultural and family weekly, and a staunch advocate of farmers' rights—a paper every farmer wants. Price $1.50 a year.

Send the money to this office, and we will promptly forward the paper and an illustrated descriptive list of the above seeds, with full directions for planting the latter, from which a selection can be made; or, if you want to make the selection first, a list will be sent you free on application to the Farm, Field and Stockman, Chicago. This is indeed an unparalleled offer.

Mental Gymnastics; OR Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;

THE STUDENT, His Lessons;

THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test.

The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under his system than even while he was young—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN—ADVANCE.

We cordially commend it to all persons of falling memory as the best book obtainable on that subject.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

WHAT IS NATIONAL REFORM?

A RIGHT ANSWER TO THIS LEADING QUESTION INVOLVES THE SOLUTION OF

SOCIAL, MORAL AND POLITICAL PROBLEMS.

Can the Question be Answered?

SEND $3 FOR ONE YEAR'S SUBSCRIPTION TO THE

CHRISTIAN NATION.

252 BROADWAY,

NEW YORK,

AND

READ AND LEARN FOR YOURSELF.

BESIDES ITS INTELLIGENT AND POPULAR DISCUSSIONS OF THESE QUESTIONS OF INTEREST TO EVERY MAN AND WOMAN, THE CHRISTIAN NATION IS

A Home Paper in the Fullest Sense.

NATIONAL SUICIDE, AND ITS PREVENTION.

BY OSCAR F. LUMBY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumby's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield, "E'en his failings lean to virtue's side."

—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumby is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticize. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHEROP.

Introduction by REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.

(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army, who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond," some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of the life that now is, and to give comfort and help as to the life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the old man a burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and beautiful draught for every aged traveler to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,

ELDER DAVID BERNARD,

CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and

PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

MORGAN MONUMENT.

20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY

candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The bill to repeal the civil service law, reported adversely by Senator Hawley from the Committee on Civil Service during the first session of the present Congress, has been re-introduced by Senator Vance.

Senator Conger, from the Committee on Postoffices, reported favorably the bill recently passed by the House to extend the free delivery system to towns having a population of 10,000 or a gross annual postal revenue of $10,000.

The Senate bill providing for the admission of Washington Territory into the union of States has been taken up by the House Committee on Territories, and amended by adding a section including Montana Territory within the scope of the bill.

The Senate, in executive session has confirmed the nomination of Arthur L. Thomas, of Pennsylvania, to be a member of the Board of Registration and Election of Utah. Mr. Thomas is Secretary, and has labored steadily with Judge Zane and Attorney Dickson against the Mormon cause.

COUNTRY.

Sylvester Granda, arrested at Kansas City for complicity in the murder of Dr. Haddock at Sioux City, made a confession Friday, alleging that John Arensdorf fired the fatal shot, and that another prominent prohibitionist was also to be attacked.

The whaling bark Atlantic was wrecked early Friday morning near San Francisco, the ship going to pieces in a few minutes. Of the forty-two persons on board, but the captain and ten others are, at this writing, known to be saved. Vessel and outfit were valued at $25,000, and the insurance but $5,000. It is stated that the timbers of the bark were so rotten that they could be knocked to pieces by the blows of a hammer, and that most of the sailors were drunk.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road is making arrangements to distribute, gratis, the daily weather predictions, and for the display of signal service flags at the principal stations on its system.

Four acres in the northwestern section of Shenandoah, Pa., settled two to four feet, Friday, partially wrecking fifty dwellings and causing the wildest alarm among the people. The financial loss is between $50,000 and $75,000.

Mr. Gratiot Washburne, son of the Hon. E. B. Washburne, of this city and minister to France in 1870, dropped dead Friday in a Louisville hotel.

The engine of an express train on the Denver & Rio Grande road struck a cow Friday morning near the bridge spanning the Gunnison River, and rolled down the precipice into the river, the engineer and fireman being killed. The coaches remained upon the track and none of the passengers were injured. The accident was near Gunnison, Col.

A natural gas explosion at Kokomo, Ind., Friday, injured thirty-five persons, twelve of whom are in a serious condition.

Early Thursday morning, near Carnesville, Ga., Frank Sanders murdered John Bewling, his wife, and three children, and then fired the premises. His purpose was to secure $40 which he knew was in the house, and then decamp. Sanders was captured by citizens, and it is learned was burned to death.

The Calumet Hotel, at Pipestone, Minn., owned by Mr. Brockway, of Chicago, was burned Wednesday morning. Rev. A. S. Orcutt, a Baptist clergyman, was killed by falling walls, and David McCullough and two boys were dangerously wounded. The financial loss is $45,000.

The Dow liquor tax law in all its features was declared constitutional Thursday by the Ohio Supreme Court, the two Democratic judges dissenting.

George D. Hart, workingman's candidate, was elected Mayor of Lynn, Mass., over the citizens' nominee by a plurality of 634.

About 11 o'clock Tuesday night the steamboat J. M. White, one of the finest and largest boats plying on the Mississippi River, was burned while lying at a landing known as the Blue Store, about six miles above Bayou Sara, Louisiana. There were on board eighteen or more cabin passengers, including eight ladies; a number, exactly how many is unknown, of colored passengers; many deck passengers, and a crew of about seventy men. It is believed that forty or more of the unfortunate people lost their lives.

FOREIGN.

John Dillon, member of Parliament for East Mayo; William O'Brien, editor of United Ireland; Matthew Harris, member of Parliament for East Galway, and David Sheehy, member of Parliament for South Galway, were arrested Thursday in the town of Loughrea, County Galway, Ireland, charged with conspiracy to defraud. The prisoners have been acting as trustees in conducting the "plan of campaign" and have been receiving from dissatisfied tenants the reduced rents refused by landlords or landlords' agents. At the time of making the arrests the police took away from Mr. Dillon £80 which he had just received in trust from tenants.

"The London Times says, 'The government must show that they, and not a secret conclave sitting in Dublin or New York, are the government of Ireland, and in doing so they will be supported by every subject of the Queen who values the law as a guarantee of freedom.'"

The development of the Tory coercive policy has been checked by a strong division of opinion within the British Cabinet. Lord Ashbourne insists upon instant action based upon the action of the Irish judges that the anti-rent campaign is illegal. He favors the adoption of the severest measures, treating the National Leaguers as engaged in an illegal conspiracy. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, backed by Lord Randolph Churchill, demands a mild enforcement of ordinary law.

England has decided to reduce the Egyptian standing army to 10,000, and the army of occupation to 5,000, thus largely reducing the cost of armament to the Egyptian government.

In the Italian Chamber of Deputies, the Minister of War, after reading the military budget, declared that Italy is now in a position to mobilize and victual 400,000 troops, not counting the reserves. The work of providing the troops with repeating rifles has already begun and 1,000,000 of them will be in use by 1888, though at present there was nothing to threaten the peace of Italy. It was useless to ignore the warlike indications in the East. He believes that Italy will be well prepared in the event of an outbreak of hostilities.

A GENEROUS OFFER!

Four Entertaining Books

GIVEN AWAY.

To each subscriber for the CYNOSURE who sends in a $2.00 subscription for one year in advance on or before

JANUARY 1st, 1887.

See Special Offer Below.

GEX. O. O. HOWARD, The Salient Characteristics and Leading Events of His Life, illustrating his Career as a Christian Soldier. By Laura C. Holloway. 12mo, 235 pp., paper.

OUT OF EGYPT. Bible Readings on the Book of Exodus. By George F. Pentecost, D. D. 12mo, 214 pp., paper.

"To him who wishes a spicy, lively set of notes on the events of Exodus, both readable and attractive, this book will be most acceptable."—Louisville Christian Advocate.

"Many fresh, interesting thoughts are to be found on almost every page."—Toronto Globe.

WYCLIFFE. Patriot and Reformer. "The Morning Star of the Reformation." By John Laird Wilson. 12mo, 347 pp., paper.

"This is the fullest, fairest, most accurate and most connected memoir of the great reformer of reformers to be found anywhere within the compass of so small a volume. Nothing essential is omitted, and scarcely anything extraneous is permitted to make its appearance. The author has used his authorities with an independent judgment, and has never allowed himself to be seduced into the merely pictorial."—William M. Taylor, D. D.

WORKING PEOPLE and THEIR EMPLOYERS. By Washington Gladden. 12mo, 241 pp., paper.

"This book we cordially commend. It is sound and economic in principle and Christian in spirit."—N. Y. Examiner.

Special Offer.

To any one who will send us $2.00, the subscription price of the CYNOSURE, on or before January 1st, 1887, we will send the paper one year and THE ABOVE FOUR BOOKS FREE! The retail price of the books alone, in paper, is $1.00; in cloth, $4.00. Don't miss the chance! Accept quickly!

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended" Portent and the "Amended" Haul. The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grip, knock, etc., by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 311 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

THE PHYSICIAN'S FAVORITE!

A predigested, non-irritating, easily assimilated food indicated in all weak and inflamed conditions of the digestive organs, either in infants or adults.

It has been the positive means of saving many lives, having been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

The Most Nourishing, Most Palatable, Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

150 MEALS for an Infant for $1.00. EASILY PREPARED. At Druggists, 25c., 50c., $1.00.

A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," sent free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

EMPLOYMENT GOOD SALARY AND ALL EXPENSES PAID. At home or to travel; date which preferred, also salary wanted. SLOAN & CO., Manufacturers and Wholesale Dealers, 24 George St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

—Florida! Florida!—

A package of Curiosities, containing Florida Grey Moss, Alligator Teeth, Sea Bunnies, and Shells, will be sent to any one on receipt of 25 cents. Festoons of the "Beautiful Grey Moss," for decorating churches and private homes. Address H. M. WOODRUFF, Winter Park, Fla. (Jeweler and Dealer in Florida Curiosities.)

LE PAGES LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Merchants. Their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL London '81. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of dealer who does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN.

Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

LADIES TO INTRODUCE

our Ladies' Journal in the best homes. We make you the following Liberal Offer: We will send the paper, postpaid, from Sept. 1 to Jan. 1, 1887, on receipt of ONLY 10 CENTS.

AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING

Is decidedly a ladies' journal. Published monthly, handsomely illustrated, filled with original Stories, Poems, with departments on Home Cooking, Art, Recipes, Eticac, Artistic Needle Work, Window Gardening, Flowers, Mothers' Corner, Children's Nook, Household Pets and all Home Subjects. By many of our best writers. Subscription price, 50 cents per year. Samples free.

THE P. B. Combined Tracing Wheel and Scissors. An indispensable article for every woman, made of the best English steel, hand-forged, oil-tempered. Every pair warranted. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. Or we will send the scissors to any one that will send two subscribers to AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING and $1.00. American Housekeeping Co., 143 LaSalle street, Chicago.

EUTOCIA A Book for every woman.

Introductory preface by EBERET GUERNSEY M. D. This preface by Dr. Geo. E. SHIPMAN, and chapters on the care and management of infants by the same experienced author. Mothers, Wives and Daughters. Not a compilation of other works and clippings, but the careful, practical study of Mrs. Dr. E. G. Cook, for over a quarter of a century. It is ENDORSED by the Ministers, Physicians, Daily, Weekly, Religious and Medical Press.

COMPLETE LADIES GUIDE.

It treats fully on easy child-bearing, and health of children. In short a complete manual for the household. Nailed free on receipt of price where we have no Agents. Alphabetical table of contents. Send a ready sale for it. Price $1.00. Address the publisher, H. M. WOODRUFF, Winter Park, Fla. ARCADE PUB. CO., 143 La Salle St., Chicago.

OUR LATEST BOOK. HARVEST FOR THE HOLIDAYS. NOW IN PRESS.

WITH PICTURES.

Canvasser's outfit now ready. New, original, and taking. Heavy, super-calendered paper, superb binding, new and instructive illustrations. Prices low, to meet the times. Discounts large, to meet the agents. Sample pages and full particulars sent free on application. Our territories are open for this and other exclusive territory to both general and local agents. Complete canvasser's outfit, $1.00. General Agents wanted for Colorado, Dakota, Kansas, Iowa, Pennsylvania, New York, and Southern States. For discounts and full particulars, address THE J. E. WHITE PUBLISHING CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

Fac Simile Series.

BIBLES!

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years. 100 styles, $22 to $950. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 46 pp., 40c. free.

PIANOS.

The Improved Method of Stringing, introduced and perfected by MASON & HAMLIN, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Piano-forte construction. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO

154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago, 46 E. 14th St., (Union Sq.), N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED

every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chinese Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 235 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED

in every city and town for Ladies' Favorite Tracing Wheel. Will sell in every household. Two dozen mailed on receipt of 25c. Sample $1.00. NOVELTY WHEEL CO., 24 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Sent by mail, free. Sample $1.00. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

CATARRH SAMPLE FREE

So great is our faith we can cure you, dear sufferer, we will mail enough to convince. Free. R. S. LACROIX & CO., Newark, N. J.

FLORIDA.

ACADEMY AND COLLEGE,

at DeLand, Florida.

A first-class academy for both sexes. Five Courses College Preparatory. Higher English, Normal, Business, Industrial, Drawing, First-class Art and Music Departments. Fine new Dormitory Building, enabling us to furnish board and tuition at reasonable rates. The purpose of this institution is to give, in the delightful climate of Florida, as thorough and liberal an education as can be secured in the best New England Schools. DeLAND COLLEGE will also receive students of high scores, prepared to enter the Freshman Class. Send for catalogue to J. F. FORBES, President, DeLand, Florida; or H. A. DeLand, Fairport, N. Y.

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS & COPYRIGHTS

Obtained, and all other business in the U. S. Patent Office attended to for MODERATE FEES. Send MODEL OR DRAWING. We advise as to patentability free of charge; and we make NO CHARGE UNLESS WE OBTAIN PATENT. We refer here to the Postmaster, the Sup't. of Money Order Div., and to officials of the U. S. Patent Office. For circulars, advice, terms and references to actual clients in your own State or county, write to

G. A. SNOW & CO.,

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

JOYFUL News for Boys and Girls! Young and Old! A NEW INVENTION just patented for Home use! Drell and Scroll Sawing, Turning, Boring, Drilling, Grinding, Polishing, Reversing Cutting. Price $5 to $50. Send 6 cents for 100 pages.

EPHRAIM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XIX., No. 15.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1886.

WHOLE No. 870.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. L. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.
SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR.....$3.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.....$1.50.

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REPORT NEWS:
The New Year..... 8	Knoxville before the Con-
George B. Cheever..... 8	vention; Truth's Watch-
Death of General Logan... 8	fires Aglow in Iowa; The
Notes and Comments.... 9	Close of the Wisconsin
CONTRIBUTIONS:	Campaign; The Ohio
The Eventide of Rev. Dr.	Meeting; The Elmhurst
Cheever..... 1	Meeting; Notes from
Washington after the	the General Agent..... 4,5
Sumter Bombardment... 2	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
Haytian Cannibals..... 3	BIBLE LESSON..... 6
The Two Brotherhoods	Secret Societies Condemned 7
(Poetry)..... 3	HOME CIRCLE..... 10
Thoughts about the Mis-	TEMPERANCE..... 11
sion Fields..... 3	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
SELECTED:	LODGE NOTES..... 13
The Wesleyan Boycotied.. 4	LECTURE LIST..... 13
No More Secrecy..... 4	BUSINESS..... 13
CORRESPONDENCE:	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
The United Brethren Com-	THE N. C. A..... 14
munion; National Re-	CHURCH VS. LODGE..... 14
form from New York to	IN BRIEF..... 15
Washington; Pitt and	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
Point..... 5,6	MARKETS..... 16

THE EVENTIDE OF REV. DR. CHEREVER.

BY REV. HENRY T. CHEREVER.

GEORGE BARRELL CHEREVER was born in Hallowell, Me., April 17, 1807; second son of Charlotte Barrell, of York, and Nathaniel Cheever, of Salem, Mass. His father was a printer and publisher, founder of the American Advocate and General Advertiser; and through the book-store to which the son had free access, he became an early devourer of books. His grandfather was Nathaniel Cheever, of Salem, of whom it is recorded in a volume of the Historical Transactions of Massachusetts, that his was the first blood shed in the Revolution; he being one of a party of Provincials who resisted a company of British Regulars sent from Boston by Gov. Thos. Gage to seize the Salem powder-mill, just before hostilities began between the colonists and the mother country. At a certain bridge near to Salem the resistance was so stout that Mr. Cheever received the thrust of a British bayonet.

George was educated at Hallowell Academy and Bowdoin College, Brunswick, being of the class of 1825, to which belonged the poet Longfellow, the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, Congressman Jonathan Cilley, the historian J. S. C. Abbott, U. S. Senator J. W. Bradbury, and Patrick Henry Greenleaf, D. D. He studied for the ministry at Andover under the instruction of Prof. Moses Stuart and Drs. Robinson, Wood, Murdock, and Ebenezer Porter.

While in college and the theological seminary he began authorship by frequent contributions to the U. S. Literary Gazette and the American Monthly Magazine, and compiled the popular "American Common-place Books of Prose and Poetry." He also edited the "Select Works of Archbishop Leighton," with a much admired critique on his life, writings, and character; and "Studies in English Poetry for the Schools." Articles from his pen appeared in the North American Review on "Lowth's Hebrew Poetry," and in other periodicals, on "The Genius of Edmund Burke," and a deprecatory essay on the "Removal of the Indians" in review of "The Letters of William Penn," (Jeremiah Kverts). On leaving the seminary he preached as substitute for absent pastors at Newburyport and the Essex St. church, Boston, in connection with the evangelical labors of Charles G. Finney; and was finally settled over the Howard St. church, Salem, in 1833. His fervent and impressive ministry there is remembered with deepest interest by some who survive to this present, by more who "have fallen on sleep."

The writer of this notice has frequently heard his discourses referred to by men now in the vale of years, as having made a powerful impression upon their minds. Conscience and Christ were his recurring themes; and his appeals to innate ideas and intuitions, with reasonings from the nature of things, "made his hearers solemn and thoughtful over themselves, and given to feeling after a Saviour, if haply they might find him."

Settled in a city where the Unitarian unfaith was predominant he early engaged with enthusiasm in defence of "the faith once delivered to the saints," beginning with an address at the religious celebration of the fourth of July in Salem, entitled, "Worldly Principles and Maxims as they Appear in the Light of Divine Truth." A copy of this remarkable, wide-reaching address with its copious notes, is before the writer; and it is an interesting point in psychology to observe how the great seed-thoughts and principles of many subsequent discourses on the temperance, anti-slavery, anti-popey, Sabbath, social, and political reforms, all had their bedding and basis potentially here. The sharp criticism and controversy evoked by this extraordinary production led to a series of spirited articles in the public press of Salem under the caption, "Cudworth Defended and Unitarianism Delineated," also to divers controversial papers in The Spirit of the Pilgrims, The Quarterly Observer, and Christian Spectator, and to a pungent letter to the conductors of the Christian Examiner, headed "The Course and System of Unitarians Plainly and Solemnly Surveyed."

GEORGE B. CHEREVER.

Mr. Cheever early entered the lists as a champion of the temperance reform, aiming at the root of the evil, and striking powerfully at distilleries, of which there were no less than four in the immediate vicinity of Salem, that produced 500,000 gallons annually of New England rum. He wrote an imaginative article for the Salem Landmark under the guise of a dream with dramatic accessories and machinery, entitled, "Inquire at Amos Giles's Distillery." This at once flashed through the country at large, was caught up and pictured by the artists, and created a commotion in Salem and vicinity, the like of which had not been known since the days of witchcraft. Its publication was immediately followed by a nocturnal attack upon the Landmark office, and by a personal savage assault on the author at mid-day, in the public street, by the foreman of a Salem distillery. This was succeeded by an indictment of the author for libel upon the owner of the distillery, and his speedy trial and sentence to thirty days in the Salem jail, notwithstanding the support of very able counsel and the "absence of proof that the article was written with any malicious or injurious intention whatever." He was there confined in the cell next to that occupied by one of the murderers of White, in whose trial Webster made his celebrated plea. This whole affair, together with his exhaustive defence before Chief Justice Shaw in abatement of judgment for his having shown up the pernicious business of distilling, and a similar arraignment of brewing by his widely circulated story of "Deacon Jones' Brewery," gave great notoriety to the author and made an era in the temperance reform.

Soon after serving out his sentence he had leave of absence from his people for a voyage to Europe, and became correspondent for a year from Spain and the Orient, for the New York Observer. Returning, he was at once invited to the pastorate of the Allen St. Presbyterian church, New York, in 1839, where he delivered the celebrated lectures on the Pilgrim's Progress, and on Hierarchical Despotism, defending the principles of the Puritans—"a church without a bishop, and a state without a king." He also maintained a public debate with J. L. O'Sullivan, Esq., for successive evenings in the old Broadway Tabernacle upon Capital Punishment, proving its right, obligation, and expediency, from Scripture, reason, the nature of things, and the history of mankind. These, together with a volume under the name of "God's Hand in America," showing a governing and retributive providence among the nations, were at that time given to the press.

His health becoming impaired by exhaustive labors in the pulpit, on the platform, and in the press, he revisited Europe for recreation as correspondent of the New York Evangelist in 1844, and gave the result of his travels to the public in volumes entitled, "Wanderings of a Pilgrim under the Shadow of Mont Blanc and Jung Frau," issued in repeated editions both in this country and Great Britain. Returning after an absence of nearly two years he became associated in the editorship of the Evangelist. At the same time he yielded to the overtures of personal friends and coadjutors and united in the formation of the Church of the Puritans in New York, which proved such an impregnable fortress of Freedom in the times that tried men's souls after its stately walls were providentially reared on Union Square in 1846. Soon after this he became associated with the New York Independent, as a contributor, along with Leonard Bacon, Richard S. Storrs, J. P. Thompson and Joshua Leavitt, who, over their several initials, gave it the richest results of their independent thinking, at a time when its merchant proprietors tersely informed their Southern buyers and their pro-slavery Northern backers that "they were selling their goods, not their principles."

This period was one of great spiritual activity and productiveness. Beside numerous literary lectures, special discourses, and the exactions of pulpit and parish, he carried through the press, "Powers of the World to Come," "The Hill Difficulty and Other Allegories," "Windings of the River of the Water of Life," "Voices of Nature to Her Foster-child, the Soul of Man," "Voyage to the Celestial Country," "The Journal of the Pilgrims," "Lectures on Cowper," "The Right of the Bible in Common Schools," "God Against Slavery and the Duty of the Pulpit to Rebuke It."

When the repeal of the Missouri compromise by Congress came, the Fugitive Slave Law, the Kansas-Nebraska Bill, and finally in 1857 the Dred-Scott Decision of the Supreme Court, denying the right of Congress to prohibit slave-holding in the Territories of the Union, and proclaiming it as the doctrine of our Revolutionary fathers that "the negro had no rights that white men were bound to respect," the thunders of the pulpit of the Puritans was heard, and its protracted peals reverberated through the political heavens. All over the land its voice was heard through the Monday metropolitan press, reporting its burning words, as from one "of the old Hebrew prophets risen from the dead." The arraignment of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, out of the Scriptures, in the name of Jehovah, was terrific but unanswerable. It was whispered and even published in the New York Observer that the preacher at Union Square had gone mad, and that his proper place was the lunatic asylum. But he held on with a lofty courage and tenacity, level-headed, and sublime, his feet unmovable upon the Word of God, which he wielded with a majesty and might that gave his hearers a new revelation of the power of the Bible and its richness of resource to godly ministers and reformers in combating the sins and evils of the times.

Not all the church, however, could bear it; or the stand taken by the pastor in defence of John Brown, and in the hospitality given to the radical Church Anti-Slavery Society, whose anniversaries were held in the Church of the Puritans; or its position of non-fellowship with slave-holders, sustained by the pastor. Aided from outside an effort was made to dislodge and silence the preacher by cutting off supplies; and a number withdrew from the church. Early, therefore, in the summer of 1860 Dr. Cheever went to Great Britain with a commission from his church to represent its position to British Christians in regard to emancipation in America, and to procure co-operation and assistance in holding its place. In his absence an ex-parte council held in May, 1861, after hearing the statement of certain disaffected and suspended members of the Church of the Puritans, recommended that the fellowship of the Congregational churches in this country be withdrawn from said church. This was followed by a recommendation at the annual meeting of the Church Anti-Slavery Society in Boston, May 29, 1861, "to all Congregational pastors and churches to disregard the advice of said ex-parte council, to regard the Church of the Puritans as a sister church in affliction, and to regard the action of said council as erroneous, dangerous, and unscriptural."

On motion of Lewis Tappan it was also resolved: "That we highly approve of the manly and Christian efforts made by the Rev. Dr. Cheever, during his present sojourn in Great Britain, in advocating the Christian Anti-Slavery movement in this country, and urging also upon the British public the duty and wisdom of not recognizing the Southern Confederacy; and we rejoice that God has raised up and sustained that eminent and beloved brother, to vindicate the cause of righteousness in his own country and in other nations." Rev. Wm. Goodell, in successive numbers of the Principia, reviewed in a masterly manner the "result" of the ex-parte council here referred to, and proved its contrariety to the genius and principles and usages of Congregationalism, and the conformity of the church and its pastor to the same.

In the summer of 1861 Dr. Cheever returned to rehearse in the pulpit his mission to Great Britain, to resume the moral war with slavery, and to prove and apply his interpretations of God's will and word by the stern events of actual war. He preached also in the Senate Chamber and Representatives' Hall, Washington, at different times on "The Rights of the Colored Race to Citizenship and Representation;" and was admitted to a hearing by the President conjointly with Rev. Messrs. Goodell and Joselyn ("Prime Ministers of the Almighty," as Lincoln archly called them) just prior to the issuing of his memorable Emancipation Proclamation. At the same time he put to press an elaborate and exhaustive volume of four hundred and eighty pages, entitled "The Guilt of Slavery and the Crime of Slave-holding Demonstrated from the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures;" the substance of which had previously appeared by instalments in the Bibliotheca Sacra.

The necessity of toning public sentiment and of securing reconstruction on principles of absolute right and justice continued, and up to the year 1867 when he closed his pastorate, still sermon after sermon, and pamphlet after pamphlet were issued on different phases of public affairs, bearing upon the rights of the Freedmen and the duty of the nation to its wards. Most of them were first printed in the columns of the Principia, which was under the editorship of the veteran journalist, Rev. Wm. Goodell.

Since that date, Dr. Cheever has retired from the active ministry, having settled in Englewood, New Jersey, whence he has issued from time to time forcible applications of Divine truth to passing events and errors of the day, including two volumes upon Inspiration and the Internal Evidence of Christianity, under the titles, "Faith, Doubt and Evidence," and "God's Time-Piece for Man's Eternity." He holds with Spurgeon and Moody to the plenary and verbal inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, and that if preachers will have power with God and man, they must take the whole Bible as the Word of God. "The hiding of his power" from the beginning of his ministry has been in his personal and devout grasp of the Bible and the strong individuality with which he has asserted its truths and lessons, and its right to reign in the state, the school, the family, and the souls of men, together with his life-long familiarity with the English literature of the age of King James' Version. It was his classmate Longfellow who said that the secret studies of an author were the sunken piers upon which was to rest the bridge of his fame, spanning the dark waters of oblivion. They were out of sight, but without them no superstructure could stand secure.

As a hymnologist Dr. Cheever has contributed to devout literature some of the sweetest subjective hymns in our English tongue, which will be repeated and sung, as the simple breathings of penitence and pity, long after their author shall have joined the choir above.

He has lived to have it frankly said to him by brethren with hoary heads who differed so widely upon the Quæstio Vexatissima of slavery and how to dispose of it, "You were right while we were wrong. It was you that was sane; we were the insane." He would seem to be the man above all others to have written the history of the conflict with American slavery from the orthodox standpoint, on the side of God. Himself making history in his providential position and relations, the materials he must have accumulated in connection with his own labors and those of his strong-minded and patient associate of the Principia gone before, cannot be otherwise than immense. Into whose hands will they be likely to fall?

It was not in the Divine decrees that the overthrow of proud American slavery should be the peaceful achievement of the American church, as Emancipation in the British West Indies was the glorious consummation of British Christianity. But honor be to the men of God who in his name charged the guilt of slavery and the crime of slave-holding upon the consciences of the church, rescued the Scriptures from its sanction and defence, rolled the burden of its suppression by moral and legal means upon the Christian churches, and strove to save the nation from expiating its sin with blood, by urging timely repentance and national emancipation at the command of God. Few of those moral heroes now survive; and of him whose name heads this article be it reverently said,

SERVIS IN COELUM REDEAT!

THE TIMES OF WAR AND RECONSTRUCTION.

REMINISCENCES BY HON. S. C. POMEROY.

WASHINGTON AFTER THE SUMTER BOMBARDMENT.

As heretofore stated, the State of Kansas had been admitted into the Union, and its Senators elected in time to reach Washington, on Saturday, the 13th day of April, 1861, the day Fort Sumter surrendered.

It is also in evidence, that Mr. Seward, Mr. Chase, and, indeed, none of Mr. Lincoln's Cabinet, or the chief executive himself, had anticipated any immediate conflict of arms, if any at all. But the guns in Charleston harbor awoke many, perhaps all, to an apprehension, at least, of such a result. The Kansas Senators, as well as Kansas men, had seen and suffered just enough to assure them that there could possibly be no other result; and the inspiring victories they had achieved in the border field led them at once to accept war, even at the center of Federal power. They had previously felt the Federal arm supporting slavery and the Slave Code. Now a great change had taken place. New executive officers had been chosen. Freedom, instead of slavery, had been elevated upon the American standards.

The way was at once clear to our minds to accept the war, and fight it out. In their chosen territorial field they had been defeated, with the Government at their backs; and every appointee instructed to sustain the Slave Code, made by border invasion, and enforced upon the settlers of Kansas.

As was most natural, under these circumstances, the Kansas men organized, on the next day after their arrival, a volunteer military company called "The Frontier Guards." My colleague, General Lane, was chosen the captain. I enlisted as a private. Over 300 men were enrolled—all were officered by our own men, and equipped by the Government.

These were moments of peril. Washington had been stripped of forces that should have been left for her defense; Virginia rebels were then organizing and drilling their forces for the capture of the Government; and Mr. Lincoln himself was without a guard for the Executive Mansion! He had that evening called in a captain of one of the Washington companies that had made a showy appearance, as his guard, upon Inauguration day, a few weeks previous. He asked him, "Sir, if ordered to defend the city and public property here from armed men from Alexandria and Virginia, can you depend upon your men to fire in their faces?"

Said this captain, "I fear not. They have too many friends there."

So Mr. Lincoln dismissed him.

The first time I saw Mr. Lincoln after this, he said, with much feeling, "I don't know who I can depend upon."

I replied, "We will organize you one body of men who will fire, when called upon. The only trouble is, they may fire whether called upon or not. Their blood is up!"

This gave rise to the forces known as the "Frontier Guards," and to "Clay's Battalion," who guarded day and night the White House, the public buildings, and the bridges approaching Washington from Virginia, until Massachusetts and New York troops arrived. I now remember that though Senator elect, I took the oath, and put on the uniform of a private soldier, and stood in my place in the ranks.

There was one incident which amused the men with me more than it did myself. It was this: in trying to buckle the belt of a United States uniform about me, none could be found long enough. So to the amusement of others, I had to cut a hole in one end of the strap, and splice it with a string. With my belt thus fastened, I did duty until honorably mustered out.

This company of Frontier Guards was the first military organization that ever invaded a "Sovereign State," carrying aloft the National flag, the emblem of Federal authority! Under the command of Captain Stockton, of Kansas, they did on the 18th day of April, only three days after the proclamation of the President, capture the first rebel flag, and brought it to Washington. General Lane presented it to Mr. Lincoln, as the first trophy of the war. He brought it to Cabinet meeting, and, in the presence of General Scott, held it up, saying to him, "General, is such a rag worth fighting for?" Nevertheless, we received, in writing, the thanks of Mr. Lincoln for the capture.

An account of this first invasion of a Sovereign State and the first capture of a flag, I have in the handwriting of Captain Stockton, never yet printed; and, as it is of historical importance, I copy it as follows:

"I captured the first rebel flag of the rebellion, Apr. 18th, 1861, at or near Falls Church, Virginia. Gen'l. Scott had given me orders to take a detachment of Frontier Guards and ascertain the strength of the rebels at that place. This order I obeyed. Upon our approach toward a company we saw drilling upon parade, we charged. They left the place rapidly, not having time to take down their flag, which was fastened to the top of a flagstaff without halyards. Returning I delivered that flag to Gen'l. Lane at our headquarters. The next morning it was seen hanging out of the window of Lane's room at Willard's Hotel, across which Lane had written, in large letters, 'Captured by the Frontier Guards upon the sacred soil of Virginia!' In an hour or two more than ten thousand people stood looking at that flag.

"Mr. Lincoln soon sent for me to bring the flag to the White House. About one o'clock Lane and I went up. The Cabinet was in session, and Gen'l. Scott called also.

"Upon our handing it to Mr. Lincoln, who sat at the end of a long table, raising it up, with flag in hand he walked over to Gen'l. Scott at the other end of the room and said, 'Gen'l. Scott, what a miserable rag that is to fight for!' 'Yes,' replied the General, 'but it convinces me that Gen'l. Lee has not yet reached Richmond. We will have a better looking flag.'

"This flag was about three feet on the staff, seven feet long, tapering to about sixteen inches in width at the swallow tail. The two outer stripes were yellow, the center one white, with a star in the upper corner, under which was printed in large letters: 'VIRGINIA'; then, 'THE SOUTHERN STAR'; under that, 'STATE SOVEREIGNTY.'

"Soon after this I was ordered to Leavenworth with a lot of guns, so I never got my discharge. Pomeroy will remember that when I reached Chicago I boxed them up, both the guns and ammunition, marked them 'Fruit Trees,' and consigned them to 'Englehard & Co., Denver, Colorado.' Care of Jones & Cartwright, Leavenworth, Kansas.' They passed the rebel smelling committee on the Hannibal and St. Joe Railroad, and at least fifty bushwhackers, sitting with arms in hand on the steep banks of the Missouri, watching for arms destined for Fort Leavenworth. Boxes and contents were safely landed, and well used. I afterward lost my papers and clothing at Fort Scott, and never recovered them.

Possibly Maj. Gordon or Harry Field can tell more about these things. Very respectfully, etc.

Signed, J. B. STOCKTON.

Thus it is seen, Kansas saw first the war to be inevitable, and was the first to attack. Their schooling had not been in vain. And this enables me to show a reason why, upon the first night of our stay at Willard's in Washington, we were called upon for speeches, in the midst of that excited crowd, which filled Pennsylvania Avenue on the night of April 13th, 1861, when Sumter surrendered.

I shall never forget that Lane, Cassius M. Clay, and General Nyc (afterward Senator from Nevada), were to follow me in speeches, made from the dry goods box, in the middle of the street in front of Willard's Hotel. When Lane took the stand, just as I had left it, there was a tremendous shout from the rebel crowd—"Mob him!" "Mob him!" "Hang him!" etc., etc.

Lane was naturally passionate and excitable. I saw at the moment he was terribly agitated. His eyes flashed more fire than came from the street lamps; and his tremendous voice was elevated to the highest pitch. He repeated in his first words the noise of the crowd, crying out, "Mob; and be damned! Mob; and be damned! I have a hundred men from Kansas in this crowd, all armed; all fighting men; just from the victorious fields of Kansas! They will shoot every damned man of you who again cries, 'Mob,' 'Mob.'"

Now the other side cheered Lane with all their might; and then repeated it again and again. The click of cocking pistols was heard all through that crowd, as men put their hands upon revolvers. Order was restored. In a moment more it was as still as the chamber of death. No man seemed to know who stood next to him.

General Lane then went on uninterruptedly, and finished one of the most impassioned and eloquent speeches he ever made. His denunciation of the firing upon the flag at Sumter, of secession, and of slavery was most terrific; and his appeals for freedom—constitutional freedom; for "Liberty under Law," might, as it then seemed to me, have been heard across the Potomac, if not at Arlington! For his voice reverberated among the hills, where Lee had gone home to sleep.

General Lane at length closed his speech, and Cassius M. Clay of Kentucky took a stand upon that same box, and followed Lane, much in the same strain, with most tremendous denunciations against South Carolina and her fire-eating Democracy; upon the slave power, forcing an issue of civil war, taking State after State out of the American Union; then firing upon the old flag—their only protection. He denounced all this as "treason," and their madness. I remember he called the "Suicide of American slavery."

I quote some of his words from my diary. In most solemn voice and manner he said: "You have fired upon the flag of your country." "You have now inaugurated a treasonable rebellion." "Your cherished institution (slavery) has gone to hell!" "I would not now give a dollar a dozen for your negroes. You have sold the last one." "Slavery will now be wiped out in blood!" And so Mr. Clay, with impassioned eloquence, went on and on until the small hours of early morning.

But the crowd did not disperse until that most inimitable orator, General Nye, delivered a most impressive speech. Nye was never more effective, and, to our side, never more agreeable.

That night and that meeting ended the rebellion in Washington. Men whose hearts were in the South, went there. Some left their families; some took all they had with them; many never returned. None ever saw the old Washington again. The old town, the muddy streets, the dilapidated old negro quarters and slave pens, where negro auctions were held, departed with the old system; and in after years those who lived to return, as they were entering the capital, seemed to be opening into the streets of the new city, located "in the new heavens and the new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

HAYTIAN CANNIBALISM.

BY H. H. HINMAN.

Articles are going the rounds of the papers which affirm that Voodooism, with its attendant cannibalism, is practiced in Hayti. This may be true. Snake worship and human sacrifices existed originally in Mexico and South America, and still exist in Africa. It is not strange that, like other relics of heathenism, it should still be found among a people so little under the influence of the Gospel as the inhabitants of Hayti. There are many relics of heathenism that still encumber our civilization. The names of the months and of the days of the week come from the old worshipers. The signs of the zodiac are represented now as in ancient Egypt, when they had religious significance. Every druggist and physician's prescription is marked with the synonyms of Jupiter; and the horseshoes that are supposed to adorn houses, and even churches, are relics of the old superstitions, not yet obliterated, even from cultured minds.

But, greatly as we may deplore and condemn the heathenism of the West Indies, we ought not to forget that, considering our light, we are practicing and cherishing a system of heathenism that is as thoroughly unreasonable and as truly wicked as that of the Haytian. Freemasonry professes to be, and manifestly is derived from the ancient sun worship. It claims to practice the same rites that were practiced in ancient Egypt. Its system of initiations have, according to Dr. Oliver (one of the most learned and distinguished Masons), their counterpart in the ceremonies of heathenism, in which human sacrifice was practiced, and in them every Master Mason is symbolically slain.

Before we become too severe on these ignorant negroes it will be well to clear our own skirts of this shameful abomination. We mean this especially for some doctors of divinity. Let them cast the beam out of their own eye, and they shall see clearly to cast the mote out of their brother's eye.

THE TWO BROTHERHOODS.

READ BY ALEXANDER THOMSON AT THE DUPAGE COUNTY CONVENTION, ELMHURST, ILL.

There is a Brotherhood the Father owns,
Whose members, although here amid the dust,
Are children of the King, and heirs to thrones
And fadeless treasures that can never rust.

A Brotherhood of honor and of truth,
Higher than heaven, than ocean grander far,
Where every member in eternal youth
Shall shine at last in glory like a star.

Here in this nether world, where oft its dark
With nights recurring, and with tempests wild,
This holy Brotherhood is still the ark
That ever hears the Spirit undefiled.

And, oh! when all in harmony combine,
And bursts of soul-song—sweetest incense rise,
How Zion, like a strong and fruitful vine,
Grapples the earth and clammers to the skies,

What fruit is borne, what wine, what healing balm!
Wine never touched by taint of death or dale;
That fills the heart with rapt and holy calm,
And purifies and elevates the soul.

And Zion's halm—the wounded spirit feels
A hundred gaping wounds that bleed at once—
With heavenly potency it soothes and calms
The deadly wounds of sin's envenomed lance.

O when this Brotherhood shall rise and shine
With all the glories God has made its own,
Earth to its darkest corner then shall join
Salvation's harmony before the throne.

This Brotherhood meets in the open day
To praise the Lord, the source of its increase,
And bids each mortal who has gone astray
Come to its holy festival of peace.

With open doors and hearts that are aglow,
With holy ardor lift they up the song;
To wrong and sin each member is a foe,
But friend to him who thoughtless does them wrong.

Sweet as a lute the songs of Zion win
The erring from the city, field, and wood,
And, from the warring, clashing hosts of sin,
Build up in love Christ's holy Brotherhood.

There is a Brotherhood of hidden gulle,
Of pompous seeming and unholly rites;
That, like a wanton, with seductive smile,
To all her Christless altars man invites.

Now, while the dove of peace with outstretched wings
Hovers above our fair and favored State,
This Brotherhood, in dark and mystic rings,
Is dressed in war's wild livery of hate.

Their guarded words, their grips and secret words,
Their martial hosts with plumes and flashing steel;
The hateful gleam of twice ten thousand swords,
Bodes no bright future for our common weal.

While Honor moves along his open way,
And in his Master's name admission begs,
This thing of darkness fees the light of day,
And broods, a vulture, upon serpent eggs.

While Honor throws his chambers open wide,
And bids the doubtful multitude draw near,
This thing of darkness seeks its head to hide,
With all the jealous agony of fear.

The baseless fiction glossed with prayer and song,
The vow unholy, and the oath profane,
Cannot abide God's sun-light, bright and strong,
Or stand the open scrutiny of men.

Yet like a swamp, from whose polluted ooze,
Foul vapors rise to poison all the land;
And leaves on leaf and flower the deadly dews
That nothing pure or lovely can withstand;

So o'er our land this Brotherhood of wrong
Has spread to-day its palsied and its illight;
And, with the sound of its infernal gong,
Drowns all the music of the sons of light.

Captain Dutton, the lately deceased commodore of the Allan line, was a devoted evangelist. On board his vessel, when evening came, if anyone repaired to the fore-castle he would find him reading God's Word and explaining it to the passengers and seamen. This he did in a homely way, but with singular power. From time to time a hymn would be sung, the captain's strong voice rising above the rest, accompanied by a small organ, which his cabin boy carried up and down as required. He never forgot to sing, "Hallelujah! what a Saviour!" his favorite hymn. Many have cause to be thankful for their contact with Capt. Dutton. Once his vessel was enveloped in a dense fog off Belle Isle, a dangerous coast, with ice on all sides. They dared not proceed, and for some twenty hours were thus held. On board was another godly man with faith equal to that of the captain. "Can we not do something to lift the fog?" "Let us try," said the captain. Then the little chart-room was entered for prayer. "You may take it for what you think it is worth, but I was under a full head of steam for Quebec in thirty minutes after." Such was his own statement to the writer of this note. He had the Bible in his heart, and he lived, like the apostles, looking and waiting for the hope of the church and the blessed appearing of our Lord.—English Paper.

THOUGHTS ABOUT THE MISSION FIELDS.

BY REV. J. F. AVERY.

The mission field is large. It is the world. Room enough to work, however varied the talent: great enough the task to demand prompt and steady diligence and obedience. "Go work to-day." "Occupy till I come." This is Divine advice. Beware of religious dissipation.

In 1797 there is a notice of the arrival of William Carey and John Thomas in India, and letters from Carey describe his first impressions of the field and the work, from which a sentence or two may be quoted. "There are difficulties in our way," wrote Carey on January 5, 1794, "more formidable obstacles than you can suppose. Yet this is our encouragement; the power of God is sufficient to accomplish everything which he has promised, and his promises are exceeding great and precious concerning the conversion of the heathen." He once said: "To give me credit for being a plodder will be to describe me truly; anything beyond this will be too much. I can plod; I can persevere in any definite pursuit; to this I owe everything."

Seven years after Carey landed in India, the directors of the East India Company placed it on record as, "their decided conviction, after consideration and examination," "that the sending of Christian missionaries into our Eastern possessions is the maddest, most extravagant, most expensive, and most unwarrantable project that ever was proposed by a lunatic enthusiast." To-day shows even to men of the world the folly of their august wisdom and deceived convictions. What a revolution hath God wrought by apostolic men, who go turning upside down the religious prejudices and unbelief of generations, bringing men and nations to own none but the Gospel of Jesus can do helpless sinners good!

Young men and maidens, there is a loud call to service from India, China, Japan, and Africa, not to mention the isles of the sea, and other nations and peoples yet in darkness. Take up the cross of Christ, and go forward to fight the good fight. Fear not: being clad in the whole armor of God, with the true Jerusalem blade, the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, you will find this weapon truer and more reliable in the time of conflict than the best Damascus blade. Go in the name of the Lord; praying always, you must win success; until the whole round earth is bound by the chains of love to the throne of God, and led into the willing captivity of heaven's kingdom and service. Let us consecrate ourselves to the work. Jesus must reign. Those who follow the Captain, will gloriously prevail. Crowns of glory, palms of victory we shall wear.

Let us on, then. Whilst men sleep, the great adversary sows tares. If we tarry the whitened grain will be shed, and the opportunity of harvest be lost forever. The dusky millions of India and Africa call for our active sympathy and love. The crushed and bleeding hearts of childhood and womanhood ask for deliverance; for men and women who shall go with the glad tidings of eternal hope. To these tell the story of a Saviour's love. Let us crowd our life full of unselfish activity. The Hebrew nation and Christian church seem to have been, and to be chosen instrumentalities in the purposes of grace. Let us learn a lesson from the history of the past, lest we should be set aside as were other workmen, proven unworthy by their neglect of more than golden opportunities.

On complaint of the Pharmacy Commission, R. D. Townley, of Allerton, Iowa, has been convicted of violating the liquor law, and fined $100 and forever debarred from doing business as a druggist in the State of Iowa.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Congress made an excellent record for the second week of the session. Some important bills were passed, such as that repealing the Tenure of Office act by the Senate, and allotting lands in severalty to Indians, by the House, and various subjects came up for a share of attention in both branches. Among them were trade dollars, appropriations, Mexican border affairs, the fisheries, the tariff, secret executive sessions, and the bill preventing Senators and Representatives from taking pay from the Government and from railroads at the same time.

It is a long, long distance between the place where Senator Edmunds stood a year ago, and where Senator Hoar stands to-day on the question of Executive patronage and prerogative. Mr. Edmunds thinks the Senate is taking a step backward by repealing the Tenure of Office act. Mr. Hoar regards the Tenure of Office act as a relic of barbarism that ought to be blotted from the statutes. Both, however, are in favor of civil service reform. The Tenure of Office act has worried and puzzled politicians ever since it was enacted.

There is a growing sentiment in Congress against the Congressional Record, which is daily growing more cumbersome. Under the present arrangement Congress is too unwieldy, and there is too much talking on unimportant subjects. When a Congressman makes a speech, and it appears in the Record, his next move is to have several thousand speeches printed for distribution among his constituents, and the latter jump to the conclusion that their man is fairly stirring up the world in Washington. Congressman Oates, of Alabama, wants to reduce the Congressional Record by limiting speeches to thirty minutes. Others say the only way to do it is by prohibiting the reading of speeches from manuscript, and that it is boys' play to permit members to read speeches, for such speeches seldom influence legislation. Those who advocate the abolition of the Record say it is only a question of time ere it will be given up entirely. Then the correspondents who sit in the press galleries of the Senate and House will give the country all the news that transpires at the Capitol.

The Inter-State Commerce bill, which proposes, among other things, to make uniform rates to all shippers, and which threatens to become a law, is to meet with organized opposition. Its enemies are beginning to arrive, and in a few days there will be one of the most formidable lobbies about the Capitol that has been seen there for years. They hail from Chicago, St. Louis, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Louisville, New York, and elsewhere.

There is also a much larger Mormon lobby here this year than last. In preventing legislation against them last session, they carried their point by securing the adoption of a very rigid bill by the House Judiciary Committee, as a substitute for the Edmunds' bill of the Senate. This made it impossible for the Senate bill to be considered by the House, and so between the two nothing was done. The Mormons are trying to play the same game again this winter, so as to defeat both bills.

A momentous question of carriage hire is disturbing the conscience of Judge Durham just now. He is the Comptroller of the U. S. Treasury, and he does not see why eleven carriages, at $20 a piece, should be paid for out of Uncle Sam's pocket to convey the nine Justices of the Supreme Court from their room in the Capitol to the White House to pay their New Year's respects to the President. But what can be done about it? All such expenses are approved by the Justices themselves, liverymen feel at liberty to make their charges correspond with the prodigal hilarity of the season, and while Justices are very plain, sociable people, when off duty, they think that on State occasions they must have due regard for the eminence of their stations, and not be too particular about the price. They would say that on New Year's day they call not as individuals, but as members of the U. S. Supreme Court,—by virtue of a custom that is tantamount to a statute, and that it is perfectly proper for the Government to pay the cost of the performance.

Benedict, the Public Printer, is badly pressed by the Printers' union and begins to fear for his confirmation. He is preparing to make a fight on a new line and throw all blame of mismanagement on his predecessor Rounds, a Chicago man, who was a Freemason and such a "practical printer" as the union demands. He says he found the accounts more than a year behind, and business in bad shape. He is likely to fail of confirmation.

—Last year there was a net gain of eight Congregational churches in California, making a total of 114 in the State.

THE WESLEYAN BOYCOTTED.

The devotees of secretism are becoming enraged at the Wesleyan Methodist Publishing House and are venting their secret pent-up wrath in fulminating boycotting resolutions—after the model of the Pope's bull against the comet—against our publishing interests. The Typographical union of this city has boycotted us; and recently the Cigar-makers' union has passed boycotting resolutions against "The Wesleyan Publishing company" with a view of strengthening the hands of the Typographical union in their war upon us. All this because the help employed at the Wesleyan Book Room is non-union. Secret societies must deem themselves the embodiment of wondrous secret might and majesty to undertake to regulate the universe generally. They have tried to run the railroads of the country and have failed except in developing the fact that they are the embodiment of arson and even murder in its most shocking phases. A spirit that would derail railroad trains to the destruction of the lives of the unsuspecting traveling public is a disgrace to perdition itself. Secret societies propose to run knitting mills, street car lines, pork packing, and all other industries generally and severally, and now they propose to go into the church business and take a supreme hand in running the religious denominations. We are suspicious that there is at least one religious denomination which proposes to run its own religious interests in the name of Christ, and on the principles and for the truths and principles laid down in his holy Gospel, without asking the consent of the dark dens of secret demonism. That a Cigar-maker's union should boycott us, is, after all, not so strange, for, as a church, we proclaim eternal hostility to their whole business of fume and filth. It is not so strange that this secret nest of sworn smirch and smoke; that the secret slums of dingy nastiness should lift their befouled breath against a publishing house that advocates a decent cleanliness which in itself is the antipodes of cigar twisting and cigar puffing. What this wriggling, slimy nest of secret tobacco worms is going to do to effectually drag down the Gospel banner of purity we seek to wave before the world to trail it along the track of their sickening pollution is affirmed in their resolutions voted between puffs and amid the haze of stench and smoke: "We will not buy any books or papers printed" by the Wesleyan Methodist Publishing House. We are so sorry, for we think they are sadly in need of some of our publications, especially the works of Rev. H. D. Inman and Rev. J. L. Benton, on tobacco. We deem their need of such literature so imperative that we are in favor of making them a present of a few copies since they will not buy them. The fact is, we are a decided friend of the dirty and the deceived, of the besmeared and besmudged, and we would be glad to do them only good. We would be glad to take such by the hand and lead them out of the dark dens of secretism into God's own light, out of pollution into purity, out of sin into salvation.—Wesleyan Methodist.

NO MORE SECRECY.

The greatest philosopher that ever lived said, "He that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God." We commend this remark to the careful perusal of every member of the United States Senate. The secret sessions of that body are an abomination which tends greatly to bring it into contempt, and it is a great injury to the moral tone of a people to be compelled to look upon their rulers as unworthy of that respect which their position and authority demand. It was admitted pretty frankly, during the debate on secret sessions last spring, that there were very good reasons why Senators dared not allow the public to know what took place in these sessions. We cannot conceive of any ground on which an honest man could intelligently defend this pernicious custom, unless it be the plea of necessity for the welfare of his party. The people have a right to know what course is pursued by each of their representatives and his reasons for following that course. A law should be passed at once declaring all sessions of the Senate open to the public, and requiring the President and his subordinates to give reasons for all removals from office. Civil service reform can never become efficient while the reasons for the removal of Government employees and for the confirmation of, or refusal to confirm, their successors are kept secret. If the nominations for office were to be discussed in open meeting of the Senate, the Administration would be all the more careful to see that no person was nominated whose record would not bear inspection. The present system is a disgrace to our nineteenth century civilization.—N. Y. Witness.

REFORM NEWS.

KNOXVILLE BEFORE THE CONVENTION.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 21, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—On Saturday, the 18th, my heart was gladdened by the arrival of Bro. Stoddard and his words of cheer and wise counsel. He as well as myself met a most cordial reception from President McCulloch and the faculty of Knoxville College, and Bro. S. preached in the college chapel on Sabbath morning, while I spoke in the colored Presbyterian church in the city. We have since been both quite busy in preparing the way for the coming convention, with a fair prospect of success.

Just now the city is much moved by the preaching of Rev. M. S. Munhall of Philadelphia, evangelist, who is holding a series of meetings in the Second Presbyterian church. I have listened to several of his Bible readings and discourses, and a talk to the ministers on the Chinese of the Pacific Coast and the state of religion there. No one can listen to him without being impressed with his intellectual and spiritual power, and his great Christian earnestness. His discourse on popular amusements was one of faithfulness and courage, and can hardly fail to do good among the formal and worldly Christians of this city. His arraignment of the dance, if it lacked delicacy did not lack force and vividness. His solemn appeals to his hearers to practice self-denial for the good of others were timely and impressive. His views on the lodge question were given in his Bible readings on "Separation from the World," and on "Prayer." He holds that these secret associations are worldly and selfish, and that the Christian is out of place in them. On prayer, he insisted strongly on the recognition of Jesus of Nazareth as the Divine Mediator, and that all prayers that are not in his name are blasphemy. While he says but little on the lodge question, he does not fail to indicate his position, and I am glad to know that some Christians heard his testimony gladly.

He gave a discourse yesterday on the "Coming of the Lord", and speaks again to-day. He holds the premillennarian views in common with Moody and nearly all the evangelists, and feels it his duty to give this doctrine some prominence.

On the Chinese question he holds that these heathen are here in the providence of God for their instruction in Christianity, and that they might become the teachers of their own people (just as the negro race are here, though he did not say that) and that the cruel persecutions are of the devil, that the work of God might be hindered. He described in a vivid manner their vices as he had seen them in Chinatown, when he was accompanied by Dr. J. D. Carson, and as he found them elsewhere on the coast; and contrasted them with other foreigners who are mainly their persecutors. He thought the great majority of the people of the Pacific slope have yielded to a most unjust, anti-Chinese prejudice, and that this was one of the indications of the low state of morals and religion. He thought that some restriction on the six companies which import these Chinese, might be called for, but he had no sympathy with the labor organization that insisted that the "Chinese must go."

I expect to go to Maryville to-day and to secure a delegation from that place. H. H. HINMAN.

TRUTH'S WATCHFIRES AGLOW IN IOWA.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—From Jackson county I went to Cedar county, preaching twice at Dayton Chapel, and giving two short addresses in meetings called by Bro. M. A. Gault, one in Clarence, and one at Stanwood. I remained after he was gone and gave two lectures; one in the United Presbyterian church of Stanwood, and the other in the United Presbyterian church of Clarence.

Rev. W. F. Johnson, the pastor of these churches, is a young man of promise. He heard my lecture at Stanwood, and expressed his satisfaction to the audience at its conclusion. He seemed delighted with the anti-lodge record of the United Presbyterian church, after hearing the lecture, and so expressed himself to the audience. I am satisfied that no one who really loves our Lord Jesus Christ would remain a Mason, or favor the system after hearing such a lecture as I delivered at Stanwood. I ordered ten Cynosures sent to Stanwood office. I might have done better if I could have taken a little more time.

So far as I became acquainted with the United Presbyterian church at Stanwood, I was very favorably impressed, as I also was with the pastor and his family. Bro. Johnson expressed his regret on my leaving, that I had not been able to call on more of his people. I visited Bro. James Davidson, one of his elders, and was so pleased with his company that I keenly regretted the fact that I could not call on other families of the Stanwood congregation.

I accidentally met with Bro. John Dorcas, a veteran worker in the N. C. A. reform. He is principally laboring and paying money to save the United Brethren church from coming under the domination of the lodge. But, notwithstanding this, he has made a donation to the Iowa work each time I have met him since I began reform work in the State.

I came, by request of Rev. A. Steadwell, to Jefferson county on Saturday, Dec. 18th, and preached twice on the Sabbath at Coleport. This evening, the 20th, I preach on the religion of Freemasonry at Lockridge. Tuesday and Wednesday evenings I will lecture at Salina. On Thursday night I will lecture at Glasgow, which is the great center of lodge influence outside the county seat for Jefferson county. I shall then go to Van Buren county to fill appointments made for me by Rev. George Warrington, the president of the Iowa Christian Association.

Friends in Iowa, remember the coming congress of Christians at Chicago, that will meet Feb. 22nd, to consider the lodge question. Let every reform church send one, and if possible, two delegates. Let the matter be agitated in the periodicals of every church that testifies against the lodge. And let every reader of the Cynosure be present if possible. Let each one act as a committee to inform others of the congress, as widely as he can by personal contact, and by letter; and persuade as many as possible to attend this national gathering of Christians at Chicago.

Thoughtful men are waking up to the consideration of the lodge question. They will not fail to perceive that "Ancient Craft Masonry" and its allied orders is Satan's masterpiece for supplanting Christ, and spreading infidelity. Nor can the fact be long hidden from the thoughtful that, as training schools for despotism, the secret lodge system is rapidly undermining republican liberty, by introducing the despotism of martial law into civil society, thereby transforming American freemen into the sworn minions of despots.

Soon the question for discussion in the courts and councils of the churches will be, Shall the lodge, Satan's training school of infidelity, be longer tolerated by the church? The morning cometh! The morning of the day when the churches will no more tolerate their members in being Masons than they would tolerate them in being pagans, or Mohammedans, or members of infidel leagues or clubs.

The craftiness of Satan, whereby he has deceived the churches in regard to the lodge system, will be exposed; and the conscience of the church will awake and her purification will follow. The slumbering fires of conscience, fed with the fuel of truth, and fanned by the breath of the eternal Spirit, will produce an earthquake of public sentiment that will overthrow the lodge influence in the churches, and free them from its domination.

When once driven from its stronghold, the church, Masonry cannot long retain its power in the state. The people will see that true democratic liberty and lodge despotism cannot co-exist, and the decision of American freemen will be, that the lodge as well as the saloon must go.

C. F. HAWLEY.

THE CLOSE OF THE WISCONSIN CAMPAIGN.

With considerable effort, discomfort from the cold, and expense, I reached Monroe, Wis., in time to meet my appointment to lecture in the "Bethel" U. B. church, over three miles away, on Saturday evening, Dec. 18. I was met at the station by Bro. Scott, of Martin, who had come fourteen miles to meet me. But when we went to the "Bethel" we found no light, no fire, and nobody but ourselves and those of Bro. J. Huffman's family, who went with us. So we returned to Bro. Huffman's, and I talked on secretism to the family and Bro. Scott, as they suggested.

Sabbath morning, the 19th, a small congregation came to the Bethel, and I preached. I proposed to lecture there on Monday evening, but my proposition was not accepted. Still there are some anti-secretism members of the U. B. church there, among whom is Bro. J. Huffman.

Sabbath afternoon Bro. Scott took me to Martin, where I preached to a good audience in the U. B. chapel. Bro. W. A. Taylor, the pastor, had come several miles from his home at Collins to attend this meeting, though just recovering from a severe illness, but he was finally not well enough to come out that evening. A lecture on lodgery was announced for Monday evening, when I spoke again to a good audience and, as I trust, with good effect. I received financial help from Bro. N. Martin, sister E. C. Scott, and from my mother. The U. B. class at Martin is solid against the lodge. Two new Cynosure subscriptions here.

On Tuesday, 21st, Bro. Scott again made me his debtor by taking me to Browntown, six miles distant, where I took train for Orfordville. Bro. H. H. Medgorden had arranged for a lecture at his school-house for that evening, and at the Norwegian Lutheran church about four miles from the village on the 22d. Owing to local causes the attendance at these meetings was quite small, though the people listened well, seemed appreciative, and gave me a small collection at each lecture. Pastor Berg invited me to come again and lecture when circumstances might be more favorable. Bro. Medgorden and family showed me every kindness.

Thursday, 23d, I stopped at Whitewater and called on Bro. J. S. Bolton, Free Methodist pastor; then on to Waukesha where I was hospitably entertained that night by Bro. S. E. Orris.

So closed my work in Wisconsin. With many pleasant memories of kindness received, with gratitude to God for protection and help, and with prayer that he may strengthen the hands and the hearts of his faithful people there, I bid the brethren and friends of the Badger State an affectionate GOOD-BYE.

J. F. BROWNE.

THE OHIO MEETING.

Secretary Stoddard's report epitomized the resolutions adopted at Greenfield, Ohio, Dec. 16. Rev. W. J. Coleman, secretary of the convention, sends them in full:

WHEREAS; The lodge system, including the Masonic and Odd-fellow societies, with all the numberless organizations tributary to them, is, as we believe, hostile to our republican form of government and to the work of Christ in the church, and

WHEREAS; The object of this Association is to discourage and by all fair and legitimate means to seek the overthrow of this system, therefore be it

Resolved, 1. That secret orders possess a power that is dangerous to the state, the church and the family, and ought to be discouraged by every one who loves these God-given institutions.

2. That in our efforts to overthrow the lodge system we invite and urge the earnest co-operation of Christians and of all others who believe that secretism is a curse to the country.

3. That our efforts are not directed against the members of the lodge, but against the institution with which they are connected.

4. That it is sinful to promise to uphold constitutions and obey laws of which one is ignorant.

5. That inasmuch as the secrets of nearly all the oath-bound lodges are now revealed and published, we advise all persons who are unconnected with the lodge to examine thoroughly the character and ritual of these institutions before taking upon themselves a yoke which they will find it very difficult to shake off.

6. That the disagreements which of late have so frequently arisen between labor and capital can in our opinion be more easily and wisely settled by friendly arbitration than by strikes prompted by secret oath-bound societies.

7. That we believe that the cause of temperance can be better promoted by open organizations than by those encumbered with the paraphernalia of secretism.

8. That the tendency of secret orders is to promote clannishness and selfishness, rather than benevolence, and that there are enough of these evil qualities in human nature without secret oath-bound organization to foster them.

9. That we have great faith in the sentiment of the poet:

"Truth naked is stronger than falsehood in mail;
The wrong cannot prosper, the right cannot fail."

10. That since God has so graciously blessed and sustained us in days past, we do consecrate ourselves anew to his service, and we will work unremittently and devotedly as becomes those who are laboring to better the condition of mankind, earnestly desiring the triumph of the church of Christ and the overthrow of the secret empire of the powers of darkness.

DANIEL HILL,
Chairman of Committee.

THE ELMHURST MEETING.

The convention of the DuPage County Association at Elmhurst, briefly reported last week, gave its approval again to the plan of township secretaries and quarterly meetings suggested by Bro. Alexander Thomson, and arranged to have a meeting in some part of the county every three months. We print the stirring poem read by Bro. Thomson, and the resolutions adopted. The inspiring German chorals sung by the convention, and especially Luther's great hymn, seem to have given them a Reformation spirit:

Resolved, that it is the judgment of this meeting that God has provided amply and entirely for the religious desires and aspirations of all mankind in his Holy Word, the revelation of himself in the Lord Jesus Christ by the Holy Spirit: therefore to reject Christ by name as prominent secret orders are known to do; or to reject him in practice as all of them do, renders such associations altogether objectionable, and they should be abandoned by all good men.

Resolved, that the opening words of Luther's majestic hymn, "Ein feste Burg ist Unser Gott" (A mighty fortress is our God), expresses the true dependence of all men upon God and the upright character which God gives, not only in religion, but in the ordinary labors and callings which they follow in the world; and the despotic character and unreasonable demands of secret societies, especially shown toward the laboring men of our cities, calls for our most earnest protest as citizens and Christians; and we believe our State and National Governments should take measures to suppress all secret societies that so oppress the individual workman.

Resolved, that in the establishment of the secret Order of the Jesuits by Ignatius Loyola to counteract and if possible destroy the power of the great Lutheran Reformation in the 16th Century, we see a revelation of the character and real object of the lodge system and its use by the adversary of God and man to check, to hinder, to hedge about, and, if possible, to destroy the church of the living God in its efforts to save the human race from destruction.

Resolved, that the great uprising of the American people in favor of temperance is an occasion of rejoicing to every patriotic heart, and we are happy to know that the great agencies which are carrying forward this reform are open, American and Christian; we therefore deprecate the efforts of a few misguided men to make this temperance movement subordinate to the secret society system, degrading and dishonoring that great reform to abet and assist the lodge. We, moreover, believe that all true temperance men should call upon these lodges to give up their charters, abandon their secret organization and give their time, their efforts and their funds to maintain open temperance work instead of spending their force in secret ceremonies.

Resolved, that the recent death of the President of this Association, Mr. W. K. Guild, an esteemed citizen of our country, admonishes us all that we must do with our might what we can and while we can, for Christ and his kingdom against the organized effort of Satan in the secret lodge.

Resolved, that we also recognize in this Providential dispensation an admonition to our young men, that they should be making a wise preparation to succeed their fathers in the moral conflicts of our time.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

On the Lackawana and Western railroad, two gentlemen entering the car, took seats immediately in front of me. After a few inquiries about the town, I asked, "Have you any Prohibition voters?" They replied, "Yes, but we are Republicans." Supposing them to be men of families, I asked if they felt that their sons and their homes are perfectly safe from the intoxicating bowl, under the protection of the Republican party. Both acknowledged their fears. I said, "Why not join a party that will throw the shield of Prohibition over your household and help banish this evil from our land?" Both assented to the reasonableness of such action, and said, "The principle of Prohibition is right." One said to the other, "When I see the temptations around my boy, nineteen years of age, it makes me think seriously of this matter, and I believe we shall have to come to the third party for protection yet."

As the N. C. A. has recently acquired a small interest in St. Louis, Mich., some of the Cynosure readers will be glad to know of the town and its inhabitants. I left the train there in time to escape an accident which occurred ten minutes later. No lives were lost, but a number were injured, and each of the colliding trains was badly demoralized. There are four hotels respectably kept. Four church buildings, viz., Episcopalian, Methodist Episcopal, Congregationalist, and Presbyterian. Each presenting a neat external appearance. Three banks, and a quantum sufficit of stores, shops, etc., to accommodate. It is a town of 3,000 inhabitants, with fertile surroundings and an enterprising population. There are friends of our cause in this part of Michigan who know the value of real estate, and might, perhaps, aid in disposing of a small amount to the advantage of all concerned. Will any friends in Gratiot or the counties joining, east or south, write me.

J. P. STODDARD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NATIONAL REFORM FROM NEW YORK TO WASHINGTON.

CINCINNATI, Ohio.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Not long before the surrender of General Robert E. Lee at Appomattox, General Sheridan wrote General Grant, "If things are pushed the enemy can be run down." His chief replied, with characteristic brevity: "Push things, then." The National Reform Association proposes to "push things," until this nation is in allegiance to the Lord Jesus Christ. America has been appointed of God to take the lead among the nations in recognizing the King of kings. Our nation was born in Christian principles. The great battle for human rights has been fought and won on this land; and the great conflict with secularism is to be met here. The forces are being drawn up in line of battle. The word running all along the line is, "Speak to the people that they go forward."

On last Friday evening I preached for Rev. D. G. Wylie, in the Knox Presbyterian church, 72nd street, New York. This is a mission church. Bro. Wylie has had charge of it one year, and in that time the membership has increased from 65 to 133. He has six of the students from Union Theological Seminary under his care in evangelistic work. One of them has gathered up a class of 100 scholars in his Sabbath-school.

Allow me to give you my programme for last Sabbath. At 9:30 A. M., I addressed the Sabbath-school in the 39th Street Reformed Presbyterian church, Rev. R. Summerville, pastor. They have 450 pupils. At 10:30 I preached in the 12th Street Reformed Presbyterian church, the old charge of Dr. McLeod. At 3 P. M., I addressed their Sabbath-school. At 4 P. M., I preached for Bro. Summerville in 39th Street, and at 7:45 P. M., preached again in the 12th Street church. That was all I could find time for that day.

Mayor Grace has ordered the enforcement of the Sabbath laws in New York. The good effect is visible already. On Monday evening I lectured in the 2nd Reformed Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, Rev. J. K. McClurkin, pastor. They have a new and beautiful church. Rev. D. Steel, D. D., led in prayer. Bro. McClurkin, in opening the meeting, spoke as follows: "Matthew Arnold said, 'America holds the future.' Oliver Wendell Holmes said, when asked how soon to begin the education of a child, 'One hundred years before it is born.' He meant there were influences determining the character and life of the children tending back into preceding generations. The National Reform Association recognizes the truth in both these sayings. This is a country of wonderful resources. It is capable of sustaining a population of 1,000 millions, and then would not be as thickly populated as China. If Texas were lifted north on the map, it would reach from Chicago to New Orleans. Dakota would extend from Cleveland to Richmond. The West is only in its infancy. All east of the Mississippi could be placed in New York and Pennsylvania and not be as much crowded as Germany. By foreign immigration dangerous forces are being developed. Roman Catholicism, the ancient foe of civil and religious liberty; and communism, whose doctrine is, property is a crime and destruction is a virtue, are menacing the Republic. This Association seeks to grapple with these dangers and to develop the true and good. We are glad to welcome our district secretary among us. We assure him that our hearts beat warmly with interest in this movement."

Dr. Steel said: "I have been taught from my youth that nations are moral beings, responsible to God for their character and conduct. I believe that civil government is an ordinance of God, and rulers are his ministers, a terror to evil doers and a praise to them that do well. I am in hearty accord with the sentiments expressed with reference to National Reform. I believe judgments are in store for this nation except she repent."

We were glad to see Rev. T. P. Stevenson, D. D., editor of the Christian Statesman and corresponding secretary of the N. R. A., present. He has done more for this movement than any one living man. He has sacrificed more time and energy and means than any friend of the cause. When others were discouraged he was hopeful. He does not have the word "fail" in his dictionary. Rev. W. M. Glasgow arranged for the presentation of the cause before the Baltimore Presbytery of the Presbyterian church in that city, Tuesday evening. I appeared there at the appointed time, "but Satan hindered us," so that the hearing we had expected was not given.

On Wednesday I looked in on the Senate and House of Representatives at Washington. The first reminds one of a Presbyterian synod, the second is busy as a hive of bees. No one seems to gain anything like general attention. The electoral count bill passed both Houses while I was there. I was surprised at the little attention it seemed to receive, and still more at the indifference of the press since its passage. Yours, J. M. FOSTER.

PITH AND POINT.

THANK GOD FOR SUCH ENCOURAGEMENT AS THIS!

We have in our home an abundance of other weekly, religious reading, but I take the Cynosure because of its noble and fearless Christian stand against the "secret lodge system." God bless you in this holy warfare against one of the strongest holds of Satan and the powers of darkness. Let the clear light of truth still shine out more and more upon this unholy, lying cheat, this ugly heathen monster, until all the Christian world, at least, shall clearly see its hideous shape, and, understanding its real unchristian character, shall forever sicken of all its bombastic flummery and its insincere nonsense. I speak strongly for I have been inside [the "ring," and know whereof I affirm. Thank God, by his grace years ago I clear escaped from all its power and fellowship, and am now walking in the light of Him who said, "In secret have I said nothing." For years I have freely and publicly spoken against all secret societies, and therefore am, of course, not much beloved by the "fraternity."—A. C. PALMER, Bath, Me.

MAN PROPOSES, GOD DISPOSES.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Bro. Hawley and I talked of working up a convention here in Ringgold county and of organizing for effectual reform work by the grace of God. It was my intention to canvass the county in the interest of the Cynosure and try to enlist the friends of Jesus on the right side of the conflict now raging between the army of God and the (would be) hidden foe of Christ, the lodge. Satan's success in hiding his own secret self in prohibition by Good Templar lodges is the only thing he can rely on. I have neglected to do duty till on the 1st of December, according to God's providence, one of my legs was broken. The first Scripture that came to my mind was, "All things work together for good to them that love God." It is for my good to be on the line of duty. If the Lord raises me up I will try to press forward on the reform line of duty. In the meantime let others take warning and walk wherever the Lord directs.—CYRUS SMITH, Beaconsfield, Iowa.

WHO SHALL TAKE THE FATHER'S PLACE?

My family have taken the paper ever since its publication. I have reached my three score years and ten and feel that my time for labor is short. I have read of some faithful laborers in the vineyard being called to their reward. Who will fill the places of Adams and Carpenter; but the Lord will raise up others to fill their places. The cause is of God and must succeed.—S. G. WILCOX, Simpson, Kan.

PASTOR SNIDER'S SERMON—A CORRECTION.

The brother who forwarded the manuscript sermon of mine was under a mistake. I was pastor of the church at Corunna at the time he received the copy, but I had not delivered it in Corunna, Mich. It was prepared for an introductory sermon at a Baptist association in Indiana. I would like to have the error corrected in your next issue for my Masonic brethren (?) might accuse me of falsehood. Some of them would not be slow to use it against me.—A. SNIDER, Owosso, Mich.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON II.—January 9.—Sin and Death.—GEN. 3: 1-6, 17-19.

GOLDEN TEXT.—By one man sin entered into the world and death by sin.—Rom 5:12.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The Temptation and Fall. vs. 1-6. It is useless to theorize over this story of man's fall; to speculate how much is allegory in the account and how much is to be taken literally. Every day we read it afresh,—the same old story, sad and bitter, of Edenic innocence blighted by the serpent trail of sin. For this temptation of our first parents has been repeated in practically the same form to all their descendants. Satan never changes essentially his base of operations. He tells the young man entering on a career of self-indulgence that he can break off any time, that the end will not be slow but sure decay of all his powers till he is cut off in the midst of his days or left a mental and physical wreck. If every one who is tempted to begin a course of vice could believe as thoroughly that the wages of sin is death as he does that the bite of a mad dog will cause hydrophobia he would no more enter a saloon or any questionable place of resort than he would stand in the path of a rabid animal. Every false system of which Satan is the inspirer is his mouth-piece and uses his logic. "Ye shall not surely die," says the lodge to the drunkard, the profane swearer, the profligate and the worldling. Pay your dues promptly, and practice all Masonic virtues, and when you die the doors of the Grand Lodge above will open wide to receive you. "Ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." This is another of Satan's lies. He tells the young man who has never smoked a cigar or drank a glass of wine or been to the theatre that he must have more knowledge of the world; that he is not a man if he does not taste the forbidden fruit for himself instead of relying on what careful parents and guardians tell him. It is in this way that so many of the young drift to ruin. They want to see the world. Like Eve they are willing to give up their Paradise of innocence from a weak curiosity to know how the fruit of sin tastes. So with secret societies. Men enter them because they think they will be taught wonderful secrets, and initiated into a mysterious knowledge which will make them as gods among their fellow men, and give them a great advantage over the rest of humanity.

2. The punishment of Adam. vs. 17-19. Christ, the second Adam, has appeared to take away the curse. In him death becomes only the gateway to glory, and our daily round of toil as much God's service as any angelic ministrations. It is an error to think the curse on Adam consisted in his being obliged to work. We have no reason to suppose that even the highest orders of creation live without active employment of all their faculties. It consisted in changed conditions which transformed work into hard, wearying monotonous drudgery. It is the part of Christianity to take off the curse from labor; to teach us that our lowliest toil may be done in such a spirit as to lift us to the rank of co-workers with God himself.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"Now the serpent." The serpent is not a merely symbolical term applied to Satan: nor was it only the form which Satan assumed; but it was a real serpent, perverted by Satan to be the instrument of his temptation.—Keil and Delitzsch.

Notice (1) that it was impossible for Adam to have been developed in character without temptation. (2) The tempter was not allowed to come in order to make him fall, but to enable him to resist. (3) The tempter was not allowed to come in his own form, nor as an angel of light, but only as a beast, to make the trial as light as possible. (4) He neither threatens nor persuades nor compels, but only misrepresents that as to which Adam and Eve knew the exact truth from God's own words.

"Ye, hath God said?" It is true that he hath restricted you in using the fruits of this delightful place. This is not like one of our gods and kind. Surely there is some mistake.—L. B. and B. "Ye shall not eat of every tree." Note how Satan not only asks puzzling questions, but persistently looks at the few restrictions, and not at the wide range of privileges. Millions of trees and countless varieties of fruit were free to Eve, but Satan led her to dwell on the one forbidden thing. This is still a specimen of his tactics.—P.

"We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden." She leaves out from what God had said, the two words, every and freely. Thus she seems to divest the divine beneficence of all its largeness at once and its willingness. Her mind is fastening morbidly on the single restriction God had made.

The tree of knowledge of good and evil. This is not "the tree of knowledge," as some represent, but only of the knowledge of good and evil, by its being a test of character and action. It was a marked tree placed in the midst of the garden as a necessary moral test. It was not to make them fall. It was not because only by falling into sin could they know evil, and good by evil. But it was a test by which they should know either good if they obeyed or evil if they disobeyed. Had they obeyed they would have known good infinitely more than they did by falling into sin, and known evil by contrast and not by experience. It is a slander on God and goodness to speak as if men could not know good by the choice of the good, instead of by the experience of evil through the choice of evil.

"Lest ye die." Neither kind of death was completed on that day, but in both body and soul the process was begun; they passed over the boundary-line that separated life from death. All diseases and pains and ruin of body come from sin. As Alford well says, "It is not sufficiently borne in mind that man's exclusion from the Tree of Life, which could have conferred immortality, was the carrying out of this sentence."—P. It was no arbitrary penalty which was here imposed; the fruit of the tree was probably fatal to the body, and disobedience was necessarily fatal to the soul. God did not threaten; he merely announced to man the consequences which would come to him from the very constitution and laws of his being.—Dr. John E. Todd.

Now here is a new lesson: ungodly men love to talk about the narrowness and bigotry of a religious life. They overrate the restrictions thrown around believers for their protection. Whenever anyone finds his mind dwelling upon the duties or the austerities of a Christian career petulantly, he may know he is in the discussion with Satan, and he must be on the alert lest he shall fall.—C. S. Robinson.

"And when the woman saw that the tree was good," etc. Here are presented three things, namely: "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life," which three, as the apostle states, comprehend "all that is in the world." These things necessarily took the lead when God was shut out.—C. H. McIntosh.

"And gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat." According to Paul, Adam was not deceived (1 Tim. 2:14). He disobeyed God with open eyes. According to Milton's fanciful theory, he partook of the fruit from love to Eve, and desire to perish with her.—Paradise Lost, Bk. 9.

The Fall.—(1.) Adam and Eve fell from (1) a state of innocence; (2) from communion with God and holy beings; (3) from a clear conscience and undefiled moral nature; (4) from happiness; (5) from being obedient children and heirs of God; (6) from the kingdom of God; (7) from spiritual and eternal life; (8) from bodily life and health; (9) from the hope of immortal life.

(II.) They fell to (1) spiritual death; (2) to bodily sickness and death; (3) to guilt; (4) to a defiled moral nature; (5) to misery; (6) to the kingdom of Satan; (7) to a state of eternal punishment and death; (8) to the defilement and injury of the whole race.

"For thy sake." (1) Because of thy sin it required to such a world. (2) For thy good it was better that such a curse should lie upon the ground.—Whitcane.

SECRETSOCIETIESCONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington, in a letter written a year before his death: "I preside over no lodge, nor have I been in one more than once or twice during the last thirty years."

President Millard Fillmore, J. C. Spencer and others: "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Chief Justice John Marshall: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned as one capable of much evil and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

John Quincy Adams: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

General A. W. Riley: "I hold that the difference between the Christian and a heathen religion is, that one has morality and the other has not. And when our churches refuse to speak of such subjects as slavery, liquor-selling and secret societies, they are becoming heathen religions; that is, religions without morals."

Charles Francis Adams: "Every man who takes a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment were to prove a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield: "In conducting the governments of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but secret orders to be considered, which have agents everywhere—reckless agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

General J. W. Phelps: "All secret organizations are links of one and the same chain which binds men to evil and not to good. The Masonic lodge is the parent source from which all similar modern organizations have emanated and this lodge is now in active operation in every city and considerable village of the country swaying our parties and churches; filling our offices, secular and divine, with its partisans; shaping our political destinies; and teaching a spurious and corrupting morality subversive both of the Christian religion and of free institutions."

Thurlow Weed: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

A. M. Sullivan, Irish Leader: "I had not studied in vain the history of secret, oath-bound associations. I regarded them with horror. I knew all that could be said as to their advantages in revolutionizing a country, but even in the firmest and best of hands they had a direct tendency to demoralization, and are often on the whole more perilous to society than open tyranny."

Hon. Edward Blake, leader in Canadian Parliament, March, 1884: "I am not in favor of State recognition of any secret societies. I have never joined one, though many of my best friends are members of secret societies. But I believe the tendency of secrecy itself to be injurious. I believe that it brings with it the possibility of evil; I believe that it involves a certain amount of sacrifice of individuality and independence, and gives very great facilities for the misleading of members by designing leaders—very great and mischievous facilities for that purpose." "I believe that a great deal of the trouble, social and political, that has occurred in those countries [Europe and America] is due to secret societies."

James G. Birney, candidate of the Liberty party for President, was a Freemason, "but never entered a lodge after he joined the church, and, as his sons grew up, he cautioned them against joining any secret order."—Gen. Wm. Birney.

Hon. Ezra Butler, ex-Governor of Vermont: "One Masonic obligation requires that a Mason shall vote for a brother in preference to any other person of equal qualifications. Is not this political Masonry? The Masons in Vermont are about one-twentieth part of the freemen, and they hold about three-fourths of all the important offices in the State. Is this owing to their superior fitness, or to political Masonry?"

Philo Carpenter: "This saint of God (Moses Stuart) like the old prophets, was satisfied with the institutions and ordinances of God's house, and consequently did not give his influence or aid in supplementing the same with human ordinances and worldly alliances; in other words, he was opposed to secret, oath-bound societies, into which many good men, and even clergymen, have been, and are being 'ensnared.'"

Charles P. Sumner, father of the Senator, and a renouncing Mason: "Masonic engagements, whether they are called oaths, obligations, or promises, ought never to be made. They are not sanctioned by law and are not obligatory. They make it a Masonic crime to divulge that which the good of the community requires should not be concealed."

Hon. Cadwallader C. Colden, Mayor of New York and M. C.: "It is true that I have been a Mason a great number of years, and that I have held very high Masonic offices and honors. It is equally true that I have for a long time ceased to have any connection with the institution because I have believed, and do now believe, it is productive of much more evil than good. I have long entertained my present opinion, that a man who would eschew all evil should not be a Freemason."

Horace Greeley: "Many persons were brought to trial on account of the murder of Morgan, but no one was judicially found guilty of murder. It was established by seceding Masons that the oaths—at least in some of the highest degrees—that were administered, and taken by those admitted to Masonic lodges, disqualified them from serving as jurors in any case where a brother Mason of like degree was a party, and his antagonist was not."

Hon. Seth M. Gates, ex-Mason: "Profoundly convinced by long experience and observation that Freemasonry is an evil and pernicious institution. I wish once more in my advanced age to lift my warning voice publicly against it and all kindred organizations, and to beseech Christian men to have no connection or fellowship with them. Jesus is not, and cannot properly be recognized in Freemasonry. He must be ignored in the lodge-room, in its lectures, instructions, and in its prayers."

Hon. Heman Lincoln, ex-Governor, Mass.: "Freemasonry, as a distinct, independent government within our own government, and beyond the control of the laws of the land, by means of its secrecy and the oaths and regulations which its subjects are bound to obey under penalties of death, has occupied much of the attention of the committee."

We believe, in the language of the Edinburgh Review that all secret societies are justly deemed odious, wherever the government is tolerably free, and can only be excused where the existence of arbitrary power, foreign or domestic, leaves no other means of escaping from hopeless slavery."

Gen. Henry Secoll, a companion of Washington: "I was initiated an Entered Apprentice to the Masonic rites in October, 1777, at Albany, soon after the capture of Burgoyne, being then an officer in the American army. . . . I was led by the influence of this 'perfect rule of faith and practice,' during the year 1784, to view speculative Masonry in a shape still more deformed. Its charity appeared to be selfishness, because restricted to its own members; its religion deism because entirely devoid of the Gospel. Its history appeared fabulous; its claims to antiquity unsustainable; its titles fulsome; its rites barbarous and absurd; its oaths extra-judicial, unlawfully imposed and blindly taken, and the penal sanctions annexed, horrid and impious."

George Washington (to Gov. Trumbull): "Masonry is a benevolent institution, which may be employed for the best or worst purposes."

Edward Everett: "A secret society so widely diffused and connected as this puts a vast power, capable of the most dangerous abuse, into hands irresponsible to the public."

Richard Rush: Hooker, personifying law, eloquently exclaims, "her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; everything on earth does her homage, the highest is not beyond her control, the least as claiming her protection." Masonry has overset this primordial system. She has dethroned this image of God upon earth. To reinstate it over so insolent a victor, we must have a political organization. There is no other way of assaulting, there is no other hope of vanquishing, there need be no other dream of humbling such a foe. It fights with desperation."

Wendell Phillips: "History shows them perverting justice, stopping at no crime to protect and conceal their mummeries; controlling politics for selfish and personal ends, and interfering with great danger in national emergencies. Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are forbidden by law and rooted out of existence."

John Hancock: "I am opposed to all secret associations."

James Madison: "From the number and character of those who now support the charges against Masonry, I cannot doubt that it is at least susceptible of abuse, outweighing any advantages promised by its patrons."

General U. S. Grant: "All secret, oath-bound political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first bring them together."

Myron Holley of New York: "Such a rebellion Freemasonry has raised. It has violated the dearest rights of nature, and the most sacred enactments of our laws, and this in a spirit manifestly treasonable, for it has done this in pursuance of solemn, deliberate and voluntary obligations to a foreign government, I mean its own—a government far more alien to that which claims our allegiance than any which has ever afflicted mankind."

Gerrit Smith, in an address, 1870: "Masonry murdered Morgan. If it could not conceal his murderers, it nevertheless protected them. It overrode the laws of the land and ruled the courts and the ballot-boxes. Moreover, it is capable of repeating the crimes. Why then should we not read secret societies, and do what we can to bring them to an end?"

William Wirt: "If this be Masonry, as according to uncontradicted evidence it seems to be, I have no hesitation in saying that I consider it at war with the fundamental principles of the social compact, and a wicked conspiracy against the laws of God and man, that ought to be put down."

Joseph Ritner, governor of Pennsylvania, 1837: "If it be true as the lamented Colden (himself one of the initiated) declared that many a Mason became a great man but no great man ever became a Mason, how nearly does it concern the youth of our country to pause and reflect before they commit their present standing and future reputation to the keeping of a society, which for its cold-hearted and selfish purposes could immolate even the fame of Washington at the shrine of its abominations."

Lewis Tappan, private journal, 1814: "Dr. Dixwell gave me lectures on Masonry at his house." "In September left the lodge." Letter, Jan. 21, 1829: "I am free to say that I henceforth renounce Freemasonry, considering it a useless and profane institution."

George Washington, to friends in 1794, quoted by Myron Holley: "The real people occasionally assembled in order to express their sentiments on political sentiments, ought never to be confounded with permanent, self-appointed societies, usurping the right to control constituted authorities, and to dictate to public opinion. While the former was entitled to respect, the latter was incompatible with all government, and must either sink into general dis-esteem, or finally overturn the established order of things."

Charles Francis Adams: "A more perfect agent for the devising and execution of conspiracies against church and state could scarcely have been conceived."

Thaddeus Stevens: "By Freemasonry, trial by jury is transformed into an engine of despotism and Masonic fraud."

Judge Pliny Merrick (a seceded Mason): "If ever a Chapter or a lodge shall establish laws in conflict with those of the state the Masonic requisition is obedience to the lodge and conflict with the state, and if a member hesitates at this humiliating obedience, his heart must be 'torn from his bosom,' his 'vitals plucked from his body,' and Masonic vengeance, not satisfied with this bloody immolation, denies a resting place to the motionless remains, but they are to be 'burnt to ashes and scattered to the winds.'"

Samuel C. Pomeroy, in an address, 1883: "There may be a broad distinction between the good and the bad in secret societies, but as they all alike have oath-bound obligations to complete oblivion of all they do or say, I have no means of judging the good from the bad. So I turn away from them all to the great Teacher who said, 'In secret have I said nothing.'"

Judge Daniel H. Whitney, (renouncing Mason): "While professed ministers of the Gospel and members of churches are permitted to associate themselves with these organizations, the task to apply a remedy will be a hopeless one; and just so long will the declaration made to me not long since by a high Mason and a worthy man prove true, that 'a Masonic lodge is the strangest medley of priests and murderers—deacons and whoremasters—church members and gamblers—decent men and loafers—drunkards and rowdies, that the All Seeing-Eye ever looked down upon.'"

Hon. Samuel Dexter, in an open letter to the Grand Master of Mass., 1798: "If there be no very important reason for upholding Masonry at a moment like the present, there is a reason against it. The system of the destroyers of human virtue and happiness is to undermine in the dark the castle that cannot be carried by storm. Secret agency has overthrown all the republics of Europe, and an extended, secret, leveling, self-created society, without any valuable object of pursuit, and embracing bad characters as well as good, cannot be the subject of approbation of an anxious patriot."

William H. Bevard: "Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men in a secret lodge, order, class, or council, and, bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow-men."

Wendell Phillips: "I wish you success most heartily in your efforts to arouse the community to the danger of secret societies. They are a great evil; entirely out of place in a republic, and no patriot should join or uphold them. Considering the great forces which threaten the welfare of the nation in the next thirty years, and how readily and efficiently they can use any secret organizations, such should not be allowed to exist."

George Washington's Farewell Address: "The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government. All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency."

Daniel Webster: "All secret associations the members of which take upon themselves extraordinary obligations to one another, and are bound together by secret oaths, are naturally sources of jealousy and just alarm to others; are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions, and are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government. Under the influence of this conviction it is my opinion that the future administration of all such oaths and the formation of all such obligations should be . . ."

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD.

HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1886.

The Cynosure is more than fulfilling its promises in the present number. The illustrations have been provided with much care and cost. Every reader will wish to preserve the fine portrait of DR. CHEEVER, which has, we believe, never before appeared except in a rare lithograph; and for the eloquent sketch of his eventful life they will long thank his brother, the writer. SENATOR POMEROY is also giving us some rare and attractive sketches of the early days of the war. His story of the "FRONTIER GUARDS" this week will be read and read again. For our next he has provided a paper of thrilling interest on SECRETARY SEWARD and Robert E. Lee, in which he tells how that renowned leader met his seducers and embraced their proposals of treason, and very narrowly he escaped the grip of the Kansas men to reach the head of the rebel army.

A QUESTION.—The Cynosure wants A THOUSAND VOLUNTEERS THIS WEEK who will each send in one new subscriber. WHO SHALL THEY BE?

NEW YEAR GREETING.

Again we open the door to speed a parting guest and welcome a stranger. The Old Year carries a full portfolio. His record is faithfully kept. How shall we meet it? With all our mistakes and shortcomings it has been a good year for the reform. The work in the South and in the great Interior has been a grand one. We shall some day see it so more clearly. A beginning has been made, too, in the far West. But we can do more in 1887. Shall we? The following prayer is said to have been St. Patrick's when he began the conversion of Ireland. In our struggle with the lodge paganism and for the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, let every Christian worker make this his prayer who wishes a "Happy New Year."

"May the strength of God pilot me;
May the power of God preserve me;
May the wisdom of God instruct me;
May the eye of God view me;
May the ear of God hear me;
May the Word of God make me eloquent;
May the hand of God protect me;
May the way of God direct me;
May the shield of God defend me;
Christ he with me,
Christ on my right hand,
Christ on my left hand,
Christ in the heart of all to whom I speak,
Christ in the mouth of all who speak to me,
Christ in the eye of all who see me,
Christ in the ear of all who hear me."

While our readers are opening this Cynosure meetings will be in progress in Tennessee; and by next week we hope for and expect cheering news from them. From the peculiarities of the Southern mind, and the long suppression of conscience by the choke damp of slavery, now that reforms are free there, we have reason to expect them to be rapid and joyous.

Grand Master Workman Powderly is out in an order forbidding his Knights to sympathize with, and pay or raise money for the condemned anarchists. He even commands the local assemblies who have done so to get back the money they have given or to stand suspended till they do. The Socialists, through their organs, heap defiance and contempt upon Mr. Powderly, and their followers are somewhat divided between their leaders.

When surrounding tribes whose religion had no Christ invaded ancient Israel, if prayer was made to God, he often divided their counsels so that their armies fell upon each other. So will it be now, if "effectual fervent prayer" is offered to God.

THE DOCTORATE OF DIVINITY we believe originated in the University of Paris in 1260, of course, a Roman Catholic degree. At times it has been earnestly discussed by the religious press, generally on one side. Little has been written in its favor. Drs. Samuel Hanson Cox and N. S. S. Beman objected to it in their early ministry, and we believe Dr. Beman never received it from a college board. Fashion, however, and the public press insisted on making them "Doctors," and they ceased to repel the title.

Dr. Beman was starting to attend the trustees meeting of Middlebury College, when he said to the writer, then a young man, "Hadt'n you better let me have the Board confer the Doctorate on you, and give you an even chance with the rest."

"Doctor," was the reply, "give me an answer to Albert Barnes's argument against it."

"Well," said he, in the impressive tone of a Supreme Judge, for which he was so remarkable, "if I should undertake to answer Barnes's argument it would be a stim affair."

Mr. Barnes's argument is in his comment upon Matt. 23: 8. "Be ye not called Rabbi," etc. Jesus forbade his disciples to seek such titles of distinction. The reason he gave was that he was himself their Master and Teacher. They were on a level. They were to be equal in authority. They were brethren; and they should neither covet nor receive a title which implied either an elevation of one above another, or which appeared to infringe on the absolute right of their Saviour to be their only Teacher and Master. The command here is an express command to his disciples not to receive such a title of distinction. They were not to covet it; they were not to seek it. They were not to do anything which implied a wish or a willingness that it should be appended to their names. . . . The Saviour did not forbid them giving the title to others when it was customary, or not regarded as improper (Acts 26: 25); but they were not to receive it. It was to the unknown among them. This title corresponds to the title Doctor of Divinity, as applied to ministers of the Gospel.

GEORGE B. CHEEVER.

We hold ourselves fortunate in the life-sketch, "The Eventide of Dr. Cheever. For it we are indebted to his younger and admiring brother, whose thoroughness makes his sketch no bad staff on which to wind the history of the rise and fall of the Slave Power in America, and a complete answer to those writers who claim that the semi-infidels, whom pro-slavery persecution drove into madness, come-outism, spiritism, non-resistance, and no-government, were the only effective opponents of slavery. His sketch reminds one of young Boswell's life of Johnson, for which the world is as much indebted as to the colossus of English literature himself.

In the autumn of 1835, Dr. Cheever, then a young pastor settled in Salem, Mass., published in the Salem Landmark, as "A Dream," his unique attack on the four rum distilleries of that town, for which he was brutally assaulted in the street by a distiller's foreman, and then incarcerated in the jail thirty days. The article was printed in newspapers, and tracts, in every form, and read by all who read a newspaper at that day.

The Cynosure editor was then a student in Andover Theological Seminary; and while the public mind was shocked by Mr. Cheever's treatment, as it has lately been by the murder of Haddock of Sioux City, he wrote and printed a bagatelle parody of the dream, which was caught up by the press and carried through the United States. On the day of its appearance it was struck off in little sheets, and a copy left at every house in Salem. The parody ran thus:

In Salem, when the sun was low,
Deep silence held each street and row,
And solemn was the distant flow
Of ocean rolling heavily.

But Salem saw another sight,
When lurid fires and candle light
Beamed bluely out, at dead of night,
From Deacon Giles' Distillery.

And redder yet those fires shall glow,
As Salem's frighted streets shall know,
When gibbering fiends the embers blow
In Deacon Giles' Distillery.

The twilight deepens—Come! ye brave,
Let loose from hell, the skeptic's grave,
Your dusky plumes in triumph wave
O'er Deacon Giles' Distillery.

Then rocked the still with riot riven:
Then worked the fiends for Bibles given:
And louder than hot bolts from heaven
Loud roared the Old Distillery.

Tis morn—nor did you lurid sun
Behold the fiends: their work was done,
Each clutched his book and out he run
From Deacon Giles' Distillery.

They part, alas! too soon to meet:
Their foreman, though an arrant cheat,
Ne'er leaves his business incomplete;
He works beyond the sepulchre.

Campbell's "Hohenlynden," a favorite battle piece with the masses, doubtless helped this little parody into the popular breeze, but Dr. Cheever's extraordinary article furnished its wings. His "Dream" is reproduced in our Temperance columns.

There appeared, the dream relates, faint letters of bluish flame, which blazed out into inscriptions on the barrel heads when mounted in grog shops for sale to customers; such as: "Consumptions and catarrhs," "Poverty and want," "Brawls and broken heads," "Liquid fire and distilled damnation," and like exponents of the real nature and effects of the liquor traffic; and purchasers who desired these and similar commodities, along with Bibles, were directed to "Inquire at Deacon Giles' Distillery!" The power of these imaginary barrel-head and shop-door inscriptions consisted in their truth, told while yet the manufacture and use of the liquor were respectable, and temperance people were few. But the fearful brands would not wash off; and men now see awake, what Mr. Cheever saw in his dream.

Slavery, too, then the Nation's idol, was subjected to the same poetic crucible, and, like Milton's Death,

"Grinned horribly, a ghastly smile," in the high places of church and state, where slaveholders till then sat chief. So that Mr. Cheever's discussions were revelations as well. And they hurt men as clear and sudden light hurts eyes used to darkness. This is the reason why men like Dr. Cheever are persecuted by men who seem to be good. "Bad men," said Wesley, "say all manner of evil against me, and good men believe them."

Dr. Joseph Thompson, then the popular pastor of a New York church, led an ex-parte council, which tried and condemned Dr. Cheever while he was absent in Europe, and good men looked on, as they have on similar ex-parte councils since, only regretting that men should brave popular sentiment by assailing popular evils. Cowper's admirable delineation of Whitfield, will answer for Dr. Cheever and his class:

Leuconomus (beneath well-sounding Greek,
I slur a name a poet must not speak),
Stood pilloried on infancy's high stage
And bore the pelting scorn of half an age.
His crimes were such as Sodom never knew,
And Perjury stood up to swear all true:
His aim was mischief and his zeal pretence,
His speech rebellion against common sense:
A knave, when tried by honesty's plain rule,
And when by that of reason, a mere fool.
The world's best comfort was: his doom was passed,
Die when he might, he must be damned at last.

Now Truth, perform thine office, waft aside
The curtain drawn by Prejudice and Pride,
Reveal (the man is dead) to wondering eyes
This more than monster in his proper guise.
He loved the world that hated him; the tear
That fell upon his Bible was sincere:
Assailed by slander and the tongue of strife,
His only answer was a blameless life:
And he that forged and he that threw the dart,
Had each a brother's interest in his heart.
Blush, Calumny! and write upon thy tomb,
If honest Eulogy can spare thee room,
Thy deep repentance for thy thousand lies,
Which, aimed at him, have pierced the offending skies,
And say, Blot out my sin, confessed, deplored,
Against thine image in this saint, O Lord.

But we detain the reader too long from the faithful sketch of this wonderful man. We only note that, the promises of God to Dr. Cheever are all fulfilled. "A thousand-fold more now in this life," and he only waits, as we hope he may long, for its completion in the "life everlasting."

DEATH OF GENERAL LOGAN.

The announcement of the death of the leading Senator from Illinois, at his home in Washington, came upon the nation suddenly last Sabbath evening. Mr. Logan had been suffering from rheumatism for a fortnight, but his condition had not been regarded serious, and the news had the effect of a surprise. The popular conception of Mr. Logan, intensified by political nicknames, has been of a man of robust strength, great vitality and Indian endurance. Reports of his sickness had, therefore, little notice.

But few men have been so long in political life. Thirty-five years ago, when quite a young man, he became a member of the Illinois Legislature from the southern part of the State, popularly known as "Egypt," and was immediately distinguished as a leader of the pro-slavery Democracy. He carried a bill which became the most odious part of the notorious "Black Laws" of Illinois; and so consistently followed up a career thus badly begun, that in the lower House of Congress he was known before the war as "Dirty-Work Logan." But these were ignoble days, and the political press will hardly revert to them.

The war seemed to work an immediate and radical change. Logan became a staunch Union man, and took a command in our army, becoming one of the best known of the officers who had no previous military training. General Grant in his "Memoirs" tells of his first meeting with Logan at Springfield. A request came to Grant, then over a regiment, that Logan and McClernand should address the troops. The commander hesitated, knowing that Logan's 18,000 majority in southern Illinois were going into the rebel army. But, consenting, he was astonished at the eloquent and fiery speech for the Union that followed. Logan then went into his district, where he was almost worshiped, and enlisted, as defenders of the Union, the very men who at first made it necessary to guard the roads in that part of the State.

From the army to the Senate, Logan has yet retained, in popular phrase, the title of General, which seems to mark mediocrity in statesmanship. He has, indeed, never been known to possess the latter quality. He has been a hearty fighter in politics, and conspicuous in Congress for loyalty to the Republican party. He fought ably to the last against the reinstatement of Fitz John Porter, and has been first to devise pension bills. His care for the soldiers has been proverbial and hearty. A gentleman well known as opposed to the lodge, knew of a soldier's widow who seemed unable to get proper recognition from the Pension department. He took the case to Logan, and was gratified to know that through his influence the poor woman received justice. Probably no man after Grant had so warmly the regard of the old soldiers.

But in this very esteem was temptation and danger not only to himself, but his country. His ambition was the Presidential nomination. "It was evident to those who knew him," writes his friend Wight to the Inter Ocean, "that it was this ambition which controlled him. Had he lived, undoubtedly within a few months an organization in his favor would have been effected, in which the soldier element of the country would have taken a prominent part." And not only the soldier element, bound to him both by the honorable ties of comradeship, and by secret oaths, but the entire lodge element of the country, controlled as it is by Freemasons, would have been manipulated in his favor. Two years have not passed since it has been published that he had taken thirty-two degrees of the Scotch Rite in Masonry, of which Albert Pike is the head. Later, within a few steps of the Cynosure office, thousands of Chicago Masons were coming and going to see him take the Royal Arch degrees, and later, in another part of the city, he took the Knight Templar degrees, and this in a manner so conspicuous as to appear studied. It was this ambition, operating through the lodge, that made Logan a dangerous man to the Republic, —a loyal man, and lover of his country no one doubts, but lacking the conscience, the discernment, and the self-denial of a true patriot.

It is with regret that this must be written of a man whose long and varied public service, whose abilities and personal qualities call for the gratitude and esteem of the people. Yet this constant appeal for popular favor through the secret lodges, marked an ambition of low aims, a judgment uninformed of the wisest maxims of statesmanship, and a conscience unsafe in a popular leader, because disregarding the example and law of Christ, the rightful King of nations.

—Rev. Samuel Collins, D. D., has recovered from a severe sickness, and is again in enjoyment of good health. He expects to make his home in Allegheny, Pa., on Sherman avenue.

—Bro. William F. Davis, the evangelist, is again among the Wisconsin woodmen, at Marshfield, where his labors last week were blessed with two or three score conversions. He always leaves a testimony for Christ against the enslaving lodge.

—The Voice of Masonry regularly prints its monthly note on the unvarnished character of the Cynosure, but we never were quite so bad as to take the portrait of Rev. E. R. Davis, an excellent Presbyterian brother of this city, who has no love for the lodge, and print it as the face of a rough-and-tumble Freemason of the little town of Winnemucca, Nevada.

—We regret to learn from Miss Flagg of the prolonged illness of her mother. The care demanded in the sick room prevents as much literary labor as both Miss Flagg and the public would be glad if she could bestow. She has been compelled to curtail this work in some measure, but hopes to continue the S. S. lessons regularly in the Cynosure. The teachers who study these notes need never be at a loss how to wisely and effectively bring the truth home to their classes.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard started with Mrs. Blanchard for Knoxville, Tenn., Friday morning, stopping over the Sabbath at Nashville, where he speaks on the invitation of Pres. Cravath. Prof. H. A. Fischer, of Wheaton, and H. L. Kellogg, of the Cynosure, left for the convention Monday evening. George W. Clark, of Detroit, is also expected at the convention. He hopes to remain in the South during the winter, "singing for Jesus." Brethren Imes and Countee, from Memphis, are to be among the delegates from colored churches.

—Elder J. F. Browne reached Chicago Friday afternoon on his way to the Knoxville convention, passing on by the evening train. He expects to remain in Berea until spring to rest from an arduous campaign in Wisconsin. He has spoken thirty-two times in the last four weeks, taking long drives over rough roads and with the thermometer below zero during the month. He says, "I am tired," with an emphasis. Miss Julia Lowe, daughter of Bro.

Thomas Lowe of Coloma, Wis., is with him, who will attend Berea College.

—Bro. Arnold, Illinois State lecturer, gave his illustrated lectures on the identity of ancient pagan worshipers with Freemasonry, last Thursday and Friday evenings in the Free Methodist church of Elgin. He begins in Aurora Tuesday evening, Jan. 4th, in the City Hall, the cradle of our anti-lodge movement, and writes urgently for Secretary Stoddard to come the week following and hold a big convention. He wants all Anti-masons from Kane and DuPage counties to be present Monday evening, Jan. 10th.

—The Detroit Center notices happily the journey of our dear old singer to Knoxville, thus: "Geo. W. Clark, of Detroit, the old time and greatly beloved veteran Abolitionist and Prohibitionist, starts to-morrow or next day to spend the winter in the South; spends next Sunday at Louisville, lecturing there morning and evening; on Monday goes to Knoxville to attend the National Christian Association convention; spending the rest of the time in Tennessee and Arkansas; will work especially among the colored people, 'trying to free them from the slavery of liquor and tobacco—the latter the twin devil of the former.' Mr. Clark goes for his health and in acceptance of invitations to work. Many best wishes and prayers will follow him."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Mr. Moody is expected in Chicago Friday to hold a "watch meeting" with his church on Chicago Avenue. Their building is refitted since the recent fire. It is understood that the $250,000 asked by Mr. Moody over a year ago for a great city mission work is all pledged, and that he will remain in the city a month to inaugurate the movement.

Mr. A. A. Wheelock, representative for the District of Columbia on the National Prohibition committee, in an able article in the American advocates a change in the name of that party. He proposes the name "National" which is next to "American." We approve this discussion of names for if the party leaves the title "Prohibition" it will settle naturally like a flock of blackbirds on the tallest tree on Uncle Sam's farm, that is the American.

The hopes of Rev. H. T. Cheever in his Worcester letter last week were not realized, we regret to say. The no-license vote of last year was reversed and Worcester opens the doors of her saloons. The temperance people of the city are greatly disappointed, but cannot lose courage, for they know their cause is just. They attribute their defeat to the fact that the old party issues were maintained, and the fight was not made on the no-license question only.

A case has come before the Chancery Court of Memphis, Tennessee, which proves the benevolence of secretism. A member of Bayard Lodge, Knights of Pythias, died, holding an endowment claim of $3,000, and believing there were no back dues unpaid. The lodge claimed $5.00 back dues and refused to pay the endowment. The Supreme Lodge of the State is now sued for the amount. Such cases are so often reported that it is astonishing these orders yet claim to be "benevolent." They are nothing but insurance companies, and not very reliable ones at that. The Memphis Living Way is reminded by this case of another instance in the order of Immaculates: "Mr. Ambrose Austin died and was, as his wife supposed, in good standing with his lodge. They waited on the poor stricken widow, got from her his financial card and left the house, leaving her mind at ease as to her husband's interment. They soon found out that he owed 25 cents, and refused to bury him, and she, without a dollar, was left to do the best she could. The case is now in court, and the I. O. I. is still a grand institution."

Mr. S. A. Kean, the well known banker and Christian worker of this city, has called the attention of the Citizens' Association to a doubtful looking job concealed behind a commendable effort to secure a permanent site for the Chicago Public Library. Along the lake front adjoining the main business part of Chicago on the east is a strip of land belonging to the U. S. Government and worth several millions. The railroads have the right of way along the shore of the lake, and wish to secure a part of the property for a depot. The government is asked to give Dearborn Park, which lies across Michigan Avenue from the lake front property for the library building. But the bill granting this covers both sides of the street. Once in the control of our aldermen this property would soon go to private parties, and harbor privileges of great value would be lost. The Government once gave the city the old post-office lot, a very valuable property, for library purposes. It is now covered with a big bank building.

The announcement of the death of that hero of Christian faith, the evangelist George Muller, in Australia last spring was at first discredited but finally accepted by a large portion of the American religious press. How great is the joy, therefore, to know that he yet lives and journeys on around the world, publishing to the nations of many tongues the blessed tidings of a Saviour's love. With his wife he arrived at Yokohama, Japan, on Saturday, November 20, from their tour in India, China and Australia. The 23d of November was the day chosen by the evangelical churches of Japan for a National Thanksgiving day. The services of that day were attended by a large audience, several of the officers of the United States man-of-war Marion being present. The Japan Gazette says: "Mr. Muller, attended by his lady, took the pulpit at 11 o'clock, and after a hymn had been sung, and a prayer offered, commenced his address, speaking about forty minutes, through an interpreter, to his Japanese audience. He announced his willingness to meet them at a future time to tell them especially of his orphanage work, but to-day, in view of their protracted services, would tell them the secret of a happy Christian life. This he did in a most impressive and instructive manner, drawn from his own personal experience for three-score years, leaving an impression of faith in God, and reliance upon his Word and of its blessed results, that cannot fail to be of the greatest benefit to all his hearers. The services were closed with an impressive prayer in Japanese by the native pastor of the church where the services were held. The Doxology, 'Praise God from whom all blessings flow,' was heartily joined in by all present in both languages, to the tune of 'The Old Hundredth'; and the benediction was pronounced by the venerable Mr. Muller."

OUR POLE STAR NEVER SETS.

THE CYNOSURE FOR 1887.

The readers who have welcomed our weekly visits for 1886 will be pleased to know something of the plans maturing for their benefit during the coming year.

The star beams of the Cynosure have shone upon the portraits and the characters of twelve noble men as the months of 1886 have passed: David Bernard, George W. Clark, John G. Fee, Charles C. Foote, John B. Gough, J. R. W. Sloane, George Thompson, Samuel D. Greene, Nathan Brown, Philo Carpenter, John Dougall, George F. Pentecost, and Charles Francis Adams—each a noble life, full of such excellencies as all should imitate.

We have in preparation biographies of other men as worthy, and fine portraits are already of such statesmen as:

SUMNER, SEWARD, WEBSTER, GLADSTONE, with HOWARD CROSBY, and BISHOP HAMLINE, and "JOHN BROWN, OSSAVATOMIE BROWN."

The complete list we do not wish to promise, since the changes of the year will make calls that cannot be anticipated. But the biographical department will be as full and rich as ever.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED by "Great Men in the State," will be completed; and will be followed by the condemnations of "Great Men in the Church;" of "the Public Press, and "Out of their own Mouth." The compilation of these extracts will involve prolonged and patient labor, but the work will be made as perfect as possible. A list of papers which oppose the lodge is also preparing. This is also requiring much examination.

The center of interest for the year will be in the Christian Congress. This meeting will receive the most careful attention of the Cynosure, and the most complete report may be expected in its columns. The development of the work in the South will also be closely followed, and in every possible way encouraged, as well as the lecture work in the several States.

NO GENUINE ANTI MASON

can afford to be without the Cynosure next year. The growing list of contributors and correspondents constantly invites companionship with some of the bravest and noblest men living. Look back over the list of hundreds who have written and you may justly dread even a short separation from their estimable company.

The Christian Cynosure will be, God willing, the paper for Christian reformers in 1887. Let it have the patronage of thousands to whom it is now a stranger.

THE HOME.

A SONG FOR NEW-YEAR'S EVE.

Stay yet, my friends, a moment stay—

Stay, for the good old year,
So long companion of our way,
Shakes hands and leaves us here.

Oh stay, oh stay,
One little hour, and then away.

The year, whose hopes were high and strong,
Has now no hopes to wake;
Yet one hour more of jest and song
For his familiar sake.

Oh stay, oh stay,
One mirthful hour, and then away.

The kindly year, his liberal hands
Have lavished all his store,
And shall we turn from where he stands,
Because he gives no more?

Oh stay, oh stay,
One grateful hour, and then away.

Days brightly came and calmly went,
While yet he was our guest;
How cheerfully the work was spent!
How sweet the seventh-day's rest!

Oh stay, oh stay,
One good hour more, and then away.

Dear friends were with us—some who sleep
Beneath the coffin-lid;
What pleasant memories we keep
Of all they said and did!

Oh stay, oh stay,
One tender hour, and then away.

Even while we sing he smiles his last
And leaves our sphere behind—
The good old year is with the past,
Oh, be the new as kind!

Oh stay, oh stay,
One parting strain, and then away.

—William Cullen Bryant.

NEW YEAR SUGGESTIONS.

New Year is proverbially the time for new resolves. A thoughtful mind looks back and recognizes errors, sometimes of omission and sometimes of commission. Something is learned or emphasized by experience. Then it looks forward. Work is to be continued. The lines are there, duly and firmly laid, and there is to be a movement, not like that of the rocking-chair, to and fro, with no progress, but onward, like that of the locomotive and train of dependent carriages. What can be done, what ought to be attempted in the future? The new year resolves are not all realized; but some are; and the review and the resolves are better than unreflecting and contented mechanical movement.

And even so churches may at this time look back and forward; and in view of all the "environments" and tendencies, consider what is to be done. Churches are not cast-iron machines, but elastic bodies, by their constitution able to adapt themselves to times of "present distress," or to occasions for new service. If the Gentiles are to be taken in, the church can open the door. If the synagogue will not receive Paul, he can hire a school-house near by, and go on with the service. If the ship is in peril, he can give advice and help, organize and inspire; and if the ship-wrecked are shivering with cold, the "reverend gentleman" can bring a bundle of sticks and help to build the fire, and if a viper comes out of it, and fastens itself on him (and that is a common experience), he can shake it off into the fire and feel no harm.

Now what should the churches resolve to do in the coming year? A more pronounced church-life is first desirable. A minister and church officers have reasons for being as they are. Let all the people know them. Let there be intelligent adherence. Little comes in the long-run, compared to what they might do, from "honorary members" of several denominations. The church is in this like the family and the country.

Education needs to be looked after. There are exceptional cases, no doubt, in the quiet country towns—notably in New England—where the ministers of the Gospel come in contact with the youth of the place in the day-school; but they are, one fears, exceptional. A great part of the formative and impressive portion of the life is never touched by the church. School boards are doing their duties more or less wisely, and intellectual education is being given; but how much appeal is there to the standard that is highest? How much education of the conscience is there? How much recognition of the distinctive family of God on the earth? Why should not ministers go into schools, talk to the pupils, show sympathy with them in their education, and habituate their minds to the fact that the Gospel ministry is charged with the highest department of education—that which is to be life-long; and that a man can be religious, spiritual, holy, and yet be in true and intelligent sympathy with young and old in all the honest work of life?

Christians have duties to do in the department of political life. They often neglect them. Pastors are to inculcate all duties on their people. Churches are to teach principles of Christian duty in all relations. The Word of God is a perfect well of faith and practice. Government is for the people and by the people. Then the people should do it, and do it Christianly. They ought to be told this, and helped to conscientiousness. They are to render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's. But, alas! they leave Cæsar to the politicians. Poor Cæsar!

Socialism is another and kindred department of human life into which the church must look. There is a real, true, and awful socialism. There is an unsound, unscriptural, unsafe socialism. Its adherents believe, or affect to believe, that the chief end of God and of his people is to secure a good time for them, irrespective of the way in which they themselves manage. The language of men on this line of effort needs to be corrected. Ministers may well tell their people that they are capitalists. The green grocer is a capitalist in his messenger. He can denounce the railroad capitalist, and his messenger can denounce him. The man who sets up a carriage office on a sum of $1,000, is a capitalist to the drivers as truly as the great railroad employers; and yet both the one and the other will sometimes rail against the latter as an exceptional, peculiar, and rather hateful chap. The "Sermon on the Mount" covers a good deal of ground trodden by socialism. It is not meant that pastors are to preach political economy; but they can expound this sermon. Its ethical features are loudly applauded by many, who would be none the worse for the candid and careful study of the doctrinal elements it also contains.

One peculiarity of our age is the rapid increase of "societies" outside the church—i. e., under no definite management by any church, but dependent, practically, on the money of church people, and doing work which the churches ought to do. There are forms of effort that touch civil matters and call for legislation where action of this kind is needful; but to keep young men pure in language and in life, to aid the poor, to help the tempted to resist temptation, the church is a divinely appointed society for these very things. Suppose a group of people in the parish in which Dr. A. has been installed—to preach the Gospel, visit the sick, and, with the deacons, aid the poor—should organize a society to secure the visiting of the sick, set about raising the money among the people, get a paid secretary and agent, with a corps of honorary officers; who does not see that sooner or later, there would be trouble and loss somewhere in Dr. A.'s congregation? But a process on lines parallel to these is going on in many directions, and "prevention is better than cure."—Rev. Dr. John Hall in the Independent.

THE CHURCH OF THE FUTURE.

"While engaged in the service of the Christian Commission during the war," says Smith Baker, "we were stationed for a season at Camp Stoneman, in connection with which was a most precious revival of religion. There were associated in the work at one time, eight preachers, representing seven different denominations of Christians. All was in the most delightful harmony and good fellowship. The Colonel commanding, very kindly gave us a large tent together, and detailed John, a young German soldier, as our cook. John in a short time was converted, and made very happy in his new-found love.

"One day at the dinner table, we preachers each gave his reason, as a matter of pleasant discussion, why he thought his particular denomination would be the one which would absorb all others in the final triumph of the millennium. The Baptist brother stated why he thought the Baptist would at last be the church, and the Methodist brother stated why his church would be the one, and the Congregational brother gave his reasons, and thus on till each of the several orders had been defended. The presiding brother then turned to John, who had been a most attentive listener all the while, and said, 'John which do you think will be the denomination in heaven?' John looked up and down the table as much as to say, you are all wrong, and, then, with a triumphant twinkle in his eyes, exclaimed:

"I think it will be the Christian Commission!"

"Was not John right? Is it not true, that in proportion as Christians are in earnest working for souls, that the whole church on earth becomes one vast Christian Commission? The more absorbed we are in seeking men, the more sectarian lines go down, and we all become one. Nothing will unite us like work.

"The church should be too busy to contend with itself; then will the beauty of union clothe our Zion, and victories as yet unknown be given to her."

"I pray that they all may be one."—Christian.

THE ONENESS OF THE CHURCH.

[Prof. J. A. Howe, D. D., of Bates College, preached a sermon before the Free Baptist General Conference, of which the following is an extract, taken from the Morning Star.]

For less than a hundred years evangelical Christendom has been fired with a purpose to plant the cross of Christ in all the earth. The rallying cry of the crusades, "The Lord wills it," has been taken up by the Church in this holier and far more difficult warfare, and everywhere proclaimed. But the Lord also wills, and has left his will on record, that the Church dismiss from her ranks every element of division, and, bound together by a common love and faith and baptism, by one Lord and one spirit, present her unity to the world as an irresistible proof of the divine nature of her truth.

Each Christian sect signifies the unwillingness of its members to join with other Christians in the maintenance of Christian worship and work. In spite of some genuine, human respect for each other, some neighborly fraternizing on public religious questions, these innumerable bodies do, in fact and of necessity, stand apart from each other, look at each other as strangers, foster clannishness in their members, narrow the range of Christian thought and feeling, advertise openly the disagreement of believers, proclaim to the world that the Gospel is hard to be understood, and thus, by all the effects of their divisions, add one to the fearful list of evils now keeping back the world from Christ.

A NEW YEAR'S STORY.

In the year 1846, on St. Kilda, one of the islands of Western Scotland, there lived a poor widow and her son. She brought him up in the fear of the Lord, and well did he repay her care. He was a great help to her, though only sixteen years of age. They were very poor, and to help their scanty meals, Ronald, her son, used to get seabirds' eggs upon the near cliffs. This was very dangerous, for the birds used often to attack him.

One day, having received his mother's blessing, Ronald set off to the cliffs with a strong rope, by which to get down, and a knife to strike the bird, should he be attacked. The cliff rose several hundred feet above the sea, wild waves lashed madly against it, dashing the glittering spray far and near.

Ronald fastened one end of the rope upon the top of the cliff, and the other round his waist, and was then let down until he got to one of those clefts of the rock in which the birds build, when he gave the signal to his companions not to let him down any further. He planted his foot on a projecting point of the rock, grasped with one hand his knife, and with the other tried to take the eggs. Just then a bird flew at him. He made a blow with the knife; but, oh! in place of striking the bird, he struck the rope; he hung over the wild, raging waves by only a few threads of hemp. His piercing cry was heard by his companions above, who saw his danger, and gently tried to draw him up. Awful moment! As they drew in each coil, Ronald felt thread after thread giving way. "O Lord! save me," was his first cry; and then, "O Lord! comfort my dear mother." He closed his eyes on the awful scene as he felt the rope breaking. He hears the top; but oh! the rope is breaking. Another and another pull; then a snap, and now there is but one strand holding him. He hears the top; his friends reach over to grasp him; he is not yet within their reach. One more haul of the rope; it strains; it unravels under his weight. He looks below at the dark waste of boiling water, and then above to the glorious heavens. He feels he is going. He hears the wild cry of his companions, the frantic shriek of his fond mother, as they hold her back from rushing to try to save her child. He knows no more; reason yields; he becomes insensible. But just as the rope is giving way, a friend stretches forward at the risk of being dragged over the cliff—a strong hand grasps him, and Ronald—is saved.

Dear reader, from this true and simple story you may learn an important lesson for the new year, and therefore we have named it a New Year's story. As the year 1886 passes by, another strand of our rope of life is breaking. Strand after strand snaps as the knell of each departing year tells its mournful notes. How many threads are now left? Can you tell? Perhaps ere the year 1887 passes by the last thread may snap, and if you die in your sins, rejecting your Saviour, it will send you into the burning waves of eternal hell. Do you realize your position? Ronald realized his position when the last strand was giving way, thread by thread, and when a strong hand was stretched out to save him, which brought him safely beyond the reach of further danger, and placed him in the loving arms of his parent! If you are still an unbeliever, may you then by the grace of God learn to know your danger and flee at once to the Saviour of sinners. In the Gospel he stretches out his hand to "pluck you as a brand out of the fire," to save you from falling down into hell when the last strand of your rope of life is breaking and to place you for ever beyond the reach of danger, safe in the arms of a loving and almighty Father. Jesus "came to seek and to save the lost;" he came to save you. All your sins were laid on him, and he finished the work of your redemption, so that you are now as welcome to come to Christ as if you had never sinned a sin. The moment you take God at his word, and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ as the one who loved you and gave himself for you—a lost sinner—you are saved. God says it. "All that believe are justified from all things" (Acts 13: 39). Believe, "and thou shalt be saved" from everlasting destruction—saved to be holy and happy in the coming years and in eternity—saved for heaven—saved for glory—saved for God! Then let the year 1886 be the last strand of the rope—let it snap—let it break—you will fall into the strong arms of the loving Jesus—you are saved!—Pioneer.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

It is right and manly to desire happiness here and hereafter. Such a desire is planted in the breast of every human being. The evil and the good, the saint and the sinner, the educated and the savage, the young and the old, all alike, in one way or another, seek happiness. In one case, it is sought in the broad way which leadeth to disappointment, sorrow and final destruction; in the other way it is sought and found in the narrow way which giveth peace, courage and cheerful resignation here, and a good hope that perpetual joy and happiness awaiteth us hereafter.

If we really wish to be happy and to have a happy New Year, we can surely be gratified if we seek God's way in obtaining such a great blessing. Let us each go to our Heavenly Father and devoutly say to him: "Teach me thy way, O Lord." His loving voice in answer to such a prayer will be:

Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God.

Happy is the man that findeth wisdom and the man that getteth understanding.

He that hath mercy on the poor, happy is he. Behold, happy is the man whom God correcteth: therefore despise not thou the chastening of the Almighty.

But, and if ye suffer for righteousness sake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled.

If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye: for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you.

Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth.

Whoso trusteth in the Lord, happy is he. Happy is the man that feareth always.

Behold, we count them happy which endure. Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.

Seek the Lord, and his strength; seek his face evermore.

Now set your heart and your soul to seek the Lord your God.

He that keepeth the law, happy is he.

Ye shall observe to do therefore as the Lord your God hath commanded you: ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left.

Ye shall walk in all the ways which the Lord your God hath commanded you, that ye may live and that it may be well with you.

If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them. Happy is that people whose God is the Lord.

Some men talk like angels and pray with fervor, and meditate in deep recesses, and speak to God with loving affection and words of union, and adhere to him in silent devotion, and when they go abroad are as passionate as ever, peevish as a frightened fly, vexing themselves with their own reflections; they are cruel in their bargains, unmerciful in their tenants, and proud as a barbarian prince. They are, for all their fine words, impatient of reproof, scornful to their neighbors, lovers of money, supreme in their own thoughts and submit to none. All their spiritual fancy is an illusion. They are still under the power of their passions, and their sins rule them imperiously, and carry them away infallibly.—Jeremy Taylor.

How easy it is to please and be pleased, if one will take the fragrance of the rose instead of the thorns, and hold the knife by the handle and not by the edge.

DEACON GILES' DISTILLERY.

TEMPERANCE.

INQUIRE AT AMOS GILES'S DISTILLERY.

[Dr. Cheever's Dream, published in the Salem, Mass., Landmark, 1885.]

Some time ago the writer's notice was arrested by an advertisement in one of the newspapers, which closed with words similar to the following: "Inquire at Amos Giles's Distillery." The reader may suppose, if he choose, that the following story was a dream suggested by that phrase.

Deacon Giles was a man who loved money, and was never troubled with tenderness of conscience. His father and his grandfather before him had been distillers, and the same occupation had come to him as an heirloom in the family. The still-house was black with age, as well as with the smoke of furnaces that never went out, and the fumes of tortured ingredients ceaselessly converted into alcohol. It looked like one of Vulcan's smithies translated from the infernal regions into this world. Its stench filled the atmosphere, and it seemed as if drops of poisonous alcoholic perspiration might be made to ooze out from any one of its timbers or clapboards at a slight pressure. Its owner was a treasurer to a Bible society, and he had a little counting-room in one corner of the distillery where he sold Bibles.

He that is greedy of gain troubleth his own house. Any one of those Bibles might have told him this, but he chose to learn it from experience. It was said that the worm of the still lay coiled in the bosom of his family, and certain it is that one of its members had drowned himself in a vat of hot liquor, in the bottom of which a skeleton was some time after found, with a heavy weight tied to the ankle-bones. Moreover, Deacon Giles's temper was none of the sweetest naturally, and the liquor he drank and the fires and spirituous fumes among which he lived did nothing to soften it. If his workmen sometimes fell into his vats, he himself oftener fell out with his workmen. This was not to be wondered at, considering the nature of their wages, which, according to no unimportant stipulation, would be as much raw rum as they could drink.

Deacon Giles worked on the Sabbath. He would neither suffer the fires of the distillery to go out or to burn while he was idle; so he kept as busy as they. One Saturday afternoon his workmen had quarrelled, and all went off in anger. He was in much perplexity for want of hands to do the work of the devil on the Lord's day. In the dusk of the evening a gang of singular-looking fellows entered the door of the distillery. Their dress was wild and uncouth, their eyes glared, and their language had a tone that was awful. They offered to work for the deacon, and he on his part was overjoyed, for he thought within himself that, as they had probably been turned out of employment elsewhere, he could engage them on his own terms.

He made them his accustomed offer—as much rum every day when the work was done as they could drink—but they would not take it. Some of them broke out and told him that they had enough of hot things where they came from without drinking damnation in the distillery. And when they said that it seemed to the deacon as if their breath burned blue; but he was not certain, and could not tell what to make of it. Then he offered them a pittance of money; but they set up such a laugh that he thought the roof of the building would fall in. They demanded a sum which the deacon said he could not give, and would not, to the best set of workmen that ever lived, much less to such piratical-looking scape-jails as they. Finally he said he would give half what they asked, if they would take two-thirds of that in Bibles. When he mentioned the word Bibles they all looked towards the door and made a step backwards, and the deacon thought they trembled; but whether it was with anger or delirium tremens, or something else, he could not tell. However, they winked and made signs to each other, and then one of them, who seemed to be the head man, agreed with the deacon that if he would let them work by night instead of day they would stay with him awhile and work on his own terms. To this he agreed, and they immediately went to work.

The deacon had a fresh cargo of molasses to be worked up, and a great many hogsheads then in from his country customers to be filled with liquor. When he went home he locked up the doors, leaving the distillery to his new workmen. As soon as he was gone you would have thought that one of the chambers of hell had been transported to earth with all its inmates. The distillery glowed with fires and burned hotter than ever before; and the figures of the demons passing to and fro, and leaping and yelling in the midst of their work, made it look like the entrance to the bottomless pit.

Some of them sat astride the rafters, over the heads of the others, and amused themselves with blowing flames out of their mouths. The work of distilling seemed play to them, and they carried it on with supernatural rapidity. It was hot enough to have boiled the molasses in any part of the distillery; but they did not seem to mind it at all. Some lifted the hogsheads as easily as you would raise a tea-cup, and turned their contents into the proper receptacles; some scummed the boiling liquids; some, with huge ladles, dipped the smoking fluid from the different vats, and, raising it high in the air, seemed to take great delight in watching the fiery stream as they spouted it back again; some drafted the distilled liquor into empty casks and hogsheads; some stirred the fires; all were boisterous and horribly profane, and seemed to engage in their work with such familiar and malignant satisfaction that I concluded the business of distilling was as natural as hell, and must have originated there.

I gathered from their talk that they were going to play a trick upon the deacon that should cure him of offering rum and Bibles to his workmen; and I soon found out from their conversation and movements what it was. They were going to write certain inscriptions on all his rum-casks that should remain invisible until they were sold by the deacon, but should flame out in characters of fire as soon as they were broached by his retailers or exposed to the use of the drunkards.

When they had filled a few casks with liquor, one of them took a great coal of fire, and, having quenched it in a mixture of rum and molasses, proceeded to write, apparently by way of experiment, upon the heads of the different vessels. Just as it was dawn they left off work, and all vanished together.

In the morning the deacon was puzzled to know how the workmen got out of the distillery, which he found fast locked as he had left it. He was still more amazed to find that they had done more work in one night than could have been accomplished in the ordinary way, in three weeks. He pondered the things not a little, and almost concluded that it was the work of supernatural agents. At any rate, they had done so much that he thought he could afford to attend meeting that day, as it was the Sabbath. Accordingly he went to church, and heard his minister say that God could pardon sin without an atonement, that the words hell and devil were mere figures of speech, and that all men would certainly be saved. He was much pleased, and inwardly resolved that he would send his minister a half-cask of wine; and, as it happened to be communion Sabbath, he attended meeting all day.

In the evening the men came again, and again the deacon locked them in to themselves, and they went to work. They finished all his molasses, and filled all his rum-barrels, and kegs, and hogsheds with liquor, and marked them all, as on the preceding night, with invisible inscriptions. Most of the titles ran thus:

CONSUMPTION SOLD HERE.

Inquire at Deacon Giles's Distillery.

CONVULSIONS AND EPILEPSIES.

Inquire at Amos Giles's Distillery.

INSANITY AND MURDER.

Inquire at Deacon Giles's Distillery.

DROPSY AND RHEUMATISM, PUTRID FEVER AND CHOLERA IN THE COLLAPSE.

Inquire at Amos Giles's Distillery.

DELIRIUM TREMENS.

Inquire at Deacon Giles's Distillery.

Many of the casks had on them inscriptions like the following:

DISTILLED DEATH AND LIQUID DAMNATION.

The Elixir of Hell for the bodies of those whose souls are coming there.

Some of the demons had even taken sentences from the Scriptures, and marked the hogsheds thus:

WHO HATH WOE?

Inquire at Deacon Giles's Distillery.

WHO HATH REDNESS OF EYES?

Inquire at Deacon Giles's Distillery.

Others had written sentences like the following:

A POTION FROM THE LAKE OF FIRE AND BRIMSTONE.

Inquire at Deacon Giles's Distillery.

All of these inscriptions burned, when visible, a "still and awful red." One of the most terrible in its appearance was as follows:

WEeping AND WAILING AND GNASHING OF TEETH.

Inquire at Deacon Giles's Distillery.

In the morning the workmen vanished as before just as it was dawn; but in the dusk of the evening they came again, and told the deacon it was against their principles to take any wages for work done between Saturday night and Monday morning, and, as they could not stay with him any longer, he was welcome to what they had done. The deacon was very urgent to have them remain, and offered to hire them for the season at any wages, but they would not. So he thanked them, and they went away, and he saw them no more.

In the course of the week most of the casks were sent into the country, and duly hoisted on their stoups in conspicuous situations in the taverns and groceries and the rum-shops. But no sooner had the first glass been drawn from any of them than the invisible inscriptions flamed out on the cask-head to every beholder: "Consumption sold here; Delirium Tremens, Damnation, and Hell-fire."

The drunkards were terrified from the dram-shops, the bar-rooms were emptied of their customers; but in their place a gaping crowd filled every store that possessed a cask of the deacon's devil-distilled liquor, to wonder and be affrighted at the spectacle; for no art could efface the inscriptions. And even when the liquor was drawn into new casks the same deadly letters broke out in blue and red flames all over the surface.

The rum-sellers and grocers and tavern-keepers were full of fury. They loaded their teams with the accursed liquor and drove it back to the distillery. All around and before the door of the deacon's establishment the returned casks were piled one upon another, and it seemed as if the inscriptions burned brighter than ever. Consumption, Damnation, Death, and Hell mingled together in frightful confusion; and in equal prominence in every case flamed out the direction:

Inquire at Deacon Giles's Distillery.

One would have thought that the bare sight would have been enough to terrify every drunkard from his cups, and every trader from the dreadful traffic in ardent spirits. Indeed, it had some effect for a time, but it was not lasting, and the demons knew it would not be when they played the trick; for they knew the deacon would continue to make rum, and that as long as he continued to make it there would be people to buy and drink it. And so it proved.

The deacon had to turn a vast quantity of liquor into the streets and burn up the hogsheds, and his distillery has smelled of brimstone ever since; but he would not give up the trade. He carries it on still; and every time I see his advertisement, "Inquire at Amos Giles's Distillery" I think I see hell and damnation, and he the proprietor.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The revival services in Wheaton, Ill., have continued for several weeks in the Wesleyan church, Wheaton. Many have been converted; some saved from a life of vice; and hundreds quickened in the divine life. Of the 160 students in the College this term all have been moved and nearly all brought to Christ through the students' daily and weekly meetings and these special services.

—Bro. B. Loveless of Wheaton held revival services in DeWitt, Iowa, during November, the Lord blessing the effort to some one hundred souls who found Christ. He is now engaged in the work of salvation in Grand Junction, Iowa, with cheering results. Bro. Loveless is a business man with no preparation for his work but zeal for God and faith and the power of the Spirit. He has for several years labored much in the missions of this city.

—The Texas Free Methodist conference adopted strong resolutions, condemning secretism as incompatible with Christian experience, with the Bible and republican government, and promising to co-operate in exposing and combating the evils of the system.

—Several Methodist ministers and a number of lay workers in Chicago, Ill., prayed all night lately, in the Wabash Avenue Methodist church, for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit on that city.

—As a result of union meetings held at Martin's Ferry, Ohio, under the leadership of Rev. Alexander Patterson, an evangelist, 111 persons have been added to the Presbyterian church of that place.

—Mrs. Jennie H. Caldwell, well known in Illinois as an evangelist and a Wheaton graduate of 1865 is holding meetings in the First M. E. church of Elgin, Ill., and above one hundred have manifested a determination to lead the new life. The press reports speak of the eloquence and simplicity of Mrs. Caldwell's addresses, and the persuasive power of her appeals; and claim for her a place among our best speakers on Gospel themes.

—Rev. A. Smith, the blind pastor of the Free Methodist church, Saratoga, N. Y., writes an earnest Christian warning to world-absorbed men in the Eagle of that city. The editor commends him as "the absolute antipodes of that despicable creature—the policy preacher."

—Rev. S. C. Marshall, D. D., has been compelled, on account of continued ill health, to resign the presidency of Tarkio College, Missouri. The Board reluctantly accepted the resignation. This institution is under the charge of the United Presbyterians.

—Rev. Wm. Johnston, D. D., of College Springs, Iowa, received at communion, Dec. 12th, an addition of six by profession. Dr. Johnston preached for the Second Church, Omaha, Sabbath, the 19th.

—A remarkable Methodist revival is being conducted at Decatur, Ill., by Rev. George Wilson, of the Southern Illinois Conference, who is said to be a worthy rival of Sam Jones. At all meetings the church is thronged, and many conversions are reported.

—The evangelist, Moody, will hold revival meetings at Ithica, N. Y., in January. It is hoped that the work among the students of Cornell College may be reached, as well as those of Harvard.

—During the past six years, in Southern Dakota, a Presbyterian church has been organized for every month, and a church building has been erected for every other month. Five colleges and academy halls have been built.

—Dr. and Mrs. Sturge, formerly of Siam, are now engaged in work among the Japanese in San Francisco. They have a large evening school, and several come to the home of Dr. Sturge, during the day, to be taught by his wife. The work under their leadership is most hopeful.

—At the close of the evening session of the Medical Students' Missionary Conference held on Dec. 12th, at the Young Men's Christian Association building of this city, seventeen men pledged themselves, God permitting, to go as foreign missionaries; of this number fifteen were medical students.

—The Christian Standard, Cincinnati, commenting on the order of the Knights of Pythias order to pray for their dead members, says: "How can any enlightened Christian have fellowship with such superstition and mockery? If we are to trust what we have seen with our own eyes, these Knights of Pythias had better bestow their sympathies and their prayers on the living of their order, that they may be kept from patronizing saloons and drinking freely of beer on their gala days."

—Rev. Emory J. Hayes, pastor of the Tremont Temple Baptist church, Boston, said in a late sermon: "What effect will joining a fraternity have upon the domestic relations? Every married man's duty is, first, even before the church, to his home. I lift my voice against any club, regiment organization, fraternity, or church that makes any man's domestic circle less blessed or happy. The only danger of the secret society is, that it may interfere with the duty to the Christian church."

—"The Japan Mail reports a most remarkable preaching service held in Tokio, in the largest theatre of the city. The audiences are estimated from 4,500 to 6,000 each day. The preaching was mostly by native Japanese pastors, and the people listened for hours each day, while the Gospel was preached to them. The Mail says: 'The large attendance, the earnest attention, with so little dissent or interruption, in so public and free a place as the most popular theater in Tokio, give evidence of a marked advance in favor of Christianity within the space of one short year.'"

—Four young men have left New York to join Bishop Taylor's African Mission. By trade they are a carpenter, a miner, a physician, and a farmer. A tanner was called for, but none applied. Each expects to earn his own living, as well as to preach and teach. Bishop Taylor has written that his most pressing need is a steamboat to use in planting missions on the Upper Congo; and the Transit and Building Fund Society is taking steps toward buying one at a cost of $15,000.

—It has been suggested that the 17th of October next be observed throughout the Protestant world as Tyndale Day, this being the three hundred and fiftieth year since his martyrdom, two hundred and two years after the death of Wycliffe. It was on Friday, the sixth day of October, 1536, that William Tyndale, one of the most learned men of his age, who had given his energies to the revision of the Bible in the English language, was led forth and tied to a stake, when, having been first strangled, his body was burned to ashes. He was no less a hero than was Wycliffe, or Luther, and his version of the Scriptures was of great value, being used for a long time as the best extant, and being the base of several of those which succeeded it.

—Sir Monier Williams, Professor of Sanskrit in Oxford University, declares that Buddhism has entirely died out in India proper, the place of its origin, and is rapidly dying out in other Asiatic countries. He thinks the devotees of the religion do not number over 100,000,000 at the present time, and that the exaggerated ideas with regard to the population, together with the forgetfulness of the millions who worship no one but their own ancestors, account for the idea that the Confucianists are so numerous. His own opinion is that in point of numbers Christianity stands at the head of all the religions of the world. The order following Christianity he believes to be Hindooism (including Brahmanism, Jainism, demon and fetish worship), Confucianism, Mohammedanism, Buddhism, Taoism, Judaism, and Zoroastrianism.

—The new "Armour Mission," is destined to grow into one of the signal institutions of Chicago. The building is one which Dr. Scudder declares to be the finest for its purpose he has ever seen in any part of the world. It is situated on Thirty-third and Dearborn streets, is 85x185 feet, and three stories in height. The main audience room has seats for 1,100. Admirable room for almost all manner of utilities are provided, and arranged with the utmost ingenuity and skill. The design is to have a building that shall be in use day and night, seven days in the week. Altogether it appears to be a capital instance of a genuine philanthropy, favored with abundant means, seeing clear and thinking straight in full view of the needs of the place. The germ of the institution was the Plymouth Mission, started about twelve years ago, by Dr. J. H. Hollister and others of the Plymouth church. As the original mission grew and proved its value, Mr. J. F. Armour, who has since died, also a member of Plymouth church, aided it, and at his death directed that $100,000 of his estate should be given to the development of the mission. His brother, Philip Armour—known the world over by his enormous meat-packing establishment, the products of which go toward feeding the hungry in nearly all lands—has taken the matter up, after his own large and sagacious way, intending to devote to the institution and its comprehensive enterprise, a half million dollars, if need be.

LODGE NOTES.

The Knights of Labor assemblies comprising machinists, boiler-makers, blacksmiths, and kindred trades, are reported to have petitioned the executive board for a national trade charter, and failing to secure it, will, it is said, secede from the order.

Lieutenant General Underwood has appointed Chevalier Charles H. Randall, Grand Representative from California, to be Colonel and Assistant Judge Advocate General upon the Staff of the Lieutenant General. Colonel Randall has the congratulations of —. This is a sample notice from the lodge journals. How does it sound, Americans?

A lodge organ says: "In the I. O. O. F. Ohio leads all the other States in the number and efficiency of degree staffs. There are about 700 lodges and over 400 staffs. Staff work for the degrees is everywhere becoming almost indispensable. An outfit of fair quality and suitable for small lodges may be purchased for two or three hundred dollars, but nobody owns cost from one to three thousand dollars, according to taste and ability." This beautiful and benevolent attachment to these charitable orders must add wonderfully in helping the poor this winter.

The trial of the six Knights of Labor charged with wrecking a freight train on the Missouri Pacific during the strike last spring, and thus murdering two men, was begun in the District Court at Wyandotte, Kan., last Monday. Ex-Governor Charles Johnson, of St. Louis, and Congressman Warren, of Kansas City, are aiding in the defense, and the case will be strongly contested by both sides.

The order of United Workmen has a military degree called Select Knights. This is entirely a side degree, and is not controlled by the State or National organizations of the order. A lodge organ says, "They do not sustain the same relations as do the Knights Templar to Masonry or the Camp to Odd-fellowship, but that is the direction in which they are working and some day hope to attain."

The first Printer's union of which any record can be found was formed in London in 1810, its object being "to correct irregularities and to bring the modes of charge from custom and precedent into one point of view, in order to their being better understood by all concerned." From this very innocent beginning has grown a great despotism.

The Freemasons of Pittsburgh are in very close relation with the Episcopalian churches. In 1824 they laid the corner stone of Trinity church, and repeated the performance in 1871 when a new building was begun. Lately they were again asked by St. Luke's church to hold their heathen ceremonies over a corner stone. The contents of the stone, as reported in the Gazette, will cause some doubt in the minds of a stranger whether the building is more lodge or church.

Official notice is given to Joseph I. Sayles, department commander of the G. A. R. of the State of New York, from Gen. Lucius M. Fairchild, commander-in-chief of the national encampment G. A. R. to the effect that the national court martial of which PostCommander Nevins, of New Jersey, was president, has found H. Clay Hall, post commander of the department of New York, guilty of misappropriating to his own use $1,250 of the department's money, and sentenced him to be dishonorably discharged and dismissed from the Grand Army of the Republic. The commander-in-chief has approved of the findings and will see that the sentence is executed.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN GLOVES

Made from Prawn Skin Kid, a very durable and hand some material, unknown East. Prices from $1 to $1.50 for Common Length; $2.50 for Button Cut. Driving Gauntlets made to order for Ladies or Gents, every stitch made. Postage paid. Also Indian Tanned Gloves, Moccasins, Fur and Cloth Clothing (fringed and plain), Leggings, Money Belts, etc. Buckskin for sale. Samples of Leather with stitching free. Also Catalogue of hundreds of styles of Gloves and Leather Novelties, and references to the manufacturer. Discount to agents. Refuse, Union Bank, Denver. A. AVERY, Denver, Colorado.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50. This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and control their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, BY THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

BUSINESS.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Dec. 20 to Dec. 25 inclusive:

E. A. Bacon, J. Steel, E. B. Gillett, M. A. Adams, Mrs. T. Ginn, A. Lake, Mrs. D. Keir, Mrs. W. W. White, A. Roach, W. Slosson, H. T. Ferguson, R. Hammond, S. Baldrige, E. Houchin, A. G. Richey, R. Burlington, S. S. Martin, M. Root, S. M. DeVilbiss, S. Bushey, N. C. Tyrell, A. Cowley, A. Hamilton, E. Marcy, S. Bell, F. W. Smith, L. F. Keeney, Rev. L. A. Johnston, J. Stuart, W. Patterson, A. G. Cutler, D. Callow, R. E. Glancy, A. W. Clapp, Jesse Hunter, A. F. Rider, S. F. Robinson, J. C. Young, E. P. Dow, J. Patterson, W. Bell, M. E. Strother, C. R. Hunt, J. N. Norris, L. Gishwiller, J. Powers, W. F. Davis, J. F. Icke.

SOUTHERN MINISTERS' FUND.

John Jones, $7.00; James Steel, $3.50; Ansel Lake, $7.00; Increase Leadbetter, $5.00; J. A. Gibson, $.50; Mrs. A. F. Rider, $10.00; Louis Gishwiller, $1.65; A. Hamilton, $2.00.

OUR PARTNERS.

There are hundreds of places where only one Cynosure is taken. If the subscription list is enlarged in these places, it must be done by our resident partners.

If you need the enthusiasm of a crowd to enable you to push the Cynosure successfully, think of the companies and battalions of workers situated just as you are, and fighting the same kind of a fight. You are one of a battalion! God grant you victory in the good work, and at least one new subscriber from each post office.

Those who receive the Cynosure with this item marked, will understand that the subscription is paid for by some friend, and will be stopped when the time expires unless ordered to be continued.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. H. H. Hinman, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Iowa, C. F. Hawley, Wayne, Henry Co. Care Rev. Geo. Fry.

Illinois, I. R. B. Arnold, Wheaton.

Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.

N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.

J. H. Timmons, Tazewell, Pa.

T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.

E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.

H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.

M. B. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.

A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.

J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.

M. W. Love, Osceola, Mo.

T. S. Walter, Kit. Jay Co., Ind.

J. L. Barlow, Wheaton, Ill.

A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill.

Wm. Fenton St. Paul, Minn.

E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.

Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.

J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.

J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.

S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.

E. Barnettson, Haskinsville, Steuben Co., N. Y.

Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.

D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND FRIENDLY GREETINGS

Is a FORTY-PAGE, ILLUSTRATED, monthly family magazine edited by J. F. AVERY, Halifax, N. S.

Price, 75 Cents per Year if Prepaid.

Its columns are devoted to TEMPERANCE, MISSIONARY INTELLIGENCE, HOUSEHOLD HINTS, SHORT STORIES AND ILLUSTRATIONS, making 25 pages of reading matter, suitable and profitable for young and old. With an average of twelve illustrations in each number, this will give a magazine of 40 pages monthly for 75 cents a year, and will, therefore, be one of the cheapest read. Specimen copies sent for two cents stamps.

will be given if you get 20 subscribers.

"Buds and Blossoms" is endorsed by Christians and ministers of all denominations. One writes: "The cover has been a comfort and blessing to me. Every page is calculated to bring one nearer to the Lord." "We wish you ever increasing success in your work." "To see B. & B. to want and to love." "It should be in every home."

A record of Faith Work.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Families are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming year. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We will send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian.....	$2 50
The American (Washington).....	2 50
Western Rural.....	3 00
The Missionary Review.....	3 00
Christian Herald (N. Y.).....	2 75
The Truth (St. Louis).....	2 50
Illustrated Christian Weekly.....	3 90
New York Witness.....	2 50
Union Signal.....	3 00
Christian Statesman (Phila.).....	3 50
The Interior.....	3 85
The Independent.....	4 25
The S. B. Times.....	3 50
Gospel in all Lands.....	3 50
The Nation.....	4 50
New York Tribune, Weekly.....	2 50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly.....	2 50
Gospel Inter Ocean, Weekly.....	2 50
Harper's Magazine.....	4 75
North American Review.....	5 75
The Century.....	5 25
Scientific American.....	4 25
Buds and Blossoms.....	2 10
Pansy.....	2 35
Vick's Magazine.....	2 50
American Agriculturist.....	2 60

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

SPECIAL

HOLIDAY OFFER!

For December 1886 only!

To all who send $2.00 for the Cynosure for one year in advance we will send a copy of BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS, free!

SONGS

FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE AND SPIRIT-STERLING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—O—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
22 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

"A THRILLING WARNING,"

THE

Man Traps of the City.

BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons

The Tiger and His Den.

Cups of Flame.

The Scarlet Sin.

Embezzlement.

The Devil's Printing Press.

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the fact that it shows like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shown of their mask, robbed of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the purulent literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the prodigal is here shown in its true light, not as a life of sin, though wicked, has its delight, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, cloth bound, 75 cents.

Paper bound, 50 cents.

Address W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

DAKOTA ADMITTED

as well as all States and Territories into our Great Family of Readers. A great staff of new Western writers will specially adapt (during 1887) the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST to Western Agriculture, making it, with recent additions and improvements, the recognized authority, as for forty years past, in all matters pertaining to Agriculture, Horticulture, etc. etc. The JUVENILE, HEARTY and HOUSEHOLD DEPARTMENTS have been enlarged, and HUNTING Exposures are to receive additional attention.

1,000 Original Illustrations.

Every issue of the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST contains nearly 100 original illustrations of animals, plants, new farm and household conveniences and appliances, out-door scenes, etc.

Splendid Engravings Free!!

HOMES OF OUR FARMER PRESIDENTS

It is noteworthy that a majority of our Presidents were reared on farms, or retired from public life to rural scenes. The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is now publishing and sending free to all subscribers, at an outlay of over $50,000, superb Engravings (18 by 24 inches in size) of these Homes, together with special descriptive papers by James Farion, Donald G. Mitchell and other eminent writers of American authors. These engravings constitute a magnificent portfolio of choice and extensive circulation, and are of permanent value. Subscriptions for 1887 immediately forwarded are entitled to all the series, beginning in May.

Endorsed by the U. S. Government.

Vol. 8th, Tenth Census, U. S. says: "The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is a work of merit, and because of the remarkable success that has attended the unique and untiring efforts of its proprietors to increase and extend its circulation, its contents are duplicated every month for a German Edition, which also circulates widely."

Price, $1.50 a year; Single Numbers, 15c.

Release of this year FREE to all subscribers immediately. Send Six Cents for mailing you Grand Double Number, just out, 32-page Premium List, and Sample Proof of our Engravings, and receive the Farmer Presidents' together with description by James Farion. Address

AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

DAVID W. JUDD, Pub., 751 Broadway, N. Y.

CANVASSERS WANTED EVERYWHERE.

We will club the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST with the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE for $2.50 per year, every person who sends us his address, and receives the engravings free for next year and this year also.

The Christian's Secret

OF

A Happy Life.

28th THOUSAND.

Baptist Commendation.

"delighted with this book. It reaches to the core of Christian experience, and is eminent for its practicality. It is a book that meets the doubts and difficulties of conscientious seekers after the bread and water of life, but whose effort result only in ultimate failure and victory. The author, without claiming to be a theologian, sends out the results of a rich and deep experience, and tells it in a happy Christian life."—Baptist Weekly.

Presbyterian Endorsement.

"The book is so truly and reverentially devout in its spirit that it deserves critical notice. It contains so much that is sound and practical, so much that, if heeded, will make our lives better, happier and more useful, that the intelligent reader who really wishes to lead a life 'hid with Christ in God' can scarcely fail to derive profit from its perusal."—Interior.

Methodist Word of Praise.

"We have not only read a book with more delight and profit. It is not a theological book. No effort is made to change the theological views of any one. The author has his own experience, and tells it in a plain and delightful manner."—Christian Advocate.

United Brethren's Approval.

"We have seldom met with a more interesting volume, abounding throughout with wise illustrations, we have failed to find a dry line from title-page to tail."—Religious Telescope.

Congregational Comment.

"It contains much clear, pungent reasoning and interesting incident. It is a practical and experimental lesson taught out of God's word, and is worthy of universal circulation."—Church World.

This enlarged edition is a beautiful large 12mo volume of 340 pages.

Price, in cloth, richly stamped, 75 cts.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE

CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason — and especially by HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTY CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friends. Full catalogue at 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

HOME AND HEALTH.

LITTLE THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

That a bag of hot sand relieves neuralgia.

That warm borax water will remove dandruff.

That salt should be eaten with nuts to aid digestion.

That milk which stands too long makes bitter butter.

That rusty flat-irons should be rubbed over with beeswax and lard.

That a hot, strong lemonade taken at bedtime will break up a bad cold.

That tough meat is made tender by lying a few minutes in vinegar and water.

That a little soda water will relieve sick headache caused by indigestion.

That a cup of strong coffee will remove the odor of onions from the breath.

That a cup of hot water drunk before meals will prevent nausea and dyspepsia.

That well-ventilated bedrooms will prevent morning headaches and lassitude.

That consumptive night sweats may be arrested by sponging the body nightly in salt water.

That one in a faint should be laid flat on his back, then loosen his clothes and let him alone.

That a fever patient can be made cool and comfortable by frequent sponging off with soda water.

That cold tea should be saved for your vinegar barrel. It sours easily and gives color and flavor.

That to beat the whites of eggs quickly add a pinch of salt. Salt cools, and cold eggs froth rapidly.

That the hair may be kept from falling out after illness by a frequent application to the scalp of sage tea.

That you can take out spots from wash goods by rubbing them with the yolk of an egg before washing.

That white spots upon varnished furniture will disappear if you hold a hot plate from the stove over them.

EARACHE AND LEG ACHE.

One of our little girls has been troubled with earache since her babyhood. No sores have ever gathered, but a cold or exposure to a strong wind is almost certain to cause her acute suffering with earache. After trying nearly everything that I have seen or heard recommended, I have settled on this application as giving surest and quickest relief. It is a flannel bag stuffed with hops and wrung from hot vinegar. I lay the bag over the child's ear, as hot as she will bear it, cover the whole side of the face with dry flannel and change the hop bag as often as it becomes cool. The warm steam filling the child's ear soon relieves the pain.

Stuffing the ear with the "heart of a roasted onion," tricklings of molasses, wads of peppered cotton and lumps of mutton tallow, has never yet, in my experience, eased earache, and such irritating messes crowded or poured into the delicate labyrinth of the ear do much mischief.

Another child is a victim of leg ache. Inherited, possibly, for well do we remember what we suffered with its tortures in our childhood. Heat and moisture gave us relief and, following in our mother's footsteps, we have routed night after night from our warm quarters, in the dead of winter, to kindle fires and fill frosty kettles from water-pails thickly crusted with ice, that we might get the writhing pedal extremities of our little heir into a tub of hot water as quickly as possible. But lately we have learned all this work and exposure is needless. We simply wring a towel from salted water—a bowl of it standing in our sleeping room, ready for such an emergency—wrap the limb in it from ankle to knee, without taking the child from his bed, and then swathe with dry flannels, thick and warm, tucking the blankets about him a little closer, and relief is sure.

A croupy cough can often be loosened and prevented by swathing the throat with dry, warm flannels; a thick pack of them to sweat the throat and chest often helps so speedily that it is not necessary to sicken the child with ipecac, or to wake the house kindling fires and preparing hot packs.—Clarissa Potter in Good Housekeeping.

Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT.—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y AND GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is: "To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being leproyed, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform. FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. P. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Rudbeck, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, William; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulah, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Sec., H. W. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., James Harvey.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Bender, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr., Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Waseja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec., Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. B. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Rev. R. M. Smith, Pagetown; Rec. Sec., Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Cor. Sec., Rev. A. M. Campbell, Cedarville; Treas., W. P. Clark, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Monaca; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird, St. Johnsbury; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Cor. Sec., W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas. M. R. Britten, Vienna.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.

Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.

New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.

College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.

First Congregational, Leland, Mich.

Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.

Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.

Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.

Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.

Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.

West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES.

adoption the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonic, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Conaberville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeson, Ill.; Bann, Ill.; Strykerville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solisbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Other churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Mereno and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky.; Utick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Secretaries. II.—Masonic Blunder. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR ILLUSTRATED.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN WORK"

AND AN
Historical Sketch of the Order.

Price 25 Cents.

For Sale by NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO.

Talks

ON THE

Labor Troubles,

BY REV. C. C. BROWN.

The Danger—The Laborer's Grievance—The Laborer's Foe—The Laborer's Fallacy—The Laborer's Hope—Mind and Muscle—Co-Laborers.

TIMELY TALKS ON AN IMPORTANT SUBJECT.

The Papers Say of this Book:

"It is well to remind the world of the great law of human brotherhood, but how to make the 'more general application of it?' 'Aye, there's the rub!' Our author contributes his mite in the direction, and his voice and reasoning will reach some ears and perhaps touch some understandings and move some selfish hearts that are hitherto very closely and hedged around by over much respectability and comfortable prosperity."—Chicago Tribune.

"The writer does his work in a way remarkable, alike for its directness, its common sense, its impartiality, its lucidity and its force. He has no theories to support; he deals with facts as he finds them; he fortifies his assertions by arrays of demonstrative statistics. The work is among the best of the kind. It is not the best that we have seen. While it is scarcely possible for it to be put in the hands of all our wage-workers, we wish it could be read by every one of them."—Chicago Interior.

Extra Cloth 60c., Paper 30c.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO, Ill.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform

Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform.

Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood,
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago.

REVISED "ODD-FELLOWSHIP

ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Hehkah (Knights) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate, with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred four-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teaching of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Chicago Book" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 75 cents; per dozen $6.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

IN BRIEF.

J. H. Norton, a wealthy citizen of Bartholomew county, Ind., has gotten himself into trouble in rather a peculiar manner. A few days ago a friend ordered the Phalanx, a Prohibition organ, to be sent to Norton, and yesterday the paper was returned to the office with the following written upon the margin: "This paper is better suited to satiate the swinish tastes of a ballot box-stuffing, whisky-drinking Democracy than a loyal soldier, a Christian and a scholarly Republican." And to this diatribe the name of Mr. Norton was inscribed in a full, round hand. To-day Norton was arrested by the federal authorities for violating the law in writing upon the margin of a newspaper, and also for sending an indecent communication through the mails.

The Christian Advocate of New York says: "There is a kind of mania far more common than that described in the preceding note [the religious]. When George Francis Train was in the Tombs some years ago, some physicians, one of whom had a high reputation as a money-getter, went as experts to examine into his mental condition. Said Mr. Train, with the acuteness that often marks those in an abnormal state, addressing the money-getter: 'Doctor, what form of insanity are you examining me for?' 'Monomania, sir.' 'Doctor, is there such a disease as monomania?' This disorder, under cover of taking care of one's own often refuses to relieve the poor. There are only one or two passages for the poor lunatic who gave all he had to the poor; there are thousands to teach money-maniacs their delusion."

Some curious facts were lately related regarding hydrophobia before the Academy of Sciences, Paris, by M. Bert. It seems that inoculation with mucus from the respiratory passages of a mad dog caused rabies, but that with the salivary liquids did not. Reciprocal transfusion of blood between a healthy and a mad dog caused no rabies in the former.

A malignant tumor, Les Mondes states, was produced on the cheek of a man by the bite of a large black fly, which was killed in the act. The pustule was cauterized, and the patient took internally in twenty-four hours 500 grams of Spanish wine, 300 grams of rum, and 200 grams of Chartreuse without experiencing the least symptoms of intoxication.

The Japanese fruit kaki (diospyros) has been successfully cultivated in France during the last year, and why can it not be introduced into this country, thus adding to the fruits on sale in our markets one that is said to compare favorably with the best English apricots? It belongs to the same family as the persimmon, and is universally raised and highly prized in both Japan and China.

In New York city there are two hundred thousand women and girls employed in ninety-two trades. They earn from four to eight dollars per week. Hundreds of cases are reported where women work from fourteen to seventeen hours per day at from four to seven dollars a week. Loss of time, from ill health and inability to obtain work, reduces their earnings till they barely sustain life. Many of them are wronged and on various pretexts deprived of their pay. The rules of many factories are abusive and the home life of such laborers is pitiable, being passed in circumstances where decency and womanly respects is impossible. About nineteen thousand tenement houses accommodate fifty persons each, and some of them three times as many. The condition of a large number of the poor is a reproach to our age.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 22 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revived Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United States of Knights of Pythias, and the Orange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 96 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for the Christian Cynosure Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A GENEROUS OFFER!

Four Entertaining Books GIVEN AWAY.

To each subscriber for the Cynosure who sends in a $2.00 subscription for one year in advance on or before JANUARY 1st, 1887. See Special Offer Below.

GEN. O. O. HOWARD, The Salient Characteristics and Leading Events of His Life, illustrating his Career as a Christian Soldier. By Laura C. Holloway. 12mo, 235 pp., paper.

OUT OF EGYPT. Bible Readings on the Book of Exodus. By George F. Pentecost, D. D. 12mo., 214 pp., paper.

"To him who wishes a spicy, lively set of notes on the events of Exodus, both readable and attractive, this book will be most acceptable."—Louisville Christian Advocate.

"Many fresh, interesting thoughts are to be found on almost every page."—Toronto Globe.

WVCLIFFE. Patriot and Reformer. "The Morning Star of the Reformation." By John Laird Wilson. 12mo, 247 pp., paper.

"This is the fullest, fairest, most accurate and most connected memoir of the great forerunner of reformers to be found anywhere within the compass of so small a volume. Nothing essential is omitted, and scarcely anything extraneous is permitted to make its appearance. The author has used his authorities with an independent judgment, and has never allowed himself to be seduced into the merely pictorial."—Washington Post.

WORKING PEOPLE AND THEIR EMPLOYERS By Washington Gladden. 12mo, 241 pp., paper.

"This book we cordially commend. It is sound and economic in principle and Christian in spirit."—N. Y. Examiner.

Special Offer.

To any one who will send us $2.00, the subscription price of the CYNOSURE, on or before January 1st, 1887, we will send the paper one year and THE ABOVE FOUR BOOKS FREE! The retail price of the books alone, in paper, is $1.00; in cloth, $4.00. Don't miss the chance! Accept quickly!

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and for the purpose designed, as well as a discovery of great importance!"

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-douging, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or saline on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes at a time, sometimes cures. Think of eight hours continuous action on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

How E. L. HENMAN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York. "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh, coughing incessantly day and night. I bought a Pillow-Inhaler, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO., Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago. Main Office: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR

Illustrated.

"ADELPHON KRYPTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN or SECRET Work."

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

PRICE 25 CENTS.

For Sale by

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

KNIGHT TEMPLAR ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 64 pages, in cloth, $1.00; $5.00 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c. $4.00 per dozen.

For sale in any quantities at

Seeds or Books Free With This Paper!

To any of our subscribers or any other person we will send, for only $3.00.

The Christian Cynosure

AND THE FARM, FIELD AND STOCKMAN,

both one year, and in addition we will present the subscriber with his choice of either 20 WELL FILLED PACKETS OF SEEDS are mostly new and rare novelties, the object being to introduce new and improved varieties. There are over 100 varieties to select from, comprising the rarest flowers and vegetables, and new varieties of thoroughbred grain, either imported from the best special sources of Europe or purchased from the originator in this country, especially for this distribution. Twenty packets of seeds of like quality cannot be bought at retail for less than $1.50.

The Seeds

The Farm, Field and Stockman is doubtless well known to our readers. Since its present publishers, Gen. C. H. Howard and Jas. W. Wilson, took it in hand it has been second to none of its class. It is an ably edited, neatly printed, reliable, 4-column, 16-page, agricultural and family weekly, and a staunch advocate of farmers' rights—a paper every farmer wants. Price $1.50 a year.

Send the money to this office, and we will promptly forward the paper and an illustrated descriptive list of the above seeds, with full directions for planting the latter, from which a selection can be made; or, if you want to make the selection first, a list will be sent you free on application to the Farm, Field and Stockman, Chicago. This is indeed an unparalleled offer.

Mental Gymnastics; OR Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons; THE STUDENT, His Lessons; THE BUSINESS MAN, His Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test.

The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject.—INTER-OCEAN.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by their wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

NATIONAL SUICIDE, AND ITS PREVENTION.

By OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more percent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield, "E'en his fallings lean to virtue's side."

Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticize. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, cloth bound, $1.00. Paper bound, 75 cents. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

FIFTY YEARS AND BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D., (Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of the life that now is, and to give comfort and help as to the life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the old man a burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveler to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY, ELDER DAVID BERNARD, CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and PRES. J. BLANCHARD. Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

MORGAN MONUMENT

20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

WHAT IS NATIONAL REFORM?

A RIGHT ANSWER TO THIS LEADING QUESTION INVOLVES THE SOLUTION OF

SOCIAL, MORAL AND POLITICAL PROBLEMS.

Can the Question be Answered?

SEND $3 FOR ONE YEAR'S SUBSCRIPTION TO THE CHRISTIAN NATION.

253 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, AND

READ AND LEARN FOR YOURSELF.

BESIDES ITS INTELLIGENT AND POPULAR DISCUSSIONS OF THESE QUESTIONS OF INTEREST TO EVERY MAN AND WOMAN, THE CHRISTIAN NATION IS A Home Paper in the Fullest Sense.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

Senator John A. Logan of Illinois died at his home in Washington Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, from a severe attack of rheumatism.

The House has passed the Senate bill allotting land in severalty to the Indians with numerous amendments which do not interfere with the main feature of the bill.

The Court of Claims has given judgment for $10,816 in favor of the Fourth Brigade of South Carolina State troops in their suit against the United States for the use of a building at Charleston by United States troops during the war.

There are many members of Congress that think that before the present session of Congress comes to an end the Senate resolutions to change the time for the inauguration of future Presidents from the 4th of March to the 30th of April will be considered and passed by the House. Better weather is the reason.

The pension appropriation bill provides for a total expenditure on account of pensions of $76,254,500. The estimates were $76,254,500, and the appropriation for last year was $76,075,200.

The Chief of the Bureau of Statistics reports that the total values of the exports of merchandise from the United States during the twelve months ended Nov. 30, 1886, were $705,320,287; 1885, $702,190,541. The imports were, 1886, $577,828,136; 1885, $659,318,637.

COUNTRY.

Wholesale and retail liquor dealers at Cincinnati propose to test the constitutionality of the Dow law, on the plea that products of other States can not be taxed in Ohio.

Captain Peter E. Lefevre, superintendent of the Savannah line of steamers, was suffocated by coal-gas in his home at New Rochelle, N. Y., Thursday night. His wife is not expected to recover.

Paul Grottkau, the contemptuous anarchist of Milwaukee, was lodged in the house of correction Thursday, to serve his term of thirty days.

The trunk railways of Iowa are willing to make freight concessions to enable stock-feeders to obtain corn at low rates to carry them through the winter.

A building to cost not less than half a million is to be erected at Sioux City in memory of Rev. George C. Haddock, who was murdered by the saloon conspirators. Valuable property, 90x150 feet, was purchased Wednesday for the purpose.

At Fall River, Mass., a surgical operation was performed upon Mrs. Hopkins to relieve her of a silver dollar which she had swallowed eight weeks previously, and which had lodged in her throat below the top of the breast bone. The coin was secured after a difficult and delicate use of the knife, and the indications are that the woman will recover.

James Lynn, Jr., a young farmer living near Wabash, Ind., and his family were stricken recently with a peculiar disease resembling trichinosis. Hundreds of hogs that had died from cholera on Lynn's farm were burned, and the doctors assert that the gases arising from the porkers caused the malady that has afflicted the family.

The tomato pack of 1886 reaches a total of 2,314,460 cases of two dozen tins each, or a total of 55,547,040 cans. Great as is the quantity it is below the consumptive requirements of the country. It gives every family of five persons only five cans per annum.

Twelve persons were injured in a railway accident near Fletchers, N. C., Wednesday, caused by the spreading of the rails. A woman was fatally hurt.

Ex-Alderman McQuade, of New York, was finally convicted of bribery and corruption in connection with the granting of the Broadway Railroad franchise and on Monday was sentenced to seven years imprisonment in Sing Sing and to pay a fine of $5,000.

The engineers, firemen, train-hands, and coal-heavers of the Reading Railroad at Port Richmond, Pa., are on a strike, and the line is blocked with trains between the latter place and the Falls of Schuylkill. Nine schooners are at the docks awaiting cargoes of coal.

Wednesday night masked men went to the house of Jordan Teague (colored,) near Kosciusko, Miss, shot Teague dead, dangerously wounded his wife, and attempted the life of his son, who escaped through a window. The community is greatly excited, as no cause for the outrage is known.

William Mussel, who murdered Daniel Christman and attempted to burn his wife alive, was taken from jail at Eaton, Ohio, Tuesday evening and hanged to the electric light tower. Leading citizens planned the lynching, and women and children viewed the remains as they hung in mid-air.

An explosion of gas Thursday in the coal bunkers of the British steamer Suez, at New Orleans, fatally burned the second engineer and three Chinese firemen, and dangerously burned three other Chinese.

Proceedings were begun by the State at Columbus, Ohio, Thursday, against the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific, and the Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore Railroads for the forfeiture of their franchises. It is charged that the roads have been discriminating in favor of the Standard Oil Company against refineries and other industries of the State.

Caleb Russell's farm-house near Saybrook, Ohio, was destroyed by fire early Thursday morning. The old couple escaped from the flames, but died in a short time, while their demented son was burned to death.

FOREIGN.

The resignation of Lord Randolph Churchill from the British Cabinet last week caused a sensation. The desire to increase the expenses of the Admiralty and War offices, to which Lord Randolph was opposed, indicates, it is believed, that the government is of the opinion that a European war is imminent and that extra naval and military preparation on the part of England are required to make her influence felt on the continent.

An interchange of views between Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues of the last Liberal cabinet on the attitude to be adopted by the Liberal party at the opening of Parliament has resulted in an agreement to support the government in all legal efforts to suppress the anti-entire campaign, but to urge the immediate enforcement of some form of Mr. Parnell's bill for the suppression of evictions.

Uneasiness is felt in Paris over the rapidly with which the government is working to place the armament of France in the completest condition possible. The state manufactories of arms and ammunition are all being worked to their utmost capacity. It is reported from Rome that Italy is arming. Advice from Berlin state that Germany is increasing her troops in Alsace-Lorraine.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	71	@	74
No. 3.....	71	@	74
Winter No. 2.....	73	@	75
Corn—No. 2.....	28	@	30
Oats—No. 2.....	28	@	30
Rye—No. 2.....	28	@	30
Branner ton.....	2	@	12 25
Flour.....	2 00	@	5 00
Hay—Timothy.....	7 00	@	9 50
Mess pork per bbl.....		@	8 90
Butter, medium to best.....	10	@	28
Cheese.....	06	@	13
Beans.....	30	@	1 50
Eggs.....	22	@	24
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 50	@	1 90
Flax.....	92	@	94
Broom corn.....	02 1/2	@	05 1/2
Potatoes.....	1 50	@	4 00
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	05	@	14
Lumber—Common.....	11	@	18 00
Wool.....	11	@	33
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 15	@	5 00
Common to good.....	1 50	@	4 00
Hogs.....	3 00	@	4 50
Sheep.....	2 75	@	4 25

NEW YORK.

Flour.....	3 20	@	5 50
Wheat—Winter.....	60	@	93 1/2
Spring.....		@	91
Corn.....	46 1/2	@	49 1/2
Oats.....	35	@	41
Hay.....		@	12 37
Eggs.....		@	27
Butter.....	12	@	31
Wool.....	13	@	37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 50	@	4 35
Hogs.....	3 50	@	4 15
Sheep.....	1 50	@	2 75

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

THE PHYSICIAN'S FAVORITE!

A predigested, non-irritating, easily assimilated food indicated in all weak and inflamed conditions of the digestive organs, either in infants or adults.

It has been the positive means of saving many lives, having been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

The Most Nourishing, Most Palatable, Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

150 MEALS for an Infant for $1.00.

EASILY PREPARED. At Druggists, 25c., 50c., $1.00.

A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," sent free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

EMPLOYMENT GOOD SALARY
SEE PAID. At home or to travel, state which preferred, also salary wanted. SLOAN & CO., Manufacturers and Wholesale Dealers, 24 George St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

—Florida! Florida!—

A package of Curiosities, containing Florida Grey Moss, Alligator Teeth, Sea Shells, and Shells, will be sent to any one on receipt of 25 cents. Festoons of the Beautiful Grey Moss, for decorating churches and private houses. Address H. M. WOODRUFF, Winter Park, Fla. (Jeweler and Dealer in Florida Curiosities.)

LEPAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Car Co., and by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO. GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. Sample Tin can by Mail, 25c.

LADIES TO INTRODUCE

Our Ladies' Journal in the best homes. We make you the following Liberal Offer: We will send the paper, postpaid, from Sept. 1 to Jan. 1, 1887, on receipt of ONLY 10 CENTS.

AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING

Is decidedly a ladies' journal. Published monthly, handsomely illustrated, filled with original Stories, Poems, with departments on Home Cooking, Art, Receipts, Bric-a-brac, Artistic Needle Work, Window Gardening, Flowers, Mothers' Corner, Children's Nook, Household Pets and all Home Subjects. By many of our best writers. Subscription price, 10 cents per year. Combined Tracing Wheel and Scissors. An indispensable article for every woman, made of the best English steel, hand-forged, oil-tempered. Every pair warranted. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. Or we will send the scissors to any one that will send two subscribers to AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING and $1.00. American Housekeeping Co., 143 LaSalle street, Chicago.

EUTOCIA A Book for every woman.

Introductory preface by EDGERT GUERNSEY, M. D., also preface by Dr. G. S. Safford, and chapters on the management of infants by the same experienced author. Mothers, Wives and Daughters. Not a compilation of other works and clippings, but the careful, practical study of Mrs. Dr. E. G. Cook, for over a quarter of a century. It is ENDORSED by leading Ministers, Physicians, Daily, Weekly, Religious and Medical Press. It treats fully on easy childbearing, and the health of children. In short a complete manual for the household. Mailed free on receipt of price where there are no Agents. Alphabetical table of contents. AGENTS find a ready sale for 10 cents free. Cloth, $2.00. Morocco, $2.50. Sent by mail. ARCADE PUB. CO., 143 LaSalle St., Chicago.

OUR LATEST BOOK. HARVEST FOR THE HOLIDAYS. NOW IN PRESS.

WITH PICTURES.

Cynosure's Outfit now ready. New, original, and taking. Heavy, super-calendered paper, superb binding, new and instructive illustrations. Prices low, to meet the times, and full particulars sent free on application. Our territorial rights are now open for the assignment of exclusive territory to both general and local agents. Complete canvasser's outfit, $1.00. General Agents wanted for Colorado, Dakota, Kansas, Iowa, Pennsylvania, New York, and Southern States. For particulars, address—

The J. E. WHITE PUBLISHING CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

Fac Simile Series.

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps, Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

MASON & HAMLIN

ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years. 100 styles, $25 to $500. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rent. Catalogue, $6.00, $10.00, $15.00, free.

PIANOS.

The Improved Method of Stringing, Introduced and perfected by MASON & HAMLIN, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Piano-forte construction. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO

154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in the United States to introduce our new and improved Laundry Glossing. Good, lively agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 323 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED in every city and town for our new and improved Laundry Glossing. Good, lively agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on receipt of $1. Sample $15. NOVELTY WHEEL CO., 24 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

ATWATER Newspaper File is the favorite for all libraries, bookstores, libraries, offices, and lightest, neatest, cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

CATARRH SAMPLE FREE

So great a cure that you can cure your dear sufferer, we will mail enough to convince. J. F. FORBES, President, DeLand, Florida; or H. A. DeLand, Fairport, N. Y.

FLORIDA. ACADEMY AND COLLEGE, AT DELAND, FLORIDA.

A first class academy for higher science. Five Courses College Preparatory. Both English, Normal, Business, Industrial Drawing, First-class Art and Music Departments. Fine new Dormitory Building, enabling us to furnish board and tuition at reasonable rates. The purpose of this institution is to give, in the delightful climate of Florida, as thorough and liberal an education as can be secured in the best New England Schools. DELAND COLLEGE will also receive students of both sexes, prepared to enter the Freshman Class. Send for catalogue to J. F. FORBES, President, DeLand, Florida; or H. A. DeLand, Fairport, N. Y.

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS & COPYRIGHTS

Obtained, and all other business in the U. S. Patent Office attended to, by J. A. SNOW & CO. Send MODEL OR DRAWING. We advise as to patentability of your claims; and we make NO CHARGE, UNLESS WE OBTAIN PATENT. We refer here to the Postmaster, the Sup't. of Money Order Div., and to officials of the U. S. Patent Office. For circular, advice, terms and references to actual clients in your own State or county, write to—

J. A. SNOW & CO.,

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

JOYFUL News for Boys and Girls! Young and Old! A NEW INVENTION just patented for Home use! Pretz, scroll Sawing, Turning, Boring, Drilling, Grinding, Polishing, Screw Cutting. Price $5 to $50. Send 6 cents for 100 pages.

EPHRAIM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XIX., No. 16.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1887.

WHOLE No. 871.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.
Subscription per year.....$2.00.
If paid strictly in advance.....$1.50.

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrears paid.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	The Chicago Delegation to	9
Notes and Comments.....	Knoxville.....	9
The Knoxville Convention.....	CORRESPONDENCE:
Some Movements in Pro-	Not Gone Over: Fifth and	5,6
hibition.....	Point.....	5,6
Communism, Socialism,	BIBLE LESSON.....	6
Nihilism.....	REFORM NEWS:
CONTRIBUTIONS:	The New Year in Ohio
Recollections of Secretary	Work; Still Good News	12
Seward.....	from Iowa.....	12
Has the Martyr's Age	HOME CIRCLE.....	10
Passed.....	TEMPERANCE.....	11
A Spinal Dissertation.....	RELIGIOUS NEWS.....	12
SELECTED:	LODGE NOTES.....	13
William H. Seward on Se-	BUSINESS.....	13
cret Societies.....	IN BRIEF.....	14
The Sixteenth National	HOME HINTS.....	15
Convention.....	NEWS OF THE WEEK.....	15
Secret Societies Condemned	MARKETS.....	16

A member of the Masonic lodge, formerly a reputable citizen of Oak Park, Ill., and a government official in this city, is our authority for the statement that a Freemason formerly from Naperville, Ill., was engaged in forming Masonic lodges in both the Union and rebel armies. He had passes which took him within the lines of both, and passed back and forth freely in his nefarious business.

Bishop Ireland, of Minnesota, says that "the American laborer, earning $2 or $3 a day, cannot support his family, his church and a saloon." The Bishop is well enough acquainted with the demands of the lodge to have put it in the list, and with most devotees of secrecy it should come before church and saloon, since it costs them more than the church and robs them of more than the saloon.

The Republicans of the New York Assembly are yet under the rule of the Masonic gavel. In their caucus Monday evening they re-nominated General James W. Husted for Speaker. Husted is a great Freemason who introduced the lodge room raps to make the legislators obedient. The Empire State ought to be ashamed of the lodge puppets who jump up and down at Masonic bidding, and remand them to private life.

George William Curtis spoke on "Forefathers' Day" before the New England Society in Philadelphia in an eloquent strain upon the character of the Pilgrim Fathers. He, however, fell into the usual habit of picturing their lives as morose and uninviting. We call it habit, for the godless and secularizing tendency of the age has made it so, because those sturdy and truthful men forbade round dances, toboggans, skating rinks, Christmas, and such like revels. But if we may believe our senses and several responsible historians, they found these things lay outside the line of a truly happy life, and of innocent and rational amusement had their share as well as we. But what Mr. Curtis said is worth reading: "The Puritan was not a revolutionist nor an anarchist, but he was a terrible reformer. He was as hard as Plymouth Rock itself, as narrow as the way that leads to eternal life, and if he snuffed psalms through his nose it was because he had been trained to fight and not to sing. There was never in history a man so hated as the English Puritan, and there are still people who think him a knave and a hypocrite. There is much the same feeling in the London clubs toward Mr. Gladstone, himself a very good Puritan. We can afford to tell the truth about the Puritan. He was narrow, bigoted, sour, hard, and intolerant; but he was the man for whom God sifted three kingdoms for to plant the seed of true Republicanism, and he has done more for true liberty than any man in history; though by what curious alchemy the Puritan was transformed into the New England Yankee of to-day I cannot pretend to tell."

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

We can hardly imagine the friends and opposers of the liquor traffic agreeing on any compromise. There is an "irrepressible conflict" between them. Liquor must go as slavery did. We are justly suspicious of any measure or movement which is endorsed by the liquor party, and when the distillers and brewers approve the methods of the Anti-saloon Republicans it is an evidence that the latter is not a temperance movement. So the Dow law, lately approved by the Ohio courts has the endorsement of the leading liquor men of the State. They are glad of it, and confess that but for its interposition there would have been a prohibitory clause in the State constitution within three years. The liquor dealers of Ohio have in convention decided that a moderate license system benefits their trade; they agree that the sale of liquor to minors should be prevented, saloons closed on Sunday and licenses refused to disorderly houses. Some who are in their own esteem very good temperance men ask no more.

The trial of the Knight of Labor train-wreckers at Kansas City is making some developments which may cause the flatterers of this order a moment of reflection. They at least prove the capability of secret orders, even of the best profession, for the greatest of crimes. During the Southwestern strike last spring a train was thrown from the track and two men killed. Prominent members of the Knights of Labor were arrested and the evidence in their trial shows that the infamous deed was as coolly planned as ever an anarchist made dynamite bombs to kill policemen. The mayor of Wyandotte, Kansas, a member of the same lodge, promised to shield, as far as he could, the guilty men. A sheriff was also a member of the same order and exchanged grips. A meeting of the Knights was called to consult how the wreckers should escape detection, and the machinery of the lodge seems to have all been in motion to shield a great and infamous crime. The Mollie Maguires, twenty-one of whom were hung for lodge murders, were as pious as monks and innocent as lambs in their pretended objects; and the Masonic fraternity with all its bloody history claims to have been once a harmless and pious body of workmen

RECOLLECTIONS OF SECRETARY SEWARD.

BY HON. S. C. POMEROY.

In a former article I spoke of early recollections of Abraham Lincoln. In this I shall speak of Hon. William H. Seward, as I knew him in 1838, '39 and '40, and later on the men I met upon entering the Senate at its first session, after Mr. Lincoln became President, July 4, 1861, were not altogether unknown to me, and with some of them I had enjoyed a most pleasing acquaintance.

So was welcomed. As one of the first Senators elected from Kansas, I was therefore welcomed most cordially; for Kansas had been a stumbling-block to the Democratic administrations of both Mr. Pierce and Mr. Buchanan; and it was also the stepping stone for the Republicans, to prestige and power.

No one in Washington took me more warmly by the hand than did Mr. Seward, then Secretary of State. When a young man I had often been in his office at Auburn, New York, and had stood by him as a most attentive listener in the celebrated "Free-man Trial." For seven hours Mr. Seward held the jury in that trial in almost breathless silence. The verdict in that trial was in harmony with Mr. Seward's views, though a most startling departure, in jurisprudence, upon the doctrine of "emotional insanity;" and the case has been quoted ever since.

The next year, 1838, Mr. Seward was for the first time elected Governor of New York. He received the first vote I ever cast, and was the first man for whom I ever made a campaign speech, and for whose election I gave the enthusiasm of my early manhood. He was re-elected in 1840, during which campaign I still supported him.

The first man I conferred with, upon reaching Washington as a Senator-elect, in 1861, was Mr. Seward in his office at the Department of State. At once he commenced upon the threatened war, and assured me that the national conflict, then impending, would be no great affair. Said he, "You beat them in Kansas. We shall induce them to lay down their arms in less time than you did. And the peace of the country will not be long disturbed."

I alluded to the Richmond Convention, then in session, as likely to take Virginia out of the Union. "Not at all," said Mr. Seward; "my friends are running that convention; and those old Whigs will keep the State in the Union." It will all be over before Congress meets in December."

For the first time in my life, I dissented from his opinion, so strongly expressed, and assured him that I thought we had nothing to expect, as Fort Sumpter had already surrendered, but war—long, bitter, exhaustive war.

A few days later, a delegation from the Richmond Convention came to Willard's Hotel where we were stopping, and I learned they had come with authority to wait upon General Robert E. Lee, and tender him the command of the Virginia State troops. That day was the 18th of April, 1861,—never to be forgotten by me. General Lee had been all day in consultation with General Scott (as he was his Adjutant General) and in the afternoon entered his carriage and drove home.

This delegation, before the sun went down, followed him to his mansion at Arlington, on the Virginia side of the Potomac, overlooking Washington. I, knowing their mission, followed them to see the result, and reached the old Lee mansion about as soon as they did. We all stood about the pillars of the veranda while the band played a serenade for General Lee. He soon appeared upon the steps. I shall never forget him, for I thought him one of the finest looking old gentlemen I had ever seen. His thin hair yielded to the evening breeze, while the sun's rays struggled through the budding foliage,—as sweet an evening sunset as I had ever seen, and from as beautiful a situation.

The chairman of the committee addressed General Lee in a few chosen words, and alluded to the convention authorizing them, and of their pleasure in presenting this most earnest appeal—the desire of the old State of Virginia that their favorite son should come, in this hour of threatened invasion, and command their forces. He went on to say, in most pathetic tones, that Virginia was "threatened by armed forces from the North." "They had already commenced their march" from the "crowded Eastern cities," and the sacred soil of the old commonwealth was now to be polluted by the tread of a hostile army; that President Lincoln had issued a call for 75,000 men to be furnished by the States; and he assured General Lee "that the blood and treasure of Virginia was ready to be poured out in her defense." He closed his appeal by an allusion to the tender memories of his early life, and to the resting place of his honored dead. By all these recollections, he urged the General to come to Richmond, "take the lead of her army;" "drive back the invader;" and "restore peace to her divided councils."

"This was the highest point in the lifetime of General Lee. What could he say? What would he do? I stood where I could see the deep emotion depicted in his face. It was a picture for an artist! I thought I saw integrity and love of country triumph. Judge of my disappointment. All this time he had been enjoying the confidence of President Lincoln, General Scott and Secretary Seward, and that noble band who were then devising every means in their power to save an imperilled country. General Lee knew all this. He knew that only thirty days before, he had been nominated by President Lincoln to the Senate; reported unanimously by the chairman of the committee, Senator Wilson, for confirmation as colonel of the First Regiment of U. S. Cavalry; took the oath prescribed by law; was then transferred and promoted to be Adjutant General to General Scott, and then again swore true allegiance to the Government of the United States, and to be true "against all her enemies, foreign or domestic." The ink was hardly dry upon the paper where he signed that oath! And now he stood listening to the voice of treason. He hesitated, seemed filled with deepest emotion, as if conflicting sentiments filled his heart. When I saw he was not going to kick those rebels off the veranda, I trembled for him. There was a painful stillness. At length he spoke. With slow and solemn voice,—every ear listening and every eye moistened—he said:

"Gentlemen of the Committee: I have read the resolutions, and listened to your address with the deepest sorrow. Though bred to the profession of arms, I am opposed to war, and especially to civil war, where one section of the country is arrayed against the other. Every day now thickens with events of the gravest character; and one may well pause to learn the path of duty. One false step may lead to fatal consequences."

I said to myself, If he now hesitates, he is lost! He continued: "I thank you, gentlemen, for the kind manner in which you have been pleased to address me; and for the tender allusions to our common inheritance, both as it relates to the living, and to the dead."

At length he exclaimed: "I cannot resist the voice of Virginia, the mother that bore me, to whom I owe my first and chief allegiance. In her embrace I have been cradled; by her honored and loved." With great emotion he added, "I must listen to the voice of Virginia—come weal or come woe!"

At length he closed his remarks by this saying, which I never forgot: "Remember this, and report it to the commission which sent you: I shall draw my sword only in defense of Virginia."

The band then played, and I made all possible speed back to the White House to see Mr. Lincoln, and was admitted at once to his private room, where I told him all I had seen and heard. But that great and good man could not believe that General Lee would join the Rebellion; for he had consulted with him that very day in the office with General Scott.

Finally he said, "Pomeroy, go and see Seward. Tell him all you have told me."

I did go at once; and bluntly announced to Mr. Seward that I am just from the President, and had told him how General Lee had met the delegates from the Richmond convention, and had agreed to take command of the Virginia forces. And I wanted authority from the President to allow my colleague, General James H. Lane, to take the "Frontier Guards" (an organization we had just raised, composed mostly of Kansas men, and officered entirely by them) and go that night and arrest General Lee, and bring him to Washington!

Mr. Seward was unmoved; seemed to be in doubt of all that I told him; and strongly denied that it was the purpose of General Lee to join the Rebellion. He said, "I know General Lee. He is my friend. I see him daily. He is as good a Union man as either of us."

"Virginia," he continued, "will not pass the ordinance of secession. General Lee is going down to Richmond to keep the State in the Union, and prevent the passage of that ordinance." And then he gave me some hints about "Kansas Excitements," and I left him.

Again I returned to the President and told him all Mr. Seward had said. Mr. Lincoln added, "I cannot order the arrest of General Lee. He has, at least, committed no overt act, and may not go to Richmond at all." Notwithstanding this, General Lane was strongly disposed to arrest Lee, and take him under guard to General Scott, but was advised not to do it.

The following day, April 19, General Lee was confined to his house, and did not report to the War office. The next day he wrote the following letter, which I copy from my old scrap book:

"ARLINGTON, Virginia, April 20, 1861.
"GENERAL:—Since my interview with you on the 18th, I have felt that I ought not longer to retain my commission in the army. I therefore tender my resignation, which I request you to recommend for acceptance. It would have been presented at once, but for the struggle it has cost me to separate myself from the service, to which I have devoted the best years of my life, and all the ability I possessed. During the whole of that time, more than a quarter of a century, I have experienced nothing but kindness from my superiors, and the most cordial friendship from my comrades. To no one, General, have I been so much indebted as to yourself, for your uniform kindness and consideration. It has always been my ardent desire to meet your approbation. I shall carry to the grave the most grateful recollection of your kind consideration, and your name and fame will always be dear to me.

"Save in the defense of my native State, I never desire to draw my sword. Be pleased to accept my most earnest wishes for the continuance of your prosperity and happiness, and believe me, most truly yours, Signed, R. E. LEE.
"TO MAJOR GENERAL SCOTT, Commanding U. S. Army."

That remarkable letter of resignation was never accepted. I do not know as General Scott recommended it. But only two days later, General Lee appeared before the Richmond Convention and took a new and strange oath of office! Gov. Fletcher had nominated him and the Convention unanimously confirmed him. Thus with treason in his heart and perjury upon his lips, he took the lead of the army which confronted Washington, the capital of his country.

What occurred during his last interview with General Scott has never been known. The lips of both were sealed on that subject while they lived, and are closed, now, forever in death.

On the day of Lee's acceptance of a rebel commission, I remember to have called again upon Mr. Lincoln, and showed him the dispatch from Richmond. He then showed me Lee's letter of resignation, quoted above. I said, "What do you now think of Seward's good Union man?" His countenance changed to sadness—the same look I used to see when we had lost a battle, or he had buried a son. At length Mr. Lincoln said, "Go and see Seward." I did go, but do not now remember what transpired.

Robert E. Lee will always be a conspicuous figure in American history; and from the standpoint of a quarter of a century his acts may now be viewed without prejudice. He was born in 1806, eighty years ago; entered West Point Academy in 1825; and was graduated in 1829. He married Miss Custis, the daughter of an adopted son of General Washington. From this alliance, he inherited the Arlington Estate, now a national cemetery, peopled with the Union dead.

History is charitable. Time effaces many a blunder. But neither time nor an impartial history will ever efface his damning record. It will stand as if engraven in granite, that within the first sixty days after President Lincoln's inauguration, General Lee took at least three oaths to support the constitution of the United States and yield to her true allegiance; and then swearing to support the Confederate constitution and make war on the Union. I say to gentlemen of the Confederacy, Take your idol for what he is worth. He has soiled garments for me.

This record of General Lee is of his own making. He was not subordinated by men in superior places. He left the service of the best government on earth at an hour when his country was imperilled. No other man so dishonored by ingratitude an honored ancestry and a generous country. He left a high position, and a noble cause; battled for slavery four years; and then, in sorrow and humiliation, surrendered at Appomattox.

I am permitted to copy the following, his reply to Mr. Janny, the president of the convention, who administered the oath of office to General Lee:

"Mr. President, and gentlemen of the committee: Profoundly impressed with the solemnity of the occasion—for which I must say I was not prepared—I accept the position assigned me by your partiality. I would much have preferred had your choice fallen upon an abler man. Trusting is Almighty God, an approving conscience, and the aid of my fellow countrymen, I devote myself to the service of my native State, in whose behalf alone I will ever again draw my sword."

This closed the proceedings of the convention for that day. From that hour, recruiting for the rebel service was accelerated, and within twenty days Virginia had over fifty thousand men in the field.

Lee, then made his preparations to march upon Washington. The following letter from General Walker was the first communication he received, which put him in relations to the Confederate military authorities:

"MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 10, 1861.
"TO GENERAL ROBERT E. LEE: To prevent confusion you will assume control of the forces of the Confederates in Virginia, and assign them to such duty as you may indicate until further orders; for which this shall be your authority.
Signed J. P. WALKER, Secretary of War."

From the hour of his acceptance of that order, he was under the orders of the Confederate President, Jefferson Davis; and when he surrendered four years later, all surrendered.

General Lee was known to Kansas men before the war. He had captured and hung an old Kansas man, who had done battle upon her prairies, against the invading army of slaveholders, who came to subdue her virgin soil to slavery. This man had, on the 16th day of October, 1859, captured Harper's Ferry, Va., with sixteen white men and five negroes! Gov. Wise in hot haste put the whole State upon a war footing. And old John Brown was hung by the neck until he was dead.

I visited him in prison, and asked him if he desired his friends to procure his release or escape.

To this he nobly replied, "No, I am wounded. I am worth more to die than to live. I tried to effect the liberation of the slaves. You will live to see it accomplished. It will go out in blood! I am to die for this cause."

Prophetic words! Only three years more, and the whole land was drenched with blood. But no other man has been hung for treason! The chief sinner has gone unwhipped of justice. No violated law for treason has ever been vindicated. Even those who shaded their dark record by perjury, and added that to treason, have been elected to office, and fill the high places of the land. So let the gallows perish in the land, if the highest criminals cannot be brought to the scaffold.

Washington, Dec., 1886.

HAS THE MARTYR AGE PASSED?

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

Porsenna, the king of Clusium in Etruria, laid siege to Rome at the instigation of Tarquin the Proud, who had been expelled from the City of Seven Hills. This caused great suffering within the walls. Three hundred of the noblest Roman youths swore that they would slay him at the peril of their lives. The lot fell on C. Mucius. He entered the Etruscan camp in disguise. Not knowing Porsenna, he slew his secretary instead. He was at once seized. Approaching a red-hot altar he laid his arm upon it until it was consumed. Then turning to the king, he said: "Rome is full of men ready for such sacrifice." This terrified the king, and he made peace with Rome. Whether this story, as told by Livy for history, be legendary or not, it illustrates the power of consecration. Mucius was consecrated to Rome. Archbishop Cranmer, when brought to the stake, resolves that the hand that had signed his recantation should perish first, and so he holds it in the flames until it fell from his body. He did this for Christ's sake.

I have recently seen a little book entitled, "Three Modern Martyrs, Livingstone, Gordon and Pattison." The author holds them up to show that the spirit of entire consecration has not perished from the earth. The National Reform Association wishes to enlist consecrated men and women, those who are willing to do and endure any and every thing in His name; who would rather go to prison and death than sacrifice their sacred honor or trample upon a single blood-bought principle; who will not consult with flesh and blood, but, moved by the impulse of a noble purpose and high resolve, will pass through fire and flood to victory.

The last few days I have been feeling the pulse of the Christian ministry of Cincinnati on moral reforms, I wish to testify that in no city, North or South, have I found a more vigorous and constant beating. They feel that the powers of evil here must be driven out by hard fighting; and so their battle-cry is, "No quarter." They propose to carry the battle to the enemy's gate and take the city.

Last Sabbath morning I preached in the Methodist Protestant church on George street, Rev. S. K. Spahr, pastor. This is the only congregation of that body in the city. They are a branch from the M. E. church. The division arose about lay-representation. They number about 150,000 in the United States. Bro. Spahr's is an endowed church. They have 120 members, and 125 children in their Sabbath-school. In the evening I preached for Rev. E. K. Bell of the Lutheran church on Elm street. This is Dr. Helwig's old charge. It is a fine congregation, and their young pastor has united and organized them in a way that calls forth universal admiration. To show how he thinks of every one, in their preparations for a Christmas festival he had a basket containing a turkey and other like delicacies prepared for the janitor, a person generally neglected in the thoughts, prayers and festivities of a congregation.

On Monday afternoon I attended the Presbyterian ministers' meeting. The question was, "The Dow Law." Rev. T. F. Coustelyon read the paper. The trend of the discussion was to the effect that a tax is a good thing as a restrictive measure. The Mosaic law restricted polygamy, but did not prohibit it. So the Dow Law lays an embargo on the liquor traffic, but does not eradicate it.

The parallel is not well taken. The Mosaic institutions were so adjusted that polygamy would be the most quickly eradicated with the least suffering. But a tax establishes and perpetuates the drink system. Every effort to show the difference between a tax and a license has proved abortive. The are both creature devices. The divine law is absolute prohibition, "Thou shalt not put thy bottle to thy neighbor's lips." Prohibition was instituted in Eden, "Thou shalt not eat." The devil came in with his license, "Thou mayest eat." And he has been hoodwinking men with it ever since. Permission to do evil is from beneath. Prohibition of evil is from above. Which will we take?

Francis Murphy began his crusade in Wesley Chapel on Fifth street last Sabbath night. The house has been crowded every night, and hundreds have signed the pledge. He was brought here by Dr. I. W. Joyce. The Dr. wishes to bring Sam Jones again as soon as this is ended, and then end all with a revival conducted by Harrison, "the boy preacher."

A SPINAL DISSERTATION.

BY ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.

The readers of the Cynosure will be interested in some facts from the Keystone State.

Some of our men who voted the Prohibition ticket were accused of voting for a lodge man for governor. Mr. Wolfe is not an oath-bound man. We obtained the fact by corresponding with him—too late to publish before election. Let our friends note this.

Will our anti-secret people in Pennsylvania enter upon organized work in season to do the best thing that can be done in the campaign for 1888? When, where and by whom shall the work be inaugurated? No body of men on this continent have so great a work to do as the anti-secret Prohibitionists. Our responsibility and our work are at least double that of the mere Prohibitionists. We purpose not to fall one whit behind any in the temperance work, while we work with the same zeal and might to free souls from the bondage of lodgery.

If we seem to make our anti-secret work too prominent, it is because compelled to do so by the neglect of those who ought to come up with us to the work. If one third of an army only come to the combat, then they must do triple work or flee before the foe. We have burned the bridges in the rear and can't flee. Anti-lodge men are made with eyes only in the front, with all other capabilities pointing that way, and to them there is no back-ground, only back-bone. Drawn by conscience, judgment, and will, by love of God and right, by a purpose long since ripened into decree, we can no more "look back" than lightning can reverse itself and take the back track. "Shall such a man as I flee?" A few Garrisons, such as manned the forts of anti-slavery, are needed now to "hold the fort." And we may add with a holy appreciation, that what we need God has given us, in some measure at least.

When I look out on a score or two of the grandest patriots, both for God and country, that the sun has shone on in this, or any other age, with "eyes to see" living issues as they are, I am ready to "thank God and take courage." If it be fortunate to see one living question of these "perilous times," alcoholism, it is doubly so to see also the equal peril to country, Christianity, family and home, inseparable from it—lodgism.

These are by no means the only great issues that concern most deeply every patriotic Christian. The tobacco curse belongs with strong drink. Where else can an honest man put it? Financially the curse is as 6 to 9. Is the tax on our three-fold being nearly the same? To-day comes in a well-dressed man to ask the use of our church edifice for a musical concert—with cigar in his mouth and thoroughly smoked—a member of a Baptist church in —. Preachers, deacons, class-leaders and laymen, smoke and chew tobacco, and the boys, mere children, are fast falling into line. Is not the proportion subject to this evil much larger than that given to alcoholic intoxicants? With the present training-schools for this poisonous intoxicant, encouraged by the bad examples of the saints (?) how long will it be before the tobacco bill will overtake and pass the liquor bill? While the liquor curse is growing unpopular, is not the tobacco leprosy gaining each year, among nearly all classes of the male population? Can anything be done to stay this evil without making it odious to the people? And how will this be done while pulpit and press "keep silence," and tens of thousands of the professing people of God are steeped in the weed?

Before this evil tide is halted God's consecrated ones will have to get so desperately in earnest that they cannot hold their peace, and many otherwise good people become angry with the faithful herald of the truth as it is in Jesus. It sends a pang to my very soul to be compelled to say these things. I seem to be smiting scores of my best friends. God knows I love them too much to wish to send one pang, needlessly, to their hearts. I am peculiarly sensitive in my sympathy with my erring brethren. Wrongs in the church and ministry must be censured and condemned by those who see and feel them. Sin must appear sin, and "by the commandment made exceedingly sinful." O, my precious brother, to whom the world has a right to look for an example of self-denial and right-living, "pluck out the right eye," cut off the right hand sooner than cause one of the little ones to stumble into this abyss.

Can you prescribe a remedy for this dreadful habit, do you ask? A thousand times yes. By the old "orthodoxy" a firm belief in the "divine decrees" was the remedy for all the ills of our fallen humanity. Proper faith in the decrees will meet the emergency in question squarely. Human decrees are quite as necessary in their proper sphere as are the divine. God's decrees, independent of man's, never yet made a saint of a sinner, and never can. If it could, there would be only saints in our world. Human election, predestination and decrees, when properly exercised, are pre-eminently practical and very effective. With profound reverence to the divine purposes, all this may be said. We advocate "local option," and would locate the option right where it is needed. First, in our sovereign heart which God has formed in his own image. When by the grace of God man decrees sin out, then it must go—and Satan, too. Any given sinful habit is in or out by option. The tobacco habit is simply local option enthroneing a deadly poison in the center of ourselves.

This allegation needs no proof. Every one is conscious of the fact. What effort, what toil, what mortification, what waste of the normal energies and health, and of moral dignity this habit involves! The remedy to all this is "without money and without price"—without effort. It is only passiveness, and is defined in a "Full stop." There is satisfaction in the use of your sovereign right to stop, yourself. Stop "of your own free will and accord. Say, "by the grace of God I will." You will be stopped on the verge of eternity by another agent, over whom you have no control. You have power of yourself to use it. God won't help you to do that. By voluntary consecration just merge into God. Tobacco can't get there, nor any other evil thing.

Here is the place for human decree—practical, perpetual and sure. Here are human rights, men's rights and woman's rights, universal suffrage at every election board from within the soul to the ends of the earth. Voting everywhere, always against all evil—whisky, lodgery, blasphemy, polygamy, Sabbath breaking, and all the ilk. God helps the souls that will to help themselves.

Thompson, Pa.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

SPEECH IN THE SENATE, 1851.

"I belong to one voluntary association of men, which has to do with spiritual affairs. It is the Christian church—that branch of it, all imperfect though I think it is, which, according to my notions, most nearly contains in their purity the instructions of the Gospel. That association is an open one, which performs all its rites and gives all its instructions with publicity, and invites every man, in the language of its divine Founder, to come in and partake of the privileges with which he invested it, and of the blessings which he promises.

"I belong to one temporal society of men and that is the political party, which, according to my notions, embodies most fully and most truly, although I confess, as in the other case, very inadequately, the principles of the Declaration of Independence and of the Constitution of the United States. The association, also, of which I have last spoken, is an open one. All its transactions are conducted in the broad day light, and it invites all citizens and all men who become subjects of the power of this Government of whatever clime or race or color they may be, to enter into its ranks to participate in its labors, and to co-operate in maintaining good government and in advancing the cause of human nature.

"These two associations, the one spiritual and the other temporal, are the only voluntary associations to which I now belong, or ever have belonged since I became a man; and unless I am bereft of reason, they are the only associations of men to which I shall ever suffer myself to belong.

"Secret societies, sir? Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men, in a secret lodge, order, class or council, and bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow men.

"Swear, sir! I, a man, an American citizen, a Christian, swear to submit myself to the guidance and direction of other men, surrendering my own judgment to their judgments, and my own conscience to their keeping! No, no, sir. I know quite well the fallibility of my own judgment, and my liability to fall into error and temptation. But my life has been spent in breaking the bonds of the slavery of men; I, therefore, know too well the danger of confiding power to irresponsible hands, to make myself a willing slave."

FROM AN ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, DATED ALBANY, APRIL 26, 1851.

We rejoice that the question of Masonry and Antimasonry is thus presented fairly and openly to the people, stripped of all former political names and associations. If virtue yet abide among us, if there be intelligence in our fellow citizens to appreciate the dangers which threaten their liberty, and if there be patriotism to resist and prevent them, which we most firmly believe, there can be no doubt of the result of such a contest. On the one side it is an aristocratic nobility composed of men bound together by the most terrific oaths, which conflict with the administration of justice, with private rights, and with the public security; a privileged order, claiming and securing to its members unequal advantages over its fellow-citizens; veiling its proceedings from scrutiny by pledges of secrecy; collecting funds to unknown amounts, and for unknown purposes; and operating through our extended country, at any time and on any subject, with all the efficacy of perfect organization, controlled and directed by unseen and unknown hands! On the other side, a portion of your fellow-citizens ask for equal rights and equal privileges among the freemen of this country. They say, it is in vain that this equality of rights and privileges is secured in theory by our constitution and laws, if, by a combination to subvert it, it is in fact no longer enjoyed. They point you to Masonic oaths, and at the effect of those dreadful obligations upon all our elections, upon witnesses in our courts of justice, and upon jurors. They show you one of your citizens murdered under their influence, and the offenders escaping with impunity. They exhibit to you the power of your courts defied and the administration of justice defeated through the instrumentality of those obligations; and they ask you whether our country can any longer be described as a land "where no man is so powerful as to be above the laws, and no one so humble as to be beneath their protection." They say to you that no man can tell who will be the next victim of Masonic vengeance, or of Masonic perjury; and they call upon you to put an end to these enormities and prevent their recurrence by destroying their source; and for that purpose, to use the only effective weapon in your power—a weapon yet preserved to you—your own free and independent ballots. For thus calling on you, they are reproached with being intolerant and proscriptive! For seeking to destroy an institution which will not tolerate any inquiry into its objects, its means or its obligations, we are intolerant; and for refusing to vote for men who have practically proscribed all who do not belong to their fraternity, we are called proscriptive! For insisting on the enjoyment of equal rights and equal privileges with them, we are charged with denying to our fellow-citizens equal rights!

Such is the contest between Masonry and its opponents. That the result will be auspicious to the best interests of our country, and will be attained as rapidly as such a great work ought to be accomplished in order to perpetuate its success, we have the same entire and unequivocal confidence that we feel in the goodness of Providence.

THE SIXTEENTH NATIONAL CONVENTION.

REPORT OF THE KNOXVILLE MEETING.

DECEMBER 28 AND 29, 1886.

The first national meeting in the South had been, for some time before it convened, anticipated with much interest, both by those more directly interested in the reform and by many pastors and Christian educators among the colored people, who had long felt the power of the secret orders operating for the overthrow of the churches of Christ. The last national meeting, so-called, was held in the District of Columbia, which, since the abolition of slavery, cannot be said to belong to any section. The point of special interest at that time was the dedication of the building at 215 Four-and-a-half street, just purchased by the N. C. A., to the cause of Christian reform as represented by the Association. The hope for the Knoxville meeting was that it might give endorsement to the work so well begun by Revs. H. H. Hinman and P. S. Peemster, and others, and open the way for enlargement. A large meeting was not expected, as distance added to the expense of travel which not many could afford to meet.

The convention met in the new and pleasant Library Hall Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Collins, the president, was not able to come down from Pittsburgh, where he is just recovering from severe illness, and the N. C. A. General Agent J. P. Stoddard called to order. Elder J. F. Browne, now again returned to Berea, Kentucky, led in an opening prayer. Rev. Dr. J. S. McCulloch, president of Knoxville College, and vice-president of the convention for Tennessee, was called to the chair, and Elder J. F. Browne was made temporary secretary. After a song by George W. Clark of Detroit, President McCulloch made a welcoming address. He congratulated the convention in their first coming to a Southern city that Knoxville had been chosen, since free speech was here an existing fact. Radical rebel utterances, which terrify the timid and defenseless in some parts of the South, are not heard here, while at the same time rebellion is as scathingly denounced as it is in Boston. Only a few blocks from this place of meeting is the house where lived William G. Brownlow, the celebrated editor, governor and Senator, whose fearless utterances defending the right and denouncing treason, whether from the stump or through the columns of his paper, were always welcomed by this people until they were suppressed by martial law. Following so illustrious an example the members of the convention are invited to speak freely and frankly. The clergy and people of Knoxville will welcome the uncovering of any evil, and if there is that principle in Freemasonry that rejects Christ, the citizens of the city will thank you for showing it to them. Let your utterances therefore bear the stamp of Christian liberty, speak as the Holy Ghost shall give you utterance, he whom Christ sent to be our guide into all truth. So may your meeting here be a blessing to yourselves, to this city and to the country at large.

Secretary Stoddard responded to this cordial welcome, and indicated some of the ways by which the meeting should be made thus profitable to all.

Pres. H. H. George of Geneva College, Pennsylvania, also spoke, heartily thanking Pres. McCulloch for his encouraging words and kind welcome. He remarked upon the query existing in his own mind and doubtless of other Northern delegates as to whether the evils of the lodge system could be freely discussed in a Southern city. H. H. Hinman followed in a few remarks in the same strain, mentioning his own experience in nearly every Southern State.

It was voted that all persons present in sympathy with the work and objects of the convention should have the privilege of full participation in its business. The following committees were chosen:

On Order of Exercises: H. H. Hinman, Prof. J. R. Millin, J. C. Moore.

Enrollment: Prof. F. A. Allen and James Parker.

Resolutions: J. P. Stoddard, Pres. J. S. McCulloch, Prof. G. S. W. Crawford.

On Southern work: H. H. Hinman, Rev. R. N. Countee.

Finance: Prof. H. A. Fischer, Pres. H. H. George, Pres. P. M. Bartlett.

On Nominations: J. F. Browne, Pres. P. M. Bartlett, Pres. J. S. McCulloch.

On the proposed Congress of Christians: Pres. H. H. George, Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Pres. P. M. Bartlett.

On Publication (chosen later): H. L. Kellogg, Rev. B. A. Imes, Rev. R. N. Countee.

In the afternoon a brief session was spent in devotional exercises, after which Secretary J. P. Stoddard addressed the convention on the subject, "What Masons Claim for their Order." A fair audience was present and all gave undivided attention to the arguments of the speaker which revealed a dark pit of deception and unrighteousness digged by the founders of Masonry.

Word being received from Rev. R. N. Countee of Memphis, editor of the Living Way, that he could not be present on account of sickness in his family, his colleague from the same city, Rev. B. A. Imes, was called upon, and addressed the convention briefly, showing from his personal experience and the unquestioned testimony of seceded members of secret orders that the lodge puts itself always before the church, and that gross and alarming immorality flourishes under its shadow, and even its patronage. The ministers of the Christian church are duped into and employed by the lodge to cover its iniquities with a semblance of religion and morality and secure from the world outside a respect which it is far from deserving.

George W. Clark sang appropriately during the afternoon, and his familiar tones and earnest words had their uniform effect of strengthening the impressions of truth and the convictions of duty.

The evening session was opened promptly. Rev. Lewis Johnson led in prayer. The resolutions were reported by the committee and accepted, but laid over till morning for final action. The nominating committee's report was adopted as follows:

President: Rev. J. S. McCulloch, D. D., Knoxville.
Secretary: Rev. Lewis Johnson, Pine Bluff, Arkansas.
Vice-Presidents: Maine: Miss F. M. Mitchell of Pittston.
 New Hampshire: Isaac Hyatt of Gilford Village, Vermont.
 F. F. French of Hardwick, Massachusetts; S. A. Pratt of Worcester, Connecticut; J. A. Conant of Willimantic, Rhode Island; Albert M. Paull of Providence, New York; F. W. Capwell of Dale, Pennsylvania; Nathan Callender of Thompson, Maryland; Harvey Johnson, West Virginia; S. R. McClurkin of Roney's Point, Virginia; J. T. Logan of Alexandria, North Carolina; E. E. Boyce of Gastonia, Georgia; Floyd Snelson of McIntosh, Florida; J. F. Galloway of Okahumpka, Alabama; Jesse Ward of Partridge, Mississippi; G. S. Pope of Toulaloo, Louisiana; Byron Gunner of New Iberia, Texas; J. R. McLean of Paris, Kentucky; John G. Fee of Berea, Ohio; J. M. Scott of Alexandria, Michigan; G. W. Clark of Detroit, Indiana; T. B. Galloway of Bloomington, Illinois; D. S. Faris of Sparta, Wisconsin; Jacob Griffin of Hortonville, Minnesota; A. G. Paine of Wasioja, Iowa; William Johnston of College Springs, Missouri; George W. Needles of Albany, Arkansas; Lewis Johnson of Pine Bluff, Nebraska; E. B. Graham of Omaha, Kansas; J. A. Richards of Fort Scott, Oregon; William Sharick of Damascus, California; Edward Hildreth of Santa Barbara, Dakota; C. E. Walker of Twin Brooks, District of Columbia; E. D. Bailey of Washington.

President H. H. George, D. D., then gave the address of the evening, a powerful and convincing argument on the inevitable and irrepressible antagonism between Christianity and the lodge system. The thanks of the convention were given for the address, and it will appear in next Cynosure.

WEDNESDAY.

At nine o'clock the convention resumed its sittings with devotional exercises which were not prolonged. The resolutions already reported were taken up and to the surprise of some led to a very instructive and interesting discussion, led by Pres. P. M. Bartlett of Maryville College, who spoke of his coming South during the times of reconstruction and aiding in building up a new state of society. He had found no question raised in this work about the secret societies. It had never come into the synod or meetings of pastors. His observation respecting these societies had not justified, in his judgment, the want of discrimination which he had observed in the reform publications, a number of which he possessed and had read. He found this objection to the resolutions. They classed all the secret orders together without reference to their objectionable features. He believed the brethren engaged in the reform injured their cause by this means.

The debate thus opened continued through the forenoon. Pres. Bartlett was asked of the creed and religious character of the Good Templar's lodge, to which he said he once belonged, whether this creed, the appointment of chaplains, of prayers and of rituals for religious services, did not fix upon it a religious character; and since no provision was made for the character of the priests of this religion, if this fact did not fix the character of the order as essentially heathen?

Prof. H. A. Fischer of Wheaton College spoke of his experiences and observations from outside all secret societies. H. H. Hinman said that he once joined the Good Templars and was instructed that the obligation was perpetually binding. It bound him to conceal from his wife, from Christian brethren. But the temperance cause belongs to all Christian people and a brother who goes into a Good Templar lodge to promote temperance and conceals its work for temperance from his family or the Christian brotherhood, wrongs them, deprives them of information that belongs to them.

Rev. B. A. Imes of Memphis spoke with eloquence of the ignorance of the colored people on the lodge question. He believed that the characteristics of some orders were far more objectionable than others; but among most people who have made little study of the subject it is believed that there is a unity of character, of principle, in the whole system, and that the one lodge supports the other throughout. He gave a number of instances showing the evils of the secret lodges.

Father Clark of Detroit said that there should be a discrimination between different orders just as we discriminate between a baby and a boy, between a youth and a man, between wine and whiskey.

President George said that in some lodges the members are all Christians, and prayer may be made in the name of Christ, but if Jews are admitted, or the community is generally opposed to Christianity, the name of Christ cannot be used. The devil is satisfied with a religion that is half heathen and half Christian. He asked Christ only for a moment's worship, leaving him all the rest. But Christianity cannot for a moment tolerate such amalgamation. Christ must be all or nothing. The idea of a secret society to propagate a moral principle is abhorrent; it is altogether wrong, and is so recognized by all right minded men. A secret unfolding of morality is not God's way. The history, the good sense of the whole world is against such a supposition.

Secretary Stoddard noticed that the Odd-fellow order had been mentioned as among the least objectionable. He told of a lodge of this order which came under the entire control of German infidels, who yet found no trouble in performing all the ceremonies, repeating the prayers, etc., and were in good standing in the order. He also mentioned the case of a man named Taylor who attempted to reply in the State convention at Princeton, Ill., but confessed that he had been called to account when he attempted to pray in the name of Christ in an Odd-fellow lodge.

President Bartlett replied that he yet thought that proper discrimination was not made in the resolutions. He did not believe that reformatory movements needed secret societies. He objected to them as needless and often injurious. Yet he supposed that any number of those present might come together and agree to aid each other and transact business without taking it before the world. If we want to reform the world, he repeated, we do not want secret organizations.

Pres. C. A. Blanchard explained that there was a vast difference between an order sworn to perpetual secrecy, with its ritual and initiation, and the ordinary privacy of business, where there may be secrets but they are not expected to remain so only for the time being.

H. L. Kellogg spoke of the fact that all secret organizations are a temptation to evil and from their nature can but be liable to the most serious abuses. The Freemasons began with a labor union. The Typographical Union began with an effort to secure some simple advantages for printers; but has grown to a domineering, tyrannical order which even defies the government in its own printing office. The Tammany Society of New York began as a charitable club; the Ku Klux Klan was organized by young men in Pulaski, Tennessee, to promote simple amusement; and the Mollie Maguires of Pennsylvania had as their cardinal doctrine the promotion of Christian charity. As for the Good Templars we may see a prophecy of its end in California.

The resolutions were recommended for some verbal revision, and an invitation to take supper with the students of Knoxville College accepted before adjournment.

In the afternoon after prayer by Prof. Millin the committee on Southern work reported as follows:

A committee to whom was referred the work of the N. C. A. in the South would respectfully report:

1. That this, in common with all other parts of our land, is largely under the dominating and blighting influence of the secret lodge system: that its influence is manifest in perversions of justice in the courts, the suppression of truth in the pulpits, and the oppression of laborers by secret labor organizations.

2. These evils are not only common to all parts of our country and all classes of the people, but the colored people have added an almost innumerable number and variety of secret societies that have severely taxed their resources, corrupted their morals, and hindered their progress in education and religion. Connected with these secret orders is a vast number of so-called assurance companies, membership in which is dependent on financial standing in the order with which they are connected. These so-called companies are mainly irresponsible because they have no legal existence. At best they make promises that are extravagant and impossible of fulfillment on any correct business principles, and can only be kept by defrauding some policy holders. They send out agents who are deceivers and plunderers, and the whole system is one of falsehood and fraud.

We deeply regret that an effort is now being made to organize assemblies of the Knights of Labor among the more ignorant laborers of the South. We regret this, not because we fail to sympathize with the laborer, but because it will inevitably inaugurate a conflict most disastrous to the agricultural interests; work great evil to both employer and employee, and make the latter the tool and the victim of the designing men who, as labor agitators, earn their bread by the sweat of other men's faces. We regret it the more as tending to promote a race conflict, most disastrous alike to the people of the South and our National well being.

3. But while we see much to deplore in the existing condition of things, we recognize, with profound satisfaction, that there is a great and growing reaction against the secret lodge system, and especially among the colored churches of the South. Many of their most spirit-led minded ministers, who have been enticed into the lodge, have renounced their unholy covenants, and are bearing faithful testimony against the system. Though they have been subject to much persecution, they have abated nothing from their testimony, but have been rather helped to understand more fully the true nature of these institutions. Other pastors have become strongly impressed with what they regard as the abuses of the system, the waste of time, the perversion of means, the Sabbath desecrations, and other immoralities; so that, more than heretofore, they are willing to have the subject discussed in their pulpits. There are also a few ministers who for years have given no uncertain testimony on this question, and whose churches have had "no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but have rather repudiated them." It is a most note-worthy fact that nearly all those who have been connected with the highest education of the colored people of the South have become clearly convinced of the evils of the secret lodge system, and give their testimony against them. The future educators and leaders of this people are being largely educated to regard with disfavor, if not with abhorrence, this prevalent and powerful system. The outlook is full of hope. There is reason to think that in the near future the popular mania for secret societies will, like the belief in witchcraft and other absurdities, become numbered with the things that are past. We beg leave to present the following resolutions:

1. Resolved: That, while we regard with profound satisfaction the recuperation and prosperity of the people of the South, and especially that many of the colored population have made a great advance in education and the accumulation of property, we greatly deplore the wasted resources, the perversions of justice, the corruption of morals, and the hindrance of Christianity that have come through secret societies, and we earnestly appeal to all friends of our common country and our common Saviour, to lift up their testimony against them.

2. That while we sympathize with laborers everywhere, and especially with the colored laborers of the South, who, through no fault of their own, are mainly poor and ignorant, we cannot but deplore the movement to organize them into a secret conflict with their employers as greatly injurious to the interests of both parties, but especially to the laborer, who will be the first and greatest to suffer. We regard the solution of the labor question as consisting not in organized conflict between labor and capital, but rather in their harmonious co-operation.

3. That we recommend the continued prosecution of our work in the South, and especially the presentation of our principles in its educational institutions, and we urge the continued and increased circulation of our reform literature, including the Christian Cynosure, among all the Southern churches.

H. H. HINMAN, } Com.
B. A. INES, }

Remarks on the report being called for from the colored brethren, the secretary, Rev. Lewis Johnson, responded in very timely and able remarks on the kingdom of Christ having the characteristics of repentance, of mercy, of love, of benevolence, of union, of humility, and showed how antagonistic the lodge is to that kingdom in each of these respects. We have had enough of these secret orders and it is just as citizens and Christians that we demand their abolition.

The address of Elder J. F. Browne occupied the remainder of the afternoon, in which he proved the immorality and heathen character of Freemasonry, using a blackboard for illustrative drawings.

After a season of rare social enjoyment at Knoxville College the convention met in the evening with a fair attendance from the citizens, and was opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Cox of the English Lutheran church. The enrollment committee reported 78 names; a collection of about $11.00 was taken up; and the resolutions adopted as follows:

Whereas, God has given to the human race a perfect rule of faith and practice in the Scriptures of Divine Truth; and Whereas, civil government, the family and the church, are divinely ordained and established for all time; and Whereas, there is no authority in God's Word for the secret lodge system as it now exists; and Whereas, the older and matured secret orders are governments without lawful authority, brotherhoods without Scriptural warrant, and religions without Christ; and Whereas, the younger is to the older secret lodge as the infant is to the adult, requiring only time and favorable conditions to assure maturity. Therefore,

Resolved, That the disciples of Christ in accepting the Holy Scriptures as a perfect guide in all matters, civil, social and religious, to be consistent, must condemn the secret lodge system, especially as developed in Freemasonry, as an "unfruitful work of darkness," which Christians are commanded to reprove, because it is an invention of men, dishonoring to God, and hostile to the Gospel and kingdom of Jesus Christ, as appears,

1. In its religion, by debasing the Holy Bible to a level with the Koran, and other pretended revelations, upon its altars and religious worship, so that Jews, Mohammedans, and, in the words of the Masonic confession of faith, "worshiped in deity in any form" meet as brothers around a common altar.

2. The system denies the "one only true God," by ignoring or rejecting "Jesus Christ whom he hath sent." 1 John 2: 23: "Whosoever denieth the Son hath not the Father." It is therefore anti-Christ and a liar. "Who is a liar, but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is anti-Christ that denieth the Father and the Son."—1 John 2: 22.

3. It perverts Scripture by omitting Christ from his own Word when quoting 2 Thess. 3: 6, 12, and 1 Peter 2: 5; thereby incurring the "plagues" denounced upon those "who take away from the words of this book of prophecy" (Rev. 22: 19).

4. Like every system of false worship its forms are "without the power of godliness." They sear the conscience and mock the cravings of immortal spirits.

5. It invests its officials with pompous and profane titles, and usurps an authority over its members inconsistent with the rights of conscience and supreme allegiance to God.

6. Finally, by teaching that worship may be acceptable without acknowledging Christ in his mediatorial office, the secret lodge system closes the only door through which a penitent sinner may gain access to God, for it is written, "No man cometh to the Father but by me" (John 14: 6); and again, "I am the door: if any man enter in he shall be saved" (John 10: 9).

Resolved, That as representatives of a national movement, co-operating in Christian reform, we rejoice before God in the success given to the labors of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and hail their work as an unquestionable proof that the great temperance work has no need of secret societies for any purpose whatever. We hold that the recent official call of the chairman of the Prohibition party National Committee upon all temperance voters to sustain temperance lodges, deserves the most emphatic reproof; and we feel called upon to demand, in the name of temperance, of patriotism, and of the Christian church, that all secret temperance orders should be abolished.

Resolved, That our warmest thanks are hereby given to the good people of Knoxville, and especially to the president and faculty and students of Knoxville College, for their cordial and appreciative entertainment of this convention; and we would also include in this notice the Knoxville press, for excellent reports.

The committee on the Christian Congress also presented the following which was adopted:

Your Committee on the Congress of Christians opposed to secret societies, respectfully report:

1. That in our opinion secret associations are in every way a damage to the Christian church. That they alienate large numbers of men from it; that they teach men to rely upon works instead of Christ as a means of salvation; that they yoke the godly with the ungodly and profane; that they destroy the spirituality of those Christian men who become connected with them, and absorb money which belongs to the cause of Christ.

2. That in view of the fact above stated there should be a union of prayer and labor among all Christians and Christian churches opposed to these organizations, and an earnest aggressive effort to secure the awakening among those not now active in opposition to such organizations, which, in our judgment, the importance of the work demands.

3. That we reject in the call for the Congress above mentioned, and urge all ecclesiastical bodies who sympathize with our work to send delegates thereto; all those not connected with Anti-masonic churches, to personally attend its sessions, and all Christians everywhere to unite in prayer for the removal of these infidel associations, which are disintegrating churches, over-riding laws and keeping needy souls away from the Saviour of the world.

In view of the fact that we wish to reach many who have not been actually connected with the work; and that many prominent men who have expressed their sympathy are so engaged during the coming spring, we recommend to the committee in charge of arrangements, to consider the question of postponement to a later season of the year.

The addresses of the evening were then made by Rev. B. A. Ines of Memphis and Pres. C. A. Blanchard of Wheaton, neither of which need any encomium in this writing to assist those who have heard these speakers in comprehending the excellence of their addresses.

At the close an opportunity was given to any member of the lodge present to reply if he wished. A Rev. Mr. Buchanan of the Episcopal church in Knoxville, who had been Grand Prelate, Grand Commander, etc., etc., objected to the addresses and proceeded to recount the virtues of lodgery. Pres. Blanchard asked him if, simply as a Christian man, he would not leave the lodge should it be shown him that the name of Christ was cut out of Scripture quotations used by the lodge. The poor man seemed staggered by the question and in confused words attempted to turn aside the issue, and to relieve his embarrassment the question was not insisted on, his whole manner and speech confessing his perplexity.

Thus closed our first convention in the South in harmony, and with the satisfaction of having aroused more than ordinary interest in some sections on this lodge question. Among the immediate results are: the resolution of one of the colored pastors of Knoxville who has been connected with several orders, and has a congregation of some 2,000, to preach openly against this evil; and the proposal of Rev. Lewis Johnson, an educated, pious and resolute man, to undertake the lecture work among his colored brethren in the South. It is hoped that this arrangement can be perfected, and not only one but a half dozen colored brethren sent out and sustained in this good work. Who will help it on?

Many are uttering execrations against the laboring men for combining as Knights of Labor, but defend men of means and influence who join the Masons and Odd-fellows. But the laboring class has the plea of poverty and oppression for seeking to obtain its rights by such methods, the others have no such excuse. In fact the present brood of secret clans furnished the model for the organization and ritual of the knights. Masonry is the harlot that has begotten these and, with the lack of natural affection that belongs to her class, she disowns and abandons them, and the community must provide for the bastard brood.—College Springs Crank.

Polygamy is the least of the evils which the Government has to contend with in its struggle with Mormonism. No endowment house ceremony of marriage is complete without the taking of a blood-curdling oath to obey the priesthood in all things, religious and secular. The oath pledges those who take it to regard the U. S. Government as their worst enemy. The climax of treason would seem to have been reached by these bigoted law-breakers; hence, while the present law may be sufficient to eventually put an end to polygamous practices, something of a more radical nature is hoped for by the loyal people of the territory to effectually divorce church and state, even if it go to the extent of governing Utah by a commission.—Ogden Correspondent Des Moines Leader.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NOT GONE OVER.

Not long since we received a letter from a good brother, saying, "The U. B. church has gone over to secrecy." This is a great mistake. The Liberals have gone over, and are endeavoring to take the church by force with them; but they have undertaken a task that will be hard to consummate. When they think that all there is of the U. B. church are "liberals" they are mistaken. It is true that secrecy is trying to "poke" its deformed and Christless head into the church; and one brother in Erie Conference said it was in, head, claws, body and all. It may have gained an ascendancy in that conference, yet there is a host there as true as steel which cannot be moved from the old landmarks, but will cling to the constitution and confession of faith as given to us by our fathers. There are men and women in this church by the thousand and tens of thousands that are tried and true to every principle of loyalty. They would rather leave the church than stand identified with a worldly-minded, pleasure-seeking, "filthy lucre"-loving, secrecy element. Let a critical observer go into our towns to trade, or do business of any kind, and the signs given are but tokens given to undermine, over-reach, or in some way to favor a secret brother. Our "courts of justice" are often but a flimsy excuse to conceal crime and let the criminal go free. When we were living in Pennsylvania, a case of malpractice came under our personal observation. The husband made an effort to bring the criminals to justice (for it was a case of murder, a life taken that might and ought to have been saved). When I asked a prominent doctor why he failed to bring any proof from other physicians in regard to the case, he replied: "All of us doctors belong to a society that will not criminate each other, let the case be what it may." Then I asked him where are we going to get justice from the medical faculty. He replied, "Not from us Freemasons." This is the element trying to get the rule and reins of our beloved church. Never, no, never! Let us, with the help of God, "hold the fort" against the powers of darkness.

We did upon inquiry and observation that too many in our church are in utter darkness as regards the "Commission and its work," and as far as they are being enlightened, so far they are loyal to the church.

One brother in the ministry did not know what we meant when we referred to Judge Shauch's decision. The desire to keep the church in the dark, as regards the work of the Commission, has seemed to be a special object of the Religious Telescope. Everything that favored the liberal portion of the church could have space given them for their articles, but when the loyal side made an attempt to get a hearing, the waste-basket was left to tell the story. Now I do not consider this fair dealing. It is a mistake. The printing establishment belongs to the U. B. church, and not to those who are antagonistic to her constitution and confession of faith.

I met an Indian physician to-day, and he made this remark: "I wish to so treat and deal with my patients so that if I meet them a second time I can look them square in the face." When I think of the treatment our venerable and beloved Dr. Davis has received, I think it must be quite a task for some to look him squarely in the face, for if they have not lost their sense of shame they certainly will blush.

One brother said, "our church had made a mistake in causing this uproar." It is not the church, it is the Liberals that are in the church that have violated their right and title to a membership in this church. That is where the "mistake" lies. The church is as firm to-day as ever it has been, but there is a class that wants to tear the old time-honored structure down and build an ante-room for the hood-winked fraternity, thinking they have made a bold stride toward evangelizing the world, and possibly get a few dollars in money. When they think pride, popularity and money are going to get people converted to God, this is another mistake.

If they imagine this church "gone over" on the side of secrecy, this is a mistake also. For amid the din and commotion we hear the battle-cry, Hoist the flag of Jesus higher! Gird on the Gospel armor! In the name of our beloved Master go out to meet the foe. Scores, hundreds, and thousands are engaged in this warfare against the powers of darkness on bended knees. With hearts uplifted to God for Divine assistance, they will press this battle to the very gates. "No compromise" with the powers of darkness, but in God we trust, is their motto. Victory belongs to him who has fought and won the prize. Many have come from the battlefield weeping and wounded, yet amidst their greatest agonies they praise God for victory through Christ. Dear brethren and sisters, gird on the armor anew. Be earnest, and often found at the throne of grace. He who hears and answers prayer will not leave nor forsake us, but victory will be gained though the struggle be long and hard. God give us all a new impetus for the work. Yours for the old ways and landmarks, Mrs. L. M. HOYT.

PITH AND POINT.

A FILTHY LECTURER.

Not long since a certain colonel from a neighboring State was billed to lecture here in the interest of the G. L. of Minnesota, I. O. G. T. The lectures were very good, but probably sounded better to the general audience than his entertainers, who soon learned—having sensitive olfactorys—that the lecture was purer than the lecturer. It seems to me that men who announce themselves as workers in the temperance cause, ought not to disgust their friends and insult pure homes with the stench of the "filthy weed." The truth, even, seems purer when passed to us by clean lips. By the way, what advantage has secret over open temperance work? I am investigating, and thus far find none. To a mind regulated by the "simplicity of the Gospel" all such display and nonsense is disgusting. —INDEPENDENT THINKER.

THIS BROTHER SETS A GOOD EXAMPLE.

I shall be one of your readers while life lasts; and shall try and see how some of my friends feel about your paper. I will neither spare pains nor trouble to help it. Our cause is gaining strength every day. Our best people here are getting tired of secret societies and their rule. —M. A. ADAMS, Cerro Gordo, Ill.

KANSAS PROHIBITION.

How is the reform progressing away out here in "Bleeding Kansas"? When our legislature meets and does away with our drug-store saloons, and stops getting our boys to lie and perjure themselves, and gives us an honest grand jury, then we will put the liquor traffic down, and not until then. Let the dead bury their dead, and Masonry goes with the liquor, to the devil from whence they came. —S. H. MOORE, Garland, Kans.

BAD WORK IN THE U. B. CHURCH.

The United Brethren Commission has caused chaos here, and to an extent we see and feel what it is for a house to be divided against itself. Confidence among brethren is destroyed, the cause of God is suffering, and in one case that I know of is family estrangement, and yet, Bishop Weaver is "such a good man," and W. J. Shuey and J. W. Hott must not be spoken against for their complicity with him. The majority of our conference (Erie) preachers are commission advocates; of course the majority want some line drawn, but I believe some say they want all bars thrown down. The Conservator stirs us up a little, but people are preachers. Good Lord deliver us from false brethren. I would I could meet at the Knoxville convention, but thank God I can pray for it. —J. C. YOUNG, Custer City, Pa.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON III.—January 16.—Cain and Abel.—Gen. 4: 3-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Am I my brother's keeper?—Gen. 4: 9.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The Offerings of Cain and Abel. vs. 3, 4. The difference in the religion of the two brothers is a difference that will always continue while a part of the human race deny theoretically or practically the necessity of any atonement for sin. This was the radical defect in Cain's offering. He brought of the first fruits of the ground, a mere act of homage from a vassel to his lord—nothing more; and God could not consistently have respect to an offering which ignored all the conditions of acceptance. Abel, on the contrary, confessed himself a sinner needing forgiveness, and by faith, the apostle tells us, offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain. That mode of belief which rejects the atonement as a doctrine contrary to human wisdom and justice, has always arrogated to itself the name of "liberal." In reality broadness of mind and catholicity of opinion have always distinguished those who cling most devoutly to the great central truths of Revelation, while narrowness and prejudice characterize men who prefer to walk by the feeble glimmer of their own farthing rush-light. Abel was here the liberal, and Cain the bigot.

2. The Murder of Abel. vs. 5-8. "Come, let us reason together, saith the Lord." He does not want slaves, machines, or puppets, but rational, intelligent, loving children, who obey him because he is infinitely wise and just and holy; and he is here represented as condescending to reason with Cain. He tells him that his anger is foolish; that if he did well he would have, as the margin reads, the excellency, that is the rank and privileges of the first-born, and if he did not do well, even then, the birth-right was not necessarily forfeited, as through a sin-offering the way was open for him to be forgiven and reinstated. So God reasons with every sinner, using the unanswerable logic of love. But man is a free agent. He can turn away like Cain, more hardened from the very tenderness of the appeal.

3. Cain's Excuse. vs. 9-15. Human nature likes to escape responsibility, and many who would never be guilty of Cain's crime shut their eyes and ears to the degradation, the misery or the wrongs of large classes of their fellow beings, and ask in effect Cain's question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" Every intelligent man or woman is responsible, in a greater or less degree, for the bodies and souls destroyed yearly by the rum traffic. Christian capitalists are responsible for their workmen, the churches are responsible for the churchless masses, and Christian pastors have a special burden and incur a double guilt, when they see the sword coming and refuse to give warning. The lodge power is inspired by the spirit of Cain. It sets class against class in fratricidal strife; it persecutes and slays the righteous, and with hands dyed red with blood, pretends to be religious, moral, benevolent. Let Christians wake to their responsibility and realize that each one individually is his brother's keeper, and can neither ignore nor give over to another the solemn trust.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"Cain brought of the fruit of the ground." Fruits, vegetables, grains. Cain offered to Jehovah the fruit of a cursed earth, and that, however, without any blood to remove the curse. —C. H. M. Intosh.

"Unto the Lord." We find a church in the primeval family. If Cain and Abel offered to God, we may imagine it was the habit of their parents, and had descended to them with all the sanction of parental example. —Murphy.

"And Abel, he also brought of the firstlings of his flock." Either the firstborn, which God afterwards deeded (Ex. 13: 12), or the choicest and best (Job 18: 13). —Cook.

"And of the fat thereof." Literally, the fattness of them, i. e., the fattest of the firstlings, "the best he had, and the best of those best." —Ingles. A proof that flesh was eaten before the Flood, since "it had been no praise to Abel to offer the fatlings if he used not to eat of them." —Willett in Bible Com.

THE TWO SACRIFICES. Why was Abel's sacrifice accepted, and Cain's rejected?

1. The central difference was in the heart and character of the persons who made the offerings. The apostle (Heb. 11: 4) tells us, that "by faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain," or, as Wickliffe's translation, with more literal exactness, renders it, "a much more sacrifice," i. e., a more full or complete sacrifice. —Bush. Faith implies here a heart of obedience and love, a right disposition towards God, that led Abel to be a true servant and worshiper of the living God. This character and heart of faith, love, and obedience were wanting in Cain. This fundamental difference was expressed in various ways; as,—

2. Abel offered the best of his flock; but Cain's offering is not spoken of in that way. He did not give his choicest things to God.

3. The offering of Abel expressed his consciousness of sin in the sight of God, and the need of atonement, while Cain's was merely offered to keep on good terms with God. —Keil. The worse men are, except in some special trouble, the less do they feel a sense of sinfulness and need of forgiveness.

4. If, as seems probable (see above), animal sacrifices were appointed by God, then Abel showed his faith by making the offering in God's way, while Cain seems to have shown his want of faith by disobedience to God's appointment. Ver. 7 implies that Cain was disobedient to God.

5. Not only this act, but the whole life and character of Cain were wrong, as the narrative plainly shows, and is stated also in 1 John 3: 12. God rejects not only the offering, but the person who offers. God had respect unto Abel and his offering, but not unto Cain and his offering.

6. It is possible that in the animal sacrifices, even at that time, there may have been the idea of "the blood covenant," which has prevailed in nearly all races, and that such sacrifices may have implied complete devotion, eternal love and friendship with God, consecration, as we would term it (see Dr. Trumbull's "Blood Covenants"). If this be so, Abel pledged himself to devotion to God and his service, and Cain refused so to do.—P.

"The Lord said unto Cain." The Lord does not yet give up Cain. In great mercy he expostulates with him; he puts a question which implies that there is no just cause for his present feelings. —Murphy.

"If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted?" Literally, If thou dost well, is there not lifting up? Either (1) of guilt, the burden of sin, thus removed by acceptance with God; or (2) of the sacrifice, i. e., the sacrifice is taken up by God, accepted; or (3) a lifting up of the countenance, which had fallen (ver. 6). Instead, then, of thy present gloomy, despondent mood, in which thou goest about with downcast look, thou shalt lift up thy head, and have peace and good temper beaming in thine eyes, as the result of a quiet conscience. —Handy Com.

"And he said, I know not." A direct falsehood. The current Moslem tradition is founded on a Jewish one, which states that "Cain was not aware of the Lord's knowledge of hidden things; he, therefore, sought to make one sin cover up another; but the denial only made two sins instead of one. The young, especially, should be taught that confession is noble, and to deny the truth is mean as well as wicked."

"Am I my brother's keeper?" Cain is not content with simply denying all knowledge of his brother's whereabouts; he intimates that there is injustice in the attempt to hold him accountable for him. So Adam found fault with God (3: 12), and generally sinners find fault with God's character and government. —Todd.

"The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground." No power in earth can silence the voice that demands the punishment of sin; for (1) the memories of it cling to the place where it was committed. (2) The fact of the sin cannot be obliterated. (3) Everything associated with the sin recalls the sin itself. —P.

"When thou tillest (literally, shalt till) the ground, it shall not henceforth yield (literally, add to give) unto thee her strength." It is not necessary to suppose that the crops were withheld from Cain through any miraculous intervention. (1) The restlessness of the murderer, and his inability to endure the companionship of simple husbandmen and their innocent life, would render it impossible for him to till the soil successfully, and would make him a rover. The fact that the family of Cain devoted themselves to other arts (vs. 20-22) shows that they no longer found agriculture profitable anywhere. —Todd. (2) His remorse would drive him into the more lonely and wilder portions of the earth, not easily cultivated. Too many others would settle in the fertile valleys.

"And from thy face shall I be hid." From the place where God was accustomed to manifest himself, the place of worship. It may seem strange that Cain should care for this, but wicked men often feel safer under the shadow of religion. Then "naturally," Cain had no idea of an omnipresent God, and away from the adamah he supposed that it would be impossible to enjoy the divine favor and protection. Without this there would be no safety for him anywhere.

WHY WAS NOT THIS MURDER PUNISHED BY DEATH? (1) Cain's punishment was severe, because his crime was the result of bad and violent passions, but his life was not taken because the act was not premeditated. Murder was more than he had meant. In this we have the germ of the merciful law which sets cities of refuge apart for the involuntary manslaughter. —Ellicott. Cain may not have known that a man could be killed. (2) This was the first offence of the kind, and committed before the law against murder, as such, could well have been announced. (3) Perhaps it was because, under the circumstances, it was a severer punishment for Cain to live as a fugitive and a vagabond, than it would have been for him to die. —Todd. (4) It would seem that Cain was suffered to live in order to be a warning to others of the direful effects of giving way to malignant passions, and as a living monument of the power of a guilty conscience. —Bush. (5) God would mingle mercy with judgment, give Cain opportunity to repent, and show to all men that God was just and yet merciful, and would not that any should die, but all should come to repentance.—P.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington, in a letter written a year before his death: "I preside over no lodge, nor have I been in one more than once or twice during the last thirty years."

President Millard Fillmore, J. C. Spencer and others: "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Chief Justice John Marshall: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned as one capable of much evil and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

John Quincy Adams: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

General A. W. Riley: "I hold that the difference between the Christian and a heathen religion is, that one has morality and the other has not. And when our churches refuse to speak of such subjects as slavery, liquor-selling and secret societies, they are becoming heathen religions; that is, religions without morals."

Charles Francis Adams: "Every man who takes a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment were to prove a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield: "In conducting the governments of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but secret orders to be considered, which have agents everywhere—reckless agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

General J. W. Phelps: "All secret organizations are links of one and the same chain which binds men to evil and not to good. The Masonic lodge is the parent source from which all similar modern organizations have emanated and this lodge is now in active operation in every city and considerable village of the country swaying our parties and churches; filling our offices, secular and divine, with its partisans; shaping our political destinies; and teaching a spurious and corrupting morality subversive both of the Christian religion and of free institutions."

Thurlow Weed: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

A. M. Sullivan, Irish Leader: "I had not studied in vain the history of secret, oath-bound associations. I regarded them with horror. I knew all that could be said as to their advantages in revolutionizing a country, but even in the firmest and best of hands they had a direct tendency to demoralization and are often on the whole more perilous to society than open tyranny."

Hon. Edward Blake, leader in Canadian Parliament, March, 1884: "I am not in favor of State recognition of any secret societies. I have never joined one, though many of my best friends are members of secret societies. But I believe the tendency of secrecy itself to be injurious. I believe that it brings with it the possibility of evil; I believe that it involves a certain amount of sacrifice of individuality and independence, and gives very great facilities for the misleading of members by designing leaders—very great and mischievous facilities for that purpose." "I believe that a great deal of the trouble, social and political, that has occurred in those countries [Europe and America] is due to secret societies."

James G. Birney, candidate of the Liberty party for President, was a Freemason, "but never entered a lodge after he joined the church, and, as his sons grew up, he cautioned them against joining any secret order."—Gen. Wm. Birney.

Hon. Ezra Butler, ex-Governor of Vermont: "One Masonic obligation requires that a Mason shall vote for a brother in preference to any other person of equal qualifications. Is not this political Masonry? The Masons in Vermont are about one-twentieth part of the freemen, and they hold about three-fourths of all the important offices in the State. Is this owing to their superior fitness, or to political Masonry?"

Philo Carpenter: "This saint of God (Moses Stuart) like the old prophets, was satisfied with the institutions and ordinances of God's house, and consequently did not give his influence or aid in supplementing the same with human ordinances and worldly alliances; in other words, he was opposed to secret, oath-bound societies, into which many good men, and even clergymen, have been, and are being 'ensnared.'"

Charles P. Sumner, father of the Senator, and a renouncing Mason: "Masonic engagements, whether they are called oaths, obligations, or promises, ought never to be made. They are not sanctioned by law and are not obligatory. They make it a Masonic crime to divulge that which the good of the community requires should not be concealed."

Hon. Cadwallader C. Colden, Mayor of New York and M. C.: "It is true that I have been a Mason a great number of years, and that I have held very high Masonic offices and honors. It is equally true that I have for a long time ceased to have any connection with the institution because I have believed, and do now believe, it is productive of much more evil than good. I have long entertained my present opinion, that a man who would eschew all evil should not be a Freemason."

Horace Greeley: "Many persons were brought to trial on account of the murder of Morgan, but no one was judicially found guilty of murder. It was established by seceding Masons that the oaths—at least in some of the highest degrees—that were administered, and taken by those admitted to Masonic lodges, disqualified them from serving as jurors in any case where a brother Mason of like degree was a party, and his antagonist was not."

Hon. Seth M. Gates, ex-Mason: "Profoundly convinced by long experience and observation that Freemasonry is an evil and pernicious institution. I wish once more in my advanced age to lift my warning voice publicly against it and all kindred organizations, and to beseech Christian men to have no connection or fellowship with them. Jesus is not, and cannot properly be recognized in Freemasonry. He must be ignored in the lodge-room, in his lectures, instructions, and in his prayers."

Hon. Heman Lincoln, ex-Governor, Mass.: "Freemasonry, as a distinct, independent government within our own government, and beyond the control of the laws of the land, by means of its secrecy and the oaths and regulations which its subjects are bound to obey under penalties of death, has occupied much of the attention of the committee. . . . We believe, in the language of the Edinburgh Review, that all secret societies are justly deemed odious, wherever the government is tolerably free, and can only be excused where the existence of arbitrary power, foreign or domestic, leaves no other means of escaping from hopeless slavery."

Gen. Henry Sewall, a companion of Washington: "I was initiated an Entered Apprentice to the Masonic rites in October, 1777, at Albany, soon after the capture of Burgoyne, being then an officer in the American army. . . . I was led by the influence of this 'perfect rule of faith and practice,' during the year 1784, to view speculative Masonry in a shape still more deformed. Its charity appeared to be selfishness, because restricted to its own members; its religion deism because entirely devoid of the Gospel. Its history appeared fabulous; its claims to antiquity unsustainable; its titles fulsome; its rites barbarous and absurd; its oaths extra-judicial, unlawfully imposed and blindly taken, and the penal sanctions annexed, horrid and impious."

George Washington (to Gov. Trumbull): "Masonry is a benevolent institution, which may be employed for the best or worst purposes."

Edward Everett: "A secret society so widely diffused and connected as this puts a vast power, capable of the most dangerous abuse, into hands irresponsible to the public."

Richard Rush: Hooker, personifying law, eloquently exclaims, 'her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; everything on earth docs her homage, the highest is not beyond her control, the least as claiming her protection.' Masonry has oversteered this primordial system. She has dethroned this image of God upon earth. To reinstate it over so insolent a victor, we must have a political organization. There is no other way of assaulting, there is no other hope of vanquishing, there is no other dream of humbling such a foe. It fights with desperation."

Wendell Phillips: "History shows them perverting justice, stopping at no crime to protect and conceal their mummeries; controlling politics for selfish and personal ends, and interfering with great danger in national emergencies. Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are forbidden by law and rooted out of existence."

John Hancock: "I am opposed to all secret associations."

James Madison: "From the number and character of those who now support the charges against Masonry, I cannot doubt that it is at least susceptible of abuse, outweighing any advantages promised by its patrons."

General U. S. Grant: "All secret, oath-bound political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first bring them together."

Myron Holley of New York: "Such a rebellion Freemasonry has raised. It has violated the dearest rights of nature, and the most sacred enactments of our laws, and this in a spirit manifestly treasonable, for it has done this in pursuance of solemn, deliberate and voluntary obligations to a foreign government. I mean its own—a government far more alien to which claims our allegiance than any which has ever afflicted mankind."

Gerrit Smith, in an address, 1870: "Masonry murdered Morgan. If it could not conceal his murderers, it nevertheless protected them. It overrode the laws of the land and ruled the courts and the ballot-boxes. Moreover, it is capable of repeating the crimes. Why then should we not dread secret societies, and do what we can to bring them to an end?"

William Wirt: "If this be Masonry, as according to uncontradicted evidence it seems to be, I have no hesitation in saying that I consider it at war with the fundamental principles of the social compact, and a wicked conspiracy against the laws of God and man, that ought to be put down."

Joseph Ritner, governor of Pennsylvania, 1837:—"If it be true as the lamented Colden (himself one of the initiated) declared that many a Mason became a great man but no great man ever became a Mason, how nearly does it concern the youth of our country to pause and reflect before they commit their present standing and future reputation to the keeping of a society, which for its cold-hearted and selfish purposes could immolate even the fame of Washington at the shrine of its abominations."

Lewis Tappan, private journal, 1814:—"Dr. Dixwell gave me lectures on Masonry at his house." "In September left the lodge." Letter, Jan. 21, 1829:—"I am free to say that I henceforth renounce Freemasonry, considering it a useless and profane institution."

George Washington, to friends in 1794, quoted by Myron Holley:—"The real people occasionally assembled in order to express their sentiments on political sentiments, ought never to be confounded with permanent, self-appointed societies, usurping the right to control constituted authorities, and to dictate to public opinion. While the former was entitled to respect, the latter was incompatible with all government, and must either sink into general dis-esteem, or finally overturn the established order of things."

Charles Francis Adams: "A more perfect agent for the devising and execution of conspiracies against church and state could scarcely have been conceived."

Thaddeus Steens: "By Freemasonry, trial by jury is transformed into an engine of despotism and Masonic fraud."

Judge Pliny Merrick (a seceded Mason): "If ever a Chapter or a lodge shall establish laws in conflict with those of the state the Masonic requisition is obedience to the lodge and conflict with the state, and if a member hesitates at this humiliating obedience, his heart must be 'torn from his bosom,' his 'vitals plucked from his body,' and Masonic vengeance, not satisfied with this bloody immolation, denies a resting place to the motionless remains, but they are to be 'burnt to ashes and scattered to the winds.'"

Samuel C. Pomeroy, in an address, 1883:—"There may be a broad distinction between the good and the bad in secret societies, but as they all alike have oath-bound obligations to complete oblivion of all they do or say, I have no means of judging the good from the bad. So I turn away from them all to the great Teacher who said, 'In secret have I said nothing.'"

Judge Daniel H. Whitney, (renouncing Mason): "While professed ministers of the Gospel and members of churches are permitted to associate themselves with these organizations, the task to apply a remedy will be a hopeless one; and just so long will the declaration made to me not long since by a high Mason and a worthy man prove true, that 'a Masonic lodge is the strangest medley of priests and murderers—deacons and whoremasters—church members and gamblers—decent men and loafers—drunkards and rowdies, that the All Seeing-Eye ever looked down upon.'"

Hon. Samuel Dexter, in an open letter to the Grand Master of Mass., 1798: "If there be no very important reason for upholding Masonry at a moment like the present, there is a reason against it. The system of the destroyers of human virtue and happiness is to undermine in the dark the castle that cannot be carried by storm. Secret agency has overthrown all the republics of Europe, and an extended, secret, leveling, self-created society, without any valuable object of pursuit, and embracing bad characters as well as good, cannot be the subject of approbation of an anxious patriot."

William H. Seward: "Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men in a secret lodge, order, class, or council, and, bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow-men."

Wendell Phillips: "I wish you success most heartily in your efforts to arouse the community to the danger of secret societies. They are a great evil; entirely out of place in a republic, and no patriot should join or uphold them. Considering the great forces which threaten the welfare of the nation in the next thirty years, and how readily and efficiently they can use any secret organizations, such should not be allowed to exist."

George Washington's Farewell Address: "The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government. All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency."

Daniel Webster: "All secret associations the members of which take upon themselves extraordinary obligations to one another, and are bound together by secret oaths, are naturally sources of jealousy and just alarm to others; are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions, and are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government. Under the influence of this conviction it is my opinion that the future administration of all such oaths and the formation of all such obligations should be . . ."

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD. EDITORS. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1887.

"Let it simply be asked, where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in the courts of justice."—Washington's Farewell Address.

What more direct or certain mode of destroying "the sense of religious obligation" of oaths could be invented, than to fill the consciences of courts and juries with secret lodge oaths?

Our article on William H. Seward is postponed for a little. Benton of Missouri, Houston of Texas, and Gen. Taylor of Mississippi, stood by the Union and leaned North. Mr. Seward went into the Senate when Taylor went into the White House. Webster, Van Buren and others leaned South, while Pierce and Buchanan were clay in the hands of the slave power. Of all our public men Seward's life was one of the most rigidly consistent, and as such is a model for young Americans who aspire to national affairs. This we trust will appear in our sketch.

THE KNOXVILLE CONVENTION.

The meeting at Knoxville, Tenn., was obstructed by mud and rain, but we hear on all hands that its effect was excellent. Six delegates were present from Wheaton and Chicago; Elder Browne from Wisconsin; G. W. Clark from Detroit; Mr. Hinman from the South; Mr. Johnson from Arkansas, Mr. Imes from Memphis, and Dr. George from Pennsylvania. These are, perhaps, as fit to open our reform to the Southern mind as any equal number of persons who could be selected. President McCulloch, of Knoxville College, presided; two of his professors acted on committees; Dr. Bartlett of Maryville College gave an interested attention to the discussions; and the students of Knoxville College invited the Convention to a banquet, and sent a four-horse omnibus to take its members out to the College in the suburbs. President Blanchard and Secretary Stoddard were to address two of the colleges in the region after the Convention arose.

Numerically, the attendance was not large. But in 1843, when O'Connell's Repeal were attended by half a million people, he said, at one of those monster gatherings, that his first meeting was up stairs in a small room, where he met two men, and got one to hold the other, while he went out and brought in a third.

The Episcopal pastor of Knoxville arose and protested against what he had heard. He was thanked for his remarks and asked: "If you can be shown from Masonic authority that the lodge cuts out and omits Christ's name from the Bible, will you quit the lodge?" The poor gentleman declined to answer, and his embarrassment brought down the house.

SOME MOVEMENTS IN PROHIBITION.

The conviction is deepening on us that the American party will be forced to go into the election in 1888 with nominees of its own. A late Voice gives prominence to John B. Finch and J. N. Stearns, as temperance leaders. Now both those gentlemen do not hesitate to give pre-eminence to secret societies above prohibition; as Republicans and Democrats who are temperance men do to their respective parties. The Voice does not fail to see and say that the Republican and Democratic parties are the upper and nether millstone to grind prohibition to powder. Yet neither of these parties imposes Mr. Stearns's seven degrees of oaths to bind their partisans to fealty. Nor have they, like Mr. Finch, issued an official ukase to "sustain and support" their old parties. Indeed Mr. Stearns appears in the Voice to have cast off all pretense of supporting the Prohibition party. Interviewed by the Voice reporter, Mr. Stearns says he has become "President of the New York Constitutional Amendment Association;" and adds, "We shall use our utmost endeavor to have good men elected to the [Constitutional] Convention." He says further: "Our Association has two strings to its bow. It proposes working in the old way by petitioning the Legislature," and also, "by working through the proposed Constitutional Convention."

If the Voice sees any hope of aid for the Prohibition party in this, we confess we do not, any more than in Mr. Finch's plan to set Prohibitionists to organizing secret temperance lodges.

But there is a stranger column still in the Voice. The editor quotes from the Masonic Review an astronomical argument for celebrating the birth of Christ on Dec. 25: and to say nothing of the flatulent pretensions of Masonry to astronomy or any other science, it is certainly queer that the Voice should give us a grave argument for celebrating Christ's birth on Dec. 25th by the organ of the lodge, which omits his name out of the Scriptures quoted in the Blue Lodge lectures, which initiates Jews who despise him, and is, by its standard writers, declared to be a Christless religion!

COMMUNISM, SOCIALISM, NIHILISM.

There shall be in England seven half-penny loaves sold for a penny: the three hooped pot shall have ten hoops: all the realm shall be in common.—Shakspeare, Henry VI.

Communism means no private property. Socialism means all things common except private property. Nihilism means destruction of civil and so-called, come after what will.

Men are "created equal" in point of natural rights, unequal in "estate." Hence Christ said, "The poor ye have always with you." From that hour to this there have been uprisings against oppression. The insurrections under Wat Tyler and Jack Cade in the reigns of Richard II. and Henry VI., were such uprisings; and, like almost all others, they were just protests against injustice and wrong; but these movements have been spoiled by incompetent or unworthy leaders. But, though almost always failures they have contributed to remove obstructions to progress, and helped forward the destiny of man.

We have lately run through an article on "Socialism" in Scribner's Magazine, and also a small volume, "The Social Crisis," by William H. Lyon, attorney at law. The writer in Scribner, Gen. F. E. Walker, the son of old Dr. Amasa Walker, a writer on political economy, insists that public roads, free schools, quarantine and laws protecting health are instances of veritable socialism—government invading the scope of individual enterprise. And he thinks that the march of society is toward the regulation of the hours of labor, decent and proper dwellings for the poor, and a modified nationalization of the land. But his views are vague and indefinite.

But the book by Mr. Lyon reminds us of the compliment paid to Mr. Wigfall of Texas, who was called "The smartest fool in Congress." He says that his book is the result of his "recent and hasty reflections;" yet he condemns "the present system" of society as "a nefarious scheme for crushing out of our nature everything that is noble and true; and making us fit only for eternal torment in the regions of the damned." And though he does not in terms advise laborers to rise and massacre their employers, he does say, "If their wrongs are not righted and the present industrial system abandoned in peace, they will be by the sword, and the land will be drenched with blood in a way which will make the French Revolution mere child's play compared with it"; with much more in that strain. He speaks with the utmost scorn and contempt of "College Professors" teaching political economy, and quotes approvingly: "Surely, of all blockheads, the scholar is the worst"; yet he dedicates his book to a college literary society of which he says he is "proud to have been a member."

He says: "The slave of the South was never more completely in the power of his master than the workmen of the North are under the control of the railroads and the great manufacturers;" though the laborer can leave at any hour and go where he pleases! His book is based on a principle which is a direct contradiction of Christ and Christianity; thus: "It is not human nature, but society that must be reconstructed." * * * The churches say that society is all right and the individual all wrong. The socialist says that the individual is all right if society were properly reconstructed. The one wants to regenerate the individual, and the other, society; thus giving the lie direct to Christ, who said, "Except a man (not society) be born again." And yet he claims, in closing that Christ is to be the light of his socialistic heaven upon earth, quoting: "The Lamb is the light thereof," thus adding insult to contradiction. Poor Horace Greeley went into Fourierism, fifty years ago, on the same plank. "Our evils," he said, "are social, and social changes will remove them." He then started on the road to the permission of secession and going bail for Jefferson Davis.

Such writings as these are a worse curse to the laborers of this country than all evils inflicted by monopoly and oppression. And if our soil shall be soaked with blood, shed by neighbors, as they predict in a tone of justification, their prophecy will help fulfill itself. In the words of Edmund Burke in a similar case, "They fly-blow their detestable sentiments into every weak and rotten part of the country, so that when their maggots have taken wing, they may quote their importunate buzzing as the public voice."

The complaint and uprising in behalf of labor and laborers at this time are not without just cause or causes; but they are not the result of malice aforethought. Capitalists have not met in secret and conspired against labor. The two have met in the ocean of life and are struggling for the same plank. There are more secret combinations among laborers than among property-holders. Gould and Vanderbilt do not like to see squalor and misery. They would enjoy their wealth more if there were no hungry, unemployed people; and it is not the vast accumulations of the rich but the inequality of condition which enrages the poor. While the factory was a spinning wheel, the furnace a blacksmith's shop, and the railway car a cart drawn by horses or oxen, laborers ate mush-and-milk when they could get it; dug clams and oysters; killed and cooked wild turkey, and racoons, and were happy and contented with six or eight dollars a month. But now, every brook turns a mill wheel; or, converted into steam, prints, pumps, plows and propels all machinery: and electricity excels steam as steam outran horses and oxen. Society has not had time and wit yet to adjust itself to the new state of things. And though an average mechanic or day-laborer in the United States, who does not drink, may have a carpeted floor, while nobles in the time of Henry VIII. had the ground for their floor and straw for their carpet, national abundance does not prevent individual want. In old settled countries and in cities in the new,—not counting the vicious, drunken and criminal classes, to whom money is a curse—the number of deserving poor who find it difficult to get bread increases, but not beyond the ratio of increase of population. Yet individual want increases side by side with national wealth.

This is the evil. What is the remedy? We answer negatively:

1. Secret societies are no remedy. In war, two parties are fighting and one must whip; and secrecy and violence and overreaching are war measures. But in peace to separate employers from laborers into secret squads, sworn to partiality to themselves and proscription to the others, is inaugurating war in time of peace: and the laborers' party must always go to the wall. For lodges, like legislatures, are made up of men, and have the greed of men, which is liable to bribery; and the employers have the property and can do the bribing. For Mr. Powderly to swear men all over a country large as this to be honest and cheat none but the other party is a joke, and a very grim joke. Besides, a secret despotism called a lodge, and manned by men, is no remedy for an open despotism called a legislature. It is not even buttermilk bound for whey. If labor cannot protect itself in the open legislature, by day, where it has votes, it surely cannot in the lodges, by night, where it has none. Besides, there is something in a secret society which always helps the wrong side. Ten "Knights of the Golden Circle" would swear into and betray a Union League where one Union man would swear into and betray secession. The Grange has drawn millions from farmers; and the "Knights of Labor" have cost the laborers other millions. Their initiations, dues, taxes, and loss of wages would have supported every poor laborer in the United States; and they are paying their head man $5,000 a year, and under officers in proportion. In brief, the whole secret lodge system is one gigantic swindle of the masses, which but for that power which shields all false religions would be buried under the curses of its dupes.

2. Nor will legislation alone remedy. Laws cannot create industry and enterprise, without which men must and will be poor. And if the surplus revenue of the nation were distributed among the States to be given to their poor, it would breed corruption in officials and indolence among the beneficiaries, and create a thriftless class like Indian pensioners, who gamble away their pensions and then beg and starve.

But what remedy does socialism propose? Let us hear Mr. Lyon:

"The Social System would have our railroads, telegraphs, canals, shipping, mines, manufactures, banks, stores, farms, everything in fact which is used for production and distribution of wealth, owned and controlled by the State. The State shall be the sole employer, and its citizens the employees."

This is definite. The State is to be the panacea for all human ills: and Mr. Lyon goes on to state the following expected results: "Every citizen desiring it will then be provided with the kind of work to which he is best adapted." . . . "Skilled workmen will be better paid than the unskilled." "Then every citizen will be paid enough for a moderate amount of labor to provide himself and family with the comforts of life." "There will then be little if any unchastity, for single women can easily make an honorable living." "Every citizen of the Social Commonwealth will be entitled to a living, and when unfitted for labor will not be sent to the poorhouse." "There will be no temptation to steal, when every citizen has enough and to spare." "There will be little or no drunkenness under the Social System, for there will be no poverty nor misery nor wretchedness to produce it; and as liquor is sold by the State it will be pure, and every regulation for its sale will be perfectly enforced." "Under the Social System no sane man can doubt that . . . ten million employes could produce as many products, and at less cost than under the present competitive system, and yet work only three-fourths of the time and receive the equivalent of double their present earnings." "Men will no longer be tempted to do evil."

The above are propositions selected from several pages of the like contradicted alike by history, the Bible, common sense, and even by the author himself. His scheme has been tried by Owen, Rapp, Fourier, and many others; and always with one result—failure. The Bible says, "A man is tempted by his own lusts." This writer says he is tempted by "society." He assumes that men will not do wrong when it is for their interest to do right. If this were true all sin and folly would be driven out of the universe. For enlightened heathen knew and taught that sin is its own chastiser. "Sinners," said Seneca, "resemble those malefactors who, going to the place of punishment, carry the cross on which they are to suffer." Then the writer contradicts himself. He denounces the competitive system; and yet he says: "Then teachers, like workmen, to compete with one another," etc.

But he denies and overthrows his fundamental cure-all for human ills, the state. He says: "People are rapidly losing confidence in our city councils, our legislatures and the administration of our criminal laws." * * * The larger the city or the wealthier the States, the more bribery and corruption there is in the city councils and the State legislature." And yet he proposes to make the state the sole proprietor, and cure "bribery and corruption" by putting all the money and property of the country into the hands of armies of officials, to diminish (not prohibit) drunkenness by making these officials the owners and salesmen of liquor, and to put an end to crime by teaching that "the individual is all right," and society is responsible for his sins!

In one breath he denounces the well-to-do classes as the willing authors of "The Competitive System," which, he says "is a fit vestibule of hell," and in the next speaks of misery as the sole provocate to vice, and argues that if men were well off they would not do wrong! Thus while he treats the useless saloons with gentleness and courtesy, and speaks of them as institutions which are to continue in his perfect Social State, he ignores the swindling secret lodges altogether, though he must know that the saloon and the lodge live on the laboring classes and draw more money from them than is paid for bread by the entire population, employers and employed, the rich and the poor! If the predicted scenes of carnage come, such writers as Mr. Lyon will be the chief causes of their coming.

—We receive the following inspiring news in a letter from Bro. J. F. Baird, Blue Spring, Missouri: "The conversion to Christ of two Freemasons is a remarkable occurrence which recently happened at a revival meeting held in the Cumberland Presbyterian church at this place."

—Secretary Stoddard spoke in the three leading colored churches of Knoxville last Sabbath and on Monday and Tuesday evenings he had appointments with Bro. Clark. He will probably remain in Tennessee for two or three weeks, as there is an urgent call for more work in that region.

—Bro. Hinman left Knoxville for Washington the day after the convention. He will remain with his family about ten days before starting again south through Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, etc. He expects to be absent until May or later during the trip. His health has improved all the while he has been traveling in the South.

—The Ohio agent writes on the 31st ult. from Dresden in Muskingum county, expecting to spend a month in that county and Guernsey. The work in Clinton county was so much hindered by rains that it was for the present given up. Bro. Stoddard believes the district he is now visiting a good reform field and is much encouraged at the prospect. People are anxious for lectures, and we shall hope for good reports in the near future.

THE CHICAGO DELEGATION TO THE KNOXVILLE CONVENTION.

PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD'S NOTES.

We left Chicago on Friday morning by the Monon route for Nashville where we were to spend the Sabbath. This route is, I believe, a new one, and for some distance was exceedingly rough, but after a time it improved and for the greater part of the distance will compare favorably with most railroads. The train management was good. But when we drew near to Louisville our car was repeatedly filled with young men partly drunk who continued to smoke in the car with ladies, who swore constantly and hooted every now and then to celebrate "Christmas." At last they began to fight, when the conductor got in among them and secured partial quiet. Just as matters seemed settled there was a crash of glass and a cry raised of "man overboard." The train was stopped, backed up to meet the conductor and brakemen who had gone back to seek him who had fallen, and took them all on board. The man was jarred but not seriously injured, though at the time he fell the train was moving, I should think, thirty-five miles per hour. This incident quieted the celebrators of "Christ's birthday;" and though they continued to smoke and swear, they stopped yelling and fighting, which was a great improvement. I do not mean to reflect unkindly on the conductor for permitting such things in a first class coach. He had a very difficult place to fill. To get along with a crowd of that sort, young, strong, drunken and excited is not an easy task.

At Louisville we took a sleeper for Nashville intending to visit Mammoth Cave on the way. We reached Glasgow Junction about six o'clock in the morning. The guests and managers of the hotel were kindly and companionable. The breakfast was not like one furnished in a Northern hotel, the cooking being defective and the service dilatory; but so much good nature and so evident an intent to please that one felt ashamed even to feel dissatisfied.

The little railroad to Mammoth Cave is just opened for passengers. It is built with very sharp grades and curves over a loose reddish soil and is so imperfect as yet that an hour and a quarter was used in the trip of eight miles, both going and returning. We went so slowly that when we got off the track it was a slight task to get back, and so our journey was without noteworthy incident.

Arrived at the cave we found an immense rambling structure built apparently years ago and in a rather dilapidated condition but capacious enough for hundreds of guests. When our party of five were ready, our guide, a good-natured colored man who answered with equal readiness to George, Jim, Bill, or any other name by which he was saluted, showed us the way to the cave. A short walk through a vegetable garden, passing a gate composed of pickets, drawn to its place and held there by a cord and weight, then a walk down the hillside into a ravine, a short turn to the right and we stood before the entrance of the Mammoth Cave. Just behind us was the grave of the explorer and first guide to the cave, who died in 1859.

Passing down through the entrance of the cave which is perhaps sixty feet wide and forty high, we went on for a short distance when we came to a narrow place in the passage where was an iron gate. This our guide unlocked and we were fairly within this world-wide wonder. Leaving our wraps a short distance farther on we walked down "Broadway," a magnificent avenue through the rock, with an average height of sixty feet and an average width of forty, while its length is four miles. Near its entrance the roof and sides of the cave are covered with millions of bats who come in to spend the winter and on the right and left avenues open and stretch away into the darkness. Down one of them called "Gothic Avenue" we were led to the "Bridal Chamber." In this beautiful place which by a slight effort of the imagination may be transformed into the lofty hall of some baronial palace, nine couples have, it is said, been married, the first lady desiring the service to be performed there because she had promised her mother never to marry any man "on the face of the earth."

Returning to Broadway we went on through the "Valley of Humiliation" and "Fat Man's Misery," the latter a very narrow very winding passage through the rocks, the former a place where for a long distance you must stoop and in the lowest place almost crawl to the "Dome." This was one most serious disappointment. Not that it was not grand in its extent and impressive in its gloomy grandeur, but that its name seems misleading. We expected a vast opening in the earth like St. Paul's in London or that of the State House at Springfield.

To our surprise the Dome in Mammoth Cave is simply a series of chambers in the rock connected by passages and differs little if at all from other portions of the cave.

This was our last objective point, and then we traveled as rapidly as possible toward daylight and at last reached the mouth of the cave after walking hard for four hours and making ten miles under ground. More anon.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The last part of the Chicago delegation was delayed a day through the neglect of a ticket clerk, but went on by two night rides to Knoxville tarrying in Cincinnati through a whole day. The tedium of such a trip was modified by courteous officials and comfortable cars, especially on the Monon route to the Ohio river, the warmth within most agreeably contrasting with the 20-below-zero weather at Cincinnati.

At Cincinnati efforts to find Rev. Dr. French, pastor of the United Presbyterian congregation and secretary of our second Chicago convention of 1876, and Prof. T. H. Norton, a friend of Prof. H. A. Fischer's Heidelberg studies, were without success. But Cincinnati has other attractions. Music Hall with its great organ, its lofty galleries and immense spaces of floor and ceiling, and fine statue of Mr. Springer, to whom the city is indebted for the Hall; Mt. Auburn's steep grades and Lookout House hung an hundred feet or more above the snowy roofs of a smoky city; the magnificent government building of white granite; the Court House about which raged two years' since the most desperate and fatal affray of the populace against the lodge-ridden official of the city; the suspension bridge hung above the now turbid and rising river to Covington; the river landings whose traffic is not yet hushed by winter; the Tyler-Davidson fountain with its noble bronzes, daily repeating to the multitudes thronging Fountain Square the story of art and of Divine providence with bounties for just and unjust—these reminded us of the greatness of the "Queen City."

The old traditions of "Porkopolis" are nearly forgotten, though a drove of hogs, prodded through a populous street, reminded us for the moment of former greatness. Why Cincinnati should pretend to be the "Paris of America" does not appear to a transient visitor. Her "Eden Park" is under snow, and her places of amusement are surely not surpassing; her restaurants are scarce, as are her fine retail stores; and there is no appearance of gaiety about her streets. But the large and frequent Catholic establishments betrayed the prodigality of the late Archbishop Purcell with the funds of the poor entrusted to him, and with her godless schools may force an unhappy resemblance to the French capital. The narrow streets with side gutters, and the long rows of old-fashioned, plain brick houses marks the large predominance of European habits in the city.

Night shut us in from Cincinnati to Knoxville and back, but in the convention city the more we saw the more our wonder grew and admiration. The city is built upon the steep and wooded hills that turn the sweeping current of the Tennessee on its winding way to the West. It is older than the century, and can hardly conceal its aristocracy of wealth fostered by age and qualified by the restraints of religion. Of its numerous churches the Presbyterian is most influential, though one of its hills is called "Methodist," and no one can disassociate from the name Knoxville the memory of her great Methodist circuit-rider, editor, governor and Senator, "Parson" Brownlow. The city has for many years been the metropolis of East Tennessee, but before 1860 its history was unimportant and its people numbered only some 4,000. But Brownlow and his intrepid East Tennessee Union men, whose unavailing efforts to keep the State in the Union have given it a noble place in American annals.

His widow, a well-preserved, intelligent old lady, lives in the old Brownlow house on Cumberland Street, and cordially entertained a number of the Northern delegates who paid her a brief visit. From the narrow front porch of this house the Union flag waved in spite of threat and taunt until Tennessee went out of the Union. Through its door, which opens with an actual breadth well betokening the large hospitality of its owner, have passed many feet of refugee seeking shelter, of famishing soldier, of men of quiet life and men of renown. It is in the midst of the old town whose buildings are fast going to ruin and whose narrow streets are passing into neglect. The city now numbers 30,000 and has grown out all over the hills where Burnside threw up his intrenchments and repelled the fierce attacks of Longstreet during the three weeks siege while Grant was working out the

(Continued on 12th page.)

THE HOME.

"THE NIGHT COMETH."

An angel passed through a busy street,
His step was swift and his smile was sweet;
And he sped in the path of the rising sun,
Saying, softly: "The day is begun;
"The night cometh."

He met a child, who laughed and ran,
Chasing the butterflies with her fan;
A cirelet of lillies, white and fair,
Crowning her wavy, yellow hair;
And, stopping, he asked, in a gentle tone,
"Do you love the Master, my little one?"
She raised her beautiful, sunlit head—
"I am one of his little lambs," she said;
"Then do," said the angel, "as he commands;
Your work is ready, it waits your hands!"
The child made answer: "I'll not forget,
I shall do my work ere the sun has set;
But 'tis going to be such a long, long day,
It is morning now, and I want to play."

The angel watched her, in sad surprise,
As she flitted away with the butterflies;
And he sped in the path of the rising sun,
Whispering soft: "Will the work be done?
"The night cometh."

An hour flew by—the child lay dead,
A stain on the beautiful sunlit head,
A stain which the lillies could not hide,
Though they spread their waxen petals wide;
And the weepers heard in a voice divine,
Like the solemn moan of a wind-stirred pine:
"The night cometh!"

The angel passed through the busy street,
And he met a man with hurrying feet;
"Stay!" he cried, "are you one of those Who love the Master and hate his foes?"
"Oh, yes," he replied, "my name is enrolled
In the books of the church; I am safe in the fold!"
"Then do," said the angel, "as he commands;
Your work is ready; it waits your hands!"
"Good sir," said the man, "I shall do my work
All in good season—I'm never a shirk;
Just now I am busy, as you must see,
But sometime, yes, sometime, I hope to be free
To work for the Lord. I am still in my prime
With life before me—there's plenty of time!"

The angel watched him speeding along,
With a troubled brow, through the jostling throng,
And he followed the course of the setting sun,
Whispering soft: "Will the work be done?
"The night cometh."

The years rolled on—through a city street
A man walked slowly, with tottering feet;
His form was bent, his face was old,
And his heart was as hard as his silver and gold;
But he seemed to hear, like a mournful rhyme:
"Life is before me—there's plenty of time!"
And those who were nearest him heard him say:
"It is growing dark—I have lost the day!
"The night cometh!"

—Christian at Work.

EIGHTEEN EIGHTY-SEVEN.

The year upon which we have entered has been regarded by many as the time which God has fixed for the close of the present dispensation. It must be remembered, however, that this view has no scriptural authority, and therefore it is to be treated as any other opinion of uninspired man. It is true that the Bible mentions dates bearing upon Israel's history, the reign of anti-Christ, and connected events, but it does not distinctly decide the beginning of these dates, nor does it definitely determine whether they are to be taken in a literal or symbolical sense. Hence it is rash to dogmatize about that which is not clearly revealed, or to speak confidently where the Holy Ghost is silent.

"Of that day and that hour knoweth no man," says Jesus, "no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son," in his character and office as the obedient servant, "but the Father" (Mark 13:32). Even he in his voluntary subordination to God's glory, and in his state of humiliation, did not determine the times and seasons which the Father hath reserved under his own authority (Acts 1:7). But he gives us sure signs and indications of the approaching crisis, as when he says, "This Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. 24:14); and there shall be "upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh" (Luke 21:25-28).

We certainly know that his coming is to be ushered in by universal wickedness, that made infamous the age of Noah and Lot (Luke 17:24-30); by perilous times in the last days (2 Tim. 3:1-5); by an apostasy which shall prepare the way for the dreadful blasphemy and power of a personal anti-Christ (2 Thess. 2:3-8); and church and state are full of omens that the judgments of God are now gathering like a black thunder cloud over unfaithful Christendom. But while it would be unscriptural and therefore unwise to say that our Lord will come for his saints before January rolls on to December, it would be equally unscriptural and therefore unwise to say that he will not come. Let us rather gather a practical lesson, that may help us to readiness for his coming, from the figures that make up 1887.

One.—This is the appropriate symbol of unity, and it is often used to set forth important truth. Thus it describes the unity of the Godhead: "Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God is one Lord" (Deut. 6:4); the unity of redeemed creation in worship: "Both the cherubim were of one measure and one size" (1 Kings 6:25); the unity of God's people of every name: "One ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you; . . . one law and one manner shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you" (Num. 15:15, 16). It also tells of Christ's sovereignty in the day of his millennial glory: "In that day shall there be one Lord and his name one" (Zech. 14:9).

So in the New Testament we read that "one is your Father, which is in heaven, . . . one is your Master, even Christ" (Matt. 23:9, 10); "As the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body" (1 Cor. 12:12, 13); "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all" (Eph. 4:4-6); "That they all may be one; as thou, Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us. . . . And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one even as we are one" (John 17:21, 22).

Eight.—Here we have the symbol of that which reaches beyond the present, and takes hold upon a new era, and resurrection life, and fulness of blessing. The young of the oxen or sheep could remain with its dam for seven days, but God said, "on the eighth day thou shalt give it me" (Ex. 22:30). When the sacrifice had been slain, "it came to pass on the eighth day" the priests were consecrated (Lev. 9:1). When a son was born, "in the eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised" (Lev. 12:3). The leper, restored to life, presented his offerings "on the eighth day" (Lev. 14:10); and in the feast of tabernacles, "on the first day shall be a Sabbath, and on the eighth day shall be a Sabbath" (Lev. 23:39). Hence in the millennial temple we read of the "porch of the gate, eight cubits," "and the going up to it had eight steps," and there were "eight tables, whereon they slew their sacrifices" (Ezek. 40:9, 31, 41).

Eight.—This lends significance to the fact that "about an eight days after" our Lord had testified of some standing with him, they "shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God," the magnificent transfiguration scene occurred (Luke 9:28). So it was "after eight days" the risen Jesus appeared a second time to his disciples (John 20:26). As the Holy Spirit has recorded nothing in vain, it is worthy of notice that he tells us of the ark, "wherein few, that is, eight souls, were brought safely through water" (1 Pet. 3:20); and that God "saved Noah the eighth person" (2 Peter 2:5).

Seven.—Of this number it is needless to write, for every reader of the Bible knows that it is found everywhere from Genesis to Revelation as the symbol of completeness or perfectness. In the last of these books it occurs fifty-five times, because we have read of the winding up of the present dispensation, and the fulfillment of God's counsels. It may or may not be that 1887 will be honored above all other years by the descent of our Lord from the right hand of the Father, to bid his waiting and weary witnesses and workers come away, and meet him in the air; but there can be no doubt that he wishes us to live as if we knew we should hear his shout ere twelve months shall run their round.—Dr. James H. Brooks in the Truth.

CHRISTIAN UNITY.

The following is an extract from an address by Dr. R. R. Meredith, of Boston, at a social meeting of the Congregational National Council at Chicago: Have you noticed that almost all the controversy of the Christian church has been in the realm of dogma, and that from the beginning down to this hour there has been substantial harmony between all Christians of all denominations the very moment you enter the realm of experience? Augustus Toplady and Charles Wesley were almost the leaders in one of the bitterest controversies that ever disgraced humanity—that controversy between the followers of John Arminius and John Calvin in England, in the last century. You know, gentlemen, perfectly well how they called each other names, and wrote bitter and terrible things about each other. And yet one of these men, in the midst of the very hottest of the fight, went to his desk and sat down and wrote:

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee."

And it struck Charles Wesley about the same time that he would like to write a hymn, and he sat down and wrote:

"Jesus, Lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly."

The sentiment is exactly the same in both hymns, and those men were one in their experience. Yet they were pulling each other's hair, figuratively speaking, and thought they never could come together in the world.

I remember having read of a little colored boy, down in Mississippi, who was converted to God, and he was so happy he didn't know what to do with himself. He danced, and he leaped, and he sang, and he shouted, and finally he cried out: "Oh! it is sweet—it is sweet—it is sweet as molasses!" Yes, you laugh at that; but twenty-eight hundred years before that Israel's royal singer said: "It is sweeter than honey and the honeycomb." One of them lived in a honey country, and the other lived in a molasses country, and the sentiment is exactly the same. Let us get more of this experience, friends, and then go to work with it to save to the world; and let us waste no more time in useless talk about this or that thing or the other.

TSIGONALAH.

"Teacher."

It was Tsigonalah's faint, sweet voice from the bed. She was my pupil in the old Fairfield log schoolhouse, in the Salison valley, in the beautiful Cherokee country. And by the way, don't build your schoolhouses with a south front and never a door or window at the north side, like the Fairfield schoolhouse. It was simply a room partitioned off from the south end of the church, no south porch, no shade tree, no draft through. Is it any wonder that most of our teachers broke down in two years, and went home to return no more to the work?

Tsigonalah was very sick. I had thought her sleeping in the interval of fever, and standing by the low-burning wood fire, I was asking myself, Does she know enough of her need of a Saviour and enough of Christ's purchased salvation to accept it? She was twelve years old, but she had heard of Jesus only in the English language, which she understood but imperfectly, and I was tongue-tied as to speaking the musical Indian dialect in which she did all her thinking. Would she die and go into the far-off country, not understanding what had been done for her? how he loved her and wanted her love? Could I do anything more to teach her the way?

"Teacher."

And as I turned to the bed the beautiful brown eyes met mine with such a questioning gaze.

"Teacher, what for Jesus Christ come?"

Never before in five years of mission work had any one asked me that question. O, could I make it plain to her?

"Because God could not forgive our bad ways—the wicked things we had done—unless some one would take the punishment in our place. Jesus loved us so much that he came and died for us. If we will give ourselves to him he will take us and love us, O, so much; and when God says, 'Where are Tsigonalah's bad ways?' Jesus will say, 'I have put them all away. I have covered them with my blood. You cannot see them in your book any more, for Tsigonalah is mine, and I have covered all the bad and naughty things Tsigonalah ever did with the blood I shed on Calvary. And more; if you belong to him, when you die Jesus will take you to that beautiful place you were reading to me of in your Bible last Sabbath. You will live with him always. You will never go away out of heaven again.'"

There was a long silence, then came the question: "What that mean they sing, 'Every fear and pain gone by?'"

"It means that those whom Jesus takes to heaven are never again afraid of anything, and they are never sick any more."

"I go to heaven, I never sick again?"

"Never."
"I never have ague again?"

"Never."
"My head it never ache again?"

"No, Tsigionalah, how can it? Did not you read to me, 'And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain?'"

"And I never cry again?" with a curious choking in the tired voice, for into Tsig's short life there had come abundant reasons for tears.

"Never. When God has once wiped the tears away, they can never come again."
"Teacher."

Then there came a long pause, so long I thought the tired brain could think no longer and sleep had closed the brown eyes. Suddenly the fever-dashed face was raised from the pillow, and there came the question:

"Miss Dane, how long you know it?"

"Know what?"

"Know this good thing—that Jesus love us so?"

"When I was a little child they told me."

"Who tell you?"

"My mother."

"Who tell her?"

"I suppose her mother did."

"All white mans he knows it?"

"Yes, all white men know."

"How long white mans he know?"

"Many hundred years, I think."

"Hundred years he know? What for why he not come tell my people sooner? I get well; I just run tell my people Jesus so good."

Then, after a long time of quiet thought, the soft voice added:

"I love him so."

Far on into the night I saw the shining of happy tears in Tsig's beautiful eyes, for she had found Him whom to know is life eternal.

Five years after one wrote me from my old mission home:

"Tsigionalah united with the church last year. She is living as a Christian woman should."

A short time ago I received a letter from Tsigionalah herself, in which she said:

My dear white mother, I am so glad to hear from you again. I am still living down here on Saloon, near my old home, near where you taught school. I have six little children. I try to teach them the good things you taught me. But what can I do? They have a day school to attend, but we have no meetings, no Sabbath-school, no church. It is just as lonesome as it can be for any good things here. I want to send my oldest girl away to some good school, but I cannot do it unless some one helps me.

Twenty years ago the red hand of civil war set fire to the mission buildings of Fairfield. For twenty years they have had at the old station no missionary, no preaching, no Sabbath-school. Is it any wonder if it is lonesome to one who longs for such "good things" for her children? Is there not some one who will just run to take these things to Fairfield?

[Our story of Tsigionalah is from the Home Missionary, and is true. The oldest girl of whom she speaks is probably by this time, through the help of kind friends, in Mr. Moody's school at Northfield.—Missionary Visitor.]

THE MINUTES.

We're little things on little wings,
And fast we fly away,
In one short hour we wield our power,
And then are gone for aye.

We're little things on little wings,
And often we're abused,
But there's a day when we must stay
If good or ill we're used.

We're little things on little wings,
And swift we take our flight,
So treat us well that we may tell
Who uses us aright.

—Sel.

TWO PATHS.

A biography of the son of a small farmer who lived in the stormy times of Charles the First, has just been published in England. John, on coming to man's estate, met a woman whom he heartily loved.

"We were not afraid to marry," he wrote "though we had not so much property as a dish or a spoon between us."

John was soon converted to his wife's religious belief, and was not afraid to preach it, though he was sent to prison for doing it.

"If I am set free to-day, I will preach the Gospel to-morrow," he told the judge. He kept his word, and was twice sent back to jail, where he remained for nearly thirteen years. There he worked day and night making shoe-laces to support his family, and writing the Gospel which he could not preach.

The book which he wrote, "The Pilgrim's Progress," has been read all over the English speaking world, and has been translated into eighty languages.

About the same time a German lad of seventeen in a Moravian settlement in the wilderness of Pennsylvania felt called of God to preach to the savages. A nobleman who was visiting the settlement was pleased by the boy, and offered to take him to Europe, give him a training as a skilled artificer, and establish him at Utrecht. An assured career and fortune opened before him; the whole colony looked upon him as the luckiest of men. He consented, and sailed in the suit of Baron S—. As the ship passed down the Delaware, they saw the boy, pale and haggard, gazing at the shore.

"David," he was asked, "do you wish to return?"

"Yes."

"For what purpose?"

"To tell the Indians of God. That is my true work."

"Then, in his name, go back, even now."

He was sent ashore in a bateau, returned home, entered the lodge of an Indian chief two years, to learn their language and customs, and then gave up his life to preaching to them. No missionary has ever exercised a more powerful influence on the Indians than David Zeisberger. He founded forty Christian villages, and brought thousands of savages to Christianity and civilization.

A hundred years later a small company of men, old and young, was gathered in a large room in Philadelphia. Before them lay a protest against tyranny. If they signed it, it was at the risk of their lives, and of the property which would keep their children from beggary. Not a man drew back. The result is the Republic of the United States.

Young men of the present day in choosing a career, ask themselves, "Can I grow rich by these means? How much will it be worth a year to me?" John Bunyan and David Zeisberger would seem fools in the eyes of the wise men of this generation.

Yet it is only the men who struck out a higher purpose in life than money, and who obstinately followed it, that are reckoned among the world's leaders.

Only spiritual things last, and sacrifice is one law of spiritual happiness, growth and attainment. There are two classes of men; those who live for the gratification of self, and those who live for the good of others, and the two pursue different ways, leading whither? ending where?—Sel.

TEMPERANCE.

THE STOLEN PICTURE.

A woman was walking along the street of one of our cities. She was poorly and thinly dressed; her pale, pinched face was marked with sadness. She carried a finely-framed picture under her arm. Her step was quick, and she seemed nervous. As she turned around a corner, an official laid his hand upon her shoulder, and said:

"What do you carry, lady?"

"Only a picture, sir," was the reply.

"Is it your own?"

"It is my own," she answered.

"Well, you will come with me, and we will see," he continued.

He then escorted her to a police station. She still held the picture. She was put on trial. A jury was hastily collected to hear the case. The judge took charge of the picture. He looked at it, then at the face of the woman. The picture was that of a beautiful little girl. The woman still, carried in her countenance the remains of a refined and noble expression.

"Well, madam," said the judge, "the portrait is an excellent one. I admire your taste very much; you certainly are a lover of fine arts. But this cannot excuse you. You might be excused for stealing bread, if you were hungry; or for sneaking coal, if your family were freezing. But why do you venture into this man's store and take this fine painting?"

"I will speak a word, if your honor will permit," answered the lady in a soft and melancholy tone. "I do not expect my reply to gain me any mercy; but I will give an explanation. I once had a good home; my husband was kind; we were happy. We had a little daughter. She was our joy; oh, she was so dear to us! What sweet days those were! But they came to an end. A saloon was started in our town, and my husband began to drink; he could not quit. The drinking ran us into debt—my husband could earn no more money. At last he died. After awhile my daughter also died. I was left alone. It was not long after my loved ones were taken from me, till the sheriff came, and my home, with all that was in it, was sold. I was left without anything. But I felt so much lost, I cared but little for anything except the picture of my daughter. It was sold. I tried to buy it back again, but could not find it. And for long and weary years I have lived on in my loneliness. But as I passed along the street, I looked into a store, at the open door of that man's gallery, and my daughter's picture met my eye. I told the man I wanted it, but he believed me not. I watched until I got a chance, and then slipped into the store and brought it away. And now I submit to the punishment—any punishment you may lay on me—only let me have the picture. Will you not? O, will you not let me have my daughter's picture?"

The jurors were overwhelmed with the simple, touching statement of the broken-hearted mother. No one was willing to convict. All asked to be excused, and they stepped out, each with a melted heart.

"Here," said the judge, as the woman sat before him, now left almost alone, and he gave her the picture; "there is no one can now claim it from you. And take this too," he continued and handed her a ten dollar bill. The poor woman bowed her thanks and departed.

Saloon-keepers, come and behold the sad scene! The dishonored grave—the desolate home—the darkened pathway of the widowed wife—the bleeding heart of the bereaved mother. Behold the scene till the tears furrow your cheeks, and the sense of guilt makes you groan; until you look up the dram-shop, never again to be opened, and your hand refunds the property you have taken by fraud from wives, widows and orphans.

There has been an increase of $140,000 in the valuation of household and kitchen furniture this year in Atlanta, Ga., as returned under oath by the owners. This, and the great reduction in taxes, does not look as though prohibition had "killed" the city.

The Emperor of Austria has been accustomed to smoking twenty cigars a day. This caused facial neuralgia, and a council of physicians have decided he must forsake his cigars if he would recover his health.

Seventeen of the largest cities of Massachusetts, outside of Boston, voted no license at the recent election. In Cambridge, Mrs. Ole Bull, Miss Longfellow, and other leading ladies of the place went to the polls and cast their votes for the protection of their homes.

Dec. 17, Mrs. E. H. Miller, of Rockford, Ill., brought suit against W. H. Worthington & Co. for $5,000 for selling alcohol to her husband. Yesterday she sued the Brown-Ekstine Drug Company for $3,000. The city arrested representatives of both these houses for violating the liquor ordinance.

In speaking from the altar of the Church of Our Lady of the Valley, at Newark, Pa., Father Callan took occasion to denounce violators of the Sabbath and the sale of liquor to minors, and after describing a certain saloon, laid his hand meaningly upon the altar, and cursed the establishment.

The Trades Council and District Assembly of the Knights of Labor of Michigan, representing many thousands of members, have resolved to boycott the beer brewers in Detroit. Now let them go further and bravely boycott the beer brewers in Chicago and Milwaukee and everywhere else, and they will do more to elevate labor in this country, than they could do by a hundred ordinary boycotts or strikes.

In one of the public schools the other day, while the teacher was instructing the scholars on the folly of intemperance, she commenced by saying that liquor was man's greatest enemy. A young Hibernian, fresh from the Emerald Isle, who was listening with much attention, said that we should love our enemies, a statement which the teacher thought was right, but was much perplexed with the witty remark. "But," continued the boy, with a good-natured smile, and relieving the embarrassment of the teacher, "we shouldn't swallow them."—Portland Argus.

Every male inhabitant of France, who is up to the required physical standard, is obliged to serve in the army. To escape doing this it is very common for the peasants to bind a tobacco leaf under the arm-pits and wear it a few days, when they will be seized with violent symptoms of narcotic poisoning. They are then taken to a hospital, and after their recovery the physician is obliged to give them a certificate stating that they are disabled for service in the army. Does not this show whether or not tobacco is a poison?

(Continued from 9th page.)

problem of mastery at Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. Of those well-remembered days of 1863 there is a solemn and perpetual memento in the long rows of stones circling round the hill in the National Cemetery, where 3,131 boys who wore the blue are laid, one-third of whose names are known only on the record of the loving memories of surviving friends. The city cemetery is close by, a beautiful spot, where the stranger's interest centers about the plain but impressive granite shaft, erected by a loving daughter, over the grave of Brownlow, and the square-cut stone that bears the name of Horace Maynard, the Senator against whom no tongue of man bore reproach.

But fine business blocks and finer residences spreading out over the hills are not the present glory of Knoxville, compared with her educational enterprises, first among which must be Knoxville College. President McCulloch with Professors Millin, Allen and Parker, and Misses Aikens and Cleland are the faculty of instruction, and the 150 students who make up the College family all yield a cheerful obedience to the wise, firm and matronly rule of Miss Wallace, sister of the late beloved president of Monmouth College, and of John A. Wallace for years connected with the N. C. A. Board. Over 200 pupils from nearly every State in the Union are here receiving their education, and the college buildings already rising from the crest of the hill in noble dimensions, are too straight for them all. Two more buildings are projected. The students, with a hospitable enterprise not often seen among more favored white youth, invited the convention to supper on the second day. At least none of the Northern visitors will ever forget the occasion. The large dining hall was filled with the happy company. Their enlivening conversation, courteous manners, beautiful singing, and happy address to their visitors charmed and inspired us. Father Clark was in his element. Around him flowed a golden tide of good fellowship, of Christian culture and joyful liberty for which he had prayed and sung and prophesied in tears during the long days of Abolition. The old "Liberty Singer" truly could say that his eyes beheld the salvation of God. He was lifted upon a chair to sing and talk to his heart's content while tears of joy and thanksgiving emphasized every round of applause. As it was vacation the students in considerable numbers attended the convention. President C. A. Blanchard remained to address them Thursday evening.

Other institutions in Knoxville are the University of East Tennessee located near the river in the west part of town. An industrial department is connected with this institution, which is patronized by whites only. The "Slater School" on a hill in the east part of the city is a monument to the devotion, intelligence and executive management of Miss Austin, whose noble work for the colored race forms the subject of the leading article in the North American Review for November last. Miss Austin welcomed a party of the delegates, and took them over her school-rooms, kitchen, shop, etc., where she is solving the problem of negro education by uniting industrial with mental training. We were cheered to see the Cynosure in the reading rooms, and to hear words of warm commendation of Bro. Hinman from Miss Austin, who sympathizes fully in his work for the South.

REFORM NEWS.

THE NEW YEAR IN OHIO WORK.

WILMINGTON, O., Dec. 23, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Our convention has passed and I am again at work in the field. Perhaps enough has been written of its proceedings by the General Agent. I simply wish to add my thanks to those noble men and women who so kindly entertained us, and assisted so much in many ways. I shall never forget my stay at Greenfield. Those who attended I think will agree with me when I say that we had a grand treat in the line of speakers, and those who did not attend do not know what they lost.

Perhaps I had better not write all that I have thought about some who told me they would attend, but did not. I am forced to believe that if some of our friends had been as zealous for the advancement of Christ's kingdom in the earth, as they were to sell their hogs, the attendance would have been larger, though the weather was cold. But, like Gideon's band, those who were there were united in one grand purpose. The same God that was with Daniel was with us, and we start on a new year's work with stronger faith and a more determined purpose.

On Saturday morning Bro. J. P. McWilliams took me in his buggy to the Hardin's Creek settlement of Friends. I spent that day calling and securing readers for the Cynosure. First day I went to the Friend's meeting. Bro. Joel Wright insisted on my sitting in the gallery with gray-headed men, and if the Spirit moved me, to use my liberty. The Spirit moved me to speak about an hour. Others followed, and we had a good time waiting on the Lord.

At the conclusion of the meeting I asked all who would like to hear me speak on Second day evening to raise their hands, and those who would not to manifest it in the same way. One mischievous boy voted in the negative. The house was well filled when I arrived the next evening, and good, I trust, was accomplished. From here Bro. Evans took me some five miles to the Fall Creek meeting, where I spent two days with profit to our cause, speaking to a fair audience on last evening.

To-day Bro. Cowgill brought me to Hillsboro, about ten miles. After a short but pleasant call on Rev. Clinton, pastor of the Wesleyan church, I took the train that brought me here. It has been raining nearly all day, and still continues. If possible I shall go to Dover in the morning and work toward Columbus. I trust those who are indebted to me for the Cynosure or in any other way, will, as far as possible, settle immediately. My address is, as heretofore, 214 W. Second avenue, Columbus, Ohio. W. B. STODDARD.

STILL GOOD NEWS FROM IOWA.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Saturday December 18 I came to Coleport, in Jefferson Co., Ia., and preached there twice on the Sabbath. On Monday night I preached at Lockridge, on the religion of Freemasonry, showing that it is a Satanic counterfeit of the Gospel, and the rival of Christianity. On Tuesday and Wednesday nights I lectured at Salina. The audience was small the first night, but the second night there was an increase of two or three hundred per cent. The Spirit of the Lord was upon me and the triumph of the truth as it is in Jesus was complete.

The first night I went four and a half miles for entertainment; but the second night I was kindly entertained in the village. There is a Swede Methodist church near Salina, and also an Evangelical Lutheran church of the Augustana Synod. I did not have an opportunity of meeting with the Lutheran pastor, but I saw the pastor of the Swede Methodist church, and he assured me that his church would be opened for me to lecture against the secret orders whenever it was convenient for me to do so.

From Salina I went to Glasgow, which is said to be the strongest hold of lodgery in Jefferson county, outside of Fairfield, the county seat. Here I could spend but one night. Rev. A. Steadwell and myself reached Glasgow about 4 P. M. We went directly to the schoolhouse. The pupils were coming out as we arrived. We gave them tracts, and bills of the lecture for the evening. We then proceeded to canvass the town, giving tracts and bills of the lecture to every family, and inviting them to come to the Congregational church and hear the proof that Freemasonry is a false Satanic religion, that rejects Christ and binds its votaries by oath to sin and Satan.

One lodgeman, to whom, after giving him tracts and a bill containing a synopsis of the lecture, I said, "You will come to the lecture will you not," replied, "I don't know. I am one of those you are going to talk against." I assured him that I would not abuse him; that I came to Glasgow in the same spirit that Garibaldi marched with his army to Rome; not to abuse, but to liberate the people from the despotic domination of the lodge. Nevertheless, my kindness was not appreciated by one of the principal citizens of Glasgow. I met him in the yard near his house and office; and, after the usual salutations, I offered him a bill of the lecture. The manner in which he returned the salutation, and the easy grace with which he received the proffered bill showed the breeding of a gentleman. But, when, after glancing at the bill, he turned half way around and tore it in pieces, and threw them on the ground, he impressed me with the fact, that, as a lodge worshiper, he had drawn his inspiration from Satan, instead of from Him who was meek and lowly in heart.

The hour for the lecture arrived. Rev. S. H. Carpenter, of the Free Methodist church, was present, and conducted the devotional exercises; and I spoke as unto wise men, who could judge between the true religion of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the false Satanic counterfeit, that the prince of darkness is endeavoring to impose upon mankind, under the name of Ancient Craft Masonry. Robert Moore took me to his home and showed me kindness, and aided me in my work; and on the 25th brought me on my journey as far as Bro. Huff's where we took dinner; and I was furnished with conveyance to Birmingham, which is to be my headquarters for Gospel Anti-masonic work in Van Buren and Jefferson counties, for a little while to come.

Will not every lover of the Lord pray that the hearts of the deluded lodgemen may be opened to receive the truth as it is in Jesus, and that they may be turned from Masonry to Christ, who alone can bring them from the darkness of sin and Satan unto light. C. F. HAWLEY.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The Methodist mission in Utah has received during the past year 168 members, 61 of whom had been Mormons.

—The Montreal Hackmen's Union has issued a circular agreeing to abstain from labor on Sunday in future, and requesting all hackmen not to bring out their carriages for hire on Sunday. The circular closes, "God help us to keep steadfast in this resolution."

—At the close of a remarkable Missionary Conference in Manchester, Eng., in the second week of November, after earnest appeals from Mr. Reginald Radcliffe and Rev. F. B. Myers, some forty persons of both sexes expressed their willingness to go as foreign missionaries, while others contributed gifts of jewelry and money to send them.

—During the past twelve months, 29 German Baptist churches have been recognized, 26 meeting-houses dedicated. The present number of churches is 161; membership 13,000. There are 55 on the home field, assisted by the American Baptist Home Missionary Society.

—Rev. Mr. Snodgrass is pastor at Dunlap, Kansas, and was associated with Prof. Atchison, of the Freedmen's Academy in arranging for the anti-lodge meeting some three years since when Bro. S. E. Stary was stricken down with a stone from a mob outside. On the 15th of November Mr. Snodgrass addressed an audience at Wilberforce College (colored) in Xenia, Ohio. After his lecture he walked out on the platform of an outside stairway, with eight steps. The banisters around the platform had been broken down and in the darkness Mr. Snodgrass stepped off, and fell, striking on his head. When picked up he was unconscious. He was carried into the College and there carefully nursed for two weeks. He is reported as recovering from the fall.

—Prof. Pliny E. Chase, of Haverford College, lately died. The Friend's Review says he had probably a larger accumulation of varied and extensive learning than any other member of the Society of Friends in America. He was eminent in physics and astronomy, in linguistic knowledge, and in philosophy. But his much most valued possession was his humble Christian faith. Of this faith he made a good confession, with voice, pen and life. His crowning work was that of his professorship for fourteen years at Haverford College: where he held the appointment of acting President at the time of his decease. It was well said at the time of his funeral, that such men are among the very best gifts of God to the church and to the world.

—Henry M. Stanley thinks there are 250,000,000 people in Africa, embracing a great variety of tribes and races, even in the equatorial regions. Stanley went from Zanzibar, on the east coast, about 400 miles south of the equator, westward to the mouth of the Congo, a distance of about 2,000 miles. Until he came to the watershed at the great lakes, about one-third of the distance across, he found populous tribes inhabiting large districts. The people are a cross between the Ethiopian and negro types. Farther on are the great kings and emperors of mighty tribes. A queen reigns over Ruanda, who has the bloody sword of a war-like ancestor, and no white people venture there. Farther west and in the villages opening upon the Congo, the tribes are many and small, and are engaged in petty warfare with one another. Yet a few generations ago this land was thickly peopled and abounded in cattle. As to the self-support of missions, he says: "If the missionary would purchase a tract of land and plant bananas, he would have fruit in six months." "Along the banks of the Congo, from Stanley Pool to Stanley Falls, the land is of marvelous fertility. We planted a grove of bananas at Equatorville, right on the equator, and before we came back—five and one-half months—the bananas had borne." "The facilities for self-support are freely granted by the soil, providing the missionary does not hanker after luxuries. Sugar need not be sent; wheat and flour, and now and then jams."

LODGE NOTES.

John W. Cruett, Grand Regent of the Royal Arcanum lodged in Maryland, and M. W. Donovan, Grand Vice Regent, are both prominent Masons.

The Royal Arcanum order now numbers 70,000 members, according to reports of their organs.

The Freemason, Toronto, for May, contains this astounding statement: "The present Grand Master of British Columbia has been playing Czar. At one swoop he has suspended nearly all the Grand officers and a Past Grand Master. This was pretty good for a start, and he now contemplates suspending the entire Craft in that jurisdiction. This is the result of putting a little man in a big position. We have put him on our list of Masonic tyrants." He must have become demented on his prerogative power. Well, he may briefly strut, but his doom is sure. He will soon find that he is beneath the contempt of those over whom he now tyrannizes—Voice of Masonry.

The Keystone of Philadelphia, Masonic organ, calls public Masonic installations, "shows for the profane," and never ceases denouncing them.

Major General W. S. Hancock was a Mason, and also a Knight Templar, he being up to the time of his decease a member of Hutchinsons Commandery of Knights Templars of Norristown, Pennsylvania.

H. Clay Hall, past commander of the G. A. R. of New York, has been tried and found guilty of misappropriating about $1,200 of the funds of the G. A. R., and was sentenced to be dismissed from the order. The sentence has been approved at national headquarters.

General Logan, says the Detroit Free-mason, was a prominent and active Freemason, belonging to all the Masonic bodies in Chicago, from the Entered Apprentice Mason up to the 32d degree in the Scottish Rite. He was an active member of the Commandery, and while in St. Louis recently he was the central figure among the Sir Knights, and honored Detroit Commandery No. 1, by calling on them at their headquarters, and his genial and unassuming manner made him many friends among the fraternity who feel deeply his loss.

Through pressure brought to bear on the Knights by the Roman Catholic clergy, of Montreal, some lodges have been closed. It is said that some members of the order are admitted to communion on condition that should the Pope finally pronounce against their organization, they will resign.

Several hundred Chinamen gathered in the vicinity of Ninth and Rae streets, Philadelphia, on 2nd July, preparatory to beginning a meeting for organization. So far as could be learned, they belonged to the Chinese order of "Hon. Shu-Tong," or Freemasons, and included in their number delegates from Wilmington, New York, Newark, Paterson, Chester, Baltimore, Chicago, and other cities in the South and West. The whole number of delegates, including those from this city, it is said, would be about 200. But little could be gleaned from the Chinamen as to the character of their organization. Its objects, however, are said to be somewhat similar to those of the order of Free and Accepted Masons. The "Ning-Yung," or Grand Master, is Lao Gee, of Chicago, whose approaching arrival was called to the attention of Chief of Police Stewart, on Saturday, by Wong Pock of that city. Wong Pock applied to the Chief of Police for a detail of policemen to prevent interference or annoyance from disorderly persons who might be attracted by the arrival of the numerous delegates. He said that the formal business of the Grand Lodge would begin at eight o'clock Saturday. It is stated that a number of initiations were to take place, and that this service would probably consume the time after the meeting began until daylight. Several other meetings for initiations have taken place in this city within the last year, it is said, and each of these have continued throughout the night. The services are reported to include speeches, music, the burning of incense, the partaking of food, acceptance of obligations, etc.—Sunday Times.

BUSINESS.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Dec. 27 to Dec. 31 inclusive:

N. Callender, J. N. Norris, S. L. Fay, W. Young, H. Stratton, Z. Graves, J. F. Baird, W. R. Fleming, E. Smith, O. Park, C. T. Collins, D. H. Seaman, J. M. Marvin, J. A. Gibson, E. Avery, D. R. Mitchell, J. H. Hunting, Rev. W. S. Fulton, A. Russell, E. M. Livesey, E. J. Hemphill, W. J. Knappen, S. Jones, J. Remington, R. Park, J. A. Shaw, J. Marks, T. B. Wilson, O. Tichenor, A. W. Brim, J. Stewart, L. Lester, M. H. Clark, E. Atkins, O. W. Warren, J. Gable, Rev. D. Yant, W. H. Holcomb, F. Switzer, J. A. Gordon, Prof. C. M. Lowe, Rev. C. O. Anderson, B. Apple, L. C. Andrews, T. Bell, J. W. Swaivel, J. W. Young, J. Compher, B. Tunnickliff, C. E. Joslin, O. Sholes, S. Pinkerton, T. Hodge, Mrs. Johnson, F. F. French, Rev. E. Barretson, W. H. Parker, S. M. Stucky, T. B. McCormick, A. M. Paull, J. R. Brown, G. McHenry, W. H. Reed, G. Clark, A. Muzzy, A. Dewey, W. H. Figg, H. Frost, R. Stewart, J. P. Richards, D. West, N. Bourne, J. C. Armour.

OUR PARTNERS.

There are hundreds of places where only one Cynosure is taken. If the subscription list is enlarged in these places, it must be done by our resident partners.

If you need the enthusiasm of a crowd to enable you to push the Cynosure successfully, think of the companies and battalions of workers situated just as you are, and fighting the same kind of a fight. You are one of a battalion! God grant you victory in the good work, and at least one new subscriber from each post office.

Those who receive the Cynosure with this item marked, will understand that the subscription is paid for by some friend, and will be stopped when the time expires unless ordered to be continued.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. H. H. Hinman, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Iowa, C. F. Hawley, Wayne, Henry Co. Care Rev. Geo. Fry. Illinois, I. R. B. Arnold, Wheaton. Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville. New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market. Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus. Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton. Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma. DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.] J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill. N. Callender, Thompson, Pa. J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa. T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind. E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind. H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich. J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa. A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind. J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, Mo. W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo. T. S. Walter, Kit, Jay Co., Ind. J. L. Barlow, Wheaton, Ill. A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill. Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn. E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa. Warren Taylor, South Salem, O. J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn. J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa. S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo. E. Barnetson, Haskinville, Steuben Co., N. Y. Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont. D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

FRIENDLY GREETINGS

Is a FORTY-PAGE, ILLUSTRATED, monthly family magazine edited by J. F. AVEKY, Halifax, N. S.

Price, 75 cents per Year if Prepaid.

Its columns are devoted to TEMPERANCE, MISSION, ART, INTELLIGENCE, HOUSEHOLD HINTS, SHORT STORIES, and ILLUSTRATIONS, making 28 pages of reading matter, suitable and profitable for young and old, with an average of twelve illustrations in each number; this will give a magazine of 40 pages monthly for 75 cents a year; and will, therefore, be one of the cheapest sold. Specimen copies sent for two cents stamps.

A $5 GOLD PIECE

will be given if you get 20 subscribers. "Buds and Blossoms" is endorsed by Christians and ministers of all denominations. One writes: "The cover has been a comfort and blessing to me. Every page is calculated to bring one nearer to the Lord." "We wish you ever-increasing success as you devote." "To see it & B. is to want and to love." "It should be in every home." A Record of Faith Work.

A GENEROUS OFFER!

Six Entertaining Books

GIVEN AWAY.

To each subscriber for the CYNOSURE who sends in a $2.00 subscription for one year in advance on or before

FEBRUARY, 1887.

See Special Offer Below.

OLIVER CROMWELL. His Life, Times, Battles, and Contemporaries. By E. Paxton Hood. 12mo, paper.

"Hood's biography is a positive boon to the mass of readers, because it presents a more correct view of the great soldier than any of the short or lives published, whether we compare it with Southey's, Galt's, or even Foster's."—N. Y. Sun.

JOHN PLOUGHMAN'S TALK; or, Plain Advice to Plain People. By Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon. 4to, paper.

"This book is written in a semi-humorous vein, but every word is a grain of gold. It has had an immense sale in England, amounting to more than 300,000 copies. It is quoted everywhere."—Scrivener's Monthly.

MANLINES OF CHRIST. By Thomas Hughes. 4to, 15 pp., paper.

"A manly and thoroughly wholesome book. Its value lies in its simplicity, its earnestness, and in its high ideal of life."—Scrivener's Monthly.

SELF-CULTURE. By John Stuart Blackie, Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh. 4to, 13 pp., paper.

CONTENTS.—Culture of the Intellect, Physical Culture, Moral Culture, and Typographical.

"This is one of the most direct, practical and sensible of treatises on the subject. It is written in a plain, straightforward style, with Christian motives. We warmly commend the book to all."—Phil. Episcopal Recorder.

JOB'S COMFORTERS; or, Scientific Sympathy. A religious Satire in which Huxley, the Moleculite, John Stuart, the Millite, and Tyndal, the Sadducee, attempt to comfort Job out of their scientific books. By Joseph Parker, D. D. 8vo, 32 pp., paper.

"I shall endeavor to make it known where it will be appreciated. The task was a delicate one, and I sincerely congratulate the author on the manner in which he has approached it in both aspects."—Hon. William E. Gladstone.

MASONIC OUTRAGES. By Rev. H. H. Hinman. The following are the topics discussed: Masonic attempts on the lives of seceders. Masonic land. Masonic assault on free speech. Freemasonry among the colored people. Masonic interference with the punishment of criminals. The fruits of the Masonic institution as seen in the conspiracies and outrages of other secret orders. The relation of the secret lodge system to the foregoing and similar outrages.

Special Offer.

To any one who will send us $2.00, the subscription price of the CYNOSURE, on or before February, 1887, we will send the paper one year and THE ABOVE SIX BOOKS FREE! Don't miss this chance! We cannot promise to hold the offer open longer than January. Accept quickly!

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform

Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience!

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason—and especially by HIS WIFE. Set it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Christian's Secret

A Happy Life.

28th THOUSAND.

Baptist Commendation.

"We are delighted with this book. It reaches to the core of Christian experience, and is eminently practical in its teaching. It meets the doubts and difficulties of conscientious seekers after the broad and true life, but whose efforts result only in alternate failure and victory. The author, without claiming to be a theologian, sends out the results of a happy and rich experience to help others into a happy Christian life."—Baptist Weekly.

Presbyterian Endorsement.

"The book is so truly and reverentially devout in its spirit that it demands criticism. It contains as much that is sound and practical, so much that, if heeded, will make our lives better, happier and more useful, that the intelligent reader who really wishes to lead a life with Christ in God's care scarcely fail to derive profit from its perusal."—Interior.

Methodist Word of Praise.

"We have not for years read a book with more delight and profit. It is not a theological book. No effort is made to change the theological views of any one. The author has a rich experience, and tells it in a plain and delightful manner."—Christian Advocate.

United Brethren's Approval.

"We have seldom met with more interesting volume, abounding throughout with apt illustrations; we have failed to find a dry line from title-page to end."—Religious Telescope.

Congregational Comment.

"It contains much clear, pungent reasoning and interesting incident. It is a practical and experimental lesson taught out of God's word, and is worthy of universal circulation."—Church Union.

This enlarged edition is a beautiful large 12mo volume of 360 pages.

Price, in cloth, richly stamped, 75 cts.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

SONGS FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE AND SPIRIT-STERLING SONGS,

ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 22 W. Madison Street Chicago.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from the chapters which treat of: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Conspiracy of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR ILLUSTRATED.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN WORK"

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

Price 25 Cents.

For Sale by NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 84 pages. In cloth, 60 cts. per dozen. Paper covers, 50 cts. per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at one of the best places of purchase will send it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

IN BRIEF.

At Louisville, Ky., recently, over three hundred fire alarm boxes were wholly or partly destroyed in consequence of an electric light wire crossing the fire signal wire. The connections were melted.

While sawing a log in a Mississippi mill, the workmen were astonished to see the log suddenly take fire and the machinery stop. Examining the saw, they discovered that every tooth was gone, and on splitting the log a cannon ball was found buried in the heart.

An English doctor reports the case of a lady who had a regularly recurring series of abscesses upon the ankles. On entering her sitting room one day he noticed a pair of her shoes, and, on the impulse of the moment, he directed his patient to use a large, broad-heeled shoe. She did so, and has had no trouble for two years. Her former shoes had a long, tapering heel, set nearly in the middle of the sole.

The Coco de Mer palm is found only in the Seychelle Islands. It is from sixty to one hundred feet high, and its trunk is a foot in diameter all the way up to the top, where it is crowned with a tuft of huge leaves, some of them as much as twenty feet long. The male and female flowers are produced on different trees. The resulting nut is about a foot long, of irregular shape, and, till the discovery in 1743 of the only spot in the world where these palms grew, was believed to be a marine product. The Malay sailors used to affirm that it grew under water in placid bays; but if they dived for it it disappeared. The nuts were highly prized when found floating about on the Indian Ocean.

One-eighth of the people of Berlin are now receiving public charity. The city has a population of 1,200,000 inhabitants, of whom 150,000 are regular recipients of city aid. Ten per cent of the population live in cellars, and twenty-five per cent in crowded apartments. Germany's capital may have its attractions to those who have gold to spend, but to the industrious toiler it offers no allurements.

New industries are daily springing up in different sections of the globe. A company has been formed in Mexico to work up the cactus plant. The oil is to be used for lubricating purposes, the fibre for cordage, the leaf for paper, and the fruit for eating. The fruit is so juicy that it often takes the place of water for man and beast; and some years ago, when the drought came over San Luis Potosi, thousands of cattle were saved by eating the fruit.

At length Tamai, the last stronghold of the desert freebooter, the wily Osman Digma, has been captured; and this, not through the process of a British force armed with British bayonets, but by the native tribes of the Red Sea littoral, who but a few months ago regarded Osman as invincible. Osman's forces are now dispersed, and he himself has made good his retreat to Khartoum. With the united co-operation of the friendly tribes, the Sudan question may soon be satisfactorily settled.

It is said that 75 per cent of our population suffer from decayed or imperfect teeth, and the fact that one London firm annually disposes of 10,000,000 artificial teeth, is proof positive that the care of teeth is not yet fully understood by the public. Many dental surgeons are of the opinion that the mischief arises from the erroneous notion that children's first teeth require no attention; whereas the fact is, if these be attended to or removed at the proper time, they will invariably be replaced by strong and durable successors. Parents should not neglect to bear this in mind.

The Anarchist plot to destroy Vienna on the 4th of October, appears to have been carefully planned, though fortunately not successfully carried out. Arrangements had been made to fire the city in four distinct quarters, and then, while the police and citizens were endeavoring to extinguish the flames, the diabolical dynamites were to blow up the palace and the great public buildings. The details of the discovery of the plot disclosed the fact that those engaged in it were drawn from all nationalities, which would indicate that the soldiers who war against society under the red banner are not sufficiently numerous in any one nationality to organize for any very extensive operations.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT.—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SECY. AND GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECY. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is: "To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being leproyed, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform. FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of _____ dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.
SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Riddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Uish, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., H. W. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., James Harvey.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Terrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr., Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Mortill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beuchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Co. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Rev. R. M. Smith, Pagetown; Rec. Sec., Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Cor. Sec., Rev. A. M. Campbell, Cedarville; Treas., W. P. Clark, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Poek, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird, St. Johnsbury; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo, ec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas. M. R. Britten, Vienna.

Seeds or Books Free
With This Paper!

To any of our subscribers or any other person we will send, for only

$3.00,

The Christian Cynosure

AND THE

FARM, FIELD AND STOCKMAN,
both one year, and in addition we will present the subscriber with his choice of either 20 WELL FILLED PACKETS OF SEEDS

The Seeds

are mostly new and rare novelties, the object being to introduce new and improved varieties. There are over 100 varieties to select from, comprising the rarest flowers and vegetables, and new varieties of thoroughbred grain, either imported from the best special sources of Europe or purchased from the originator in this country, especially for this distribution. Twenty packets of seeds of like quality cannot be bought at retail for less than $1.50

The Farm, Field and Stockman is doubtless well known to our readers. Since its present publishers, Gen. C. H. Howard and Jas. W. Wilson, took it in hand it has been second to none of its class. It is an ably edited, neatly printed, reliable, 4-column, 16-page, agricultural and family weekly, and a staunch advocate of farmers' rights—a paper every farmer wants. Price $1.50 a year.

Send the money to this office, and we will promptly forward the paper and an illustrated descriptive list of the above and seeds, with full directions for planting the latter, from which a selection can be made; or, if you want to make the selection first, a list will be sent you free on application to the Farm, Field and Stockman, Chicago. This is indeed an unparalleled offer.

Mental Gymnastics;

OR

Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose.

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;
THE STUDENT, His Lessons;
THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:

"The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN."

We cordially commend it to all persons of falling memory as the best book obtainable on that subject.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

NATIONAL SUICIDE,
AND
ITS PREVENTION.

BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing, for, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

"Even his fallings lead to virtue's side."

—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticize. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been, for some years, steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FIFTY YEARS AND BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by

REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army, who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of the life that now is, and to give comfort and help as to the life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man a burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Sprinkling from such numerous and pure fountains, they can afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

MORGAN MONUMENT

20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

WHAT IS NATIONAL REFORM?

A RIGHT ANSWER TO THIS LEADING QUESTION INVOLVES THE SOLUTION OF

SOCIAL, MORAL AND POLITICAL PROBLEMS.

Can the Question be Answered?

SEND $2 FOR ONE YEAR'S SUBSCRIPTION TO THE
CHRISTIAN NATION.

252 BROADWAY,
NEW YORK,
AND

READ AND LEARN FOR YOURSELF.

BESIDES ITS INTELLIGENT AND POPULAR DISCUSSIONS OF THESE QUESTIONS OF INTEREST TO EVERY MAN AND WOMAN, THE CHRISTIAN NATION IS
A Home Paper in the Fullest Sense.

HOME HINTS.

TACT IN BABY MANAGEMENT.

The way to keep the baby from becoming "spoilt" is to let it cry as little as possible. It will gain strength of mind to endure its necessary ills all the sooner if it is allowed to suffer as little as possible from ills that can be avoided. Its wants should be anticipated, its sources of discomfort should be removed as soon as they arise, without waiting for it to cry; it should be prevented in every way from forming the habit of crying. Study its expression; when it is tired of playing on the floor take it up and dance it about the room, and let it look out of the window for a few minutes. In a little while it will be glad to go back and play on the floor again. If it is necessary to resort to discipline, be careful to seize the right moment for it. If you want the baby to learn to go to sleep without being rocked, choose a day when it has been unusually bright and happy all the morning, wait until twenty minutes or so after the regular hour for its nap, then give it a cup of milk particularly sweet and warm and nice, make its little bed soft and cosy, lay it down gently and soothe it with a little kissing and patting, and, if it is not already too much spoilt, it will only be too happy to close its eyes in the sweetest kind of sleep. If it does not, its fit of crying will be as brief and its little injurious as it can be.—Babyhood.

FATIGUE IN INFANTS.

The sensation of fatigue constitutes, from the practical point of view, one of the most important aspects of the hygiene of infancy. Whatever may be the source of the fatigue, sleepiness is the result; or, if the fatigue is great, crying followed by sleep. A chief characteristic of infancy is the rapidity with which the nervous system becomes exhausted, the central portions as well as the peripheral—not only the eye and the ear of the young child suffer fatigue, but also the cerebral centres; and the more tender the age the more striking are its manifestations. This exhaustion of the nervous centers is the source of an exceedingly disagreeable sensation, and every effort should be made to prevent it as far as possible, and to repair it with quiet and refreshing sleep when it cannot be prevented. Being awake for a long time is sufficient to produce fatigue without any other cause, and it is one of the most frequent reasons for the baby's crying. Any painful impression is quickly followed by fatigue.

Agreeable sensations as well as disagreeable ones are fatiguing when they are long continued, and in muscular exertion. The action of sucking sometimes occasions cries and tears when the breast does not contain enough milk; and the continual working of the respiratory muscles, to which the baby is at first unaccustomed, is doubtless a considerable source of fatigue. The constant transition which the child makes from one object to another may be explained by the fact that any sensation fatigues it very rapidly, and that its attention wanders without its will to a fresh object. All these sources of fatigue are sufficient to account for the almost continual sleep of the infant during the first period of its life.—Babyhood.

BABY'S FIRST STEPS.

A young child's bones are soft and cartilaginous, and keeping a poor little thing tied up in a chair, when it ought to be lying on its back kicking the air and strengthening its limbs, or crawling on the nursery floor, is positively injurious and sinful. It is done, I know, with the view of teaching it all the sooner to maintain the erect attitude; but bent legs may be the result, and however strong a bent-legged man may be, he certainly does not look elegant. Let the child creep, then, and as soon as he finds that he can pull himself cautiously up, and stand by the side of a box, he will do so; this is the only safe and natural process. Soon after this he will, if encouraged, venture upon what parents call the first step. Let him creep, and when he walks and falls laugh at him; unless you want to make the child an idiot, do not rush to pull him up. Children are not at all brittle, and they ought to learn at a very early age to depend upon the strength nature has endowed them with. Some nurses tie a band about the poor child's waist, and then shove him kicking and sprawling on before them, during which time the child looks as graceful as the golden lamb which hosiars hang out as a sign. This practice is most injurious.—Selected.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination.

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or saline on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-passages, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

How E. L. HASTINGS, Collector of the Patent, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchitis and Catarrh of the Lungs, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HASTINGS, 28 West 40th St., New York. "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a Pillow-Inhaler, and used it until my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO., 221 West Madison St., Chicago. MAIN OFFICE: 1320 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR

Illustrated.

"ADELPHON KRIPTOOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN or SECRET Work."

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

PRICE 25 CENTS.

For Sale by

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SONGS OF PILGRIMAGE.

A HYMNAL

FOR THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

Probably the most extensive collection of hymns in the English language.

It contains 1233 hymns, with music for them all. It contains 344 tunes from 112 known authors. It contains old hymns you have heard before. It contains old tunes your grandmother sang. It contains hymns you learned when a child. It contains old tunes you have wanted so long. It contains new tunes you have never heard. It contains plenty of hymns from the French and German. It contains numerous grand old minor tunes. It contains some 500 hymns you never saw. It contains 131 hymns from Watts. It contains 140 of Wesley's hymns. It contains over 300 new hymns from H. L. H. It contains hymns for all occasions. It contains hymns of the blessed hope. It contains old hymns from the Latin and Greek. It contains hymns from the French and German. It contains hymns from the Welsh and Danish. It contains hymns for the old and young. It contains hymns for sick and well. It contains 228 pages of hymns and music. It contains the names of authors and composers. It contains the dates of both hymns and tunes. It contains an index of subjects.

It is printed from type like this line:

YET YOU CAN CARRY IT IN YOUR POCKET!

Price in flexible cloth, $1.00, cloth extra, $1.25.

Address orders to the publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.,

OR TO THIS OFFICE.

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Book and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is anything you want for your self or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to

221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhmah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.

Pleasant Ridge Cong. Soudford Co., Ala.

New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.

College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.

First Congregational, Leland, Mich.

Superior Church, Green county, Pa.

Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.

Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.

Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.

Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.

West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abbeville, Pa.; Menomonic, Mondovi, Waubesa and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches, Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Houston, Ill.; Kamen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: Ist of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Linden, Mass.; and Streator, Ill.; Beres and Camp Nelson, Ky.; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksville, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood,

Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN or SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association,

221 West Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,"

AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A

"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc.

of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York Rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revived

Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, the Knights of Pythias and the Grange with affidavits, etc. Over 200 cuts, 96 pages, paper cover, Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Society Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DAKOTA ADMITTED

as well as all States and Territories into our Great Family of Readers.

A great staff of new Western writers will specially adapt (during 1887) the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST to Western Agriculture, making it, with recent additions and improvements, the most authoritative authority for forty-five years past, in all matters pertaining to Agriculture, Horticulture, etc.

The JUVENILE, HEARTH AND HOUSEHOLD DEPARTMENTS have been enlarged, and HUMBLED Exposures are to receive additional attention.

1,000 Original Illustrations.

Every issue of the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST contains nearly 100 original illustrations of animals, plants, new farm and household conveniences and appliances, out-door scenes, etc.

Splendid Engravings Free!!

It is noteworthy that a majority of our Presidents were reared on farms, or retired from public life to rural scenes. The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is now publishing and sending free to all subscribers, at an outlay of over $30,000, superb Engravings (18 by 24 inches) of some of our Presidents, with special descriptive papers by James Farnon, Donald G. Michie and other eminent living American authors. These engravings constitute a magnificent portfolio collection of ornaments for the walls of a prince or peasant's home. All subscribers to 1887 immediately forwarded are entitled to all the series, beginning in May last.

Endorsed by the U. S. Government.

Vol. 8th, Tenth Census, U. S., says: "The AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST is especially worthy of mention, the remarkable success that has attended its unique and enduring efforts of its proprietors to increase and extend its circulation. Its contents are read every month for a German Edition, which also circulates widely."

Price, $1.50 a year; Single Numbers, 15c.

Balance of this year FREE to all subscribing immediately. Send Six Cents for mailing your Grand Donor Number, Vol. 8th, 3000 copies, and a Sample Proof of Engravings of "Homes of our Farmer Presidents" together with description by James Farnon.

AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

DAVID W. JUDD, Pub., 751 Broadway, N. Y.

CANVASSERS WANTED EVERYWHERE.

We will club the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST with the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, and send it free to every person who immediately subscribes to receive the engravings free for next year and this year also.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

Talks

ON THE

Labor Troubles,

BY REV. C. C. BROWN.

The Danger—The Laborer's Grievance—The Laborer's Hope—The Laborer's Mind and Muscle—Co-Laborers.

TIMELY TALKS ON AN IMPORTANT SUBJECT.

The Papers Say of this Book:

"It is well to remind the world of the great law of human brotherhood, but how to make the 'more general application of it?' 'Aye, there's the rub!' Our author contributes his mite to this noble cause, and his voice and reasoning will reach some ears and perhaps touch some understandings and move some selfish hearts that are buttoned up very closely and hedged around by over much respectability and comfortable prejudice."—Chicago Tribune.

"The writer does his work in a way remarkable, alike for its directness, its common sense, its impartiality, its lucidity and its force. He has no theories to support; he deals with facts as he finds them; he fortifies his assertions by arrays of demonstrative statistics. The work is among the best of the kind. If it is not the best that we have seen, what is it? It is very possible that it will be the hands of all our wage-workers, we wish it could be read by every one of them."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Extra Cloth 60c., Paper 30c.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

"A THRILLING WARNING."

THE

Man Traps of the City.

BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mother—place this book in the hands of your sons

It treats of

The Tiger and His Den,

Cups of Plagues,

The Scarlet Sin,

Embezzlement,

The Devil's Printing Press,

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that show like a hand laid from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shown of their nature, rolled up in a volume in which they have been surrounded by the purest literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the prostitute is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a life of death, pure and simple, in which it is absorbed.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents.

Paper bound, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

COUNTRY.

Earthquake shocks and loud rumblings early Monday morning disturbed and excited the inhabitants of towns in Western Maryland. As the country is mountainous, a volcanic upheaval is feared.

The ice in the Straits of Mackinaw is strong enough to bear horses. It is reported as the earliest freezing of the Straits in years.

Fire losses in the United States and Canada during December reached $11,200,000, and for the year 1886 aggregate $116,600,000—the figures for both the month and year being far above the average.

Arensford and five others, charged with murder and conspiracy in the Haddock affair, appeared in court at Sioux City Monday, and entered pleas of not guilty.

The cold weather of the past few days has covered the St. Lawrence River with ice. On Saturday the ice was sufficiently strong to allow of the crossing of teams between Cape Vincent and Kingston, a distance of twelve miles.

The threatened strike among the employees of the various breweries of Philadelphia, including brewers, drivers, coopers, engineers, firemen, and other hands, numbering in all over two thousand men, was inaugurated Thursday against a reduction of twenty per cent in their wages.

In the trial at Wyandott, Kansas, of the Knight of Labor train wreckers, Wm. Vossen, one of the accused, made a clean breast of it, swearing to the circumstances of the wrecking of the train as they have been published hitherto in the newspapers. He testified that Lloyd pulled the spikes, aided by Newport, while Hamilton, Vossen and others stood guard.

The Grand Jury for the December term of the Criminal Court in Chicago, in its final report to Judge Collins, condemned Mayor Harrison and the police department for allowing certain saloons, well known to them as the resorts of criminals and prostitutes, to remain open. Judge Collins, in thanking the Grand Jury for its report, said that one-third of the cases that had come before him had originated in eight such saloons.

Grip-car trains on the Sutter street and Geary street lines, at San Francisco, were attacked Monday by masked strikers, who beat the conductors and drivers, and sent the cars dashing along the streets without guidance. Two grips were wrecked, and the windows of other cars smashed. The police fired at the mob, but without injuring any of them. The cars on both lines stopped running at dark to prevent further trouble. Five of the maskers were arrested.

FOREIGN.

It is reported in Paris that a conference has been held by President Grevy and MM. Ferry and De Freycinet, with a view to the speedy dissolution of the present Ministry, and the formation of a Ferry-De Freycinet Cabinet. It is also reported that M. Ferry has consented to support M. Freycinet as the successor of President Grevy.

It is semi-officially stated that the Russian Government maintains the same attitude toward Bulgaria it adopted at the time of General Kaulbar's return from that country. The return of Prince Alexander to the Bulgarian throne, it is added, might, however, cause the Czar to renounce all endeavor to effect a pacific settlement of the crisis in Bulgaria, and have recourse to military occupation of the country.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times positively confirms his recent statement, that Russia and Germany have concluded a direct alliance.

Mr. Goshen has, it is officially announced, accepted the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer in the British Cabinet. It is asserted that Mr. Goshen joins the government purely as a Liberal Unionist, Premier Salisbury relying on Unionist support for success.

Mr. Gladstone, replying to a letter criticizing John Bright's action on the Irish question, says: "There is only one reason why I remain silent: After my former relations with that distinguished man, and the kind and loyal aid he so often gave me, I do not mean, if I can avoid it, to write or speak one word that could possibly give him pain."

A Paris correspondent affirms that he has information from an undoubted source, that Russia and Germany signed a direct alliance a fortnight ago. "The Czar was decided in taking this course by the attitude manifested toward Russia by Count Kalnoky, Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, and by the expectation that M. Floquet would be made Prime Minister of France."

The removal of the snow which fell in the late storm in Germany has revealed an appalling loss of life. Many travelers were overtaken by the storm. Fifty bodies have been found in Saxony, thirty in Thuringia and forty in Southern Germany. It is estimated that the total loss of life will be nearly two hundred.

Madagascar has concluded arrangements for obtaining a loan of $3,000,000 for twenty-five years at six per cent annum, from the Comptoir Escompte of Paris, guaranteeing therefore the customs revenue of six of the Madagascar ports. Of this sum $2,000,000 is to be devoted to paying off the French indemnity. The balance will be expended on the native army. The French will evacuate Tamatave in January. The French Resident's relations with the Madagascar Government have for some time been quite strained, owing to his insisting on maintaining a French protectorate over the country. Malagasy Ambassadors have started for Europe.

Tuesday night, just outside the harbor of St. John, N. B., the steamer Sir John was burned to the water's edge. One man was drowned while attempting to swim ashore, and five others were fatally burned. The financial loss is about $70,000.

A fire in the reserved inclosure at the People's Park, at Madras, India, on Friday, lasted only fifteen minutes, but it is ascertained that 300 persons lost their lives, being either burned to death or suffocated, while the number injured is placed at the same figure. Among the victims were two European women, and many European children are missing. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin.

D. NEEDHAM & SONS
116 and 118 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.
Red Clover Blossoms
and Fluid and Solid Extracts of the Blossom.
BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.
Known. Cures Cancer, Catarrh, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Whooping Cough, Constipation, Etc., etc. Send for circular. Mention the "Cynosure."

ROCKY MOUNTAIN GLOVES
Made from Fawn Skin Kid, a very durable and hand some material, unknown East. Prices from $1 to $1.50 for Common Length; $2.50 for Button Cut. Driving Gauntlets made to order for Ladies or Gentlemen. Every stitch silk. Postage paid. Also Indian Tanned Gloves, Moccasins, Buckskins, and all kinds of (fringed and plain) Leggings, Money Belts, etc. Buckskin for sale. Samples of Leather with stitching free. Also Catalogue of hundreds of styles of Gloves and Leather Novelties, and directions, measurement. Discount to agents. Refuse cheap. Union Bank, Denver.
A. AVERY,
Denver, Colorado.

MARKET REPORTS.
CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	79%
No. 3.....	72
Winter No. 2.....	80%
Corn—No. 2.....	37%
Oats—No. 2.....	28 @ 31
Rye—No. 2.....	11 53
Branper ton.....	11 50
Beans.....	2 00 @ 5 00
Hay—Timothy.....	2 00 @ 10 50
Mess pork per bbl.....	8 90
Butter, medium to best.....	15 @ 31
Cheese.....	06 @ 13
Potatoes.....	80 @ 1 50
Eggs.....	23 @ 26
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 80 @ 1 90
Flax.....	92 @ 94
Broom corn.....	03% @ 08%
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	05 @ 14
Lumber—Common.....	11 00 @ 13 00
Wool.....	11 @ 33
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 05 @ 5 15
Common to good.....	1 50 @ 4 50
Hogs.....	3 00 @ 4 00
Sheep.....	2 85 @ 5 25

Flour.....	3 20 @ 5 50
Wheat—Winter.....	92 @ 97
Spring.....	91
Corn.....	47 @ 48%
Oats.....	36 @ 40
Mess Pork.....	12 85
Eggs.....	27
Butter.....	12 33
Wool.....	13 37

CATTLE.....	1 50 @ 4 85
HOGS.....	4 00 @ 4 75
SHEEP.....	1 50 @ 4 80

KANSAS CITY.

Lactated Food
FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS

THE PHYSICIAN'S FAVORITE!

A predigested, non-irritating, easily assimilated food indicated in all weak and inflamed conditions of the digestive organs, either in infants or adults.

It has been the positive means of saving many lives, having been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

The Most Nourishing, Most Palatable, Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

150 MEALS for an Infant for $1.00.
EASILY PREPARED. At Drugists, 5c., 50c., $1.00.

A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," sent free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

EMPLOYMENT GOOD SALARY AND ALL EXPENSES PAID. At home or to travel; state which preferred, also salary wanted. SLOAN & CO., Manufacturers and Wholesale Dealers, 294 George St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

—Florida! Florida!—

A package of Curiosities, containing Florida Grey Moss, Alligator Teeth, Sea Bunnies, and Shells, will be sent to any one on receipt of 25 cents. Festoons of the "Beautiful Grey Moss," for decorating churches and private houses. Address H. M. O'NEILL, Fla. (Jeweler and Dealer in Florida Curiosities.)

LEPAGE'S LIQUID GLUE
Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, 81. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of order who does not keep it with 25c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE.
Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

LADIES TO INTRODUCE
our Ladies' Journal in the best homes. We make you the following Liberal Offer: We will send the paper, postpaid, from Sept. 1 to Jan. 1, 1887, on receipt of ONLY 10 CENTS.

AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING
Is decidedly a ladies' journal. Published monthly, handsomely illustrated, filled with original Stories, Poems, with departments on Home Cooking, Art, Recipes, Etc.—a brace, Artistic Needle Work, Window Gardening, Flowers, Mothers' Corner, Children's Nook, Household Pets and all Home Subjects. By order of a quarter of a century. Subscription price, 50 cents per year. Samples free.

THE P. B. Combined Tracing Wheel and Scissors. An indispensable article for every woman, made of the best English steel, hand-forged, oil-tempered. Every pair warranted. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. Or we will send the scissors to any one that will send two subscribers to AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING and $1.00. American Housekeeping Co., 148 LaSalle street, Chicago.

EUTOCIA A Book for every woman.
Introductory preface by EDWARD GIBNEY M. D. (as preface by Dr. Geo. E. SHIPMAN, chairman of the care and management of infants by the same expert physician. Mothers, Wives and Daughters. Not a compilation of other works and clippings, but the careful, practical study of Mrs. Dr. E. G. Cook, for over a quarter of a century. It is ENDORSED by Leading Ministers, Physicians, Daily, Weekly, Religious and Medical Press.

COMPLETE LADIES GUIDE.
It treats fully on every child-bearing, and health of children. In short a complete manual for the household. Mailed free by receipt of price, where we have no Agents. Alphabetical table of contents. AGENTS and a ready sale for it. English, Silk Cloth, $2.00. Morocco $2.75. Address for terms ARCADE PUB. CO., 148 La Salle St., Chicago.

OUR LATEST BOOK. HARVEST FOR THE HOLIDAYS. NOW IN PRESS.

WITH STITCHES & STITCHES

Canvasser's Outfit now ready. New, original, and taking. Heavy, super-calendered paper, superb binding, new and instructive illustrations. Prices low, to meet the times. Discounts large, to meet the agents. Sample pages and particulars sent on application. Our territorial territory to both general and local agents. Complete canvasser's outfit, $1.00. General Agents wanted for Colorado, Dakota, Kansas, Iowa, Pennsylvania, New York, and Southern States. For discounts and full particulars, address THE W. E. WHITE PUBLISHING CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

Fac Simile Series.

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps

Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years. 100 stops, $22 to $300. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 46 pp., 4to, free.

PIANOS.

The Improved Method of Stringing, introduced and perfected by MASON & HAMLIN, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Piano construction. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO

154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago, 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chinese Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, lively agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 238 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED in every city and town for Ladies' Favorite Tracing Wheel. Will sell in every household. Two dozen mailed on receipt of $1. Sample Dec. NOVELTY WHEEL CO., 24 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotel, Libraries, Offices, &c. Lightest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid. Sec. Circular free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

CATARRH SAMPLE TREATMENT FREE
Sore throat, run of nose, can cure you, dear sufferer, we will mail enough to convince you. B. S. LUDWIG & CO., Newark, N. J.

FLORIDA. ACADEMY AND COLLEGE, AT DE LAND, FLORIDA.

A first-class academy for both sexes. Five Courses College Preparatory, Higher English, Normal, Business, Industrial Drawing, First-class Art and Music Departments. Fine new Dormitory Building, enabling us to furnish board and tuition at reasonable rates. The purpose of this institution is to give, in the delightful climate of Florida, as thorough and liberal an education as can be secured in the best New England schools. DE LAND COLLEGE will also receive students of both sexes, prepared to enter the Freshman Class. Send for catalogue to J. F. FORBES, President, De Land, Florida; or H. A. De Land, Fairport, N. Y.

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS & COPYRIGHTS

Obtained, and all other business in the U. S. Patent Office attended to for MODERATE FEES. Send MODEL OR DRAWING. We advise as to patentability free of charge; and we make NO CHARGE UNLESS WE OBTAIN PATENT. We refer here to the Postmaster, the Sur. of Mines, the Com. Div., and to officials of the U. S. Patent Office. For circular, advice, terms and references to actual clients in your own State or county, write to

C. A. SNOW & CO., Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

JOYFUL News for Boys and Girls! Young and Old! A NEW INVENTION just patented for Home use!
Fret and Scroll Sawing, Turning, Boring, Drilling, Grinding, Polishing, Sawn Cutting. Price $5 to $50. Send 2c. for 100 pages.
EPHRAIM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.

JOYFUL News for Boys and Girls! Young and Old! A NEW INVENTION just patented for Home use!
Fret and Scroll Sawing, Turning, Boring, Drilling, Grinding, Polishing, Sawn Cutting. Price $5 to $50. Send 2c. for 100 pages.
EPHRAIM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.

OUR LATEST BOOK. HARVEST FOR THE HOLIDAYS. NOW IN PRESS.

WITH STITCHES & STITCHES

Canvasser's Outfit now ready. New, original, and taking. Heavy, super-calendered paper, superb binding, new and instructive illustrations. Prices low, to meet the times. Discounts large, to meet the agents. Sample pages and particulars sent on application. Our territorial territory to both general and local agents. Complete canvasser's outfit, $1.00. General Agents wanted for Colorado, Dakota, Kansas, Iowa, Pennsylvania, New York, and Southern States. For discounts and full particulars, address THE W. E. WHITE PUBLISHING CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

Fac Simile Series.

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps

Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XIX., No. 17.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 13, 1887.

WHOLE No. 872.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrears paid.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	CORRESPONDENCE:
Notes and Comments..... 1	Pres. Cleveland, Do Take
William H. Seward..... 8	that Back; Self-help
Personal Mention..... 9	among the Colored People;
CONTRIBUTIONS:	The United Brethren
Times of War and Recon- struction..... 1	Commission..... 6
A Sabbath in Cincinnati..... 2	DEMENTED..... 7
The Coming of Christ..... 2	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
SELECTED:	THE HOME..... 10
Temperance and the Good Temper..... 3	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Address of Pres. George..... 3	LITERATURE..... 12
REFORM NEWS:	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
To the Friends of Reform in Iowa; From the Gen- eral Agent; Good Words from Ohio; The First Disturbance for the Iowa Lecturer..... 5	THE N. C. A..... 7
BIBLE LESSON..... 6	CHURCH VS. LODGE..... 7
	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
	LECTURE LIST..... 14
	FARM NOTES..... 15
	BUSINESS..... 13
	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
	MARKETS..... 13

Total abstinence societies were formed outside of the churches when pastors drank and deacons were distillers. Like Elijah and the schools of the prophets under his successors, they formed associations outside of the Hebrew church and state, to bring the nation back from Baal's altars to Christ's (Messiah's). These outside associations have reformed the churches so that now they are, most of them, temperance societies. Meantime, "The church of the living God is the pillar and ground of the truth."

Illinois, we are told, has no more ominous threat against her future security and prosperity than the fact, vouched for by the State organization of the Young Men's Christian Association, that of her 600,000 young men fully 550,000 are still outside the membership of the evangelical churches. This fearful condition of things is hardly credible. Yet, if true, how many who bewail it, discern the reason; or knowing, dare attempt to put it away. So long as the secret lodge thrives, like a Minotaur, upon our young men, they will not be found in the church; yet some of the leaders of the Y. M. C. A. are as careful that nothing shall be said to warn against the lodge as they are to draw their salaries.

A Chicago member of the Grand Army of the Republic beseeches the Tribune to give that lodge a rest, and cease printing the reports of correspondents from the State capital which repeat day after day the proofs of the work of that lodge in the effort to secure a partisan representative to succeed Logan in the Senate. But all the papers are publishing these facts, and there must be a sad basis of truth behind them. The Tribune says that members of this order, in the legislature and out, insist that only a soldier shall be elected. The other day small dodgers were circulated on which was printed a Grand Army badge, and the assertion that the man who takes Logan's place shall wear one. Thus is the lodge perpetually dictating for the people and against their best interests. Some years ago when Logan was seeking the position and Charles B. Farwell had begun to develop some opposition, the former bluntly asked Farwell if he was a Mason, intimating as he got a negative reply, that a man without such affiliations need not apply.

Adjutant-General King of Texas believes in a short shrift for the lodges, which, under the pretence of helping the poor, make war upon commerce which gives the poor man his opportunity for a livelihood; in the name of liberty practice gross oppression; and in the name of benevolence rob their dupes and their supposed enemies alike. His annual report urges an appropriation for a strong militia force to suppress firmly such turbulence as the irresponsible hot-heads of the secret orders, like Butler and Irons, are able to raise any moment by means of their lodges. He says, referring to the Knights of Labor: "Under the mad and murderous teachings of communists and socialists these oath-bound organizations have had many strikes; have openly defied the law; have beaten and abused and sometimes killed people who only desired to honestly earn a living; have destroyed property and murdered those whose duty it was to protect it; have violently interfered with the business of many States, and caused losses to many thousands of people who were not responsible for any of the alleged wrongs about which these secret organizations were complaining. In view of these things in the past, of their active existence at present, and of their probable continuance for some time in the future, it is the duty of the several States of the general government and of the order-loving, law-abiding, patriotic citizens to meet force with force at every point, when and where it is lawful and necessary." While we believe that secret organizations of every kind should be made illegal, and be suppressed if necessary; yet it would be praise-worthy in Mr. King or any other public officer to devise some means for quietly breaking up these seditious orders, exposing their false character, and showing the workmen the only and better way for permanently securing their rights.

Since the action of Judge Scott granting the anarchist murderers of Chicago a rehearing before the Supreme Court of the State, little has been heard of these misguided men, nor have the efforts of their friends been very successful. Mrs. Parsons traversed the country for money, but nobody cared to hear her harangues a second time. The Chicago Knights of Labor lodges, at one time cowed by the public voice demanding justice upon the plotters of massacre, have restored Parsons to good standing, but seemed to have stopped with a few resolutions. The leaders of the German Turners for having favored the anarchist cause have been scouted with indignation by their societies. Occasionally a voice will be raised in defense of the men convicted of the great crime of May 4th, but generally the topic rests till March. The Supreme Court of Iowa, however, lately decided a case so nearly corresponding to this that it deserves mention. A non-union man named Munson was killed by strikers at Angus, Iowa, last year. The men who really committed the deed escaped; but another striker was arrested, of whom it was proved that he was party to the conspiracy to strike, to ruin the mine and prevent work by others. He was held guilty of murder and sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary. The Supreme Court confirmed this judgment, holding that as party to the conspiracy, he was also partner of its guilt. This judgment confirms the ruling of Judge Gary against the anarchists.

The same decision reaches forty or fifty conspirators in the Haddock case at Sioux City, Iowa; but through the shameful dalliance of the authorities of that city justice seems likely to be altogether defeated. Weeks and months drag on and yet nothing seems to be done. For more than two months the murderer has been known, but he is permitted to freely and defiantly walk the streets. A newspaper has been started to work up popular sentiment in their favor, and it seems as if every man in authority in that city was in open or secret league with the saloonists. The Haddock murder was more than an ordinary crime. It was not the mere murder of a man, but of the leader of an honest and lawful effort to enforce the law of the State. The liquor men tried intimidation, then formed a secret conspiracy to use violence, and hired assassins and at last shot him down in the presence of half a dozen witnesses. It was an insolent defiance of law, and declaration that the saloon-keepers of Sioux City were above the authority of the State. It was, moreover, a boast that a majority of the people of Sioux City were with them, and that the authorities were their friends. That shameful boast seems to be proved true; and if Haddock's murderers are to be punished, it is time that Iowa and the country at large did something more than pass sentimental resolutions against them.

THE TIMES OF WAR AND RECONSTRUCTION.

REMINISCENCES BY HON. S. C. POMEROY.

THE FIRST CALL FOR TROOPS.

I have now described the advent of two new Senators from Kansas and their first day and night in the city of Washington.

Mr. Lincoln the next day (Sabbath) wrote that first celebrated proclamation, calling upon the Governors of the several adhering States to furnish seventy-five thousand men to defend the capital; to protect public property and retake the forts. I called upon him Sabbath evening when he read me his proclamation. It bore date, Monday, the 15th of April, 1861. I remember asking Mr. Lincoln, "Are we going to have war?"

He replied, "I have called upon the States for their enrolled militia to the extent of 75,000 men, to protect, retain and retake the public property, and aid in enforcing the laws, where and when obstructed."

He did not directly answer my question whether we were to have a war, so I at length replied, "Mr. Lincoln, if you are going to have a war call for one million of men. You will need them."

To this he replied: "Seventy-five thousand men is a larger army than ever stood upon the American soil. And where the money is to come from, to equip, support and pay them, does not yet appear. General Washington had no such number. We fought Mexico with less than forty thousand soldiers. This number, with the regular army already in service, will be ample for the emergency."

Poor man, he lived to call for the million; and, thank God! he lived to see them return to peaceful pursuits, with victory and freedom on all their banners. Others, alas! died without the sight. And Lincoln lived only a few days to view the national achievements, to contemplate and establish an indissoluble Union of States,—"When a nation was born in a day," a race emancipated and enfranchised. Glory enough for one short life. No man on the earth ever saw a greater achievement, or one of more far-reaching results. It embraces the elevation of man, as man, securing equality before the law and equality of citizenship. It secured national authority over every part of our extended territory and enforced the acknowledgment of that authority inside of State lines. It secured the best provisions of the Declaration of Independence. Taking them down from their lofty position as "glittering generalities," and by the 14th Amendment following the 13th placed that Declaration into the body of the Constitution itself.

The years of Mr. Lincoln's administration mark the progress of a century. No such events are embodied in any other administration, and none such will ever follow. It stands alone, as some towering monument rising amidst the grandeur of desolation, and as a waymark designating the triumphs of freedom. At this period compromises with slavery came to an end. Truckling subservience ended. That power which had ruled this country for half a century was broken, no more to demoralize the state, the church or the nation.

Upon this the first Sabbath after I reached the capital I heard the Rev. Mr. Brooks, pastor of the Bridge Street Presbyterian church (West Washington), pray earnestly for the "President of the Southern Confederacy, and all his advisors," and not one word for President Lincoln! At the close of what they supposed was worship, I denounced such a prayer as treason to the Government and offensive, as I believed, to Almighty God. His church met Thursday evening of that same week, and "voted to accept his resignation." He did resign—and went South—"to his own place," as Judas did before him. When questioned about that prayer he said, "I do not know into whose hands this Government may fall."

"Then why not pray for both?"

"We think Mr. Davis will soon be the President at Washington." And it was true then that more of the leading citizens of Washington, at that hour, were for Davis than were for President Lincoln.

To form any just idea of Mr. Lincoln's trials and embarrassments one must understand how he was here surrounded, and on whom he had to depend.

My next will be an effort to show the state of things from this day (Apr. 14th, 1861) to the first meeting of Congress called by Mr. Lincoln to meet July 4th, 1861.

A SABBATH IN CINCINNATI.

BY REV. J. M. POSTER.

The Greeks had a fable concerning the island of the Sirens. They located it near the south-western coast of Italy. There were two or three female musicians upon it, whose strains enchanted all who came by, and when allured to land, were at once made victims. When Ulysses went by he filled the ears of his Argonauts with wax, and lashed himself to the mast. He heard the music and wished to land, but could not. The rest heard not and so passed on. When Orpheus went by, the music of whose lyre enchanted not only beasts but rocks and trees, he produced so much better music than the sirens that no one desired to land. They had better music on board.

Ulysses is the moralist lashed to the post of duty by the throngs of a strong resolution. He hears the music of worldly temptation and wants to yield, but his resolution holds him. Orpheus is the Christian with better music in his soul. The love of Christ constraineth him. The first has a name to live while he is dead. The second has Christ formed in his heart the hope of glory. "For me to live is Christ."

The National Reform Association proposes to enlist a band in whose souls the music of loyalty to Jesus has complete mastery, and by and by we will have the soul of this great nation converted into a lyre, which, struck by the plectrum of the mediatorial scepter, sends forth the sweetest strains of loyalty to King Jesus. "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."

Last Sabbath morning I preached in the Cincinnati work-house. There are 680 prisoners, including both sexes. Colonel George W. Ziegler is superintendent. He has nearly completed his third year. Notwithstanding adverse criticism he is well fitted for the place. He is a man of commanding presence and large heart. The discipline is as near perfect as can be found in such an institution. He has reduced the cost of boarding the prisoners from 45 to 31 cents per day, each. This is not economy at the expense of his wards, but business-like discretion in making his purchases. There were oysters and turkey in abundance on "Christmas" day. Over 500 gathered in the chapel for service. The men and women filed in like so many columns of soldiers. As I witnessed their entrance and exit, I felt like exclaiming, "Have these souls become so degraded that they must be kept under guard!" They listened attentively and responsively. Notwithstanding their position they are human. As Shylock says of the Jew in the Merchant of Venice:

"Hath not a Jew eyes? Hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? Fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, heated by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us do we not bleed? If you tickle us do we not laugh? If you put us on do we not die?"

So we may say of these. Many of the brazen-faced men broke down as I told them of the free and matchless love of Christ, "passing the love of women." A few were not touched until reminded of their mother's love. This seemed to reach home at once.

At 2 p. m. I visited the Union Bethel Sabbath-school, public landing, east of S. camore street. The Bethel Mission has been going on forty-six years, the Union Bethel twenty years. The departments are: the Bethel church, Sabbath-school, Young Men's Home, reading, dining, and lodging rooms,

News-boys' Home, and Relief department. Rev. Thomas Lee is general superintendent and chaplain. His congregation numbers about 200 and is undenominational. There were over 4,000 persons present in the chapel last Sabbath afternoon, 3,500 of whom were children. This was the great day of the year for them. It was not possible to wield such a mass with perfect order. The regular Sabbath-school attendance is 2,500, with 75 teachers, volunteers from the various churches. I never heard congregational singing superior to theirs in volume or quality. The children took hold with a hearty good will. The Union Bethel is a corporation. Any person paying $10 is a member for a year. The payment of $50 makes a life member. They have an endowment of $100,000. Mr. David Sinton gave $110,000 toward putting up their building. Others gave liberally. Tickets are given out to the scholars each Sabbath. Six of these will get a pair of shoes, etc. This brings the children. Even our Saviour, whose "lips were like lilies dropping with sweet-smelling myrrh," secured a hearing by means of the loaves and the fishes; and it is well for us to go and do likewise. The Ladies' Aid Society in connection with this work has been in operation twenty-six years. The Y. M. C. A. hall was filled with young men at 4 p. m. I looked upon the opportunity of speaking to them as one of the few opportunities of a man's life. President Scovel of Wooster College was present, and made a few touching remarks at the close. After the benediction he took me by the hand and said: "Are you the man after whose pen and pencil I have been reading all these years in the Christian Statesman? I am glad to meet you here." He speaks of Prof. D. McAllister, L. L. D., of Geneva College, in terms of the highest admiration and delight.

In the evening I preached in the Christie chapel of the M. E. church, Court street and Wesley avenue, Rev. H. D. Rice, pastor. I have not heard so many hearty amens since I was South as at this service. They seemed to be prepared by the Spirit of God for the theme, "The Dominion of Christ." The men gathered around me in a group after service, and expressed their heartiest approval. The pastor insisted that I return next Sabbath evening and give them another discourse. He has recently lost his only son and is suffering bodily affliction, so that he regarded my coming as Providential in more ways than one. A deacon and his wife were overheard discussing the sermon on their way home. Said he: "There is not a government on the face of the earth that comes up to the standard set up in that sermon to-night."

"That is true," she replied, "but the young man was right, the fathers made a mistake in not acknowledging the authority of Jesus Christ in the Constitution. The nation should recognize its King. God will visit us with his judgments if we do not."

Monday evening I attended the meeting of the Eighth District Associated Charities, in the Fifth Presbyterian church. The meeting was said to be the best ever held. The room was filled with interested people. Our city is divided into twelve districts. These have a central office to which all report. These reports lessen the opportunities of the crafty to practice imposition. Families removing from one district to another are kept from obtaining help in both at the same time. They arrest pauperism and vagrancy, and put the poor in a way of helping themselves. Indiscriminate charity is wrong. It fosters mendicancy and indolence. It injures the receiver of alms and increases the pollution of society. Information, which can only be obtained through such organizations, is needed for intelligent and useful giving. Our duty is not done when we have handed out the quarter or half dollar. The poor need sympathy and hearty counsel quite as much as money. Charity cannot be performed by proxy. There needs to be personal contact. The giver needs to meet the receiver face to face. And hence the Association seeks to enlist as many individual workers as possible. The central offices of the different cities are also in communication. So that the description of a professional beggar often precedes his arrival. The meeting was addressed by Rev. J. C. Watt, pastor of the Fifth church, Rev. M. C. Lockwood of the Baptist church, Rabbi Benjamin of the Mound Street Synagogue, and Judge Fitzgerald of the police court, who is a Roman Catholic. It was a mosaic, indeed, The Hebrew and Christian, the Catholic and Protestant, joined hands. They met on the common platform of human sympathy for the suffering. The Rabbi talked of the three cardinal graces, faith, hope, and charity. The first and second were two ladders leading up to heaven and God, and they meet in the third which endureth forever. The Baptist minister spoke on Nathan's parable, and showed that a great deal of our modern charity is founded on pure meanness, feeding the traveler from another's flock. The man does that who sends all the poor, who apply at his door, to the Associated Charities, and gives nothing himself to that organization. The Judge told many touching stories, drawn from his experience in the police court. He sent vagrants to the work-house for the longest term the law allowed. He believed that was doing good service to society. It was better to keep them there by tax than have them wandering about as scavengers preying upon society.

The Francis Murphy meetings are increasing marvelously. The Wesley Chapel is filled to its utmost capacity. Dr. Joyce expects to remove them to Music Hall. There is no doubt but that Murphy will fill it. He believes in the power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to save the drunkard. He believes the religion of the cross will empty every saloon in Cincinnati, and all the people say amen. Let the good work go on to completion, and then let a converted public declare by law that they shall stay empty. The only blemish in his work is, he foolishly makes war upon prohibition. He might as well make war on the Ten Commandments, for they are a prohibition code from beginning to end. He took me by the arm and introduced me last Tuesday evening, saying, "This is our good brother Foster, who will say a word for us." I was as much surprised as was that vast audience, but I said, "The Romans honored Mucius because he laid his arm on a red-hot altar and held it there until consumed, and this terrified their enemy, King Porsenna, into making terms of peace. As I sat down there in the second pew last Monday night and heard Bro. Murphy tell his heart-scalding experience, I felt that Mucius had returned. Here is a man who is ready to pass through fire and flood to victory. He has come to array Christianity against the liquor traffic. It is sure to triumph. If Confucianism can make China a temperate nation; if Mohammedanism can make the countries of Islam temperate, then Christianity can make this city and this nation temperate." Christianity includes the Law as well as the Gospel. It is a two-edged sword.

Cincinnati.

THE COMINGS OF CHRIST.

BY MRS. H. E. HAYDEN.

There are different views entertained by the people of God with reference to Christ's second coming. Some think that his second coming has already taken place; that his kingdom is a spiritual kingdom, and is now set up in the hearts of his children. But "He was a Lamb slain from the foundation of the world;" and his spiritual kingdom began among the first inhabitants of our world, instead of being set up during the glory of the Roman empire, as some suppose.

The whole truth is, his kingdom is both spiritual and literal, and here is where so many stumble. He said to his disciples, "The kingdom of God is within you;" referring to his spiritual reign. Again in the Lord's prayer he told us to pray, "Thy kingdom come." That prayer will be answered when he comes again, literally and personally, to reign a thousand years with his saints.

When Jesus ascended from the top of Mt. Olivet, in the presence of his disciples, two angels came down from heaven and announced his second coming in these words: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken from you up into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1:11. He went up in the body; if he comes in like manner, he will come in the body, personally. John, the beloved, in looking forward to his second coming said: "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him, and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." Rev. 1: 7. He went up in the clouds, he will come in the clouds. I would ask those who believe his coming is spiritual and has already passed, when has this passage been fulfilled? When did he come in the clouds, and when did all the kindreds of the earth wail because of him?

But there are some marked differences between his first and second personal appearing. First he came in poverty. He said of himself, "The Son of man hath not where to lay his head:" now he comes arrayed in all the rich and costly habiliments of heaven. On the mount of transfiguration a miniature representation of his coming kingdom was seen, and it is written of him, "His face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light." Matt. 17: 2. First he came as a servant. He said to his disciples, "I am among you as he that serveth:" now he comes as Lord of lords and King of kings. First he came to be judged and condemned by man at an earthly tribunal: now he comes to sit on the judgment seat himself. It is written in Acts 17: 31, "He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." Paul says, "For we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ." Rom. 14: 10.

First he came to the sinner as a suppliant, beseeching him to be reconciled to God. Will he come as a suppliant the second time? No. He will come "In flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. 1: 7. First he came in tears. He wept over Jerusalem, and over a lost world, because they would not turn and live. Now he comes to wipe away tears. Isaiah says, "And the Lord God shall wipe away all tears from off all faces."

Then he came to be despised. It is written, "He is despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief," Isa. 53: 3. Now he comes to be glorified. Paul says, "When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe." 2 Thess. 1: 10. Then he came veiled in humanity, and all the earth did not see him: his second coming shall be like the lightning that "cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west." Then he manifested his Divine power by healing these poor bodies of ours: when he comes again will he mend up these bodies so that they can last a little longer? No. He will give us glorious immortal bodies, like unto his own. Paul says, "For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also, we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." Phil. 3: 20, 21.

Then he came to suffer for and redeem his people: now he comes to gather his people that they may reign with him. It is written, "If we suffer with him we shall also reign with him." Again, Paul says, "If so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together. For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." Rom. 8: 17, 18. First he came to offer man salvation. On the last great day of one of the Jewish feasts, "Jesus stood and cried, if any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink." John 7: 37: will he come again to press the cup of salvation to the sinner's lips and urge him to drink? No. He will come to shut mercy's door. Christ says in Luke, "When once the Master of the house is risen up and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without and knock," etc. Paul in speaking of his second coming, says, "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. 9: 28. Now if he came in the person of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, at the time when the Roman empire was as strong as iron, as some suppose, would Paul tell the church to still be looking for his appearing?

Who are coming with him? "He shall come in the glory of his Father with the holy angels." Jude says, "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints." Did he come with the saints and angels on the day of Pentecost? What kind of a reception will the Lord of glory have when he comes? The righteous will exclaim with joy, "Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him." The wicked will cry for the rocks and mountains to "fall on them and hide them from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb?"

TEMPERANCE AND THE GOOD TEMPLARS.

BY A FORMER GRAND CHIEF TEMPLAR.

On the first page of this paper are copied two articles from Eastern journals on the subject of secret lodges. Those journals are strenuously hostile to all secret societies and they have a powerful following among Christians and friends of temperance who believe that the whole system of secret lodgery is wrong.

The lodge, Grand Lodge, R. W. Grand Lodge and their ceremonies and secret work would be solemnly and sacredly adhered to by the writer did he believe they were the best means of promoting the prohibition of the rum traffic. But although the secret temperance orders did once for years about all the aggressive work of temperance, it is not certain that more might not have been done by open societies as well organized.

It is certain that the National W. C. T. Union, now thirteen years old, with an income during the last seven years, not exceeding altogether one year's revenue of the Grand Lodge of California, has done a work and produced results of incomparable value, while the secret orders have done positively nothing, except in a few States where plodding, devoted, unpaid or quarter paid, self-sacrificing officers have persevered in still pushing the old, costly, laborious, unsuccessful programme. For instance, Virginia, West Virginia, Oregon, Tennessee, Georgia and portions of Canada.

Referring to the proceedings of R. W. Grand Lodge for 1881-3-6 we find in 1881 the number of Good Templars (American branch) all over the world was 310,115, a gain of 5,002 after taking in 141,499 members that year. In 1883 there were 290,790 after taking in 162,033 members that year, a slight gain over the previous year owing to a boom of 27,000 gained in Sweden; but a loss of near 20,000 in two years. Again in 1886, the roll began at 281,424, and after adding 141,961 to it, the sum total was 270,105.

Five years' labor and a huge expense resulted in a decrease of 40,010 members and a loss of over 800,000 recruits enrolled. A decline every where with the very best chances to succeed under good methods. In California in the last four years the order with a splendid income, and with an inviting field of success open has dwindled from 18,872 to less than 12,000, after enrolling 32,423 accessions besides those who joined in 1886, probably 2,000 or more, a loss of about three times its present membership in four years. And in addition to this the beautiful Home for Orphans, a legacy of former years of honest, faithful management, has been loaded with a debt of $11,000 or $12,000. This is surely a dead failure. A confession on the part of about all who join it, that it is a failure and they go out.

We have loved that order and tried to make it a success. But it was only because we believed it was going to destroy the liquor curse. After promising and resolving to do so for twenty-seven years, it now says everywhere, it cannot take a political side, it cannot talk of the ballot, but must be a cradle and a nursery for temperance sentiment. It seems that where the present managers of the I. O. G. T. had their strongholds in this state we found the weakest Prohibition vote at last election and vice versa. Therefore when the order ceases to be useful, in warring against the dramshop politically and uses up the temperance treasury to no purpose, the kindest act that can be done for it is to organize its good timber in the building of a new and better edifice.

Those who best love the W. C. T. U., the Prohibition party, the Band of Hope, the Sunday-school, would in six months time, lose every whit of their affection for them if they no longer served the purposes which brought them into existence, but stood as obstacles in the way of their accomplishment. There are still some grand men and women in various parts of the world, zealously working in the I. O. G. T. Those who believe they can so do good, are entitled to our profound respect and admiration whether they could do better or not. But in this State there is very strong evidence, after due trial and experience, that the order has a load on it which it cannot carry and do any further good. That it is a very costly affair that produces no good results whatever in any line, but has brought the sacred cause of temperance here into profound contempt; and the energies and dollars and dimes of the temperance people are utterly wasted in it.

It is claimed that in other states where the Good Templars are at their best, much better results could be obtained in open organizations, and we are much inclined to think so, after observation of the evils to which secret orders are subjected from the numerous class of ringsters and tricksters, developed by an education in any three or four secret societies.—Censor, Los Angeles, Cal.

The Kapa Delta Epsilon fraternity have built a new hall at Ann Arbor, Mich., and there is not a single window in it. Their deeds are truly deeds of darkness. At the same time we can see no need in going to the expense of putting in costly windows, simply to be shuttered and heavily curtained. As it is, they can go on with their revelry without any fear of some eavesdropper stealing their secrets.—Associate Presbyterian.

Some of the trades of working girls of Chicago are being organized in assemblies of the Knights of Labor. Quite a number of those who work for tailor-shops have formed a co-operative association and are to set up an establishment of their own. About sixty girls at work in the shoe factory of Selz, Schwab & Co. were on a strike last week to prevent a contemplated movement which would result in a reduction of wages. The boycott is attempted to be applied to some firms of box-makers and boot and shoe manufacturers. There is a good deal of agitation still among the workers, and the county agent's office is already besieged for relief by the families of those who strike rather than work.—Standard, Chicago.

ADDRESS OF PRES. H. H. GEORGE, D. D.,

AT THE KNOXVILLE CONVENTION.

It will not be doubted by any who gather here that Christianity is the common faith of, at least, this country: and we who accept it, are not willing to acknowledge that it is only a form of religion, but we believe it to be the only true religion that ever has been made known to the world, or ever will be. The name of its Founder is the only name given under heaven or among men whereby any can be saved. We are willing to grant that false religions may seem to be more generous, when they propose to compromise their falsehoods with Christianity, for they can well afford to offer a large measure of the untrue for the least moiety of the true. But Christianity has no compromises to make. She claims this world for Christ, eye, the whole of it, and she must dispute every inch of territory with everything else. She cannot allow as much as one thread of false doctrine to be woven into her entire web. She cannot permit one grain of sand to enter her entire foundation. She cannot admit as much as one fruit of evil to be garnered with her love, joy, long-suffering and peace.

These statements granted concerning the only religion that heaven has established on the earth, it follows that Christianity is the natural antagonist of infidelity, and atheism, and materialism, and skepticism, and Mormonism, and Mohammedanism and heathenism—with all these and like systems she is waging a war of extermination. Between Christianity and such systems there is no point where a basis of agreement can be laid. Her demand is that every knee shall bow and every tongue confess of things in heaven, etc., that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father.

There are those who bear the Christian name that say, It is the duty of a nation to be liberal in its religious faith; to give to all religions a fair field and no favor; to extend a welcome hand to Christianity, and an equal welcome to infidelity.

However specious this theory may seem to be, a very little examination will show that the welcome is all extended to infidelity. Christianity will accept no half-hearted welcome. Her jealousy is unrelenting; if she has not the whole heart, the entire place, the undisputed throne, she will take no place. Any compromise of religion anywhere, is an absurdity in theory, and an impossibility in practice.

We have an illustration in the history of pagan Rome. To harmonize all the dwellers in Rome, or all who might come to visit the Eternal city, she established her Pantheon, in which she had a niche for all the gods she might have occasion to set up in her deity circle. She would be generous to all people who would come within her walls. They should all be accommodated with religion. When on any occasion she might send out her legions and conquer a province, she would bring in its god and put it into its niche and then say to all the people of that province, Rome is generous in her religion, come and worship your own god. Subdue another kingdom. Set up its god, and say to its people, come, worship your own god. This seemed to be a grand idea, sublime liberality. But ere long a little sect sprang up over the shores of the Galilee, known as the followers of the Nazarene, and generous Rome sent over to have these Nazarenes bring their God over and put it up in its niche. The followers of Jesus sent back word, We will accept no place among other gods. We will occupy no seat beside your pagan divinity. We claim all the place; demand all the worship, or we will accept none.

"All other gods are idols dumb,
Which blinded nations fear:
But our God is the living God
By whom the heavens created were"

Christianity spurned the Pantheon of Rome, and would have no such proposal. Pagan Rome drew the sword on Christianity, only to whelm herself and her idolatry into remediless destruction while the religion of Jesus is marching on to the empire of the world.

Having said so much upon the jealous, unyielding, uncompromising character of Christianity, we come to consider its relation to the system of secrecy.

Have these secret fraternities such marks as will entitle them to a place in the realm of Christianity? Can they in their organizations, and rites, and services, claim the recognition, the protection, the favor, the nurturing of Christianity? Do they own Christ? Do they profess him? Do they seek forgiveness through him? Do they pray to him? Do they declare to the world that there is no other name given under heaven among men whereby sinners can be saved, but the name of Jesus? Do they say that Jesus Christ is all in all?

If they do such things Christianity must accept them, take them to her bosom, account them as part of her machinery, encourage them, help them in every laudable way. But if they do not these and like things, it is no matter what else they do, what religion they practice, what God they serve, between them and Christianity there is a limitless war, an irrepressible conflict. What one does the other must undo. They cannot be at peace in the same field. The success of the one is the hindrance of the other; the victory of the one must be the defeat of the other; the life of the one the death of the other.

And now let us examine some marks that belong to these fraternities to see if they are in friendship, or if they are in antagonism to Christianity. And our allusion will be chiefly to Masonry, as we deem it the parent of all the others.

And 1st. It will be admitted by all intelligent and candid Masons, that the name of Jesus Christ is not found in the constitution, or any of the basis formulas of the fraternity. That which is the glory of Christianity, the tower of its strength, the talisman of its power, that blessed name that is emblazoned all over the Christian system, that name is not to be found in Masonic ceremonies. Nor is it omitted by oversight, or unintentionally. It must be omitted by reason of their manner of faith. When the distant Chinese, the wild Arab and the American savage can embrace a brother Briton; when a Jew and Gentile can grasp hands in Masonic bonds, and bow the knee in Masonic prayer, the holy name of Jesus must be left out.

Their system is projected upon a plan that must leave Christ out of it. No church that bears the name of Christian would dare to allow the distant Chinese, the wild Arab, and American savage, as long as they remain Arab, Chinese and savage, to embrace a brother Briton in church fellowship, and to sit down and hold communion over the emblems of the body and blood of Jesus. The church of Christ must say to all such: the blood of Jesus is free, and the offer is made to you; but you must put away your Judaism, your idolatry and your heathenism before you can have any Christian communion; and Jesus himself can say no less. With mercy infinite to the chief of sinners, he cannot take into his bosom Arab and savage, while they remain Arab and savage. The philosophy of Masonry then antagonizes the philosophy of Christianity. It builds on a basis different from Christianity. It establishes a fellowship Christ cannot fellowship with. Who is the wild Arab, or the American savage? He may be a murderer, a thief, a robber, an idolater. He may be steeped in all the filth and pollution of beastly corruption. Can Jesus Christ have fellowship with such a being while he remains such an Arab or savage? And if he cannot, he can have no part with any system that does fellowship such. What fellowship hath light with darkness? When this institution laid its corner stone in a charity that made the wild savage and brother Briton embrace, in that very constitution it excluded Christ; and it has had to make its laws ever since in the same exclusion.

It will be no answer to this, to say that the institution is not a religion. There are these, and not a few of the candid thinkers of the system, who will at once freely grant that the name of Christ is omitted from it, that it could not be written in it; that when the Jew is brought into its fellowship, the Son of God is put out. I say candid thinkers admit this. They must admit it; but they answer, it is not designed to be a religion.

Let us look into this reply. The books on philosophy tell us, that if a man says a thing, and does the directly opposite, what he does proves his character. "Actions speak louder than words." I will now note several points that prove that Masonry is a religion.

It engages in religious ordinances and services. The Bible is its prominent book, ostensibly. Says Albert E. Mackey (authority no Mason will call in question): "Emphatically is the Bible called a greater light of Masonry, for from the center of the lodge, it pours forth upon the east, the west, and the south, its refulgent rays of Divine truth." The Bible is appealed to and quoted from constantly in the ceremonies of the lodge. It is the book when the hand rests in the oath. It is carried in processions. It is read in the meetings. Such a constant use of the Bible proves the institution to be a religion.

Another service of it is prayer, of which Mr. Mackey says, "All the ceremonies of our order are prefaced and terminated with prayer, because Masonry is a religious institution, and because we thereby show our dependence on, and our faith and trust in God." What I am citing facts to prove, the highest authority in Masonry, Albert G. Mackey, admits, viz., that Masonry is a religious institution. Candid thinkers, you have admitted that it has no Christ in it, and you have tried to get out of that difficulty by saying it is not a religion. Albert G. Mackey says it is a religion. Its constant use of the Bible and its frequent prayers at openings and closings of meetings, at initiations of members, and all through the service, prove it to be designed for a religion.

And lastly, to prove that it is meant for a religion, the aims, the objects and purposes of the system are conclusive: to make men moral, pure, perfect; fit them as living stones "for the house not made with hands eternal in the heavens;" to prepare them "for the Grand Lodge above." These and similar are the aims of religion. These are the objects for which men are religious. There would be no need of religion but to reach these ends. If Masonry then uses the services of religion, if its symbols all point to and teach the morality and purity of religion, and its professed aims are all for heaven, it must have been projected for a religion. Men believe it to be a religion; and thousands say it is all the religion they want. The best authority says that a Mason who lives in strict obedience to the obligations and precepts of the fraternity is "free from sin." What more could a religion do for any man, than to free him from sin? This was all Jesus Christ aimed to do by dying on the cross. All his blood proposes to do is to cleanse from all sin.

Let us go back and ask the candid Mason what his predicament is now. He has admitted that Christ is not in the system; that his name cannot be used there; that Jew and Gentile cannot come together on that name—they can only hold communion where that name is omitted. We have proved to him beyond all peradventure that his system is a religion; that it proposes to save men, to purify them, to free them from sin, and take them to heaven. By his position, therefore, in the institution he is connected with a Christless religion; he is aiming towards purity, morality, perfection and heaven in a Christless religion, a system that dare not name the name of Christ. However the irreligious man may accept a connection with such a system, the Christian, the intelligent believer in Jesus cannot; he absolutely cannot be partaker of a religion, that has not, and cannot have a Christ in it.

But this thought does not end here. A theory of religion that has no Christ in it is a false theory; it is a deception; it will not secure to men what they want to secure by it. The Scripture says that he that hath not the Son hath not the Father. To omit Christ from a system, to put him out, to build a system on a supposed charity, so broad as to leave him out, is to leave the Father out at the same time. There is no approach to God only through his Son Jesus Christ. The Lord Jesus himself says "no man cometh unto the Father but by me." There is no other name given under heaven nor among men whereby we can be saved, but the name of Jesus. The blood of Jesus Christ alone cleanseth from all sin.

These things being true,—and the infallible word of God says them, and every Christian has accepted them—then what about the freedom from sin, the state of perfection, the fitting our minds as living stones for the house not made with hands eternal in the heavens, by a system that has no Christ, and having no Christ can have no God? It is a false assumption; such ends cannot be reached by such a system. It is deceiving all who look for such results. It is proposing to get the blessings of religion by leaving the religion out, to get what God only can give, and that through his Son, by leaving God and his Son out. I feel it exceedingly important just here to emphasize the fact that the omission of Christ from Masonic ceremonies is the omission, the denial and rejection of God himself.

No doubt many have gone into these societies with the belief that where God is so often spoken about, where his Word is read, and he is prayed to, that these must be good and right services. But such fail to see that these societies reject Christ, and rejecting him they have rejected God. Such fail to see that a Christless allusion to God is a mockery, a profanity, a delusion.

You want a man to show to the world just what he is. You despise a hypocrite. You hate a sham. Jesus Christ said woe be to such. If an institution has no religion let it say so, and not deceive men by seeming to have—let it not put on a mask and say that it is a reality. Let it not dare to assume a thing so sacred as religion, and set it up to do what only religion can do, take men to heaven when the essential element of religion is left out of it.

Again. Not only is the religion of Masonry false, in that it leaves Christ out of it, but it takes into it the elements of heathen religions and thereby exemplifies itself as false as they are. Mackey in his lexicon (p. 35) refers to certain ancient customs of the heathen that he calls Dionysian Mysteries, which were celebrated throughout Greece and Asia Minor, in which the peculiar legend was the murder of Bacchus (or as the Greeks called him, Dionysius), by the Titans, and his subsequent restoration to life. These he speaks of as "those truly Masonic institutions." On the 313th page the same author says the most important of these mysteries were those of Mithras celebrated in Persia, of Osiris and Isis celebrated in Egypt; of Eleusis instituted in Greece; and the Scandinavian and Druidical rites, which were confined to the Gothic and Celtic tribes. And then speaking of the true connection between these mysteries and speculative Freemasonry, he says they both emanated from the same source.

Once more, the same writer, after an account of the rite of perambulation as used by the Hindoos, Greeks, Romans, and Druids, a purely pagan custom, says, "We find in the universal prevalence of this ceremony, and the invariable mode of passing from the east to the west by way of the south, a pregnant evidence of the common source of all these rites to which Freemasonry is also indebted for its existence." What further proof is needed. If their ablest and universally admitted authorities declare that these fraternities have emanated from the same source as those heathen mysteries; that they have with them a common origin, ay, that Freemasonry is indebted to them for its very existence, what more proof is needed to show their pagan character?

Candid Christian, can you be a member of, and in sworn confederation with a system that admits its own birth to be in pagan ceremonies? Can the one side of your heart warm to the Lord Jesus Christ, and the other side to heathenism? We started out with the hypothesis that if Christ did not get all the heart, he would accept none of it. He would not bear a compromise. The devil is satisfied with a half-hearted service, for he knows when he gets that, he also gets the other half that Christ will not have.

The Christian is the man who is put at disadvantage here. The unbeliever can be satisfied with a religion that emanated from heathenism; he can go into a service that is indebted for its existence to pagan rites, because he does not believe in, nor care for religious services of any kind, and a heathen kind will serve him as well as any other. But for a Christian at one time to take part in a pagan ceremony, and at another time a Christian service; to spend one night of the week where Christ is not known, cannot be talked about nor prayed to, and another night where no other name can be mentioned but Christ's; one day drinking wine from a human skull, a heathen travesty on the sacred service of the Lord's supper, and another day of the same week taking into the same hands and same lips the symbolic elements that Christ himself appointed to be used,—here is the appalling inconsistency. He cannot drink of the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils. Why? Because the Lord will not allow the two cups to go into the same lips. Whenever it is tried, both of the cups become the cups of devils. The only reason in charity why any candid Christian ever went into or formed connection with these false religious associations is because he was ignorant that they were so. He either did not know what his own profession of Christianity demanded, or he did not know the true character of the other. He has not thought the matter through." He is unpardonably ignorant if he does not know that there is no Christianity without Christ, no worship but in him, and through his blood and righteousness; and he is just as ignorant if he does not know that the Masonic religion has no Christ in it, has actually cut his name out of the blessed Scriptures when they want to make them Masonic Scriptures. I can understand how a Christless man can engage in a Christless prayer and a Christless service, but how a man who believes that Christ must be "all and in all" can go through a Christless prayer is an inexplicable mystery. . . . I assert it as an absolute impossibility that an intelligent Christian who knows that Jesus Christ is the only way of approach to God, can conscientiously join in a service that has actually put Christ out of it, that is built upon a foundation that necessitates that he shall be put out.

If a Christian is reading the Bible for his own comfort does he first go through the chapter and cut the name of the Lord Jesus out of it? If two Christians are talking together on religious experience, and a text of Scripture is alluded to that contains this blessed name, do they first erase that name before they draw religious comfort from it? If a minister of the Gospel is talking to a dying believer, and refers to a passage containing the name of Jesus, does he omit the mention of that name in comforting the dying believer? Does he attempt to hide that name from one just going to his judgment throne? He does not. He dares not; for all of light and hope and salvation is in that name.

But this same thing that a Christian will not do in his own personal experience; that no Christian man will do in religious conversation with a brother; and that no minister of the Gospel would dare to do with a dying saint, viz., omit the name of Jesus—that very thing Masonry does. Before a text of Scripture will suit its ceremony it must have that name literally cut out. For example the literal word reads (2 Thess. 3: 6): "Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly." The Masonic version is: "Now we command you, brethren, that ye withdraw yourselves," etc., etc.—taking God's Bible and literally cutting out of the heart of a passage—"the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." In the very face of that awful curse upon the man that adds to or subtracts a single word from this book, this society daringly cuts out of every passage it uses the name of Jesus where that name occurs in it.

Christian Mason did you know that? If you don't know it, you ought to; and if you find that it is so, can you submit to having the blessed name of Jesus cut out of Scripture before you are allowed to use it. If you do it in Masonry, you won't allow it in your own house, in your family Bible. Would you allow a man to go through the Bible you worship God with, which your wife and children read, and cut the name of Jesus Christ out of all its texts? Why, you would throw your Bible away if this name were cut out of it! You would say it is worth nothing. This name gives it all the worth it has. If you will not allow it taken out of your home Bible, why allow it out of your Masonic Bible? If you home Bible is worthless without it, what better is your Masonic Bible without it?

Christian Mason, I will take it upon me to advise you to look this matter up. Study the matter for yourself. You may have been taking other men's opinions too long already. Study for yourself. Get Masonic standard authorities. These things are all revealed and accessible to all; and after you have informed yourself upon the subject, if you find that when you were initiated it was into a Christless service, with Christless prayers, and Christless Scriptures, and a whole manner of salvation that has no Christ in it, then ask God on your knees, whether you can be true to your vows as a Christian, and at the same time be in sworn league with a lodge that has no Christ.

If in your childhood, when you were ignorant of mathematics, some one had taught you that two and two make six, you would not continue in that ignorance when you grew into manhood. You could not live, as a man, in the ignorance of what every child of three years old ought to know. This is more important in the sphere of morals. If in some day of your ignorance, your mistaken judgment, some party or parties taught you that it was right to swear profanely, or to take an oath to do a wrong thing; or to do something that you had no knowledge of; or to worship God in a profane way, or a Christless way; or to mutilate the Scriptures; or to play a farcical scene imitating the solemnity of death and the resurrection,—ought you to go on doing these false things when you have opportunity to know better? Ought you to continue in childish things when you grow to be a man? "When I was a child, I spoke as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child, but when I became a man I put away childish things." We pity the man who says he cannot see the sunlight because he is blind; but we account it unworthy the man who says in the noon day light that it is night, and he cannot see only because he refuses to open his eyes. No man has a right to be ignorant of what he ought to know, and of what he has the means to know if he would use these means.

Summing up all we have said then as to individual duties and obligations, we reach two conclusions:

1st. That no man can, at the same time, be a lover of Christ, or a Christian, and a sworn member of a Christ-dishonoring and disowning fraternity, provided he know the true character of that fraternity.

2nd. That no man can be innocent in going into such a fraternity without knowing its true character especially when it is so remarkably easy to find it out.

—There are in New York city 293 evangelical pastors, distributed among the denominations as follows: Baptist, 34; Congregational, 6; Lutheran, 22; Methodist, 53; Moravian, 2; Presbyterian, 64; Episcopalian, 74; Reformed Episcopal, 1; Reformed (Dutch), 26, and Independent, 11. The Protestant evangelical ministers in active service as editors, teachers, professors and occasional supplies will double the number.

REFORM NEWS.

TO THE FRIENDS OF REFORM IN IOWA.

DEAR BRETHREN:—The treasurer of our State Association is not receiving funds fast enough to meet the expenses of our State work. The State Agent is carrying a burden that he asks you to help him bear. Those of you who have subscribed to aid in carrying forward the reform work can help by promptly paying your subscriptions. And you who have not been called upon for a subscription, can help by sending a cash donation to James Harvey, Pleasant Plain, Jefferson county, Iowa, the treasurer of the Iowa Christian Association. Rev. Isaac Bancroft of Clay county has paid a donation of $40. An old veteran reformer of Lee county, nearly ninety years of age, has sent $5. Will not the friends of reform all over the State remit much or little, as you can afford, to James Harvey, State Treasurer.

In addition to sustaining the lecture work, we want funds to thickly sow the State with reform literature. Will you not help, my dear brother? Please send one, two, five, ten, or fifty dollars, as you can afford, to aid in withstanding the secret lodge system, through which Satan is so craftily working for the overthrow of Republican liberty, and the subversion of our holy Christianity.

Will not the Christian women of Iowa come to the rescue, and aid in carrying forward the reform work?
C. F. HAWLEY, State Agent.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

CITICO STEAMER, Tennessee River, Dec 27, '86.
Leaving Knoxville on the afternoon of the 24th, in company with brother Frank Houghton, we came to London by rail, where we took the boat for Kingston, and were soon shut in by the darkness. Our passage was without noteworthy incident, and the accommodating captain rounded to and dropped us at a convenient point to reach Bro. Houghton's home. Climbing a steep and muddy bank we made our way to the nearest house, where we obtained a lantern and struck out into the woods and over the hills for a tramp of two or more miles.

A rude structure, erected for worship, stands on the brow of a hill, and takes its name from the beautiful clump of pines occupying an open area in front. Thither we repaired on the morning of the 25th to join the company who had come up to engage in services. I was introduced to the circuit preacher, a Mr. Steward, who gave a very practical discourse. His theme was the advent of Christ and man's need of a Saviour. He said the day was uncertain and immaterial, but emphasized the event as the one and only hope of a lost race. [See note on another page.—Ed.] His thoughts, illustrations, and manner were in keeping with his audience, the place of meeting, and the occasion. A hearty hand-shaking and general good time followed the sermon, and a happy company with smiling faces dispersed, some on foot, others on horseback, but not a wagon appeared on the scene.

I learned that Bro. Steward had at one time been connected with the Odd-fellows, but had long since dropped all active connection with the order. He was much interested in the N. C. A., and in entire accord with its principles and work so far as he understood them, and I trust he may yet be a valuable helper in our work. At his request I spoke in the evening, and was encouraged by an attentive company who gave heed to the things spoken, in spite of the rather free ventilation and low temperature of the room.

On Sabbath morning Bro. Steward preached a practical discourse on organization and the duty of Christians to sustain the church, which was divinely ordained but greatly crippled in its mission by the intrusion of sinful and worldly orders, against which he gave faithful warning. He did not say Odd-fellowship or secret societies, but the name was only wanting to make the discourse a heavy blow on the orders. Bro. Steward is sound on reforms, and has been very helpful to Mrs. Stoddard in her W. C. T. U. work. I preached again at 3 p. m., and after services started on foot with Mrs. Stoddard and our nephew Elmer as a guide, through the woods and over the hills for Kingston, three miles away. The shadows had fallen thickly before we reached the Tennessee River, but ferryman Clark rowed us safely over to the "Citico," anchored on the Kingston side.

Arranging for quarters we obtained a lantern and started out, reaching the Presbyterian church soon after services had begun. The pastor having met Mrs. Stoddard in her temperance work came and invited me to preach, which I did to a very attentive audience. We received several invitations to pass the night with friends, but while appreciating their kindness we decided to return to our quarters, as the boat was to leave at 5 a. m. After a comfortable night we are pushing against the current up the river towards Knoxville, where we are due this afternoon. We can say truly, "The good hand of our God has been with us hitherto," and we are willing to trust him for the future.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. Jan. 3d, 1887.

I preached yesterday in the three leading colored churches in this city, Bro. Geo. W. Clark preached and sang at two others and we were together in the evening. In the arch over the platform where I spoke in the morning were the cross and crown, the square and compass, the letter "S" and the three links. This is the largest, and I am told the best furnished building in the city occupied by a colored congregation, and although the weather was unusually severe for this latitude, the Sabbath school and preaching services were fairly attended.

Accepting an invitation to dine with the pastor, I found him a gentleman of culture, acquainted with the great movements and many of the noted men of our country. To my regret and to his own as well, I found he had taken 32 degrees in Scottish Rite Masonry, but that while a pastor on the Pacific coast he burned his demits from the Masonic and several other lodges with which he was connected. He was induced by his bishop to take the higher degrees, and was accommodated with a loan of funds to meet expenses until he could repay it. When alone with God he thought came to him that it was wrong. The same feeling returned again and again until his impressions became so clear and deep that he arose and took all his letters of good standing in the lodges and cast them into the fire. As yet he has not taken a public stand openly against the secret system, but his influence wherever known personally is quietly against it.

My afternoon appointment was on Crosier street where I met Bishop Turner from Atlanta, Georgia, and pastor Grigsby, who were very cordial. After this service I called at the study of another pastor and had an extended conference with two ministerial brethren who are adhering Odd-fellows. They were both fair, candid men, and listening to their statements no one could question their sincerity. Neither of them admired, enjoyed, or could give any reason for the ceremonial work, but felt that the objectionable might be tolerated to some extent as a means of obtaining substantial benefits. After listening to some explanations and remarks in reply, I was rewarded by one of them saying, "If that is so, no Christian should remain in the order; and I would leave it in a moment if I knew the system rejected my Saviour." This brother was from a neighboring city and I am to speak in his pulpit on Wednesday evening next.

At Bro. J. M. Smith's I met Bro. Clark and we spent a couple of hours in a kind of general love feast which all seemed to enjoy and which was not devoid of spiritual benefits. Bro. Smith and his young church are under the care of the A. M. A. and seem vigorous. The pastor's efforts to interest the young have been rewarded by success and the opportunities in this field of his labors are without limit.

I met Bishop H. M. Turner, D. D., at eleven o'clock to-day by appointment. He is a man with very striking characteristics, and one with whom no ordinary sinner would care to come into conflict. His face has a calm, intelligent and pleasant expression, but becomes very animated in conversation. Of Southern birth and education, accustomed to mingle freely with the common people in their homes, as well as in public gatherings, he is prepared to speak of the present condition of the South and the ex-slaves with an intelligence possessed by very few men of our times. He spent four years studying Hebrew, Greek and Latin in Baltimore before the war, and claims to have received the first commission ever given by President Lincoln to a colored man. When I mentioned and explained to him the work of the N. C. A. he listened attentively and replied, "You have my endorsement, my sympathy and my prayers. I have belonged to ten different secret orders and have given them all up except the Masons; and I retain that more to please my wife than for any other reason. She thinks if I should die she would like to have them bury me," etc.

The Bishop explained how he carried on the work of reconstruction, and gave many practical suggestions about reaching the people. He says an indiscriminate distribution of literature would do very little good, but personal visitation would reach and influence multitudes. He publishes a weekly paper, and volunteered his co-operation in securing suitable men who could be relied upon to do the work if the Association should decide to employ men and extend its colporteur work in the South.

Thus God is raising up friends and helpers on this very field where Masonry was nurtured when it became a reproach throughout the Northern States. To him be glory forever.
J. P. STODDARD.

GOOD WORDS FROM OHIO.

FRAZEYSBURG, O., Jan. 9th, '87.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—It seemed to be the general opinion of those who met at the State Convention that more lecture work should be done before the organization of county associations would be expedient. Accordingly I am still working on the old line, instead of trying to effect the organization of our forces as previously suggested. I hope, however, to attend to this in the near future and shall keep it in view as I work. Since coming to this county I have spoken five times.

Rev. J. M. Wylie, pastor of two Covenant churches in this section, made me very welcome and assisted in arranging for lectures. Sabbath morning I had the pleasure of addressing one of these congregations. Sabbath evening I filled an appointment in Zion's Christian church, the pastor not being able to be present; and on Monday evening lectured in the same place. Tuesday evening I lectured in the Presbyterian church in town. Wednesday evening was assigned to Dresden. But as other meetings were in progress it was thought best by friends to have lectures there at some future time.

Last evening I spoke in what is known as Muskingum Presbyterian church. There was a good attendance at all the lectures. A slight snow on icy roads made sleighing good. A beautiful moon joined in the invitation to a pleasure trip. The young men were up to the times, and did not let the opportunity pass to accompany their best girl to the lecture. I endeavored in each of these lectures to set forth the anti-Christian character of the lodge and to show the utter folly of trying to get to heaven in any other way than in the name and through the merits of Christ. Good attention was given throughout and I am assured that the lectures were not in vain. Rev. Fulton, Warren Taylor and the General Agent have been this way and lectured before. The seed sown has been cultivated in the minds of many and I found a good sentiment prevailed. One evening Father Taylor was to exemplify to his audience some degrees of Masonry. The young man who was engaged as a candidate was duly prepared, and initiated in the Entered Apprentice degree. He was then left in the preparation room while the Fellowcraft was explained. When he was wished to proceed he could not be found. He had escaped through a window and "skipped by the light of the moon," evidently thinking he had enough of the sublime mysteries (?) of Masonry. I have met with my usual success in securing readers for our paper, and have otherwise received a little assistance, but the general stringency of the times makes collections light. I go to-day to Zanesville, from thence to Cottage Hill, Mt. Perry, New Concord, etc. If the Lord opens the way I shall spend a large part if not all of this month in this, Muskingum, and Gurnsey counties. Any parties in this section desiring lectures can address me immediately at New Concord or later at Columbus and letters will be forwarded. I should like to speak of many who have kindly entertained and manifested an interest in our work, but time does not permit. Yours for work,
W. B. STODDARD.

THE FIRST DISTURBANCE FOR THE IOWA LECTURER.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I came to Birmingham, Van Buren county, Dec. 25th. On the next Lord's day I preached in the Free Methodist church in the morning, and in the evening at the United Presbyterian church. I was announced to lecture in the U. P. church on Monday night. The weather turned very cold—to twenty-eight degrees below zero. I feared the meeting would be a failure. But a fine audience was present and listened with close attention while I unfolded Satan's plan for dethroning Christ and supplementing Christianity through the agency of the secret lodge system.

No one, I think, who heard that lecture, would question my conclusion that a man cannot intelligently adhere to Masonry and be a Christian. This conclusion was reached by a course of argument that left no doubt of its correctness in the minds of those who listened. The order at this meeting was perfect, and the triumph of the truth complete.

The next night I went to what is known as the Union church, five or six miles distant from Birmingham. Here the congregation was much larger than I could have expected, but the meeting was second

(Continued on 12th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND, DO TAKE THAT BACK.

WEST BRANCH, IOWA.

To recommend an increase of our army and navy is not what the citizens of our great Republic need. We want our young men trained to save men's lives, not to destroy them. We want our national difficulties dealt with intelligently and wisely and not by brute force. We want arbitration and a congress of nations, and all differences brought before a lawful assembly and disposed of with justice and judgment. We do not want thousands of our able-bodied young men taken from their parents and the lawful avocations of life and congregated together unemployed to become demoralized and the country taxed for their support and pay. We want our intellect and money used in benefiting the rising generation, and preparing for them happy and cultured homes in these United States. We do not want to be involved as the European nations are, with enormous debt, and millions of men nonproducers but consumers, draining the nation's life-blood by draft and taxation. In some, if not all of these nations, all of the likely young men are required by law to spend years in camp life, to be trained for soldiers, if their government should want to use them in that way. At a critical period of their lives they are taken from parental care and authority, without other business, and as a rule, become more or less demoralized, and when they return home they are often corrupted for life. In this way is caused the low state of morals in these nations. We do not want our nation's wealth and inventive genius ever used to make and use implements for war, which belongs to savage life, and we can claim only partial civilization with such a foundation for our government. We want the United States government never again to consent to spill human blood to settle differences. Our nation is second to none, all things considered, on the globe, and we should be the first to resolve to beat our swords into plowshares, and learn war no more. This time must and will come, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

ELIZA WATSON.

SELF-HELP AMONG THE COLORED PEOPLE.

NEW IBERIA, La., Dec. 28, 1886.

DEAR EDITOR:—It was my privilege to attend a most interesting prayer-meeting last week, in the Congregational church of New Iberia. The colored people of this place have organized themselves into a permanent association, to establish a high school here, and have been making great efforts in the way of soliciting subscriptions, and giving entertainments, consisting mainly of concerts, for the purpose of raising money enough to purchase a piece of property costing $5,500. It is very desirably located, with a large house on it in good condition, so that they could open school in it as soon as purchased. They have been working hard to get enough to make the first payment, which is $1,000, and take possession of it the first of January, 1887. They have not succeeded yet, but they are doing all they can towards it.

At the regular prayer-meeting last Wednesday night, Mr. Gunner, the minister, who was the originator of the movement, and is the president of the association, and who is prosecuting the work with great vigor, proposed as the subject of prayer, the success of the high school. There were a good many out, and most of those present either spoke or prayed, and the amount of earnestness and even eloquence exhibited, and the expressions of appreciation of a Christian education, was something wonderful from a people born in slavery and brought up in ignorance; but their present enlightened condition and advanced ideas are due, as they gratefully acknowledge, to the teachings of Mr. Gunner, who is himself an educated Christian gentleman, and is not only a blessing to his own church, but to the whole community, as he frequently visits the other churches where he is always welcome. Every one spoke in favor of the school, and said they did not want their children to come up as they had, and expressed themselves determined to do all they could to raise the required amount.

One man said, "It is a great thing to be a Christian, and I am glad I am one, but I have no education, though I wish I had, for I could be so much more useful if I had, but we must have this school for the benefit of the young." Another said, "I am doing all I can, but I am not working alone for the benefit of the young. I had no advantages, but I mean to go to this school and learn something." A woman said, "Some old people say they won't help, for they don't know A from B, and they can't learn, and it won't do them no good; but," she said, "I know A from B, and I can read a little but not much, but I want to learn to read, so I can read my Bible, and learn to write, so I can write my own letters; for if some one has to write your letters for you, every person knows your business. And some say they won't give anything towards it, for they can't read or write and they got along very well, and their children can do the same; but," said she, "I have children and grandchildren, and I don't want them to come up as I did, I want them to be educated;" and with tears in her eyes, and in the most earnest manner, she said, "if I had not one child or a single relative, I would work hard to get the school, just for the benefit of my race, and I have prayed that we may succeed with this school as earnestly as I did when I got religion, and we must all put our shoulder to the wheel," and raising her hands up, she added, "I mean to earn the money I put into this school myself, I won't take it from my husband."

Oh, if a few Northerners, possessing kind hearts and plenty of money, could only have listened to those good people that night, the whole $5,500 would have been raised in a short time. I can give but a poor idea of the spirit of this meeting, but many of these rich friends will read these lines, and my prayer is that they will send help to this poor, but truly deserving people, who are doing all they can to help themselves.

S. A. FARLEY.

THE UNITED BRETHREN COMMISSION.

The cause of the loyal United Brethren is the cause of Christ, in this department of his church. We believe there are as many true hearts in this as in any church of equal numbers. "The King is on the throne," as Bishop Edwards was wont to say. But there seems to be a being of a different throne trying to be equal with the King so that the pure hearted cry out to God as in the days old, "Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which frameth mischief by a law?" Psalm 94: 20.

The General Conference, being the law-making body of the church, have used their power to change law contrary to law. All proper law-making power should be controlled by law. To change law by the revolutionary mode of trampling on fundamental law would destroy the best government the sun ever shone upon. "The throne of iniquity" would so change all law against secret societies, "the unfruitful works of darkness," that the god of this world and his children may appear to have fellowship with the Christian's God, so as to deceive the very elect with the confusion of no difference between gods, but all practice the "universal religion in which all men agree." It is the Masonic religion of Satan. There is only One who is able to save us from being deceived by the Masonic god of this world. He has been tempted in all points like as we are, and has proved himself able to bring us out victorious if we only trust him in his own appointed way, and that is to "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness." May we have "a double portion of his Spirit" to help us in this our time of great need. Shall not Christ prevail? O Lord, save the church thou hast purchased with thine own blood.

A letter from one of the Commissioners, with their report inclosed, requests me to read the report carefully and prayerfully. I have done as requested, and will say it is necessary to be led by the Spirit of God in such matters as well as other things, "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the sons of God." The right spirit will not lead any person into anything that cannot be supported with truth. The work of the Commission cannot be supported upon any principle of truth and right. The discipline makes no provision for a Commission. The constitution now in force says, "No rule or ordinance shall at any time be passed to change or do away the confession of faith as it now stands." But in the report of the Commission we find a new confession of faith. The Commissioner suggested that we have able men from both sides to discuss it. I accepted, and told him if I could not get an able man to discuss it with his representative I would know our side to be unworthy the respect of honest men. This was about two months ago. Silence has been the result. They have no "man of brains" who will discuss the work of the Commission. To defend themselves they adopt the tactics of the lodge. They are backing down from the light of investigation, because their work will not stand the test of truth.

Dr. Hott knows the work of the Commission "cannot be defended," so one side only appears in the Telescope. The articles of true and tried men are excluded. But it would be fair for those who fear the light of truth to occupy but half the space in the church organ. Truth crushed to earth shall rise again. If officials are determined to travel the broad road of wrong doing, may the light shine till they are drawn by the love of God to quit their foolishness. But they are "men of brains" enough not to discuss.

CYRUS SMITH.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON IV.—January 23.—Noah and the Ark.—Gen. 6: 9-22. GOLDEN TEXT.—Noah did according to all that the Lord commanded him.—Gen. 7: 5.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

From the United Presbyterian Bible Teacher.

Noah was a just man, and perfect in his generation (v. 9). "Yes, I try to be good and serve God, but I find so many things in the way that I almost despair. The boys in my class at school; the girls I associate with; the men with me in the shop or store; we live in such a rough, wicked neighborhood; and how many other difficulties do boys and girls, and men and women, conjure up and offer as an excuse for discouragement in their Christian life? Now look at Noah. He was a just man and a perfect man in his generation. Well, do you suppose there ever has been a more wicked, more corrupt generation than his? Are your surroundings worse than his? The same grace that enabled Noah to live a just and perfect life in his generation will enable you to triumph as he did.

And Noah walked with God (v. 9). And here you have the explanation of it. While Noah was surrounded with the worst crowd that ever lived, he wasn't compelled to associate with them. He walked with God. He went in the best society any man ever got into. While it is next to impossible not to be in a measure influenced by one's surroundings, you don't need to go with bad boys or bad girls; you don't need to associate with the vicious and the vulgar. You will find some of the best boys and girls of Pittsburgh in the worst parts of the city, while you will find some of the worst in the best parts of the city. It depends on whom you make your particular, your bosom friend. If God is that, you are quite safe anywhere.

And God said unto Noah (v. 13). Noah walked with God and God talked with Noah. That shows what good terms they were on. And I suppose that is the reason in particular why Noah was not corrupted by the vile conversation of the bad people of his neighborhood—because he had something better to listen to. When I see a boy standing on the street-corner with a crowd of loafers and "bums," and listens to their conversation, I know that boy is going pretty fast to the devil; for he is listening to the devil's agents, sent out on purpose to secure recruits for the regiments of his Satanic Majesty. But if I see another boy walking along the street with his father or mother, listening earnestly to their conversation, and if I know his parents to be Christians, I feel sure that boy is in God's company and is comparatively safe. He is likely to get such a close friendship struck up between himself and his God that he will always afterwards walk with God while God will talk with him. Happy the man who cultivates such heavenly companionship and conversation. Are you that person?

PRACTICAL.

1. The beginning of the Christian life is to become "just" before God, or justification by faith. This is subsequently manifested by a blameless, holy walk.

2. Every one should seek to serve God in his own generation by resisting its evil, and bearing such testimony as it needs.

3. See what ruin sin hath wrought on the earth! At first God said: "Behold, it was all very good." After 1600 years he said: "Behold, it was corrupt."

4. God bears long with sinners, but he will at last surely overwhelm them if they repent not.

5. The Gospel salvation from its Alpha to its Omega, was devised and appointed by God.

6. There is no other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved, but the name of Jesus.

7. Though many church denominations, there is but one Door to heaven.

8. Rich and poor, high and low, moralist and sensualist, must all enter by that Door or perish.

9. Although the only, Jesus is an all sufficient, way of life.

10. "Yet there is room."

11. The door will one day be shut.

12. Parents owe it both to themselves and their children to enter the ark immediately, and lead their children after them.

13. The faith of the parents will not save adult children. They have a personal responsibility.

14. If we have faith, we will show it by a trustful, perpetual and complete obedience.

15. "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. . . . They were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

Carlyle, who was no bigot, declared that only the man of strong conviction, who could say, "Verily, verily," could aspire to be the guide of men. Carlyle was right; the bigoted enthusiast in religion, and the narrow-minded crank in politics, are nobler and more useful types of humanity than the learned know-nothings and philosophical do-nothings.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington, in a letter written a year before his death: "I preside over no lodge, nor have I been in one more than once or twice during the last thirty years."

President Millard Fillmore, J. C. Spencer and others: "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Chief Justice John Marshall: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned as one capable of much evil and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

John Quincy Adams: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

General A. W. Riley: "I hold that the difference between the Christian and a heathen religion is, that one has morality and the other has not. And when our churches refuse to speak of such subjects as slavery, liquor-selling and secret societies, they are becoming heathen religions; that is, religions without morals."

Charles Francis Adams: "Every man who takes a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment were to prove a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield: In conducting the governments of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but secret orders to be considered, which have agents everywhere—reckless agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

General J. W. Phelps: "All secret organizations are links of one and the same chain which binds men to evil and not to good. The Masonic lodge is the parent source from which all similar modern organizations have emanated and this lodge is now in active operation in every city and considerable village of the country swaying our parties and churches; filling our offices, secular and divine, with its partisans; shaping our political destinies; and teaching a spurious and corrupting morality subversive both of the Christian religion and of free institutions."

Thurlow Weed: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

A. M. Sullivan, Irish Leader: I had not studied in vain the history of secret, oath-bound associations. I regarded them with horror. I knew all that could be said as to their advantages in revolutionizing a country, but even in the firmest and best of hands they had a direct tendency to demoralization and are often on the whole more perilous to society than open tyranny."

Hon. Edward Blake, leader in Canadian Parliament, March, 1884: "I am not in favor of State recognition of any secret societies. I have never joined one, though many of my best friends are members of secret societies. But I believe the tendency of secrecy itself to be injurious. I believe that it brings with it the possibility of evil; I believe that it involves a certain amount of sacrifice of individuality and independence, and gives very great facilities for the misleading of members by designing leaders—very great and mischievous facilities for that purpose." "I believe that a great deal of the trouble, social and political, that has occurred in those countries [Europe and America] is due to secret societies."

George Washington (to Gov. Trumbull): "Masonry is a benevolent institution, which may be employed for the best or worst purposes."

Edward Everett: "A secret society so widely diffused and connected as this puts a vast power, capable of the most dangerous abuse, into hands irresponsible to the public."

Richard Rush: Hooker, personifying law, eloquently exclaims, "her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; everything on earth does her homage, the highest is not beyond her control, the least as claiming her protection." Masonry has oversteered this primordial system. She has dethroned this image of God upon earth. To reinstate it over so insolent a victor, we must have a political organization. There is no other way of assaulting, there is no other hope of vanquishing, there is no other dream of humbling such a foe. It fights with desperation."

Wendell Phillips: "History shows them perverting justice, stopping at no crime to protect and conceal their mummeries; controlling politics for selfish and personal ends, and interfering with great danger in national emergencies. Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are forbidden by law and rooted out of existence."

John Hancock: "I am opposed to all secret associations."

James Madison: "From the number and character of those who now support the charges against Masonry, I cannot doubt that it is at least susceptible of abuse, outweighing any advantages promised by its patrons."

General U. S. Grant: "All secret, oath-bound political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first bring them together."

Myron Holley of New York: "Such a rebellion Freemasonry has raised. It has violated the dearest rights of nature, and the most sacred enactments of our laws, and this in a spirit manifestly treasonable, for it has done this in pursuance of solemn, deliberate and voluntary obligations to a foreign government. I mean its own—a government far more alien to that which claims our allegiance than any which has ever afflicted mankind."

Gerrit Smith, in an address, 1870: "Masonry murdered Morgan. If it could not conceal his murderers, it nevertheless protected them. It overrode the laws of the land and ruled the courts and the ballot-boxes. Moreover, it is capable of repeating the crimes. Why then should we not dread secret societies, and do what we can to bring them to an end?"

William Wirt: "If this be Masonry, as according to uncontradicted evidence it seems to be, I have no hesitation in saying that I consider it at war with the fundamental principles of the social compact, and a wicked conspiracy against the laws of God and man, that ought to be put down."

Joseph Ritner, governor of Pennsylvania, 1837: "If it be true as the lamented Colder (himself one of the initiated) declared that many a Mason became a great man but no great man ever became a Mason, how nearly does it concern the youth of our country to pause and reflect before they commit their present standing and future reputation to the keeping of a society, which for its cold-hearted and selfish purposes could immolate even the fame of Washington at the shrine of its abominations."

Lewis Tappan, private journal, 1814:—"Dr. Dixwell gave me lectures on Masonry at his house." "In September left the lodge." Letter, Jan. 21, 1829:—"I am free to say that I henceforth renounce Freemasonry, considering it a useless and profane institution."

George Washington, to friends in 1794, quoted by Myron Holley:—"The real people occasionally assembled in order to express their sentiments on political sentiments, ought never to be confounded with permanent, self-appointed societies, usurping the right to control constituted authorities, and to dictate to public opinion. While the former was entitled to respect, the latter was incompatible with all government, and must either sink into general dis-esteem, or finally overturn the established order of things."

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGE-RY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even to a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Soudford Co., Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.

Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.

Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.

Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.

West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonic, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Conestogable, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mohile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tobe Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hopeston, Ill.; Esmer, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solisbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maywood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky.; Ustick, Ill.; Clarkburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

ELT TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka, Florida.

WM. HAGENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.

A. D. ZAPHONITIS, Andros, Greece.

C. B. WARF, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Peck of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."

"The Master's Corpse."

"In the Cold, or The Coming Conflict."

"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.

"Revised Old-fellowship," the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.

"Freemasonry Illustrated," the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.

"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies," a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF
THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT.—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y and TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform. For as FREEMASONRY—give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. J. S. McCulloch, D. D.

SECRETARY.—Rev. Lewis Johnson.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Morrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Williamantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Williamantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulah Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birminghams; Rec. Sec., H. W. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., James Harrey.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Terrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning Jr., Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Palma, Waseja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Anstin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Rev. R. M. Smith, Pagetown; Rec. Sec., Rev. Coleman Utica; Cor. Sec. and Treas., Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. K. Laird, St. Johnsbury; Sec., C. W. Foster, St. Johnsbury.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo. Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas. M. R. Britten, Virens.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD.

EDITORS.

HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 13, 1887.

A single Mason can hang a jury or govern a church.

We hear from far and near protests against the attempt of chairman Finch to subordinate the Prohibition party to the lodge.

We learn that Pres. Stratton is using all diligence to fill the programme of the Congress of Christians at Chicago, Feb. 22, and Secretary Stoddard will soon be at home and give it his earnest attention and labors.

We beg a careful reading for the sketch of Mr. Seward, especially our attempt to prove from the history of parties, that the party which ruled from Jackson to Buchanan, which attempted the destruction of popular government, and modern civilization, was composed, made up of slave-holding Masons, and Masons seceding from the Whig and Democratic parties in the North. While Seward's party, which elected Lincoln, was made up of the original Anti-masons, Free Soil Democrats, and Charles Sumner Whigs, who joined the Jackson party after Jackson's death.

Another star has gone out in light. Mr. George Avery of Galesburg, Ill., was buried last week. He was one of a cluster of men who founded the city of Galesburg, such as the world has seldom seen equalled. They were the fruits of revivals which followed the fall of the lodges in New York, after the murder of Morgan. The multitude of minds left vacant by the departure of the evil spirits who run the lodges, were filled with the Holy Ghost, and a wave of salvation followed in all the States where the false worship ceased. Mr. Avery was one of the most perfect and perfectly consistent of the Catholics and Joshua which this grand movement produced. Mrs. Avery would willingly go with him, but she is surrounded by an interesting family of superior children and grandchildren, and her calm and intelligent faith now gives her a home on both sides the river, and she has only to pass out of one room into another. Mr. Avery, though nearing his four-score and weakened by the weight of years, was in his place in the church to the last Sabbath before the attack which took him home. His last words to Mr. Jones Harding, with whom he walked from church, were, "I am ready and only waiting." "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace."

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

Few rare and worthy men continue such to the end. Therefore let no man put confidence in men.—John Rogers.

Webster in his youth, on Plymouth Rock, said to the crowds assembled, "I hear the sound of the hammers; I see the smoke of the furnaces where chains and manacles are forged for the limbs of men. Let that spot be purified, or let it cease to be of New England." In advanced life, to conciliate the South, and secure the prize of the Presidency, speaking of slavery, he said, "We must conquer our prejudices." Stephen A. Douglas was a Vermonter, where Judge Harrington said, "Nothing will satisfy this court that a man is a slave, but a bill of sale from the Almighty." Mr. Douglas, when candidate for the Presidency, said, "I do not care whether slavery is voted up or voted down."

William H. Seward, when twenty-four years of age, in a 4th of July speech, took strong ground against slavery; and when not yet twenty-nine years old, was elected to the State Senate, as an Anti-mason. The Anti-masonic party was seduced by the Whig party alliance into fellowship with the lodge, and fell. The lodge itself "possummed," i. e., feigned dead, in the North; but, in the South, organized secession and rebellion in its lodge-rooms. Mr. Seward was elected the first Whig governor of New York in 1830, and to the Senate of the United States in 1848. During the intervening eighteen years, he was continually before the country. Once defeated and twice elected governor, the constant leader, and head of the party opposed to the Albany Regency, composed of Silas Wright, Martin Van Buren, Judge Esek Cowen, A. C. Flagg, Chancellor Walworth, and others, the ablest political combination this country ever produced, and backed too by Tammany, a sworn secret political society in New York city. The Masons, too, in both the Jackson and Whig parties North, were driven over to the Democracy, by the fusion of the Anti-masons with the Whigs. Jackson and his Cabinet, Livingston, Poinsett, Barry and Eaton, were all made honorary members of Federal Lodge, No. 1, D. C., and of the 250,000 large slave-holders very few were out of the lodges. Pitt had for an opposition, Fox, Burke and Sheridan, and Napoleon for an antagonist; the ablest opposition, and greatest general the world had seen, or a single statesman ever met. Seward had a mightier opposition than Pitt; and from his entry on public life as scarcely above a youth, till he died in the 72d year of his age at Auburn, 1872, he never swerved from the straight path of principle and patriotism on which he started into public life.

He was twenty-five years old when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Freemasons. Millard Fillmore, Francis Granger, and even John C. Spencer, with other prominent names, had seceded from the platform where they stood with Seward against the two main forces intent on the demolition of popular government, to-wit, slavery and secret societies. Granger, who presided at the first national convention of Anti-masons in Philadelphia, disappeared from public life. Fillmore lived by the death of Gen. Taylor to become President of the United States, and to sign the infamous Fillmore Bill of September, 1850, which punished freemen for refusing to catch fugitive slaves. Seward, as leader of the opposition to the Albany Regency, Tammany, and secret lodge coalition, contributed more than any other one to the election of Harrison (1840) and Taylor (1848), who were supposed by thoughtful observers to have fallen by poison. Harrison had appointed Webster to his Cabinet, who had advised the suppression of lodge-oaths by law; and had also appointed Joseph Ritner, Anti-masonic governor of Pennsylvania, to be treasurer of the United States Mint. Their deaths soon followed these appointments. Whether they died by the cup, which was tried upon Lincoln, afterward, before he was shot by Booth, the secrets of the grave conceal. Andrew Johnson, who was made President by Lincoln's assassination, was raised to the twenty-first degree in Masonry soon after Lincoln's death, and his patriotism sunk as he rose in the lodge. Seward and his son were nearly murdered by the secret gang while Booth was shooting Lincoln, and the actors were members of the same secret gang, and the ten Masonic lodges in the District of Columbia, with the exception of a few who have given us this information, "all went seceh." The old law maxim is relevant to these cases: "If the heifer be dead and the butcher stands by with his knife bloody, is there any doubt who killed the heifer?"

The lodge certainly "stood by" all these deaths. The motive to murder was the same in all of them; and the knife of the lodge was and is bloody.

But whether the death of the three Presidents, and the attempted assassination of Seward and his son were at all connected with the sworn murder so familiar in the oaths and ritual of the lodge or not, the following things are certain:

1. The five victims belonged to the national party, which the Anti-masons had joined, and the known Masons had left.
2. The other party was composed of Gen. Jackson and Cabinet, all Masons—of Masons who had left the Whig and Democratic party in the North, to get rid of the Anti-masons, and if Harrison, Taylor, Lincoln, Seward and son were political victims their lives would not be assailed by their own party.
3. Harrison left Ohio in usual health, and died within a month after appointing an Anti-mason the chief of his Cabinet, and another, Joseph Ritner, treasurer of the U. S. Mint.
4. Taylor died suddenly soon after declaring for the admission of California with a constitution forever prohibiting slavery, and five months after his inauguration. Fillmore, who became President by his death, was a Northern man with Southern principles.
5. Lincoln's assassination and the attempted death of the Swards bear evidence of being Masonic crimes. Lincoln was a non-Mason. Andrew Johnson, who took the Presidency and changed his principle, was a Mason of 21 degrees.
6. Mr. Seward was elected State Senator, and twice chosen governor by Anti-masons, and wrote most of their state papers. In 1848 he declared the grapple with slavery an "irrepressible conflict," and next year went to the U. S. Senate, when Taylor was President. Mr. Seward's address to the people of New York while a member of the legislature, a most masterly production, was given in these columns last week. It was issued in 1831.

After years in the U. S. Senate; after he had seen the lodges of the North overthrown and supposed to be dead; had seen the Democratic party, with two brief exceptions (Harrison and Taylor) held the government from Jackson to Buchanan, nearly thirty years, and while he saw those feigned dead lodges all over the North coming back to life and power,

"Still as the breeze, but dreadful as the storm."

then, in the face of history, in the face of secret foes who do not reply but assassinate, and while he was talked of for President,—then, in his place in the Senate, he uttered those words which will be quoted while the language lasts:

"I, an American citizen, swear! I swear fealty to I know not whom, and to conceal I know not what! Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men, in a secret lodge, order, class or council; and bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them, for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed; and that I might become an object of pity and even mockery to my fellow-men. No, sir! I have spent so much of my life in helping to break fetters from the souls and bodies of other men, to submit willingly to have them put upon my own!"

This cost him his nomination to the Presidency, when a nomination was an election. Thurlow Weed wrote from the convention in Chicago (1860). "You will be nominated to-morrow on the first ballot." But the Virginia delegation, which were pledged to Seward, changed their vote, and gave the nomination to Lincoln. Mr. Weed went West and met some of the Virginia delegation going down the Mississippi to Rock Island, and asked them why they had gone back on their word. "We had no idea," said they, "till we got to Chicago, that that was the Seward who was so busy about Anti-masonry in the time of Morgan." And Mr. Philo Carpenter, on the street in Chicago, the evening before the nomination was made, heard one Mason express sorrow to another that "that Seward" was to be the nominee. "You need not fear that," said the other; "the lodge has seen to that."

"God taketh the wise in their own craftiness," and Lincoln proved manifestly the choice of God. But the incident shows the subtlety of Satan, the god of the lodge, and its well-placed dread of William H. Seward. God placed him at the head of Lincoln's Cabinet, as he placed Lincoln at the head of the nation, in mercy to our country and mankind.

SEWARD AS SECRETARY OF STATE.

To get a clear idea of our foreign relations when Seward took the portfolio, we have but to look at the Presidents who had preceded Lincoln since Jackson. They were Van Buren, Tyler, Polk, Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan—all Southern sympathizers. Harrison held office but a month, and Taylor but five. The others sent men abroad who were acceptable to the slave power which now sought to destroy the Union by arms. With exceptions, too small to notice, the outside world was governed by monarchs, the natural foes of republics. What was to hinder the speedy recognition of the Confederacy by those monarchs, and letting loose the world's pirates on American commerce with a friendly shelter for their ships on every shore? Nothing but their fear that secession would fail, and the Union stand and be able to make reprisals. If then, when Mr. Seward said the rebellion would be quenched in ninety days, he saw somewhat through his wishes and a desire to impress our foreign ministers with his own sanguine hopes, it was a weakness which strengthened our cause. If Washington's strategy was justified, when he feigned an attack on Clinton, when he was moving on Cornwallis, Seward's impressing our legations, in foreign ports and the foreign nations behind them, that the Union was stronger and the rebellion weaker than they were, had the same justification with Washington's. It was a war measure, and it worked well.

This is a sketch and not a history. It is needless to follow this great man through his masterly analysis of the first battle of Manassas, by which he combated dismay; his cool, diplomatic menace that nations which should befriend a revolution based on human slavery might have revolutions to settle soon among their own people; or the Trent affair with Mason and Slidell, in which Mr. Seward conquered England, in the world's courts, by obeying the law of nations which England so grossly violated in the war of 1812. This latter triumph was provided for by Mr. Lincoln sending over Charles Francis Adams and Thurlow Weed, personal friends of Mr. Seward, and, like him, Abolitionists and Anti-masons. To follow Mr. Seward through these and his other measures during the five most perilous and difficult years of our history, would be to write a history and not a sketch.

But this sketch would be defective did we not notice the other stars in our national constellation at the time. Our readers have seen already that the party which annexed Texas to spread slavery, that made war on weak Mexico for the same dark purpose, and that ruled the country from Jackson to Lincoln, was a Masonic party, while the party led by Seward included, by absorption, the Anti-masons drawn from both the old parties. Chase, who issued the greenbacks, was an Anti-mason who studied with Wirt, the candidate of the Anti-masons in 1832. Thaddeus Stevens, who led the House of Representatives and furnished means for the war, had refused to plead cases before a Masonic judge, where the other party were Masons. The great war secretary, Stanton, we have reason to believe, was an Anti-mason; and the great Lincoln's life was opposed to the lodge. What but the hand of Infinite Wisdom brought all these stars into conjunction in that administration charged with the fate of nations? To compare Mr. Seward with President Lincoln would be invidious. If meekness be greatness, Mr. Lincoln stands apart like a column in a desert at noon, without a shadow; and as he received his apotheosis by the hand of assassination, it seems sacrilege to class him again with mortals. But the clear, calm shining of Mr. Seward, from youth, through manhood to old age, and around the globe, encircled by a fame surpassed by that of few Americans; and in speaking of the constellation whose light led us through the night of the rebellion, it is no exaggeration to apply to him the words of Milton modified:

Hesperus that led
The starry host, rode brightest and Brought in the morn.

Both Seward and Lincoln were Christians. The first relates his experience in a letter to Thurlow Weed, in 1837, twenty-three years before he became Secretary of State; and when Lincoln was starting for Washington like a martyr to his stake, with a meekness as beautiful as rare, he said to his neighbors from the hind platform of the car, "I hope you will pray for me." Par noble fratrum! When the United States shall turn, as these two did, from the Christless altars of the lodge to the altar of Jehovah, we shall learn how Christ is Saviour of nations as well as men.

ILLINOIS FRIENDS are asked with special urgency to give attention to the call of their State Executive Committee for their annual donation to the State work. Under Bro. Arnold's method the larger part of his expenses are raised from his audiences, and he thus relieves the pockets of those from whom contributions have usually been expected. The committee finds, however, that they need some $65 per month to continue this work. They believe Bro. Arnold is doing a great work of instruction, and wish to continue him in the field till warm weather. Let your donations be sent early to the treasurer, W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

The Detroit Freemason illustrates the operation of the "Sunday-schools of Masonry" in the record of a Freemason of that city, who is honored with a portrait in its columns. He began when a small boy as "Cadet of Temperance," and was marked for his activity in that society. He finds the goal of his lodge ambition naturally in Masonry.

The Birmingham Free Press notices no less than eight appointments of Bro. Hawley, Iowa State lecturer, in that vicinity. Let all Iowa readers mark the request for payment of pledges. Bro. Hawley has been doing a grand work in that State. Rev. M. A. Gault writes that he never heard the lodge so clearly set over in opposition to the church by any speaker. The Free Press of the 6th inst. says: "There was a good audience and close attention to Mr. Hawley's lecture at Mt. Zion on last Thursday evening, and the people were so well pleased that they requested him to speak again, and appointed Wednesday evening, Jan. 5, at the same place for the lecture."

A letter from an esteemed pastor of Chicago to our General Agent, objects that the Cynosure should detract from the character of the late T. T. Gurney because of his devotion to Masonry. It is not the aim of this paper, in such cases, to detract from the character of men, but to hold up the example of men so deceived of Satan, in the humble hope that others may be aware of the danger and avoid it. We have published only what are believed to be facts respecting Mr. Gurney. Whose fault is it that they detract from his character, both as a man and a Christian? Dr. George's address clearly shows the inconsistency of Gurney's life.

The "Christmas day" sermon mentioned in Bro. Stoddard's Tennessee letter suggests a word of instruction. Was the birth of Christ any more the "only hope of a lost race," than his years of subjection to his parents, his baptism, his temptation, his teaching, his miracles? Just here should the objection to "Christmas" be urged by every believer. The Word of God always puts Christ himself as the hope of the race, and if any part of his life is therein especially noted it is his death. The cross is the center of Christian life according to God's Word, but in the world's bible it is his birth. Satan has cunningly set mankind, good, bad and all, to busily celebrating Christ's birth, as if this would atone for spurning the cross. It is but substituting a human device for the Word and will of God. Read President George's able address on the same practice in the lodge.

Our readers will be disappointed with the brevity of Mr. Pomeroy's article this week. The explanation is, that it is the concluding portion of a former paper which our columns were unable at the time to hold. Articles of this interesting series describing the condition of Washington city from the bombardment of Sumter to the meeting of Congress in July following; the reasons why the war was a "Slaveholder's Rebellion;" and on the work of the Knights of the Golden Circle, Blue Lodges, etc., for slavery, treason and rebellion, are already prepared. We regard these valuable historical articles as an event in the history of the Cynosure.

We ask for the address of President George that it be read and read again; and regret that it was impossible that all our readers could not have heard the masterly argument as it fell from his own lips at Knoxville. It is worth much to a reform to secure such a presentation of vital truth bearing on the relations of the Christian life to the devices of men in religion. On account of the difficulty of printing the whole address in one number the second part, which varies the subject somewhat, is reserved for a future number. The portion now printed should be placed before every pastor and every Mason in the land who holds to a double profession of religion in church and lodge. Will not all our readers aid the N. C. A. in accomplishing this work, by passing around their papers after they are read?

PERSONAL MENTION.

Bishop Milton Wright, who superintends the United Brethren churches of the Pacific Coast, is at his home in Dayton until early spring.

Mr. M. L. Knight, an esteemed citizen of Worcester, Mass., and a leading Prohibitionist and Anti-mason, is now in Chicago, expecting to locate in one of our fine suburban towns.

Bro. V. M. Peel, for several years an assistant in the offices of the Free Methodist and Cynosure and chairman of one of the ward Prohibition clubs of this city, has lately gone to southern California for his health.

Rev. M. A. Gault, the large-hearted and efficient secretary of the National Reform Association in the West, has removed, we learn, from Blanchard, Iowa to Kossuth, in the same State.

Editor Pritchard of the Christian Worker in this city and chairman of the committee on the national conference on the lodge has been seriously ill for several days.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

That human life is made up of startling contrasts is probably nowhere so often felt as at the capital of a great nation. On the last day of the old year, amid great pomp and display of official motoring, all that was mortal of one of the most prominent men in American public life, was laid away in the tomb. The following day was the most brilliant one of the Washington social season, and the gay world of fashion began its round of festivities.

At the beginning of this new year, it is more difficult than usual to let "the dead past bury its dead." Visions of the future will mingle with reflections of days that are gone. Death made an exceptional havoc among leading men in 1886, as is shown by the names of Hancock, Tilden, McClellan, Arthur, Hendricks and Logan.

At the funeral of General Logan, held in the Senate Chamber, were present men and women representing the highest and the lowliest people of the country. Of his comrades in arms Generals Sherman, Sheridan and Oglesby were prominent, with hundreds of others, soldiers of the real Grand Army of the Republic. Members and ex-members of both houses of Congress, with whom he had served many years, were there, among them the notable figures of Roscoe Conkling and William Evarts, while in front of these sat the members of the Supreme Court and the Cabinet officers. The chair provided for the President was vacant. He was anxious to be present, but the day was exceedingly inclement, and having been confined to the house for a week previous with another rheumatic attack, his physician advised him not to subject himself to the drafts that are so prevalent in the Capitol building.

No great political measures have been consumed during 1886 except that which deals with the Indian question, but others have been inaugurated, and it yet remains to be seen what shall become of a protective tariff, a currency agitation, the Blair Educational bill, and further developments of civil service reform. But while the region of practical politics have been comparatively barren, movements are on foot which are rapidly forming opinion in one direction or the other for serious legislation in the future.

There are, as yet, no coast defenses, and no navy. And will there ever be, and have we any real need for either? That is the question. Is it not possible that the principles of Henry George, which have taken root in some quarters, and which will have to be reckoned with in any thorough scheme of social re-adjustment, will also have a hearing upon the naval question? He says the American Republic has no more need for its burlesque of a navy than a peaceable giant would have for a stuffed club or a tin sword. It is only maintained for the sake of the officers and the naval rings. In peace it is only a source of expense and corruption; in war it would be useless. We are too strong for any foreign power to wantonly attack; we ought to be too great to wantonly attack others. If war should ever be forced upon us, we could safely rely on science and invention, which are already superseding navies faster than they can be built. So with our army. All we need, if we even now need that, is a small force of frontier policemen such as is maintained in Canada and Australia. Standing navies and armies are inimical to the genius of democracy, and it ought to be our pride as it is our duty to show to the world that a great republic can dispense with both; and in organization as in principle both our army and navy are repugnant to the democratic idea. In both we maintain that distinction between commissioned officers and common soldiers and sailors which arose in Europe when the nobility who furnished the one were considered a superior race to the serfs and peasants who supplied the other. The whole system is an insult to democracy, and ought to be swept away. Our diplomatic system, too, is servilely copied from the usage of kings before the ocean steamer and the telegraph were invented. It serves no purpose save to reward politicians and occasionally to demoralize a poet. To abolish it would save expense, corruption, and national dignity. *

SPECIAL LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5, 1887.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—After an absence of four months, in which I had labored in nine different States, it was a great pleasure to again greet family and friends, and to see Washington in its mid-winter excitements. Congress re-assembled yesterday, and after a little business went through the formality of announcing the death of Senator Logan, and adjourning out of respect for his memory.

This custom, which might have been quite appropriate when our Congress was a much smaller body and was far less encumbered with pressing demands on its time, has grown to be a mere perfunctory display, with little meaning and less utility. The resignation of Mr. Hewitt, and the return of Mr. Cox to Democratic leadership in the House, makes it probable that there will be at least one more effort at tariff legislation, and that the repeated recommendations of the present and previous administrations will be heeded; and it now seems probable that this short session will be one of much greater value to the country than the long one that preceded it. The majority of the House were fairly frightened by the result of the last fall's elections, and are hastening to atone for their delinquencies.

Among the benevolent undertakings of the indefatigable W. C. T. U. is a "Hope and Help Home" for fallen women, at 405 14th street, N. W. A three-story brick house is neatly furnished, and placed under the care of Mrs. H. C. Cunningham, whose devotedness and experience in a similar work in Galesburg, Ill., is a guarantee of success. Scarcely had the rooms been opened, before a poor woman came for hope and help, and found them. There is probably no other charity more needful or deserving of the co-operation of all Christian men and women.

Yesterday I visited Wayland Seminary, in this city, the flourishing school for colored youth under the patronage of the Baptist denomination. Pres. King received me most kindly, and it was arranged that an address should be given to the students in the near future, on the secret lodge system. I expect soon to leave for Virginia and the Carolinas.

H. H. HINMAN.

At Lucknow, where so many were murdered during the Sepoy rebellion thirty years ago, two thousand children, nearly all of Hindu Mohammedan parentage, recently marched in a Sunday-school procession.

THE HOME.

FISHING NETS.

Launch out into the deep,

The awful depths of a world's despair,
Hearts that are breaking and eyes that weep,
Sorrow and ruin and death are there.
And the sea is wide and the pitiless tide
Bears on its bosom away—away,
Beauty and youth in relentless rush
To its dark abyss for aye—for aye.

But the Master's voice comes over the sea,
"Let down your nets for a draught" for me!
He stands in our midst on our wreck-strewn strand,
And sweet and royal is his command.

His pleading call

Is to each—to all;

And wherever the royal call is heard,
There hang the nets of the royal Word!
Trust to the nets and not to your skill,
Trust to the royal Master's will!

Let down your nets each day, each hour,
For the word of a King is a word of power,
And the King's own voice comes over the sea,
"Let down your nets for a draught" for me!

—Sunday Magazine.

THE EARLY EVANGELIZATION OF THE GLOBE.

I want you to know, first, the unoccupied territories; and then the perfect feasibility of reaching the whole world before the year 1900. Look at the unoccupied fields. I am not speaking of the fact that there is only one missionary laborer to every 60,000 of the heathen, but looking at the wholly unoccupied territory. Here, for instance, is Kurdistan with 3,000,000. Here is Afghanistan with 8,000,000 of people. Here is Anam with 20,000,000. There are large tracts in Africa—Senegambia with 50,000,000 of people, and nearly the whole Congo basin. Here are Thibet and Mongolia and Arabia—virtually untouched by Christian missions. To give you an example: In 1881, Stevenson, the Stanley of China—connected with the China Inland Mission—traveled 1,078 miles, from Bhamo, in Upper Burmah, to Chung-Xing, in the province of Chuen. He didn't find one single missionary station; and if he had carried with him a scythe that would cut a swathe a thousand miles broad, there wouldn't have been but one missionary station—the one at Kwei Yung—in that belt of territory a thousand miles in breadth and length. That territory was crowded with hundreds of millions of unsaved souls, and he never met a man who had heard the Gospel. When Stanley went from Stanley Falls across the continent to the rapids of the Congo, through the heart of equatorial Africa, he didn't see on his way one single man that was a Christian, or had ever seen or heard a Christian missionary. And here we are singing about the Gospel, and praying about the Gospel, and talking about the Gospel, when we ought to get up off our faces and hear God speaking to the children of Israel—"Go forward!"

Now, this can be done. I have intimated that we can give the Gospel to every single soul on the face of the earth before the year 1900. People will laugh at the suggestion. An English preacher once said to a soldier who was accustomed to go forward at the risk of his life, and go promptly: "My good fellow, if Queen Victoria should issue a command to her soldiers to carry a decree to every portion of the known world, about how long would it take to do it?" After some calculation he said: "I reckon we could do it in about eighteen months." There is no question that if we had a human imperial authority, we could and promulgate this Gospel decree all through the world. And yet we stand still when the King of kings is saying to us: "Go into the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." I say it can be done. Now, look at a few facts. Remember that we are not responsible for the conversion of men, but only for contact between the Gospel and them. We cannot convert a single soul, but we can secure contact between the Gospel and that soul. It is counted that there are 100,000,000 Protestants. Of course many of them, ritualists, formalists, etc., are good for nothing. Suppose there are 10,000,000 consecrated souls. Suppose each one of these earns five hundred dollars a year. There you have $5,000,000,000. Now, do you notice, the one-hundredth part of that sum is $50,000,000; which, therefore, is the one-hundredth part of the aggregate income of these 10,000,000 Christians. Suppose they all gave one penny a day. That would amount to $36,500,000 every year. One penny a day from the ten millions of Protestant Christians?—and they but a tenth of the nominal membership of the Protestant community. Do you know what seven men did?

GO AROUND THE GLOBE IN A YEAR

About fifty years ago, in the year 1835, seven shoemakers in the city of Hamburg, said: "By the grace of God we will give the Gospel to the people immediately around us." In twenty-five years they had established 50 churches, with 10,000 converts; they had distributed 40,000 copies of the Word of God, and 8,000,000 pages of tracts; and they had brought the Gospel to fifty millions of human beings, nearly as many as the population of the United States. All this by seven shoemakers!—not one learned man among them. Suppose those seven men had commenced this work in the unoccupied Congo basin, knowing the language; within twenty-five years they would have brought the Gospel to every single soul in the Congo Free State. Why, we don't know but 150 such shoemakers could have brought the Gospel to a thousand millions of human beings inside of twenty-five years. Do you admire those men? You can do the same yourself. The old monks of the Middle Ages used to go up and down singing, Laborare est orare: To work is to worship, to work is to worship. So to-day let us chant, in a consecrated Laborare est orare: To work for Christ is the highest form of worship.—A. T. Pierson.

OBSTACLES TO THE CONVERSION OF THE HEATHEN.

Few of our people at home know of the obstacles that lie in the way of the missionary in his attempts to convert the heathen. It is not simply drawing them away from their powerful system of idolatry, and getting them to look at the crucified One. There are influences issuing from Christian lands, and professedly Christian men, that are quite as great hindrances as their previous system of ignorance and idolatry.

Opium, though cultivated and prepared in India, is wholly under the control of Christian England. The heathen know that it is one of the worst enemies of the human race, and they know equally well that it is not only manufactured and sold by men who profess the Christian religion, but that the profits of the trade go to enrich them.

Christian whisky stands at a premium in all heathen lands. England and America are estimated as good countries in proportion as they supply the demand for strong drink. Not unfrequently is a ship seen anchored in one of the great rivers of the East, with the American flag floating at the mast-head, loaded with hundreds of barrels of Cincinnati whisky. This is to be scattered all over the country to do its work of death and block the way of the missionary. The imports into the Congo country during the year 1885 were twenty-two millions of dollars, of which one half was rum from Christian countries. At the Berlin Conference, composed of representatives from nearly all the Christian powers, when the new Congo Free State Constitution was formed, Mr. Stanley used all his influence to prevent the importation of strong drink or spirituous liquors, but was overruled by a majority of the representatives; and so the death-dealing flood is permitted to enter and do its blighting work.

But there is another hindrance, working even more disastrously to vital godliness, in the form of false Christianity. The heathen generally consider all white men Christians, and all who preach Christ or Christianity as missionaries of equal authority. The French Catholic priests take advantage of this, and profess to convert thousands of heathen whose minds are unenlightened and whose lives are not reformed. A missionary writing from Burmah, September 4th, 1886, says:

These French Roman Catholic missionaries are a class of men who have great facility in baptizing (as they call their sprinkling ceremony). A man (Karen) with a lawsuit pending goes to the priest for help. "Yes, if you will come into my religion." The man will consent to anything for the sake of help; so the priest goes to the man's house and baptizes the man, his wife and five children, the old grandmother and young unmarried sister. To make the case stronger the brother, next door, says he will come in, too. So the priest steps over and baptizes the brother, his wife and two of his children—the third, a boy, runs off and hides in the jungle to escape the ceremony. Thirteen in that batch. The priest does what he can for the case in court. Perhaps the man gains his lawsuit and perhaps he doesn't. A cattle thief is detected and wants a powerful friend in court; and his near relatives are anxious to save him from deserved punishment. So the priest gets a chance to baptize three families. In spite of all the priest can do the cattle-thief falls into jail; but the priest is able to report twenty baptisms, all the same.

From these statements it can readily be seen that missionaries have obstacles to contend with aside from those that are indigenous to heathenism.—Rev. Thomas Allen in Journal and Messenger.

"LET US GO UP AND POSSESS THE LAND."

The Christian church begins to recognize the binding force of the last words of Jesus: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature;" begins to believe his promise: "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world." The church also begins to believe in the absolute truth of her Lord's statement: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth," and so begins to take courage in the assurance that the divine government of the universe is carried on in the interest of "the kingdom of heaven" that the Redeemer came to establish in the hearts of men.

Woe to the church that does not truly love men! Woe to the church that fails to do Christ's work at such a time as this that preserves its orthodoxies and respectabilities and "traditions of the leaders," seeking strenuously to get itself to heaven along with its neighbors and the people of its own language and race, leaving the world, so far as its purpose and effort and outlay are concerned, to be damned. Such a church deserves to die, will die, is already dead. And it will be "plucked up by the roots" for the good of men and the glory of God.

It is time for the Christian church to "move in force;" there has been enough romancing about missions and playing at missions. Long time good people prayed that "God would open the doors of the heathen world." He has taken them off their hinges; the whole world lies open. God's John-the-Baptist work of "going before and preparing the way" has been done. To the Christian nations God has given the scepter of the earth; they hold the sword; theirs is the purse; in them is the aggressive, conquering, transforming energy of our times. The heathen have all the needs; Christian nations have all the supplies. Where we give pennies we should give dollars; where tens, hundreds; where hundreds, thousands; where thousands, millions. Where the church sends small reconnoitering bands to spy out the lands that "sit in darkness and in the shadow of death," she should send armies to "occupy" till Christ comes again.—Rev. A. G. Haygood, D. D.

THE LAW OF LOVE.

Four forth the oil—pour boldly forth,
It will not fail until Thou fallest vessels to provide
Which it may largely fill.

Make channels for the stream of love,
Where they may broadly run;
And love has overflowing streams
To fill them every one.

But if at any time we cease
Such channels to provide,
The very fountains of love for us
Will soon be parched and dried.

For we must share if we would keep
That blessing from above—
Ceasing to give, we cease to have—
Such is the laws of love.

—Richard Chenevix Trench.

BRAVE AGNES.

There are but few boys and girls who do not welcome a snow-storm with glad anticipations of the sport it will bring; but at the same time we must remember that these soft white flakes are often pitiless and have brought danger and anxiety to many a one, as well as little Agnes Green, the heroine of this story.

One bright winter morning nearly eighty years ago, George Green and his wife set out from home to attend a sale some six miles distant, leaving their house and six children in charge of the oldest sister, Agnes, herself a child of nine. It was a lonely spot, this cottage of Blentarn Ghyll, as it was called, situated on a narrow gorge in the Westmoreland mountains of England, miles from house or neighbor. But Agnes was a very steady and careful child, and saw father and mother out of sight without any thought of fear.

The day passed pleasantly, but as it drew towards night the dense settling mist and the heavy sighing in the air told of an approaching storm, and the children watched eagerly from the windows for a glimpse of their home-coming parents. But the fog closed thick around them, the snow began to fall, and the fast gathering darkness shut them in. Agnes gave the children their supper of oatmeal porridge and milk, and then they sat around the fire waiting, and fancying that every sound was caused by the eagerly expected steps. Still the clock struck hour after hour, and the snow fell faster and faster, drifting through the crevices of door and windows. Agnes, though her own heart was heavy with a nameless dread, tried to cheer up the rest. She put the twin babies to sleep in their cradle, and with the others, two boys and a girl named Catherine, sat by the peat fire till the clock struck twelve, when, after repeating their prayers, they went to bed.

The morning brought no father or mother—only the thickly falling snow drifting around and blocking them in. Agnes still kept up hope for them all. Their parents might, she urged, have taken shelter from the storm in some sheepfold, or the storm might have prevented their starting; at any rate they were sure to come that day. So struggling bravely against the desolate loneliness of her situation, she dressed the others, heard them say their prayers, and then gave them breakfast; then with a strange womanly thoughtfulness for such a little creature, went about the household duties, wound up the clock, scalded the remaining milk to prevent its souring, and finding that the meal in the chest was getting low, she put all but the babies on short allowance, eking out the porridge with a few flour cakes baked on the hearth. Then, fearing that the snow would block up the way to the peat stack, she and the little boys brought in enough fuel to last for a week; after which she made her way to the barn to feed and milk the cow, she and the boys with their childish strength, and in almost terror at the growing darkness, pulling down from the loft hay enough for her feed and bed.

After that it was supper time again, and then the motherly child undressed the twins and found voice to sing them to sleep, and gathering with the others around the fire, listened again hour after hour for some sound of the absent ones. Still the storm raged without, so fiercely that the wreathes hissing down the chimney would almost put out the fire.

Another midnight came and no parents, no help. Another morning. Agnes woke only to find the snow falling thicker than ever, and her hope failing. Surely her fond mother, her brave soldier father, a noted climber, would have made their way to them, had not something terrible prevented. So another lonely day passed more desolate than the others. Agnes, as she told afterwards, managed to get through it by keeping her little flock together on the hearthstone, and making them say their prayers aloud by turns. Poor children! it was well that they had been taught to trust in the protecting care of a heavenly Father, or else how could they have borne the terrible time of fear and suspense?

The next morning the storm was over, and though Agnes, because of a broken bridge, did not dare to take the road to Grasmere, the nearest settlement, she knew that she could follow a low stone wall which was exposed to the sweeping winds, and which by a circuit would lead her to the place. So, making the children as comfortable as possible, Agnes set out, the little boys going a short distance with her to help her through some stone walls. The way, however, was long and unsafe for small children, and sending them back she made her journey alone over the vast slopes of snow, to the nearest house in Grasmere.

When she asked for news of her father and mother she was met with looks of dismay, and the answer, that though they had been urged not to attempt the dangerous path in the storm, they had started for home the evening of the auction. In half an hour the news that George and Sarah Green were missing, had spread through the village, and sixty men had gathered for the search. Day by day the search continued, and at last, on the fifth, far away from the path, on the verge of a precipice, Sarah Green was found dead. At the foot of the rocks lay her husband, who had evidently been killed by the fall. The poor children received their parents they had so watched for, but those parents were speechless for their comfort and deaf to their sorrow.

The heroism of Agnes (and I think we all will admit that she was a true little heroine), won for them many friends. All the people of the neighborhood were eager to adopt the little orphans, and doubtless you will be glad to know that the twins were kept together, while Catherine was taken by the family of the poet Wordsworth, and Agnes and her little brothers found comfortable homes among their parents' relatives. As the pathetic story spread beyond the village, many subscriptions of aid were offered, and Queen Charlotte and her daughters, touched by Agnes's courageous spirit and tender motherliness, sent the orphans a handsome donation. Amid all the friends and blessings which came to her in later years, we doubt if Agnes ever saw the falling snow without going back in memory to the days of that long and anxious watch through the storm in the cottage of Blentarn Ghyll.—Ella Thomas.

—George W. Morrison, a graduate of Monmouth College, son of Rev. Marion Morrison, has decided to enter the foreign mission work as soon as his course in Xenia Theological Seminary has been completed.

TEMPERANCE

"MONEYS FOR DE BREACHIN'."

It was election day. A minister of the Gospel and a German brewer met at the polls.

Brewer. Vell, minister, I suppose you votes mit dem venatics, vot tinks beer an awful poison?

Minister. Oh, no! I guess not. I vote the same ticket you do.

B. Vot! I votes for beer and men who helps me in mine business. Let me see your dicket. Vell, now, ish not dat gude? You breach and you bray all the year against my business, but ven you comes to vote, you vote just like me and all the saloon-mens. Does you know dat ven dem vimens vas round to get moneys, I vas just so mat; I gives no moneys to de man vot interferes mit mine business; but now, I sees you did not mean anythings by de breachin' and de brayin'. You do it just to please dem vimens and fools vot say me shall make no more beer. Vell, just as long as you votes right you may breach and bray, 'cause dem who drinks mine beer no hear you, and he drinks just so much as if you no breach. Here, I now gives you ten dollar, and I gives you the same every year just as long as you votes mit me.

M. Oh, no! I could not take that. It would be selling my vote—which would not be right, you know.

B. Oh, vell; I sees. I no gives you de moneys for de vote, but for de breachin' and de brayin', ven you means notthings by it. Now, give me your dicket, and I gives you mine, and we go out and put dem in de box; and I tells de beples you votes just like me, and I votes just like you; and de next time dem vimens comes round dey gets lots of moneys for de breachin' and de brayin'.—Anon.

CONVERTED WHILE INTOXICATED.

EXPERIENCE OF SETH E. DOXEY.

My life has been one of sin. Being now 33 years of age, I have spent many years in the service of the devil. I served him faithfully, even from my youth up, and when but a mere boy I was accustomed to help myself to the contents of my father's bottle. Although at first the liquor was not hard to master, yet I became accustomed to it, loved it, until finally it mastered me. I had an abundance of friends, who were jolly friends so long as my money lasted, but such friends are no friends at all. At 19 years of age I obtained a good position in the employ of the C. & N. W. R. R., and for three years tried to carry myself steady, but finally lost my position on account of drink. I "swore off," but alas for human will power! I found myself back to my cups in a few months. Although now earning good wages as a moulder in a foundry, I found that whisky had a tight hold on me and that I was a first-class drunken bummer. I thought if I could but get away from the surroundings and go where I would not be apt to find liquor, I would be all right; and as I learned that in Kansas no liquor was sold, I started for the Prohibition State. After I had been there a few weeks, I went to town one day and while there overheard a man say that if a man was thirsty he could get a drink in such a store by telling a lie, and as I was very thirsty I concluded to try and get a drink, for a man who will drink whisky will lie to get it. I found the place, went in, and told the man I was sick and understood that the proper remedy could be obtained from him. After asking me a few questions (while looking sharply at me), he gave me what I wanted. I found that a thirsty man could get whisky even in Kansas in the above manner. Finally I returned home.

During all this time the Spirit of God strove with me, and at times I was almost persuaded to yield, but determined first to stop drinking. I believed that nothing but help from God could ever keep me from a drunkard's grave. A Good Templar's lodge was formed here, and I was the first to sign the roll as a member; surrounded by helping friends, and backed by my oath and obligation I could now triumph over my enemy and become a man. But alas for my bright hopes! my good resolutions were no barrier and I broke through only to plunge into debauchery worse than ever; my friends plead with me, but it was no use; I was lost. Ah! friends, my life would fill a volume. I have literally lived out "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." I had sunken far down into the depths, a poor, miserable, bloated, bleary-eyed drunkard; a disgrace to my family and the community in which I lived. Again I lost my position, no friends, no work, no money, no peace, no happiness, no God. Oh! wretched man that I was, who should deliver me from this awful bondage? While reeling home from my last drunk, a voice spoke to me and stopped me on the very verge of delirium tremens and the grave.

"I listened and lo! 'twas the Saviour,
That was speaking so kind unto me;
I cried, 'T'm the chiefest of sinners,
Canst thou save a poor drunkard like me?'"

Out of the depths I cried to Him who alone could help and save. I promised God I would seek him when I got over this spree, but the voice spoke louder "Now is the accepted time," "I will not always strive with man." Now or never has the thought uppermost in my mind; so I sent for Bro. F. E. Hall, the minister, to come and pray for me. Remember, friends, I was at this time so drunk I could scarcely talk; he prayed for me and asked me to pray, but I could not make out much. I promised him I would go to the church that night (a protracted meeting was then in progress) and seek the Lord. I was getting ready to go when one of my Good Templar friends came and wanted me to go to the lodge; but I refused, and told him I was going to the church and get saved for I knew the lodge could not help me. He encouraged me to go and get saved and said he would go with me. Soon I found myself in the church. Just before the minister commenced to preach I arose in my seat and began to speak. All eyes were upon me; a man staggering drunk and with a thick tongue makes a poor job out of speaking, but I managed to tell them of my resolution, that I had drank my last glass with the boys (many of whom were present), that there was no hope for me but in God, and that I had come there to get saved. When the invitation was given Bro. Hall led me to the altar. I was then so drunk that I could scarcely utter two sentences in prayer; but with an earnest heart I prayed mightily to God, and he delivered me. Praise his name! I arose a sober man, my tongue was loosed, my head was clear, my heart rejoiced, my load was gone. I stood before the congregation a changed man; the people saw it and wondered; strong men wept; the worst drunkard in the place, Seth Doxey, had been converted while drunk, and stood before them a sober and saved man. It was truly a miracle; many said "we never saw it on this wise before." Upon the invitation of Bro. Hall, all of my old chums came forward and shook my hand, thereby pledging themselves to never tempt me nor put a straw in my way; and, be it said to their credit, they never have. With eyes full of tears, they, with trembling hands and voice full of emotion, said, "God bless you, Seth, stick to it;" and I have. Glory be to God! A poor, miserable drunkard set free, delivered from the appetite even, for from that time I have not had the least desire for liquor, but abhor it.

Upon withdrawing from the Good Templars' lodge I sent in the following paper, which was listened to with profound interest:

To the Worthy Good Templars:

Having become convinced that in my own individual case, the moral influence of the lodge could not save me from the fearful appetite which had complete mastery over me, I have taken my case to a higher power, to Him who has said "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." God in his infinite love and mercy has not only saved me from my sins and cups, but has removed the appetite from me so that liquor has now no hold upon me; and instead of a love for the destroyer I now have an abhorrence. Friends, it is God who has done this wonderful work for me. You know well my former condition; you see me now a saved man in Christ Jesus. I have resolved that my life shall be devoted to him who has so wonderfully delivered me from the curse of rum; and believing that Christian associations will aid me more in an upright Christian life than anything else, I hereby request an honorable dismissal from this lodge. In doing this I fully realize the step which I am taking. I am heart and hand with you in the temperance work, and shall do all in my power, God helping me, to assist others to a life of sobriety, Christianity and virtue. Trusting you will unanimously grant my earnest request, I remain

Yours, saved in Jesus, S. E. DOXEY.

It is now about one year since God saved me, and it has truly been a blessed year. I do not feel like the same man, a new man in Christ Jesus. I write this (somewhat lengthy I know, but for which I trust you will pardon me) hoping it may be the means of leading some poor despairing drunkard to cast his burden upon Christ, for he will save others, as he has me.—Free Methodist.

Twenty-five years ago there was but one representative of total abstinence in the British House of Commons, now there are over forty.

A law has been passed, and is vigorously enforced in Copenhagen, by which every man leaving a wine-shop drunk, is conducted back to the tavern in a vehicle at the expense of the wine merchant who allowed him to get drunk on his premises.

(Continued from 5th page.)

riously disturbed. Conspicuous among the disturbers of the peace was a young man who, two years ago, so shamefully disturbed a religious meeting that he fled from the State for fear of arrest. His behavior in Kansas was such that it was desirable to change his residence again, and now he is back in Iowa, and was present at the Union Chapel to champion the lodge. Then there were a couple of young men who belong to a Masonic family of avowed infidels. Of course they could not appreciate my defence of Christianity against the infidelity of the lodge system. The more I exalted Christ, and exposed Masonry as a system of organized infidelity, the more their zeal was inflamed for Masonry, for they were infidels.

Do I hear some one ask, were those disturbers of the peace Masons? It was not the scribes and Pharisees who disturbed Paul's meetings. They simply stirred up "certain lewd fellows of the baser sort" to do that dirty work for them. This rowdy element so disgusted decent people that night, that some young ladies wished, for the time being, they were men, that they might thrash them. The droll-est of it all was that among the roughs were a couple of fellows who got the mistaken idea that the W. C. T. U. was going to give them a temperance lecture, and they came intoxicated, so that as valiant knights of the still and saloon they might fight the Christian women. It is thought that their brains were so cooked over the fires of the still that they did not perceive their mistake, and so went in with the outlaw and the infidels to interrupt me in my defense of the Gospel.

I have now lectured a whole year in Iowa, and this is the first time any serious disturbance has occurred. Only in one instance has any disturbance been made before, that I recollect, and that was by a Catholic Irishman, who, being, as I think, somewhat intoxicated, felt nettled by the fact that I exalted Jesus as the one mediator between God and men, and so prejudiced the Romish claim for the Virgin Mary. I thought Pat was to have the bad pre-eminence of being the sole disturber; but the roughs who gathered at Union Chapel so far eclipsed him that they stand alone in their shame, covered with the contempt and scorn of honest, law-abiding people.

Nothing daunted by these adversaries, I go forward, preaching and defending the Gospel, assured that Christ will reign until all enemies are put under his feet.

The Holy Ghost has spoken. The prophets have voiced his word. The stone cut out without hands will become a great mountain and fill the whole earth. The effort of Satan to steal a march upon Christianity, and substitute a compound of ancient heathenism and modern infidelity for the Gospel of Christ, and through the secret lodge system impose it upon mankind, and make it the universal religion of mankind cannot succeed. The blindness, that in part has happened to Israel, must give place to the light of truth. The craftiness of Satan is becoming manifest.

Soon the churches will awake to the fact that a man cannot worship devils in the lodge, and be a true worshiper of God in the church. Men will have to choose between the Baal worship of the lodge and the worship of Christ in the church. Then when the lines are drawn, the lodge as well as the saloon must go. Yours, for the triumph of Christ,

C. F. HAWLEY.

LITERATURE.

HOURS WITH THE BIBLE, or The Scriptures in the Light of Modern Discovery and Knowledge. From Samson to Solomon. By Cunningham Giekie, D. D. Pp. 288. John B. Alden, New York.

The third volume of this beautiful series takes up the portion of Jewish history from Samson through the reign of Saul, the triumphs and weaknesses of David, and closes with the magnificence of Solomon. This is perhaps the most interesting portion of that history, as it is not so far removed from our ordinary life as the times of the exodus and the conquest, or of the civil wars and the captivity. Nearly one-half the volume is taken up with the life of David, the hero, king, prophet and psalmist, as would be expected, and we have a remarkable history of his conquests, his administration, his devotion, his faith, his sin. Of this wonderful character Carlyle has written: "What are faults? what are the outward details of a life, if the inner secret of it, the remorse, temptations, true, often baffled, never-ended struggle of it be forgotten? 'It is not in man that walketh to direct his steps.' Of all acts, is not, for a man, repentance most divine? . . . David's life and history as written for us in these Psalms of his, I consider to be the truest emblem ever given of a man's moral progress and warfare here below." Dr. Giekie's work is the most entertaining and instructive Bible history probably ever written, and it is a work of great public spirit to place it within reach of all as is done in this edition.

THOSE SEVEN YEARS; or, The Story of the "Friendly Letter Mission." By V. M. Skinner. Pp. 232. S. W. Partridge & Co., London, England.

This volume, with its tastefully illuminated cover, is a record of the work of an "elect lady," one of those saints who have a mission from God himself without the interposition of human hands. Many years ago Miss Skinner began her efforts for the lifting up of the wretched by putting up texts in public houses and visiting the poor. She began after a little to publish, as tracts, letters to the keepers of these houses; then to policemen, cabmen, railway men, etc., until the number has reached twenty-nine. The story of this work is told very largely in extracts from letters written after reading these tracts, and are a touching tribute to the life of self-denial for the sake of others, of which Miss Skinner is a happy example. This volume may be had of Miss Skinner, No. 5, St. James's Square, Bath, England, price 50 cts.

ALDEN'S CYCLOPEDIA OF UNIVERSAL LITERATURE. Vol. V. Pp. 479. John B. Alden, New York.

This volume takes us on in the world of letters from Mary V. C. Clarke, an English lady of this century, to Cyprian the Roman father, who died A. D. 258. The purpose of the publisher is being admirably maintained in giving well-chosen selections from every considerable writer in the English language, or whose works have been translated. This work will be of peculiar value to American readers as it includes many names who never had an ambition to figure in such a collection. A former volume devotes some space to Dr. Geo. B. Cheever and to his brother, our Worcester contributor, Rev. Henry T. Cheever. In this, Henry Clay and his son Cassius; S. S. (Sunset) Cox, the witty New York Congressman; and Dr. Howard Crosby are among the American names honored with a place.

The great work now undertaken by the Century in the Life of Lincoln is evidently appreciated by hundreds of thousands of intelligent readers. A veteran New York publisher predicts that the permanent edition of the magazine will go beyond 300,000 before the completion of the Lincoln history. The January installment, treats of Lincoln's settlement in Springfield; his practice of law in that city; the Harrison campaign; Lincoln's marriage; his friendship with the Speeds of Kentucky; the Shields duel; and the campaign of 1844; and Lincoln's devotion to Henry Clay. A sketch entitled "George Bancroft—in Society, in Politics, in Letters," is contributed by Professor William M. Sloane, editor of the Princeton Review, formerly Mr. Bancroft's private secretary at Berlin. This paper is the first authoritative biography yet written of a man of the most interesting character and career. Of course Prof. Sloane does not mention some particulars of Bancroft's life which his sainted father, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, would hardly fail to have recalled, that is, the craven spirit shown by the great historian toward the slave power, changing later editions of his history at the beck of that infamy. Following his paper on the Food Question, in the December number, Mr. Edward Atkinson contributes another on "The Relative Strength and Weakness of Nations," being the first of "Two Studies in the Application of Statistics to Social Science." The article is a rich storehouse of facts which are set before the reader in a manner easily to be grasped, by means of graphic diagrams. Among the far reaching and suggestive conclusions of Mr. Atkinson's paper, one of the most striking is that, in the face of the competition of a free people, having such a record of material prosperity, European nations must "disarm or starve." "Comets and Meteors," is the first paper in the "New Astronomy" series, by Professor S. P. Langley.

The January number of the English Illustrated Magazine contains the first of a series of illustrated papers, by the author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," descriptive of a recent visit to Ireland, entitled, "An Unknown Country." Among the other articles are "The Daughters of George III., by Mr. W. Outram Tristram, with quaint illustrations of the dress of the royal girls; and a series of illustrations to Fouque's "Undine," by Mr. Heywood Sumner, with a finely conceived article on the romance by Miss Julia Cartwright.

Vick's Magazine for January is combined with the usual and handsome annual. Among the noticeable articles are: "Training and Pruning Vines;" "How Shall I Plant my Grounds?" "The Hollyhock," by Eben E. Rexford; and Prize essays on "Asparagus" and "Forcing Radishes."

The Brooklyn Magazine issues a fine "Talmage Daily Calendar" for 1887. The design of the board was made by Mr. George R. Halm, the portrait of Dr. Talmage by Sarony, of New York. Upon the daily stub is a characteristic selection from Dr. Talmage compiled by Edward W. Bok. Price 50c.

The February number of Scribner's Magazine, of which 125,000 copies have been ordered as a first edition, will contain a most interesting article, by Mr. John C. Ropes, upon the "Likenesses of Julius Cæsar," with 18 portraits, one of which, engraved by Mr. W. B. Closson, will be the frontispiece of the number.

The St. Nicholas New Year's number is prodigal of pictures, but there are only a few of the articles which are of any value for young readers. Among them are the story of Jean Francis Millet, the great French painter, and his sketches for children, and "A Glimpse of Eton School," the first of which is very finely illustrated.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—D. W. Potter, a Chicago evangelist, held a series of meetings at Elkhorn, Wis., which resulted in over 100 conversions. He is now laboring in East Saginaw, Mich., in union meetings.

—Samuel Small, the Georgia revivalist, is in Nashville making arrangements to assume the duties of Commissioner of Education for the colored race of the South, under the auspices of the Southern Methodist General Conference.

—Union meetings are conducted by the pastors of the First Presbyterian and M. E. churches, at Gibson, Ill. There has been no excitement, but a deep moving of the Holy Spirit, resulting in the serious determination on the part of many to seek the Lord. In nearly all the towns around gracious revivals are now in progress. In a large portion of three counties there is a great turning to the Lord. In Saybrook, McLean county, nearly one hundred persons have turned to the Lord. Sibley, Ford county, Rossville, Vermillion county, and Mansfield, Champaign county, are all centres of deep religious interest, and hundreds are turning their attention to the one thing needful.

—Under the auspices of the New York and Brooklyn Association of Congregational churches special exercises were held in Plymouth church, Brooklyn, to commemorate the sixtieth anniversary of the installation of the Rev. Dr. Edward Beecher in the Park Street church, Boston. Dr. Beecher is considerably over eighty years of age, and is in vigorous health. Addresses were made by Dr. Beecher, Dr. Lyman Abbott, the Rev. William Lloyd and others.

—Bishop Glosbrenner, of the United Brethren church, is dead. He was an aged man and the senior bishop of the church. His effort to get the lodge into the church, along with Bishop Weaver and others will forever tarnish his earthly memory.

—Mr. Moody held meetings every evening all last week in the First Congregational church. They will be continued in the same place this week.

—The Presbyterian Board of Home Missions recently stated that it was two hundred thousand dollars in debt!

—The members of the sessions of the Presbyterian churches in Peoria, Ill., invite the sessions and members of other churches in that presbytery to meet with them in the First church, Peoria, on Tuesday, the 11th inst. The object of the convention is to pray for the presence of the Holy Spirit in their churches and in the hearts of the people, and for the conversion of those without God and without hope.

—A few months ago the deacons of the Tabernacle in London, in examining the records, found that Mr. Spurgeon has received during his ministry there, as new converts, (not including those from other churches) 10,809.

—Hon. Robert Lincoln, late Secretary of War, was elected a trustee of the Second Presbyterian church of this city at its annual meeting.

—Watch-night religious service was held on New Year's Eve in Chicago, in the First Congregational, Immanuel Baptist, Wabash Avenue Methodist, and in the Chicago Avenue churches. Mr. Moody was present and took part in the meetings at the Chicago Avenue and First Congregational churches. In the former church, in the forenoon of last Sabbath, he preached to a large audience, and in the latter he addressed in the afternoon, the women, and in the evening preached to a great throng of both sexes. He is continuing these meetings in the First Congregational and other churches of the West Side.

—Rev. Henry M. Scudder, D. D., the esteemed pastor of the Plymouth Congregational church, this city, has given notice that, on account of ill-health, he desires to be released from its pastoral office, and requests that steps be taken to secure his successor. On Sabbath, 26th ult., his theme was "Christ's Second Coming." In answer to the question, "Will it be premillennial and personal?" he answered: "I think that the Scriptures teach, in the most explicit manner, that Christ will come before the millennium," and that his coming will be a personal coming.

—A conference between committees appointed by the Northern and Southern Presbyterian General Assemblies to arrange for a commemoration of the centennial anniversary of the Presbyterian General Assembly in 1888, was held in Baltimore on the 22d ult. A number of noted ministers and laymen of both churches were present. Arrangements were made for completing a programme,

BUSINESS.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Jan. 3 to Jan. 8 inclusive:

D Kerns, E S Rice, J J Thompson, J P Kerlin, C Quick, J W Sudter, Mrs L A Durgin, S Phelps, R D Nichols, I N Brown, M A Fowler, M Orton, T S Perham, W Stewart, Mrs M M Ames, R R Pinkerton, J Crothers, M E Ferguson, S Simpson, A E Hassler, W A Pratt, E P Ingersoll, G Bullard, J M Crobarger, Rev R H Clark, E Smith, L Lovell, C P Potter, E Bascom, J A Bent, F Nugent, R Jenkins, A Holt, C Gunn, A R Livesay, Rev Whittington, N B Corning, S Grover, J N Norris, S Pratt, C Koeder, J Osgood, J M Ritchie, R D Wilson, G B Hopkins, W C Bissell, G S Peck, E M Curtis, O A Chillon, L C Livesay, A L Abel, J. Talbot, O S Dorman, J C Young, S P Miers, O Stegner, Mrs M M Duff, Rev J S Rock, R M Watson, H Carothers, J R Cooper, J Stahl, J Mathews, J Harvey, W H Merrill, S H Evans, W N Perrin, L Manvel, J Burge, J F Helin, J C King.

OUR PARTNERS.

There are hundreds of places where only one Cynosure is taken. If the subscription list is enlarged in these places, it must be done by our resident partners.

If you need the enthusiasm of a crowd to enable you to push the Cynosure successfully, think of the companies and battalions of workers situated just as you are, and fighting the same kind of a fight. You are one of a battalion! God grant you victory in the good work, and at least one new subscriber from each post office.

Those who receive the Cynosure with this item marked, will understand that the subscription is paid for by some friend, and will be stopped when the time expires unless ordered to be continued.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	78
No. 3.....	75
Winter No. 2.....	79 3/4
Corn—No. 2.....	36 3/4
Oats—No. 2.....	27 1/4 @ 31
Rye—No. 2.....	53
Branner ton.....	11 25
Flour.....	2 00 @ 10
Hay—Timothy.....	7 00 @ 10 00
Mess pork per bbl.....	8 90
Butter, medium to best.....	15 @ 32
Cheese.....	10 @ 33
Potatoes.....	30 @ 1 50
Eggs.....	25 @ 27
Lumber—Common.....	11 00 @ 18 00
Wool.....	11 @ 33
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 75 @ 5 30
Common to good.....	3 10 @ 4 50
Hogs.....	3 00 @ 4 60
Sheep.....	2 75 @ 5 00

NEW YORK.

Flour.....	3 20 @ 5 50
Wheat—Winter.....	91 @ 96 3/4
Spring.....	94
Corn.....	47 @ 48 3/4
Oats.....	36 @ 43
Mess Pork.....	31 @ 12 85
Eggs.....	31 @ 32
Butter.....	12 @ 33
Wool.....	13 @ 37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 50 @ 4 45
Hogs.....	4 20 @ 4 65
Sheep.....	2 00 @ 3 60

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic code. The work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual in practice of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents.

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

A GENEROUS OFFER!

Six Entertaining Books
GIVEN AWAY.

To each subscriber for the CYNOSURE who sends in a $2.00 subscription for one year in advance on or before

FEBRUARY, 1887.

See Special Offer Below.

OLIVER CROMWELL. His Life, Times, Battles and Contemporaries. By E. Paxton Hood. 12mo, paper.

"Mr. Hood's biography is a positive boon to the mass of readers, because it presents a more correct view of the great soldier than the short or lives published, whether we compare it with Southey's, Gilkiss's, or even Foster's."—N. Y. Sun.

JOHN FLOUGHMAN'S TALK; or, Plain Advice to Plain People. By Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon. 4to, paper.

"This book is written in a semi-humorous vein, but every word is a grain of gold. It has had an immense sale in England, amounting to more than 300,000 copies. It is quoted every where."

MANLINESS OF CHRIST. By Thomas Hughes. 4to, 15 pp., paper.

"A manly and thoroughly wholesome book. Its value lies in its directness, and in its high ideal of life."—Scribner's Monthly.

SELF-CULTURE. By John Stuart Blackie, Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh. 4to, 18 pp., paper.

CONTENTS—Culture of the Intellect. Physical Culture. Moral Culture.

"This is one of the most direct, practical and sensible of treatises on the subject. It is written in a plain, straightforward style, with Christian motives. We warmly commend the book to all."—Phila. Episcopal Recorder.

JOBS' COMFORTERS; or, Scientific Sympathy. A religious Satire in which Huxley, the Moleculist, John Stuart, the Millite, and Tyndall, the Sadducee, attempt to comfort Job out of their scientific books. By Joseph Parker, D.D. 8vo, 22 pp., paper.

"I shall endeavor to make it known where it will be appreciated. The task was a delicate one, and I sincerely congratulate the author on the manner in which he has approached it in both aspects."—Hon. William E. Gladstone.

MASONIC OUTRAGES. By Rev. H. H. Hinman.

The following are the topics discussed: Masonic attempts on the lives of seceders. Masonic slander. Masonic assault on free speech. Freemasonry among the colored people. Masonic interference with the punishment of criminals. The fruits of the Masonic institution as seen in the conspiracies and outrages of other secret orders. The relation of the secret lodge system to the foregoing and similar outrages.

Special Offer.

To any one who will send us $2.00, the subscription price of the CYNOSURE, on or before February, 1887, we will send the paper one year and THE ABOVE SIX BOOKS FREE! Don't miss this chance! We cannot promise to hold the offer longer than January. Accept quickly!

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH.

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every

Anti-mason—and especially by HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

"This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes."—H. H. Hinman, Chicago.

THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for a catalogue, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the most powerful arguments put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil and dangerous tendency of secret societies, and those who circulate them need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Price, 25 cents.

IN THE COILS;

OR

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause at the last sentence, which was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"The volume is greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book presents a serious and a Masonic circles, and evokes criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, and should be heeded."—Adelphi, (Washington.)

"Light is needed on this subject and badly badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secrecy, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin'; it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is so written as to be of real use to all who are agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they see how it turns out."—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifully bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

MUNN & CO. PATENTS

After Forty years' experience in the preparation of more than One Hundred Thousand applications for patents in the United States and Foreign countries, the publishers of the Scientific American continue to act as solicitors for patents, caveats, trade-marks, copyrights, etc., for the United States, and to obtain patents in Canada, England, France, Germany, and all other countries. Their experience is unequalled and their facilities are unsurpassed.

Drawings and specifications prepared and filed in the Patent Office on short notice. Terms very reasonable. No charge for examination of models or drawings. Advice by mail free.

Patents obtained through MUNN & CO. are noted in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, which has the largest circulation and is the most influential newspaper of its kind published in the world. The advantages of such a notice every patentee understands.

This large and splendidly illustrated newspaper published WEEKLY at $1 a year, and is admitted to be the best paper devoted to science, mechanics, inventions, engineering, and all the departments of industrial progress, published in any country. It contains the names of all patentees and title of every invention patented each week. Try it four months for one dollar.

Sold by all newsdealers.

If you have an invention to patent write to MUNN & CO., publishers of Scientific American, 36 Broadway, New York.

Handbook about patents mailed free.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. Pres. Finney, a high and noble man, but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover 50c; per dozen, $5.00.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurloe Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

RE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Thurloe Weed's Great Letter.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurloe Weed.
5. A list of the names of all the men who were present at the public act of his life.
6. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
7. A sermon by Rev. C. A. Blanchard.
8. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Pres. E. Bailey, on the "Freedom and Secrecy" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MERITING.

The handsome pamphlet, Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS

Complete WORK and "SECRETS" of the three degrees of Freemasonry, 1st, 2nd, and 3rd degrees, 15th Masonic degree. Three volumes, $1 each. Single copies, 50c. Sent by mail, postpaid. Order from the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of its degrees, by Pres. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition is attested by J. O. Doebner, Past Master, U. S. No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations of several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with everything showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 32 cents each; per dozen, $3.20.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claim and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 50c; per dozen, $5.00.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended a Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft. The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $15.00. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50.

Spirit Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Origin of Julian, The Esoteric Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Filmore and Webster's Reference to Masonry, Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion 60 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The death of John A. Tabor, a high and noble man, but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover 50c; per dozen, $5.00.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. A historical account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover 50c; per dozen, $5.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, and OATHS of 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan. "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan," by Samuel D. Greene. "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. W. A. Morgan," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 DEGREES. 34 pages, 25c.

In the Coils, or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical and a high and noble man, but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover 50c; per dozen, $5.00.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to prominent men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts, in which he clearly and fully explains the obligations of Masonry, and an able introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 50c; per dozen, $5.00.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of the three degrees of Freemasonry, and officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian and un-republican character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOME AND HEALTH.

THE CUISINE.

Ruskin thus discourses on cookery: "What does 'cookery' mean? It means the knowledge of Medea, and of Circe, and of Calypso, and of Helen, and of the Queen of Sheba. It means knowledge of all herbs, and fruits, and balms, and spices; and of all that is healing and sweet in fields and groves, and savory in meat; it means carefulness and inventiveness, and watchfulness and willingness, and readiness of appliances; it means the economy of your great-grandmothers, and science of modern chemists; it means much tasting and no wasting; it means English thoroughness and French art and Arabian hospitality; and it means, in fine, that you are to be perfectly and always 'ladies,' 'loaf-givers,' and as you are to see, imperatively, that everybody has something pretty to put on, so you are to see, yet more imperatively, that everybody has something nice to eat."

PREPARING POTATOES.

A good potato, when cut, will show a light cream color, and a white froth will be the result of rubbing the cut surfaces together. Reject that variety where drops of water appear. Another test is to put potatoes into a solution of salt; the good will sink, the poor float. The juice of the potato is disagreeable, if not absolutely poisonous, and should always be removed. This poisonous element escapes in the steam when the potato is baked, and remains in the water where they are boiled; hence that should not be used for yeast, as is sometimes recommended, or for any food.

The secret in mashing potatoes is to have all the utensils used as hot as possible, and beat the mass till light, instead of pressing down smooth and solid, adding cream, butter and salt at will. A desirable result is reached by rubbing the mashed potato through a hot colander, and leaving it just as it falls into the dish. Baked potatoes should be served the minute they are done; better with a hard core in them than wait till they become soggy. The average oven does not heat as quickly as water on top of the stove will boil; so when baked potatoes are wanted in a hurry they may be partially boiled, then put into an oven to finish.—Good Housekeeping.

RECIPES AND HINTS.—Glaze the bottom crust of fruit pies with white of egg, and they will not be soggy.

Quick boiling toughens all meat, whereas a slow bubbling renders the meat tender, and secures a better flavor.

Hash, to be good—and it can be good—must not stew and simmer, and simmer and stew, but be heated through as quickly as possible, and then sent to the table at once.

Ham, to be eaten cold, should stand in the water in which it was boiled until it is cold; it will not be so dry and hard.

The most effective remedy for slimy and greasy drain pipes is coppers dissolved and left to work gradually through the pipe.

If your chickens are drooping, try lard and sulphur. The cause is very likely to be lice, and not any more complicated disease.

MASONIC-OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. H. H. Hinman, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Iowa, C. F. Hawley, Wayne, Henry Co. Care Rev. Geo. Fry. Illinois, I. B. Arnold, Wheaton. Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville. New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

DROVER WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.

J. B. Carter, Thompson, Pa.

E. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.

T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.

E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.

H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.

J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.

A. May, Bloomington, Ind.

J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.

W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.

T. S. Walter, Kit, Jay Co., Ind.

J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.

J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.

S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.

E. Barnetson, Haskinville, Steuben Co., N. Y.

Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.

D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Families are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming year. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We still send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2 50
The American (Washington)	2 50
Western Rural	3 00
The Missionary Review	3 00
Christian Herald, N. Y.	2 75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2 50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3 90
New York Witness	2 50
Union Signal	3 00
Christian Statesman (Phila.)	3 50
The Interior	3 35
The Independent	4 25
The S. S. Times	3 50
Gospel in all Lands	3 50
The Nation	4 50
New York Times Weekly	2 50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Inter Ocean, Weekly	2 50
Harper's Magazine	4 75
North American Review	5 75
The Century	5 25
Scientific American	4 25
Buds and Blossoms	2 10
Pansy	2 35
Vick's Magazine	2 50
American Agriculturist	2 60

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1855.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison St., Chicago.

Talks

ON THE

Labor Troubles,

BY REV. C. C. BROWN.

The Danger—The Laborer's Grievance—The Laborer's Fallacy—The Laborer's Hope—Mind and Muscle—Co-Laborers.

TIMELY TALKS ON AN IMPORTANT SUBJECT.

The Papers Say of this Book:

"It is well to remind the world of the great law of human brotherhood, but how to make the 'more general application of it?' 'Aye, there's the rub!' Our author contributes his mite in that direction, and his voice and reasoning will reach some ears and perhaps touch some understandings and move some selfish hearts that are hitherto very closely and hedged around by over much respectability and comfortable prosperity."—Chicago Tribune.

"The writer does his work in a remarkable, alike for its directness, its common sense, its impartiality, its lucidity and its force. He has no theories to support; he deals with facts as he finds them; he fortifies his assertions by arrays of demonstrative statistics. The work is among the best of the kind. If it is not the best that we have seen, while it is scarcely possible for it to be put in the hands of all our wage-workers, we would not could he read by every one of them."—Chicago Interior.

Extra Cloth 60c., Paper 30c.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND

FRIENDLY GREETINGS

Is a FORTY-PAGE, ILLUSTRATED, monthly family magazine edited by F. F. AVERY, Halifax, N. S.

Price, 75 cents per Year if Prepaid.

Its columns are devoted to TEMPERANCE, MISSIONARY INTELLIGENCE, HOUSEHOLD HINTS, SHORT STORIES and LITERATURE, making a volume of reading matter, suitable and profitable for young and old, with an average of twelve illustrations in each number. This will give a measure of 40 pages monthly for 75 cents a year, and will, therefore, be one of the cheapest sold. Specimen copies sent for two 3-cent stamps.

A $5 GOLD PIECE

will be given if you get 20 subscribers.

"BUDS AND BLOSSOMS" is endorsed by Christians and in numbers of all denominations. One writes: "The cover has been a comfort and blessing to me. Every page is calculated to bring me nearer to the Lord." "We wish you ever-increasing success as you deserve." "To the Editor: I want to and to love." "It should be in every house."

A record of Faith Work.

The Christian's Secret

OR

A Happy Life.

28th THOUSAND.

Baptist Commendation.

"I delighted with this book. It reaches to the core of Christian experience, and is eminent experimental in its teachings. It meets the doubts and difficulties of thoughtful seekers after the bread and water of life, but whose effort results only in alternate failure and victory. The author, without claiming to be a theologian, sends out the results of a happy and rich experience to help others into a happy Christian life."

Presbyterian Endorsement.

"The book is so truly and reverentially devout in its spirit that it disarms criticism. It contains so much of the practical and practical and practical, heeded, will make our lives happier, happier and more useful, than the intelligent reader who really wishes to lead a life 'hid with Christ in God' can easily fail to derive profit from its perusal."—Interior.

Methodist Word of Praise.

"We have not for years read a book with more depth and profit. It is not a theological book. No effort is made to change the theological views of any one. The author's own views are clearly and fully a plain and delightful manner."—Christian Advocate.

United Brethren's Approval.

"We have seldom met with a more interesting volume, abounding throughout with apt illustrations; we have failed to find a dry line from title-page to final."—Religious Telescope.

Congregational Comment.

"It contains much clear, pungent reasoning and interesting incident. It is a practical and a spiritual lesson taught out of God's word, and is worthy of universal circulation."—Church Union.

This enlarged edition is a beautiful large 12mo volume of 240 pages.

Price, in cloth, richly stamped, 75 cts.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,"

AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A

"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourth degree of the York Rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-Fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 500 cuts, 24 pages, paper cover. Price 25 cents. 60c. per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at head-quarters for Anti-Sec.

Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar, Knight of Malta.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at head-quarters for Anti-Sec.

Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Furnished in any quantities at Special Rates.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform

Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"A THRILLING WARNING."

THE

Man Traps of the City.

BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons

The Tiger and His Den.

Cups of Flame.

The Scarlet Sin.

Embezzlement.

The Devil's Printing Press.

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or bold figures of speech, but from the facts that flow like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shown of their mark, rolled off the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the purulent literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the prodigal is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents.

Paper bound, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR ILLUSTRATED.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN WORK"

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

Price 25 Cents.

For Sale by NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SONGS

FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE AND SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS,

ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—)(—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY

to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to

HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and

MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

22 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP

ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encumbrance and Rebekah (adior) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President of the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge, in cloth, 10c. per dozen. 60c. Paper cover

75c. per dozen 60c.

Applied by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

PREPARING SUMMER SUPPLY OF WOOD.

All work which can as well be done now as some months hence, should be done before the rush of spring work. Preparing the summer supply of stove-wood can better be done now, than in the spring or summer. The pieces can be stacked up now, which is easier and speedier than hauling them in a wagon. The temperature is more favorable to chopping, which is a job for cold weather and not for hot weather. And now green wood can be cut, and will be seasoned when wanted; whereas, if the supply is prepared only as needed, dry, hard wood must be cut, or else the housewife be subjected to the vexations of burning green wood. Light, soft wood, thoroughly seasoned, is the best summer stove-wood. It makes a quick, hot fire, and dies down quickly without coals, allowing the room to cool rapidly after the meal is prepared. Save the dense, hard wood for winter. White elm and cotton wood are the best of all for summer stove-wood, and are scarcely fit for anything else. The blocks of hickory (usually), oak, etc., are best split through the heart; but cotton-wood and white elm must be "slabbed off," working toward the heart. Be careful to cut the wood of the proper length. To do so is as easy as to have half the sticks too long, and the other half too short, and will save the housewife much vexation. After the wood is prepared, put it under shelter. Only a rich man can afford to be without a woodhouse. Those with ready money can build something tasteful, but a structure that will answer every purpose can be built at a cost not exceeding fifteen dollars.—American Agriculturist.

WARMING POULTRY FOOD.

Experienced breeders appreciate the importance of warming the food for poultry during the cold weather, but many farmers as well as novices do not seem to, as they do not practice it. Our method is to warm all the food, whether mixed or cracked or fed whole. In feeding whole corn, warm it thoroughly in the oven, rather parching it, and then let it cool off sufficiently to admit of the fowls eating it without discomfort. The cooked food which is fed from time to time should be given warm, and, when necessary, warmed over from time to time. It is surprising what a difference warm food will make in the supply of eggs during the continuance of cold weather, and especially so if the fowls are well sheltered and properly cared for otherwise. There is even more in the care and food than there is in the mere breed, and if this fact were borne in mind there would be less dissatisfaction with the results from the poultry in winter. It will take but a few minutes to do this warming of the feed before each feeding time, and it is time well spent, and it repays many fold for the trouble.—American Agriculturist.

PROTECTING YOUNG TREES FROM RABBITS.

Not the least of the enemies of our young orchard trees is the rabbit, and we fear he will be such as long as our Orange Hedge remains. The rabbit will not injure the trees in summer, when he has an abundance of succulent food; but in winter the tender bark is to him a dainty that he will partake of if it is not made distasteful to him or he is not frightened away. To frighten him from the trees is not easy. We have tried effectually the plan of tying white cloths around the tree, and found to our sorrow that the rabbit soon ceased to fear them. Making the snow into a solid mound about the tree will keep away mice but not rabbits, though it is often said it would. The rabbits will mount the mound and nibble away. Besides, we don't have snow half the time during the winter. The best way is to make the bark distasteful to the rabbit. He likes neither blood, nor grease, nor the odor of flesh. Hence, when you butcher, take the waste parts of the animals, and with these parts rub the trunks as far up as the rabbits can reach. The rabbits never nibble a tree so treated, while the grease or blood remains.—American Agriculturist.

RELIEF FOR CHOKING COW.—A choking cow can often be relieved by pouring cold water into her ears. Take cold water in a pitcher or teapot, turn the animal's head to one side and pour a good stream directly into the ear. This will cause the cow to jump and shake its head sharply, and the jerking motion will often dislodge the obstruction. The idea is to make the animal make an effort to free itself. The general practice of pushing the obstruction down the throat or crushing it gives the animal no chance to help itself. A good syringe would be the best thing to force the water into the ear with, but few families have one ready for use, so the common teapot will answer.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no coughing, sneezing, or any other annoying symptoms. Doubling or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing vapor or fume on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and here the blood, the old-fashioned Inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cures. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

How, R. L. HENSON, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I have pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been long suffering from Bronchitis and Catarrh of the Throat, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such malady."

W. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.
Mr. H. G. TUNN, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh, coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
General Mail Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
Local Agents: 1220 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

SONGS OF PILGRIMAGE.

A HYMNAL

FOR THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

Probably the most extensive collection of hymns in the English language.

- It contains 1333 hymns, with music for them all.
- It contains 344 tunes from 112 known authors.
- It contains old hymns you have hunted for.
- It contains old tunes your grandmother sung.
- It contains hymns you learned when a child.
- It contains old tunes you have wanted so long.
- It contains new tunes you have never heard.
- It contains plenty of solid standard music.
- It contains numerous grand old minor tunes.
- It contains some 500 hymns you never saw.
- It contains 131 hymns from Watts.
- It contains 149 of Wesley's hymns.
- It contains over 300 new hymns from H. L. H.
- It contains hymns for all occasions.
- It contains hymns of the blessed hope.
- It contains old hymns from the Latin and Greek.
- It contains hymns from the French and German.
- It contains hymns from the Welsh and Danish.
- It contains hymns for the old and young.
- It contains hymns for sick and well.
- It contains 528 pages of hymns and music.
- It contains the names of authors and composers.
- It contains the dates of both hymns and tunes.
- It contains an index of subjects.

It is printed from type like this line.

YET YOU CAN CARRY IT IN YOUR POCKET!

Price in flexible cloth, $1.00, cloth extra, $1.25.

Address orders to the publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.,
OR TO THIS OFFICE.

Nat'l Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR

Illustrated.

"ADELPHON KRUPOTOS."

The Full Illustrated Ritual

INCLUDING THE

"UNWRITTEN" OR SECRET Work."

AND AN

Historical Sketch of the Order.

PRICE 25 CENTS.

For Sale by

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

Seeds or Books Free
With This Paper!

To any of our subscribers or any other person we will send, for only

$3 00

The Christian Cynosure

AND THE

FARM, FIELD AND STOCKMAN,

both one year, and in addition we will present the subscriber with his choice of either 20 WELL FILLED PACKETS OF SEEDS are mostly new and rare novelties, the object being to introduce new and improved varieties. There are over 100 varieties to select from, comprising the rarest flowers and vegetables, and new varieties of thoroughbred grain, either imported from the best special sources of Europe or purchased from the originator in this country, especially for this distribution. Twenty packets of seeds of like quality cannot be bought at retail for less than $1.50.

The Seeds

The Farm, Field and Stockman is doubtless well known to our readers. Since its present publishers, Gen. C. H. Howard and Jas. W. Wilson, took it in hand it has been second to none of its class. It is an ably edited, neatly printed, reliable, 4-column, 16-page, agricultural and family weekly, and a staunch advocate of farmers' rights—a paper every farmer wants. Price $1.50 a year.

Send the money to this office, and we will promptly forward the paper and an illustrated descriptive list of the above and seeds, with full directions for planting the latter, from which a selection can be made; or, if you want to make the selection first, a list will be sent you free on application to the Farm, Field and Stockman, Chicago. This is indeed an unparalleled offer.

Mental Gymnastics;

OR

Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;

THE STUDENT, His Lessons;

THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test.

The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject.

Most important: enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent post paid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00.

Address: 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

WHAT IS NATIONAL REFORM?
A RIGHT ANSWER TO THIS LEADING QUESTION INVOLVES THE SOLUTION OF
SOCIAL, MORAL AND POLITICAL PROBLEMS.

Can the Question be Answered?

SEND $3 FOR ONE YEAR'S SUBSCRIPTION TO THE

CHRISTIAN NATION.

252 BROADWAY,
NEW YORK,

AND

READ AND LEARN FOR YOURSELF.

BESIDES ITS INTELLIGENT AND POPULAR DISCUSSIONS OF THESE QUESTIONS OF INTEREST TO EVERY MAN AND WOMAN, THE CHRISTIAN NATION IS

A Home Paper in the Fulllest Sense.

NATIONAL SUICIDE,
AND
ITS PREVENTION.

BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

"E'en his failings lean to virtuous side."

—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticise. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FIFTY YEARS AND BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by

REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of the life that now is, and to give comfort and help as to the life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the old man a burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Sprinkling from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS
OF
MORGAN MONUMENT
20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The bill granting Mrs. Logan a pension of $2,000 annually passed the Senate without a dissenting vote. The bill was based upon the admitted fact that the rheumatism of which General Logan died was caused by the exposure while he lay in the snow on the battle-field of Donelson.

The nomination of Public Printer Benedict will probably be rejected. Representative Farquhar of the Buffalo district, who is acting for the International Typographical union and the trades unions generally in the matter, asserts unequivocally that the nomination will not be confirmed, and adds that if, by any hook or crook, Mr. Benedict is retained in the office, the trades unions propose to proceed in the courts to have him ejected, on the ground of disqualification.

COUNTRY.

A gas explosion Thursday in the Andrews Block at Youngstown, Ohio, caused a fire which destroyed a half dozen buildings, including the First Baptist church. One man was badly burned, and another perished in the flames. The loss is about $125,000, with insurance of $75,000.

Tuesday evening, at a prayer-meeting near Eldorado Springs, Mo., a man named Oakes, who created a disturbance, was rebuked by a farmer of the name of Clark. Oakes then drew a knife and cut Clark's throat from ear to ear.

A dynamite cartridge was exploded under the Sutter street cable track at San Francisco Wednesday night, the detonation shaking buildings, shattering glass, and terrifying people living in the neighborhood. The loss to the railroad company is heavy.

The German ship Elizabeth went ashore Saturday morning on Virginia beach, fourteen miles south of Cape Henry. The number of the crew was twenty, not a man of whom was saved. The men of the life-saving crew who survive and who revived to consciousness to-day, give this fact. Five men of the life-saving crew were lost.

The journeymen barbers of Wilkesbarre, Pa., recently formed an organization for the purpose of enforcing the closing of all barber shops here on Sunday. They notified all the proprietors in the city that on and after to-day any persons who kept their places open would be prosecuted. Of the thirty-eight shops here thirty-six were closed last Sunday.

Fire at Lawrence, Kan., which started at midnight, Saturday, burned itself out about daylight. The firemen and citizens were powerless, and the flames consumed an entire block. The loss is $200,000, divided among seven firms. The insurance is less than $50,000.

The old trouble existing between the Knights of Labor and the boot and shoe firms of this city who employ convict labor, has broken out again. The former difficulty was in a measure compromised by the State Executive Board of the Knights of Labor, but several local assemblies were dissatisfied and have proclaimed a new boycott. Members of the State Board are much incensed, on account of the total disregard of discipline shown by the boycotting assemblies.

Sharp earthquakes were felt Tuesday morning at Charleston and Summerville, S. C., but no damage to buildings resulted.

A severe shock of earthquake was felt at Baige, Texas, and vicinity Wednesday forenoon, greatly alarming the people.

The heaviest snowstorm ever known prevailed in sections of Louisiana, Tuesday.

William E. Dizan has been imprisoned at Wheelock, Vt., charged, within the past three years, with murdering his five infant children, whose skulls, it alleged, he crushed with blows of his fist. The accused are Canadians.

One of the walls of the addition to the Pillsbury elevator at Minneapolis, collapsed Wednesday morning, scattering 60,000 bushels of No. 1 hard wheat over the Manitoba tracks.

There were 1,161,358 children of school age in Ohio up to September last, 775,149 pupils enrolled, and an average daily attendance of 517,844.

At Montpelier, Ind., the family of John Wooster were poisoned by biscuit, which, it is supposed, contained inferior baking powder. Two children are dying, and the father, mother, and another child are not expected to survive.

Witrook, Haight, and Weaver, the express robbers, pleaded guilty Tuesday at St. Louis, and were sentenced, Witrook and Haight to seven years each, and Weaver to five years in the penitentiary.

Near Pewaukee, Wis., a train ran into a sleigh filled with laborers, killing three men.

The boiler in Newton House's grist mill at Elwood, Ind., exploded Tuesday morning, completely wrecking the structure, killing two men and wounding others.

While the express from Chicago, on the Boston and Albany road, was passing a freight train early Tuesday morning near West Springfield, Mass., one of the wheels of the express broke, throwing the train against the freight, and causing a terrible wreck. One man was burned to death, another was fatally wounded, and several were injured. Of two corpses on the express, one was cremated, and fourteen first-class Western mail pouches and seventy-three bags of second-class matter were destroyed.

Near Republic, Ohio, early Tuesday morning an express train on the Baltimore and Ohio road, west-bound, collided while running 60 miles an hour, with a freight. Immediately after the crash the cars took fire. Twenty persons were either killed or slowly burned to death, and all the mail and express matter was destroyed. The blame for this awful disaster is laid upon the freight crew, part of whom are said to have been drunk. The dead were nearly all from the smoking car.

The largest blast ever fired at Easton, Pa., was touched off at the Glendon Iron company's quarry Saturday. It consisted of 44,500 pounds of powder, distributed in five chambers, each fifty feet apart and fifty feet back from the face of the quarry. The whole hillside, 150 feet high, was blown out, and about 200,000 tons of stone were loosened.

William H. Wallace, assistant superintendent of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, and Stacy B. Opydyke, superintendent of the New Haven and Northampton road, accused of conspiracy by Thomas F. Meany, who charged them with "black-listing" him, were fined $50 each yesterday by Judge Pickett of the City court. The judge, in his decision, said that he was clearly of the opinion that a conspiracy designed to hinder any man from putting his labor on the market when, where, and for such compensation as he may agree for, is equally criminal with any conspiracy designed to hinder the sale of the merchandise of any producer or dealer, and is more disastrous in effect than any other form of conspiracy, except that to take a life.

Owing to a strike of dockhands at Port Johnson and Elizabethport, the mines in the Wilkesbarre (Pa.) district have been closed, throwing out of employment 8,100 persons.

Isaac Bickel, an aged farmer at Anamosa, Iowa, attempted to chastise his nineteen-year-old son, when the latter struck him a single but fatal blow with a heavy stick.

Since 1880 the iron and steel plants in Southern States have gained an annual capacity of 565,200 tons, with indications that at the next census the gain will reach 2,000,000 tons annually. The outlook for the iron industry in 1887 is more promising than in the past. Ten new blast furnaces are in progress of construction.

FOREIGN.

The London Standard states that Mr. Gladstone is prepared to modify his home rule scheme, with a view to the conciliation of the dissident Liberals.

One of the keepers at the Paris Zoological Gardens was killed by the hippopotamus before he could be rescued by his comrades.

A dispatch from Bulgaria says: "Russia has sent 6,000 rifles to Cetinje. An attempt by an armed band of Montenegrins to make an invasion into Serbia was frustrated by the vigilance of the frontier guards. It is rumored that Russia will endeavor to incite another invasion, the object being the overthrow of King Milan and put upon the throne a king of Russia's selection."

THE PHYSICIAN'S FAVORITE!

A predestined, non-irritating, easily assimilated food indicated in all weak and inflamed conditions of the digestive organs, either in infants or adults.

It has been the positive means of saving many lives, having been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

The Most Nourishing, Most Palatable, Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

150 MEALS for an Infant for $1.00. EASILY PREPARED. At Druggists, 25c., 50c., $1.00.

A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," sent free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

—Florida! Florida!—

A package of Curiosities, containing Florida Grey Moss, Alligator Teeth, Sea Bunnies, and Shells, will be sent to any one on receipt of 25 cents. Features of the Beautiful Grey Moss, for decorating churches and private houses. Address H. M. WOODRUFF, Winter Park, Fla. (Jeweler and Dealer in Florida Curiosities.)

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE
UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, ETC. Awarded Gold Medal, London, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamilton Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., Etc. Sold only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO., GLOUCESTER, MASS., EVERYWHERE. See Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

CALL AND SEE THE CHAUTAUQUA COMBINATION DRAWING BOARD AND WRITING DESK.

The most Amusing and Instructive Present that can be given a child. Recommended by leading educators, viz:

REV. ROBERT COLLIER, Pastor, Church of the Messiah, N. Y.
REV. J. H. VINCENT, Chancellor of Chautauque University.
LEWIS MILLER, President of Chautauque S. S. Assembly.
FRANK BEARD, Artist, N. Y. City.
R. L. JACOBS, Chairman Inter-All S. Executive Comm., Chicago.
ST. ST. AUGUSTINE, Principal Holy Angels School, Buffalo, N. Y.
And many others.

PRICE $3.50.
Agents Wanted for Chicago Suburbs AND N. W. STATES.

MRS. JOHN R. IRWIN, Gen. Agent, Room 33, 113 Adams St.

U. S. TREATMENT. PHYSICIANS NOT ONLY ENDORSE IT, BUT USE IT IN THEIR PRACTICE.

Sure Cure for Headache! Perfects the Health! Eradicates all impurities of the system, and effectually removes Mole and Blemishes from the face, producing a clear and beautiful complexion. Trial treatment free.

Also TOILET ARTICLES.

AGENTS WANTED. City Reference. MRS. JOHN R. IRWIN, Room 33, 113 Adams St.

Berea College History

PP. 87, CLOTH, 40 CENTS.

The establishment of a College for the education of colored children and the white children of the mountaineers in a slave State at a time when the whole country was shaken by the discussion of abolition, was a sublime act of faith in God who "hath made of one blood all nations of men."

This is what REV. JOHN G. FEE did at Berea, Ky., and the friends of reform cannot spend 40 cents better than to send for this

HISTORY OF PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY, of faith tried, and of precious deliverances that read like a chapter from the book of Daniel.

KNIGHTS OF FATHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfect and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, counter signs, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 321 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in the United States to introduce our Secret Laundry Glossing, Chinese Secret Laundry Glossing, Good Ivory Agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARRISON CITY CHEMICAL CO., South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, and Circulates free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

CATARRH SAMPLE TREATMENT FREE
If you get a sore throat, or any other ailment, we will mail enough to convince, free. R. S. LADENBACH & CO., Newark, N. J.

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS & COPYRIGHTS

Obtained, and all other business in the U. S. Patent Office attended to, for MODEL OR DRAWING. We advise as to patentability, and make NO CHARGE UNLESS WE OBTAIN PATENT. We refer here to the Postmaster, the Sup't. of Money Order Div., and to officials of the U. S. Patent Office. For clerical advice, terms and references to actual clients in your own State or country, write to

C. A. SNOW & CO., Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

JOYFUL News for Boys and Girls! Young and Old! A NEW INVENTION just patented for Home use! Free and Scroll Sawing, Turning, Boring, Drilling, Grinding, Polishing, Screw Cutting. Price $5 to $50. Send 6 cents for 100 pages. EPHRAIM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.

EUTOCIA A Book for every woman.

Introductory preface by EDWARD GUERNEY M. D., also preface by Dr. GEO. E. SHIRAZI, and chapters on the care and management of infants by the same experienced author. Mothers, Wives and Daughters. Not a compilation of other works and clippings, but the careful, practical study of Mrs. Dr. E. G. Cook, for over a quarter of a century.

ENDORSED by the leading Medical and Physicists, Daily, Weekly, Religious and Medical Press. COMPLETE LADIES GUIDE. It treats fully of early child-life and health of children. In short a complete manual for the household. Mailed free on receipt of price, where there are no Agents. A liberal trial of our AGENTS find a ready sale for it. Table of contents. Handsomely bound in English cloth, $2.00. Morocco $2.75. Address for terms ARCADE PUB. CO., 148 La Salle St., Chicago.

LADIES TO INTRODUCE

our Ladies' Journal in the best homes. We make you the following Liberal Offer: We will send the paper, postpaid, from Sept. to Jan. 1, 1887, on receipt of ONLY 10 CENTS.

AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING

Is decidedly a ladies' journal. Published monthly, handsomely illustrated, filled with original Stories, Poems, with departments on Home Cooking, Art, Recipes, Bric-a-brac, Artistic Needle Work, Window Gardening, Flowering, Mothers' Corner, Children's Nook, Household Pets and all Home Subjects. By many of our best writers. Subscription price, 50 cents per year. Samples free.

THE P. B. Combined Tracing Wheel and Scissors. An Indispensable article for every woman, made of the best English steel, hand-forged, oil-tempered. Every pair warranted. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. Or we will send the scissors to any one that will send two subscribers to AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING and $1.00. American Housekeeping Co., 143 LaSalle street, Chicago.

Price, 75c.

'FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE'

BY E. RONAYNE, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. The work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bonafide harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100, $3.00. Address,

National Christian Association,

221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XIX., No. 18.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 20, 1887.

WHOLE No. 873.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. L. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR.....$2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.....$1.50.

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	CORRESPONDENCE:
Notes and Comments..... 1	Providences in Memphis;
Bishop Vail..... 8	Dr. Munhall on Separation from Secedism;
Charles B. Knight..... 8	National Reform in Cincinnati; A Grand
The American Home Missionary Society..... 8	Lecturer Converted to
So Many Good Men..... 8	Christ; Pith and Point..... 5,6
The Religious Telescope..... 8	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
CONTRIBUTORS:	THE HOME..... 10
The Lodge a Barrier to the World's Progress..... 1	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Washington After the Sumter Bombardment..... 2	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
The Editor of the Word..... 2	LITERATURE..... 12
Nashville and Flisk University..... 4	LODGE NOTES..... 13
REFORM NEWS:	THE N. C. A..... 7
From the General Agent..... 13	CHURCH VS. LODGE..... 7
The Weekly Report from Ohio..... 5,12	Ohio's Financial Report..... 13
BIBLE LESSON..... 6	LECTURE LIST..... 13
SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED..... 7	FARM NOTES..... 14
	IN BRIEF..... 14
	BUSINESS..... 16
	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
	MARKETS..... 16

Some labor agitators, in the effort to make more heinous the crimes they attribute to capitalists, add this also to the indictment, that nearly all the liquor-drinking by the poor is because of their rich oppressors. Powderly, however, who ought to be an authority, in a late letter says, "I regard the use of strong drink by men and women as the greatest curse that can befall them. To the use of liquor can be ascribed nine-tenths of the ills that befall our working people." Would that Mr. Powderly could see as clearly that the lodge system to which he is giving his strength, with its oaths of secrecy and obedience, is a moral curse whose effects may be fairly contrasted with the temporal ills from strong drink.

Albert Curlin is the successor of Spies as editor of the Arbiter Zeitung. In a speech last Saturday he said, "Between the Socialist, the Anarchist, the Knight of Labor and the trade unionist there is no difference." Powderly is also reported as saying last week: "If I were in Russia I would be a Nihilist. If I couldn't use the ballot I would use any weapon that God placed in my hand." Some Socialists are very careful to denounce anarchism as a doctrine which they repudiate, yet it is sadly evident that the tendency of all these movements is to one end—the subversion of lawful authority by revolution. Their show of force may compel the putting away of some grievances, along with the imposition of some unjust statutes, from which the poor will always suffer most, but what will compensate for the dogmas of atheism and murder which these movements are making familiar and acceptable to multitudes. There is no cure for the troubles of society but the word, the law of God and humble recognition of his authority.

We lately had the opportunity of looking hastily through Most's book on "Revolutionary Warfare," which figured so largely in the Anarchist trial. It was easy to imagine the fearful influence upon weak and unbalanced, or selfish minds of such reading; just as we know the effect of frequent repetition of Masonic oaths and familiarity with the scenes of the lodge room. The occasional profanity, the expressions "bandits of law and order," applied to civil officers, or "secoundly system of law and order" given to society; the frequent emphasis put upon the words "no more failures"; the familiar and friendly reference to the Italian assassin, Orsini; the particular and careful directions for making bombs, dynamite and nitro-glycerine; how one kind of bomb would be best to destroy buildings, another is made for deadly execution in a crowd, and with fiendish joy the writer suggests pitching one upon a dinner table, or placing it beneath a train. Throughout the book the idea of killing men by horrible missiles and in cold blood breathes in every line. A more purely diabolical writing the world has seldom seen, yet this is the Bible of anarchism.

The German parliament was last week the scene of a remarkable debate on the war measures proposed by the government. Bismarck personally took part, dwelling particularly on the imminent danger of war with France, and demanding the vote of the body for a military term of seven instead of three years. But parliaments have learned that the power of the popular will is equal to that of a dictator, and the defeat of the measure shows also that Bismarck may be failing in his marvelous powers of accomplishment, which have made him the center of European intrigue for the past fifteen years. He fulfilled his threat, however, and dissolved the Reichstag. A new election will be held in February, in which we hope the German people will assert the right to their opinion in military matters as well as civil.

Mr. Moody has been speaking two weeks in the First Congregational Church in this city. Last week he began afternoon meetings in the Second Baptist Church on Morgan street. This week he continues, afternoons in the First Church and evenings on Morgan street. These meetings have been generally well attended, and the inquiry rooms well filled. The great evangelist shows little change from year to year as he revisits the scenes of his early labors and successes, and where he has completely disproved the proverb, "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country." In no city is he more beloved of the churches or more popular with the masses. He seems, if there be any change, to be more emphatic in his statement of doctrine than years ago, and his going to the old churches instead of continuing the tabernacle method is interpreted to mean that he wishes his converts more strongly attracted to a church home. He has made no public move toward the great City Mission with its quarter-million endowment, but will doubtless strike the iron to its proper shape when the local Christian workers get it hot.

One of the strangest and most sensational chapters in the history of crime is just now being enacted in Chicago. A good-looking young woman educated at Vassar, an only child in a happy family and heirless to several hundred thousands, has courted Spies, the chief of the convicted Anarchists in our county jail, and is to be married to him on Thursday of this week, Attorney Black getting the license for them. The young woman's name is Van Zandt; she is connected with the Fourth Presbyterian church with Judge Gary, whose invitation to attend court she accepted, and there became infatuated with Spies. She first met him while inserting an advertisement for a lost poodle in his paper. She has a weakness for suffering dumb animals, and owns nine dogs! The papers give a few points which may account for the insane freak of this young woman. "People stared at me with their mouths wide open. I suppose I'm the reigning sensation at present," etc., are the sentiments that worry her weak brain. Along with her pug dogs doubtless may be found such companionships as cheap novels and the theater. After these she need not go far in her abnormal desire for notoriety to seek matrimony with a man who has been for years inciting to murder, who has denied God and marriage. In now taking advantage of the infatuation of this young girl with her head turned by silly romance, Spies shows himself a contemptible and craven coward. No man with a spark of honor would endure the thought of linking his life in his present circumstances to that of a pure but half-demented girl. It betrays the selfishness of the man. He either hopes to thus escape a deserved doom and become a capitalist, or to use this woman and her wealth to further his devilish schemes against the human race.

THE LODGE A BARRIER TO THE WORLD'S PROGRESS.

BY PRESIDENT H. H. GEORGE, D. D.

(Conclusion of Knoxville Address.)

It will be admitted by all observers that the spirit of reformation is abroad in the world to-day. Never was the conflict with intemperance fiercer and more determined. Armies of men, and heroic women, too, are on the broad field of this struggle. More temperance work is done to-day, more temperance prayers sent up to the throne on high; more temperance sermons preached and temperance songs sung in one year than was formerly in ten,—yes, fifty; and I know not but a hundred years. But I would have you notice that this work is done by Christian people; it is the outgrowth of Christian effort.

As well is the opposition clear and marked and telling against Sabbath desecration. Men and money are pressing this battle to the gate. As certainly is the warfare inaugurated against licentiousness and profanity. These and all similar movements are but the practical efforts of an awakened Christianity.

There are men of broad minds and devoted faith to-day who are spending their strength to secure more fully the Christianizing of all our institutions, to have the ordinance of marriage more securely bonded by Christian law, and protected against unhallowed divorces and bigamous and polygamous affinities; to have the nurseries of our children, the common schools of our country, protected in their free use of the Holy Scriptures,—and all these and similar reformations are sought through an effort to secure a recognition of God and Christ and the Scriptures in the Constitution of our country. The aim is to get the world all under the power of Christ. We want Christianity every where and in every thing. We believe that Christ is all and in all. There is no department of society that can afford to leave him out. The government needs him and his law, as much as the family does. Politics need the religion of Christ as well as the church does.

Now, my point is, that in this broad movement to Christianize all society, to enthrone Christ in the heart of the nation that all institutions and agencies may be moulded and premeated by his religion—in this movement, I say, Christless fraternities give no help; and not only so, but they stand squarely across the track of progress of this kind. As a fraternity, Masonry does not advocate the enthronement of Christ in any thing. It does not give any money to secure such a thing. It does not want it. By its make up it is bound to oppose progress of such a kind. Individual members of these fraternities, whose beliefs are better than the fraternity, may favor such progress, but the fraternity that ignores Christ, cuts his name out of the Bible, refuses to pray to him, cannot favor anything that puts the crown upon his head, since then we have seen that this effort to Christianize every thing is the great movement of the world; it is the mighty power of the progress of the age, and on the other hand have seen that Masonry by its very constitution must antagonize such a spirit, we reach the conclusion that such a fraternity, with all kindred to it, are the giant hostilities to the world's progress. They stand as adamant walls across the track of the power that can redeem this world. Christianity alone can lift our world up to God, and Christless fraternities are just their full weight of hindrance to this end. The missionaries to the heathen know well that as they can get removed false gods and idol altars and all the paraphernalia of heathen worship, so they open the way to the spread of the Gospel of salvation. It is no less true in our land. The removal of all false worship is the spread of that which will save the world. In the day when the religion of Jesus Christ gets hold of the hearts of men and institutions of society, there will be no need for secret lodges and tylers and horrid oaths to keep a childish secret, and half-naked men with one bare foot. There will be no need of heartless prayers and stone-hammer piety, and level-and-plumb and square-and-compass rectitude and lamb-skin purity. When the real comes there will be no need—aye, no place for the counterfeit. Indeed, the spurious must be taken out of the way before the real can come.

Let us for a few moments particularize upon this point. We will say that right-hearted men are all combined to push forward the true Christian Reformation; and they come to the effort of purifying the courts of justice. They want men of sterling integrity on the bench of judgment, men who fear God, who are bound by the bond of moral law to do justice to every man. But here they meet a judge who has taken, say the Master Mason's oath, and the criminal is a Master Mason and so are the jurymen. Men all sworn to keep the secrets of each other, to apprise each other of approaching danger, to fly to the relief of each other at the risk of personal life; bound under the most horrid penalties to protect each other in all crimes, murder and treason excepted. What about the effort to purify the court? What stands in the way of its purification? It is men combined and sworn to execute another law than that of justice and right. It is men who have banded together to protect one another, even though it should defeat the ends of justice, men who have oftentimes felt that Masonic oaths were more binding than civil oaths, Masonic justice more to be defended than righteous civil justice.

While civil courts are equipped with such officers, moral purity, justice and right are not known. Reformation here is impossible, so long as secret fraternities have possession of official trusts,—they have no right to them. They ought to be made intelligible to them by law. We would not allow an alien, or a citizen of some other country to sit on our justice bench; no more should we allow a man sworn to some secret lodge. The administration of justice is for all men alike, no favors, no party helps, no selfish assistance should be allowed here. The rights of society demand this, justice demands it, and Christianity can accept nothing else than justice, equal justice to every man.

A great barrier, then, to the progress of Christianity in purifying thrones of civil judgment, is the iron grasp of secret fraternities on these thrones. Mountain barriers they are to the progress of the age; agencies that are turning the wheels of reformation backwards, and while earnest Christian men are laboring and sacrificing to advance Christian progress, their efforts are counteracted by the opposing efforts of the Secret Empire. It is not conceivable that Christian men could permit themselves to stand in the way, or thwart the progress of genuine, moral reformation; but if they do not, they will be compelled to stand apart from organizations that have taken oaths that compel them to trample under foot civil oaths whenever Masonic interests demand it.

But, again, they divide and cripple and stand in the way of the work of the churches. All Christians know that the church is the great agent in the world's help and salvation; the great aim of the church is to lift up, to help and to save men. Christ instituted it for that purpose, and it is working to that end; it is both benevolent and beneficent; but lodgery hurts the church and cripples its work. The very fact that it proposes to do by another way just what the church aims to do, hinders the church. It says it can get men to be free from sin, get them ready for heaven; the church can do no more,—wants to do no more. Masonry making these claims has led men by the thousands to say, "It is good enough church for me." In this way it is a counter institution to the church. It is rallying recruits to a service proposed to save equally with the church. It divides up the members of a Christian church into distinct brotherhoods. It links a pastor with some of his members by a bloody oath and separates him from others. It cuts in twain true Christian fellowship, unless pastor and people all unanimously go in and take the oath that binds under no less a penalty than to have the body severed in two in the midst, and bowels burnt to ashes in the center, and the ashes scattered to the four winds of heaven. I say unless pastor and all take it some will be carrying this horrid oath and some not, and they cannot truly fellowship.

Besides, to swear this oath at all, without any allusion to Christ, is inimical to the church. The church's oath is over the sacred symbols of the body and blood of Christ. The Masonic oath has no possible allusion to Christ. They are as far separated from each other as the poles. It is no wonder that men usually feel if they take the one they cannot the other; so they ought to feel. The Gospel minister is to be pitied who can take both of them on his soul. A Christful and a Christless oath on the same soul!—what will he do when God comes to demand for both? No man can give soul allegiance to church and lodge both at once. He will either cleave to the one and forsake the other, or hold to the one and despise the other. No man will continue long to love the lodge and the prayer meeting both. The fact is they are incompatible, and every man who reads and thinks and examines must in the end choose the one, and abandon the other; and it would help the great cause of Christian progress if they would do it at once. The church would be immeasurably stronger to-day, if all men, ministers, doctors of divinity, and laymen, who really love the lodge would go into it body and mind and soul, and leave the church; while all who account the church as their chief joy would leave the lodge. No grander revival is needed in the church to-day, I really believe, than a revival of complete and total and perpetual separation from all lodge connections. If men want to go to heaven by the one or the other, let them try the one of their choice, but don't let them try both, for they run on directly opposite lines. When a man can run on a railroad train that is going from Chicago to New York, and at the same moment of time ride on a train going from Chicago to San Francisco, then might he attempt to keep a Christful and a Christless oath at the same time.

The church is consumed by a false worship that is sucking its life blood. Here is the greatest difficulty to be overcome in these false fraternities—they are so interwoven with the church.

Suppose our Christian reformatory movement as it sweeps over the world leavening nations, churches, families, and individuals, would suggest a model for benevolence,—and it must inculcate benevolence, it must urge men to give means to leaven the world, to evangelize it, to carry its burden of poverty and need. Now Masonry will come to the help; it will be a hand maid to the great progress of the world in this respect, for it is founded in benevolence. It proposes to rival the church and all Christian institutions here. Its widely boasted virtue is benevolence. Look a second time and its benevolence is for a different end than that of the reformation agencies. These agencies are employing means to buy Bibles to send men and women on errands of evangelization; to preach the Gospel to lost men and women and children; to feed and clothe and take care of the poor of every people and kindred and tongue. Of the benevolence of the lodge fraternity, a reliable author says, that nine-tenths of it is spent for temples, regalia, furniture, room rents, salaries, dress, festivals and the like, and the merest pittance comparatively is expended in relieving the poor. Any one who has travelled, must know that among the most gorgeous temples in our cities are the temples of Masonry; and while no doubt something and perhaps a great deal is expended in benevolence, it is for those who are paying their regular dues monthly. It is for those members who, before they can be members, must be whole and sound in body and mind as a man ought to be. It is not benevolence to poor creatures, too poor to be members, to wretched ones who never paid anything into the treasury. It is selfish benevolence. It is insurance-company benevolence. You pay me so much, says these accident or life companies, and if you get hurt or sick I will return you so much, or if you die I will do so much for your family. Call that business if you may, something for something, a quid pro quo; but don't call it Christian benevolence. Then the church don't want this kind of benevolence. The great Christian progress will have to be pushed forward without a benevolence that expends millions in temples, and regalias, and splendid processions, and costly funerals and drum and brass bands.

Thus we find no connecting point between Christian progress and secret fraternity doctrines, faiths or practices; and we are forced to conclude that they are antipodes to each other in theory, in aim and object and purpose. If the one is a good thing for the world, the other must be a bad thing. If the one helps men, the other harms men. If the one enlightens, the other benights. If the one saves, the other drowns in deception and destruction.

Loving the church as we do, having the faith in Christian progress as we have, we are forced to the one conclusion that these fraternities all of them must give way and abandon the field to Christianity. They are too narrow, too weak, too unphilosophical, too human to save our lost world. They aim at what they have not the power to do. God only could save this world, and that by the blood of his own Son. And God cannot approve or accept men saved by any other name than that of Jesus. Christianity's boat carries Christ in it; and, if he may be sleeping in the hinder part of the vessel, when storms come he is there to say, Peace, be still. But woe to the boat, and crew that mans it, that carries no Christ. In that dark night of storm there is for it no hope; it is fated to go down amid the mighty waters.

THE TIMES OF WAR AND RECONSTRUCTION.

REMINISCENCES BY HON. S. C. POMEROY.

WASHINGTON AFTER THE SUMTER BOMBARDMENT.

I have tried to show that the American Rebellion of 1861 was begun in the interest of slavery, and that power had gone to war, rather than yield the control of the general Government, which they had so long enjoyed. Senators and members of the House of Representatives began at once to follow the lead of their States, and one by one disappeared from their accustomed places in Washington. Senators from Virginia, and Bright and Breckenridge of Kentucky, and one from Missouri came to the call of the first meeting of the Senate, after Mr. Lincoln's inauguration; and at his first taking the oath of office they stood by and paid respectful attention.

It was not then known that Virginia would secede. She seemed as loyal as Maryland or Missouri; and I think she was. At no time could the ordinance of secession have been passed, if it had been fairly presented to the voters of Virginia and they allowed to give expression to their honest sentiments. But the convention on the 23d of April passed the ordinance, and provided for its submission to the people; and then, without waiting for a vote, the leaders went into rebellion! Before the election they had begun the war, and had the rebel capital removed from Montgomery, Alabama, to Richmond.

In examining the difficulties and embarrassments surrounding Mr. Lincoln, it must be borne in mind that he was shut up in Washington, and the government at Washington had only such protection as the citizens could afford, when one-half, at least, were disloyal. Of course there was city pride enough to make some show of approval of Mr. Lincoln's election at his inauguration; but the absence of national forces, military or naval, was shamefully apparent. The retiring administration had sent them to the four quarters of the globe; and even Washington's birthday could not be observed by their appearance in public procession, save one company, which was apologized for by Mr. Buchanan in his letter of that date to ex-President Tyler.

Washington had several military organizations, but none in which the sympathy for the new administration was at all general. Even at dress-parade, like the showy inauguration, they only mustered a mere skeleton of each battalion. I quote to sustain this, from the National Intelligencer of March 5, 1861:

Washington Light Infantry mustered 40 men in full uniform; the Henderson Guards, 78 men; the Union Rifles, Companies A B & C, 92; Metropolitan Rifles, 74; Turner Rifles, 75; Washington Light Guards, 39; Putnam's Rifles, 55; the Militia, by Col. Cox, 50; Scott's Rifles, 40; D. C. Rifles, 30; Georgetown Mounted Guards, 75.

All this, only an apology for defense, was all that could be had, even upon an inauguration day, when no danger threatened; and a month later, when real war was apparent, they for the most part disbanded altogether.

Some few remained, however, and were willing to go anywhere, and do any duty. Others were willing to serve, if only they were not required to go outside the District of Columbia. But when General Scott ordered Colonel Stone to assemble all these organizations in the Park near the War Department, and explained to the men that they would all be expected to do such military duty as was now required of them by orders from superior officers, they quit, marched out of the ranks and went home.

So much doubt rested upon the mind of Mr. Lincoln, relating to the loyalty of those men, that he, with General Scott, prepared a new oath, and at this parade Col. Stone informed them of it, and read the oath. The following is an exact copy:

"I, ———, do solemnly swear that I will bear true allegiance to the United States of America; that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all enemies and opposers whatsoever; that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States and of the officers appointed over me according to the rules of the Army of the United States. So help me God."

When this oath was to be taken, those brave soldiers who showed so well upon the inauguration day, turned back and would not take the oath. They would not go to war outside of the District of Columbia. Nor would they shoot the rebel invaders, which were daily expected from Virginia. No wonder then, that in such a crisis, Mr. Lincoln would accept the services of the "Frontier Guards," "Clay's Battalion," and all volunteer troops who would do their duty to the Government in any and in all emergencies.

The Frontier Guards, commanded by J. H. Lane, M. W. Dilahay and J. B. Stockton, lieutenants, numbered about 200 privates, of which I have the honor to have been one. Some of these officers "remain until this present," others "have fallen asleep." Clay's Battalion was commanded by Cassius M. Clay as captain; Col. Ward Lamar and Col. Millard were lieutenants. This force numbered over 200 men and did most effective duty. Not one man of those companies objected to the oath. They took it joyfully.

I now repeat what I have before stated, to vindicate the true history of these events, when Mr. Lincoln was first confronted by war:

1. That these two companies were the first volunteers in the war, and went into the service unconditionally.

2. They first invaded rebel territory, and defied the dogma "that the Government could not coerce a sovereign State."

3. They captured the first rebel flag, and brought the same as a trophy to the President and received his thanks in writing.

The contest slavery made in Kansas under the "Douglas Bill," prepared for all this. The triumph there, secured the triumph of Mr. Lincoln in 1860. This hastened on the hour—for war! The Kansas struggle prepared these men and the party for the national conflict. Mr. Douglas, David R. Atchison, and their abettors "boulded better than they knew." In trying to extend slave territory, they destroyed it in the States. What they meant for evil, resulted in good—thank God!

Upon the outbreak of the war, and immediately after the scenes I have described as peculiarly trying to the President, there was a serious apprehension of an attack upon Washington, from Alexandria, Va., where all the excited rebels from the region about were congregating and drilling. On the 16th of April (next day after his proclamation) Gov. Sprague of Rhode Island telegraphed Mr. Lincoln, tendering one full regiment of men all equipped. This was immediately accepted. Gov. Andrew of Massachusetts did the same on the next day, the 17th. New York and Pennsylvania were only a little behind. Still the anxious question was how to hold Washington until this relief should arrive? But General Lane was full of resources, and did not scruple much as to the means he employed. Having full information about the hostile forces organizing at Alexandria, on the 16th of April, he sent a squad of his men of the Frontier Guards, under Mr. Wheelock, down there with instructions to scatter all over the town and whisper in the ears of the most prominent business men, and others, that Lane and his body of desperate Kansas men were preparing to come down there and lay their town in ashes, free all the slaves, and put the negroes in charge—same as his old associate, John Brown, had done at Harper's Ferry.

This was successfully accomplished, and the men returned and reported. Then followed one of the greatest panics ever seen there. It put the whole town upon the defensive—the very thing Lane desired. All that night Alexandria was astir. They closed and bolted their stores. Their families as far as possible left the city. White men and negroes, all night and all the day following, were building breastworks and barricading every entrance, so as to keep Lane and his men out of the city. This prevented any attack upon Washington. In one way or another that scare and excitement was kept up until troops from the North arrived. O, I shall never forget the sense of relief felt, when these Massachusetts troops, which had fought their way through the mob at Baltimore (April 19), reached Washington; and we of the Frontier Guards met and saluted them at the railroad station! All day we had watched for their arrival, and when we heard of fighting in Baltimore, Lane ordered all his company to meet at the Winder Building. When in line, standing in those long halls, Lane said, "All who will volunteer to go to Baltimore, and help the Massachusetts troops through that city, step one step to the front!" Every man advanced. When Lane tendered the company to Mr. Lincoln, he replied, "They are now through. Meet them at the depot."

In the afternoon of April 19, 1861, this regiment, whom Gov. Andrew first called to the service after the proclamation of President Lincoln of April 15, fired the first gun, drew the first blood, and lost in death the first of the long roll who sealed their devotion to the country and to liberty with their blood. This conflict, now begun, waged for four and a half years, until the man whom I heard in speech surrender to the Virginia committee, at his mansion on Arlington Heights, surrendered again to the great captain of the Union army at Appomattox.

The man who took two oaths of loyalty to the Federal Government, in the months of March and April, took also two more, of allegiance to the Southern Confederacy, during the same month, adding perjury to treason! Again, in 1865, while broken down in spirit, and amidst a desolated people, he swore an oath of allegiance to the old Union; and under the old flag, impoverished and sick at heart, he again took up the work of life as a civilian, and did what he could to repair the desolation of war, setting an example to all his followers. He sleeps at last with his fathers.

God may judge him: I will not. General Robert E. Lee was the pride of his soldiers and gave strength to their cause. He has been honored by all the eulogies a lost cause has to bestow. I would walk backward, throwing a mantle over his shame, and say, Peace, erring man, to your slumbers!

The Frontier Guards escorted this first regiment to the President, who was greatly pleased that they got through Baltimore with so little loss, and ordered them quartered at the Capitol, as no Congress was in session. The news of this attack at Baltimore was flashed to New York, and on the next day (the 19th of April) there was a tremendous Union demonstration throughout that whole city. Her famous regiment, the New York Seventh, rallied with full ranks, and prepared to move for the protection of Washington and the National Government. The excitement of that day in New York was greatly increased by the news of the burning of Gosport Navy Yard, and three government ships of war, and other vessels, mounting four hundred guns.

On the afternoon of the 20th, the Seventh Regiment marched down Broadway, amidst the greatest demonstrations! On the 21st they reached Annapolis, Maryland. Baltimore was closed up and they went around it to Annapolis. Gen. Benjamin F. Butler arrived there at about the same time, with eight hundred more men from Boston. The next day, having relaid the railroad track, which had been torn up, they all, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, marched proudly up Pennsylvania Avenue, and Washington was safe!

This hastened the departure of the rebels to the South, while all loyal people, from the President down to the humblest citizen, breathed freer. Pennsylvania soldiers also reached Washington. The whole North and West responded, so that only six days later (the 27th) the report published, "27,000 troops camped in and about Washington." No further questions were asked, as to whether there would be war. It was upon us.

The safety of Washington being assured, the Frontier Guards and the Clay's Battalion were relieved, and had an honorable discharge, with the thanks of Secretary Cameron and President Lincoln written upon each discharge. They had "held the fort" during those trying days of anxious surprise, and all their discharges were dated at the "East Room of the Executive Mansion, May 30, 1861." All honor then to the men who first volunteered, first invaded a State, and captured the first flag—the emblem of treason. When honorable mention is made of the men of the late war, let not those be forgotten who pioneered the conquest, and rendered faithful service, gratuitously, to their imperiled country. Let them have a place in the history of the hour when honorable deeds are applauded and sagacity and patriotism commended. They stood in the breach from the day Fort Sumter surrendered, until Washington and the President were safe.

At this time the Confederate seat of government had moved to Richmond, and that city became the rebel capital. The two governments confronted each other. Seward's "irrepressible conflict" was now inaugurated in earnest. General Lee had been taken into the bosom of the Confederacy, and was organizing to attack his old commander, General Scott, from whom he said, when leaving, he "had received nothing but kindness," and then added, "your name and fame will ever be dear to me." Poor Lee! he had more fatal inconsistencies to answer for than any man of the war, and for that very reason, I suppose, was more beloved. The whole rebellion was a bundle of the greatest inconsistencies of all history.

But the hour, long delayed, had now come. Slavery was marshaling her hosts, and leading on to the war—which John Brown predicted in my presence, when for the last time I visited him in jail, just before his execution. "There will be war, and slavery will be wiped out in blood!" were the last words of the old man, as the prison doors closed behind us. And the familiar voice of that old leader died away forever. The hour, I say, had come. The two civilizations, planted together the same year, 1620—one at Plymouth, Mass., and the other at Jamestown, Virginia, were now to meet in armed conflict. They had antagonized for long years; were essentially discordant. The one came in white robes of freedom, with prayers and songs. The other in a black Dutch ship wended its way up the James River, settling at Jamestown, coming with slavery's whips and chains. The North, gradually and surely tended toward freedom, and planted her shining monuments upon every stream, in every valley, up the hillside and over the mountain tops. The South adopted this other system, secured the slave importation for twenty years, or until 1808; grasped the empire of Texas, a portion of Missouri territory; and came up for the conquest of the Government.

Let it not be forgotten that 1620 is no more memorable for the landing of the Pilgrims than for the landing of slaves. These institutions were planted the very same year. They were inherently in conflict; antagonized for nearly three hundred years; then came the war. It was no more, and no less, than a "Slaveholders' rebellion."

My next will be devoted in giving the facts upon which this theory is based, and the grand consummation.

Washington, D. C.

THE EDITOR OF THE SWORD.

BY H. H. HINMAN.

Among the sad events that marked the close of the year, was the death of T. F. Dolan of this city. He was a radical reformer, editor of the Sword, and author of a number of tracts and small volumes that had considerable circulation. He died at Parkersburg, W. Va., Dec. 28, after brief illness. He was born in the State of Maine, March 21, 1844, of Irish parentage, and was brought up a Roman Catholic, receiving his education in the Romish College of Georgetown in this District. In 1861 he enlisted in a Maine regiment, and served through the war, attaining the rank of Major. After he became a thoughtful Christian he renounced war as always and necessarily wrong, and ever after lifted up his voice against it. After his conversion in 1871, he united with the Hamlin M. E. church in this city, and, though holding an important position under the Government, he devoted all his leisure to street preaching and other evangelistic work, and was instrumental in the conversion of many. Impressed with the inconsistencies and unfaithfulness of many M. E. ministers, and especially with the fact that they were Freemasons, he withdrew from their communion and united with the Free Methodists. In the spring of 1882 he labored in Knoxville, Tenn., where many were converted; some members of secret lodges made open renunciation, and a Free Methodist society was organized. In the following summer he, together with Rev. J. T. Michael, started the Sword, which continued to be published until the fall of 1885. Shortly after the paper was started Mr. Michael withdrew from it, and it was conducted solely by Mr. Dolan.

Those who read it need not be told that the Sword was fearless, outspoken, and uncompromising in its reproof of whatever was believed to be wrong. Freemasonry, trades unions, intemperance, tobacco-using, pride and sectarianism received most scathing rebukes; and, to the surprise of all, the circulation rapidly increased to between 7,000 and 8,000. It was for a time accepted by the non-union men as their organ, and was largely supported by manufacturers. But the repeated assaults on sectarian organizations alienated his Free Methodist brethren, and others became disaffected, so that its circulation began rapidly to decline. Its support became a heavy financial burden, and, finding himself becoming involved, he sought and obtained an appointment in the Pension Department, which he filled up to the time of his death. He intended to have continued the Sword, but found it impracticable while encumbered with the duties of his office.

None who knew him but admired his moral courage, his faithfulness to his convictions, and his large-hearted sympathy with all that was just and true, however it might be despised for the time. He had many ardent friends, and if some of them feel like dropping a tear over his mistakes and inconsistencies, nevertheless they cannot fail to love and honor one who, like the Master, was willing to be made of "no reputation," so only that the Word of God might be exalted. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss.

Mr. Powderly has shown great ingenuity in preparing the code of signs for the Knights of Labor, as a few samples will show. When a knight draws in his stomach, placing his hand on it, he is hungry; when he opens his mouth and points down his throat, he is thirsty; when he walks as if dodging in and out of a rail fence, he is drunk; when he strikes for ten hours' pay for eight hours' work, he is a fool.—Chicago Times.

There was lately no little commotion at Chattanooga, Tenn., because a committee of the Freedmen's Aid Society asked for the resignation of Prof. Calkins, of the Chattanooga University, because of his alleged discourtesy to a negro minister.

JUBILEE HALL--FISK UNIVERSITY.

NASHVILLE AND FISK UNIVERSITY.

NOTES OF A SOUTHERN TRIP BY PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD.

My last letter closed at Mammoth Cave. Of course there were many things seen which could be neither remembered nor described, but one item I wish to record before passing on in my story. There are in the cave at various points piles of stones which have been constructed by the inhabitants of various States and nations. England, Scotland and Ireland are close together. England, of course, much the larger; Scotland strong, and Ireland's little pile standing by. There was a pathos to me in those stony reminders of national relations, a tale of oppression and suffering all unconsciously written out by the hands of passers by. Mrs. Blanchard and I put each a stone on the pile for Illinois, and I one on the Y. M. C. A. memorial.

Leaving the long, disjointed, painless buildings, the stunted evergreens, and the silent hills, we took the train for Glasgow Junction, where we arrived after a ride of about an hour and a half, having been off the track only once, which was considered a very successful trip. Our train for Nashville was two hours late, but after a comfortable but rapid ride of ninety-six miles we landed at the railway station in the capital of Tennessee.

A short ride took us to Fisk University, where we were cordially received by President and Mrs. Cravath and the officers and students of the University. The hour was late and the holiday sociable was near to its close. Well dressed young ladies and gentlemen from all parts of the South thronged the parlors and halls. Graduates of the University, now editors, lawyers, and teachers from the city were present, and in all the surroundings there was nothing to remind the looker-on that it is less than twenty-five years since the slave market of Nashville was abolished, where the parents of these young people were bought and sold like cattle.

The situation of the University is very fine. Eight acres on the summit of a beautiful hill form the campus for Jubilee Hall. This building, having a south front of one hundred and twenty-eight and an east front of one hundred and forty-five feet, stands four stories and an attic above a fine basement. The campus is surrounded by a stone wall; the basement of the building is of stone, the superstructure is of brick with stone trimmings. The south front is used for the college reception rooms and parlors; the east contains a beautiful dining-room able to accommodate three hundred persons. In the basement are cellars for fuel, fruits and vegetables and rooms for laundry work and servant's apartments. On the second floor are the rooms of the president's family, and apartments for teachers and students; the upper floors are devoted to students. The fitting and furnishing of the building is substantial and appropriate, all being light, pleasant and comfortable. The cost of this building with the grounds was about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars; all of which was raised by the seven years' campaign of the Jubilee Singers. The picture of the original company painted in London now stands against the north wall of the parlor on the right of the main entrance.

To the south of Jubilee Hall, which is now occupied by ladies only, is Livingston Hall. This is the gift to the University of Mrs. Stone in memory of her husband, and cost with its furnishings some sixty thousand dollars. It contains the University chapel, class rooms, apartments for teachers, the library, museum and rooms for young men. It is a noble gift, worthily bestowed, and to be of untold blessing to this long-oppressed race, and through them a blessing to the whole American people. In the library we were shown bound volumes of the examination papers which have been accumulated in the years past. They were marvels of excellence, and would have been entirely creditable to the pupils of any school no matter where it is located, or what may have been the previous advantages of its students.

On the north of Livingston Hall, between that building and Jubilee Hall is a block containing I should judge about three acres. It is the plan eventually to erect on this ground the central University building. In it are to be the chapel, class rooms and public rooms generally. Livingston Hall will then be devoted to young men exclusively and the Jubilee Hall as now to young ladies.

The expenses for the students are three dollars per week. The number of students is about four hundred. Their appearance is that of well-behaved, self-respecting young ladies and gentlemen. The value of such an institution is of course incalculable. No mind but that of the infinite God can estimate the uplift which this and similar schools have given to the colored people. None other can tell how greatly these Northern enterprises have stimulated the South to provide public schools for them, and none other can understand how Egyptian the intellectual and moral night which without these stars would have shut them in.

By invitation of the president and Prof. Bennett, who is pastor of the University, I addressed the students on the lodge question on Sabbath evening. I was rejoiced to find that among the faculty and students there was a general and hearty sympathy. Brother Hinman and my father are remembered with love for their work's sake, here and wherever I have been.

On Monday Dr. Cravath in company with Mrs. Cravath, who was unwearied in her kindness, took us to view the battle ground of Nashville. Twenty-two years ago this very month of December that battle was fought. Gen. Geo. H. Thomas here defeated General Hood and ended the heavy fighting in the West. Dr. Cravath was in the army as a chaplain at that time, was present throughout the two days' fight, and, rolled in his blanket, slept after the first day was over at the foot of a tree near the site of Roger Williams University, a Baptist school for colored people on an eminence opposite Fisk University.

We called during the day on one of the colored ministers of the city to see if anything could be done among the colored churches in opposition to secret societies. The outlook is very dismal outside the schools. The older ministers almost all belong to the lodges. They read the notices for these lodges in the churches on the Sabbath. In one of the principal colored churches of Nashville on a recent Sabbath more than thirty minutes were occupied in reading these lodge notices. There are no churches among these people which exclude secret societies, so far as I have been able to learn. Among the white people I have not been informed of any, but secret societies prevail among the black as they never have among the white. Men, women and children have rushed pell mell into these orders until now the ministers, even those who belong to the lodges, are beginning to inquire how they shall live if their members spend all their money on the lodges.

But more and worse than the money is the moral and spiritual degradation resulting from these secret lodges. As already indicated they are very numerous. In the Masonic order there are the lodges, chapters, commanderies and consistories which we have among white Masons. Just so in Odd-fellowship; there are lodges for the men and the Household of Ruth lodges for the women. There are then the Knights of the Wise Men and the Sons and Daughters of Relief. They have in Nashville the following lodges for men and women: Diamond Square, Beulah Temple, Blazing Star Temple,

LIVINGSTON HALL.

Daughters of Shiloh, Sisters of Charity, Sons and Daughters of Ham and the Willing Workers. There are Queen Esther's Courts, the United Sons and Daughters of Abraham, the Good Samaritans, the United Daughters of Zion, the Star Tabernacles, the Daughters of Union, the Tabernacle of Love and Charity, the Sons and Daughters of Moses, the Sons and Daughters of Honor, the Mothers and Daughters of Israel, the Eastern Star, the United Brothers of Friendship and Sons of the Mysterious Ten, the Immaculates, who initiate a man by leading him through a representation of the arrest, trial and crucifixion of Jesus, and MANY OTHERS.

Now these orders have their lodge meetings lasting frequently all night, and their annual parades and picnics, when liquor flows like water and everybody is welcomed who chooses to pay the admission fee. It is the testimony of those here on the ground that these occasions are demoralizing to the last degree, but as they are for the benefit of the societies they are encouraged even by the ministers.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 7, 1887.

Maryville is sixteen miles from this city and the present terminus of a branch railroad. I reached the place, accompanied by Bro. George W. Clark, about 6 p. m. on the 5th inst., and we accepted the proffered hospitality of Elder Oscar Wilson. Notice of our coming had preceded us but a few hours, but through the energetic efforts of some young men notice had been given, and we were greeted by a good audience. Bro. Clark sang as he only can sing, and I spoke of the character of the lodge, and how it was injuring whites and colored people alike. My remarks were well received, and after a soul-stirring song, we were tendered the use of the commodious chapel just so long as we wished to occupy it, and Bro. Clark arranged to remain with them over Sabbath. Thursday the 6th we spent looking over the town. Bro. Clark rendered very acceptable service at a meeting of the W. C. T. U., where a score or more of earnest women were in consultation. By dint of effort they have driven every saloon from the town, and although threatened on every hand they are still holding the enemy at bay.

I called at "Friend's Institute" for colored pupils, and was allowed the privilege, by the gentlemanly superintendent, Prof. Hastings, of speaking to the four-score or more bright-eyed, intelligent pupils. Prof. Wilson has charge of Friend's white school and with his two assistants is furnishing educational advantages to numbers of poor children who come in from the mountain regions as well as those of the town. The colored school I am told is under the care of New England Yearly Meeting, and the white school was started by individuals, but is at present sustained in part by Friend's Meetings in the West. Both these schools are apparently doing good work, though reasons given for keeping up the "color-line" were not wholly satisfactory to me, and I think not in harmony with the feelings of the professors, although they deem it a necessity for the present.

I found the pastor of the African M. E. church an intelligent, educated, and earnest worker, who had been both a Mason and Odd-fellow, although he had not been in a lodge for over six years. Conversation with this good brother revealed to me more clearly than I had seen it before, the abominations of the lodge, and the terrible power it has over the colored ministers and churches in the South. It is appalling, as I have gathered the facts from seven of the most reliable colored pastors I have met, and as fully confirmed by the statements of Bishop Turner.

Our evening was spent most happily, and I trust not without benefit, with the faculty and students at Maryville College, of whose cordiality and encouraging words and good works I must speak hereafter. Pres. Bartlett, his cultured wife, and their home are models after which the host of young men and women, who gather from all parts of the South, may safely pattern; and the example of their Christian home is not to be accounted least among the salutary influences of this pioneer reformatory institution.

JONESBORO, JAN. 10.—Yesterday rain fell for most of the day, but to-day the ground is frozen and hills and valleys white with snow. From the front steps of Warren Institute are seen five conspicuous church steeples inviting citizen and stranger alike to the "Gospel feast." As seen from the point where I write the out-lying region is rugged, but shows some signs of fertility and enterprise. Arriving Saturday evening I was met by two pupils from the Institute, who led the way up the hill to this important center of influence and Christian culture to which all are welcomed, but which has hitherto been very largely, if not exclusively, patronized by the colored people. A most cordial greeting awaited me by Mrs. Julia B. Nelson, the lady in charge, whose regrets not to find Mrs. Stoddard at the door, strengthened my own desire that she might have enjoyed the opportunity and added greatly to the little good accomplished during my brief stay. Mrs. Nelson is a remarkable woman, with rare accomplishments for the work to which she has devoted her life, and to which she clings with enthusiasm, and prosecutes with untiring zeal. It was pleasant to find that we had many mutual acquaintances. I had once heard her speak upon the platform in Lincoln Hall, Washington, D. C. Sabbath morning I visited Rev. Mr. Duncan of the Presbyterian church, and returned in time to attend Sabbath-school at the Institute. The exercises were conducted by Mrs. Nelson in simple and most effective style. After a brief intermission I preached to a very attentive congregation on the importance of a good foundation, and of seeking first the "kingdom of God and his righteousness." A lecture on the secret lodge system was announced for 3 o'clock; the audience was nearly or quite double that of the morning, and all listened with the deepest attention. Many wished to hear more, and I have consented to remain and speak again at 7:30 this evening. I listened to a plain practical sermon in the Presbyterian church by Elder E. Allison, the Baptist pastor of this village, and learned of the purpose of pastors to engage in a union protracted effort. This morning I called upon two pastors, and found one entirely unacquainted with the lodge system, and the other possessed of a three-degree experience, acquired many years ago. "The lodges," said he, "did not do what they agreed to, and when they refused to discipline and expel drunkards and other bad characters, I left them." Both these ministers have promised to attend our meeting this evening.

The Congregational church in Jonesboro was organized by Dr. J. E. Roy, February, 1885, with a membership of twenty-one. Its present enrolled membership is fifty-seven, and from what I could learn its progress in intelligence and well-directed Christian effort has been yet greater. It has seldom been my fortune to address more attentive audiences than at these services held with this people. Rev. J. M. Hall, their present pastor, a returned missionary from Africa, is not connected with any lodge and his influence and example are very salutary upon the colored people of Jonesboro. Mrs. Julia B. Nelson enters no less heartily into church than into school work, and is evidently the "power behind the throne" in both.

KNOXVILLE, JAN. 13.—This afternoon I start homeward, tarrying for a little at Berea, Ky., and at Cincinnati. Mrs. Stoddard, who has been laboring in the W. C. T. U. work forty miles further down the Tennessee river among the mining population, expects to join me at Junction City. She reports courteous treatment and some kind friends.

Since my arrival in Knoxville on the 18th of December I have conversed with twenty-two pastors, one bishop, one Grand Master of Masons, two presidents of influential and well-established colleges, two principals of primary schools, a half-score or more of professors, and ministers without charges on the secret lodge system. Eleven pastors and the bishop had belonged to from one to ten different "orders." Except the Grand Master, not one of the Masons white or colored had entered a Masonic lodge for years, but the bishop and some others

(Continued on 13th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

PROVIDENCES IN MEMPHIS.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The efforts that you have been making for many years are bearing fruit, and as a consequence we have a verification of the Word of God, that "bread cast upon the waters shall return after many days." For the last two years we have been waging a constant and unrelenting warfare on the Secret Empire in our city and vicinity, and to God's name we give honor and glory that much good has been done. You will remember of my informing you last May that the dignitaries of the lodge who had been excluded from our Tabernacle Baptist church, entered a suit in the Chancery court, praying that I, as pastor, and the officers be enjoined from interfering with them, or prohibiting them from participating in the business and worship of said church. The case was called a few days ago, but they were not ready for trial; it is reported they never will be.

We are having some little rest now, but as I continue to preach the Gospel of separation, they continue to denounce me. The eyes of many however are opening wide to the infamy of the lodges, and the courts are handling and sentencing quite a number of Masons and Odd-fellows. There seems to be a mania broken out among them and quite a large number of the gentlemen of the craft are in durance vile.

Mr. Brinkley has been out considerably, and has done much to arouse sentiment among the rural churches against the lodge, for nearly all of our preachers were lodgites, and it is no uncommon thing to see the upper story of a church house fitted up for lodge purposes. I wrote you in August last of the Dark Corner church, which is twenty-five miles south of us, whose pastor was swallowed up in lodgery. Rev. Brinkley preached a sermon there, and so completely aroused the church to their duty as Christians in reference to the lodge, that they almost immediately demanded their pastor to cease organizing lodges (for he was the special agent for that part of the country) and to devote his entire time to the service of the church. This he refused to do; but the church was determined, so they forced him to resign, broke up the lodge he had established in the church, called themselves another pastor and were getting along nicely. On the 19th of December they had an excellent meeting and remained later than usual in the church at the night service. At 2 A. M., three hours after the meeting had broken up, the house was discovered on fire burning at both ends. The lodgites gathered around the burning edifice laughing and rejoicing. The loss is about $400. They had a very good Sunday-school library, all of which was consumed. This church is in North Mississippi, a country church, and they feel their loss very heavily. I have succeeded in getting them a few books, such as Bibles and Gospel songs. Undismayed they are holding meetings and Sunday-school at a private house. It will be some time before they will be able to build; in the mean time they will most likely erect a log house this spring.

The secretists here are fearfully crippled, and have made no demonstrations during the holidays as heretofore. They are unusually quiet. Two of our ministers here (Baptist) both of whom are very highly esteemed among the wily craft of Masons in Tennessee, unintentionally denounced all secret societies on a funeral occasion in their church. One said of the deceased, "He is not one of my brothers. No sinner is a brother of mine. All your societies are frauds. I am sorry I ever put a dime in any of them." I believe he was requested to preach the man into heaven, and God made him tell the truth on the occasion.

The other case was similar, and the anathemas of the initiated were long and loud at the church doors on each occasion. God's ministers are destined to tell the truth and it will out; and I have every reason to believe that in a few years secret societies will be a thing of the past among my poor beguiled people; and that men who have a purpose firm will dare to make it known.

Our winter thus far has been exceedingly hard; but God remembers the poor, and tempers the wind to his horn lambs. Our church congregation is on the increase, and at our meeting last week one of the society folks who left us last spring returned in much penitence to the church.

May God bless the entire staff of the Cynosure and may this New Year be marked for the many great things that shall be done in God's name by his people in the work of reformation.

Yours for God and heaven, R. N. COUNTEE.

DR. MUNHALL ON SEPARATION FROM SECRETISM.

DENVER, Col.

When Dr. L. W. Munhall, the apostle of the Y. M. C. A. of Indianapolis, Ind., was here in Denver, June last, holding revival services, he had a Bible-reading every afternoon in the Central Presbyterian church. The attendance was very large. On one occasion he took for his subject, "Separation," and after showing the evil tendency of balls, theatres, Sunday excursions, round dances and a good many other worldly institutions, and how the church ought to be separated from them, he tackled secrecy as he had promised the night before: and, though I have heard and read a great deal on the subject, it was the most convincing and the grandest exposition of the secret orders I ever listened to.

He gave some illustrations. He knew a deacon in Indianapolis in high standing who could not go three blocks to a prayer meeting of his own church, but could, at the cost of time and two hundred and fifty dollars in money, travel three thousand miles to San Francisco to attend a meeting of a secret order. He said such Christianity was a disgrace to the cause. Again he said he had been into a town of several thousand inhabitants and while there the good people wanted him to raise five or six hundred dollars for the Y. M. C. A.; but the town was so infested with secret lodges and it cost so much to run the lodges, that he could not raise the amount to save his life; and this showed that secrecy was opposed to the cause of Christ, financially as well as spiritually.

He said when in the lodge and at its close some would urge for wine and liquors. He told them he was temperate and a Christian and could not. They urged. Then he told them to scratch him off; said good-bye and left them. Again in another lodge they wanted a festival and dance after lodge meeting. He told them no; he was a Christian and would not dance. They urged, and he told them to erase his name and bade them good-bye. So he denounced these secret associations in the strongest terms as being detrimental to spirituality, and the church ought to be separate from them. He said he knew what he was talking about, for he had belonged to a good many of them; and, furthermore, that he had fully made up his mind that in the future he would pay his money into the church of the living God.

This is but a faint description (according to my recollection) of the mighty truth that fell from the lips of this eloquent man of God; and if they are of avail to the readers of the Cynosure, let them have them. Yours for light and truth,

ST. CLAIR ROSS.

NATIONAL REFORM IN CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 6, 1887.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—An Eastern prince was taken captive and lodged in a strong castle. His devoted servant went in search of him. But not knowing where he was confined, he traveled from tower to tower singing a song which he knew his master would recognize. At last he came to the right prison, and a token of recognition was thrown to him from a window above. I am going from place to place singing my song of loyalty to King Jesus, and ever and anon tokens of recognition are thrown out to us by the friends of our Lord.

On last Sabbath morning I preached for Rev. J. C. Watt, of the Fifth Presbyterian church. The congregation numbers 350 members, and the Sabbath-school 250 scholars. Bro. Watt was raised in Greene county, and as that is the center of prohibition and Sabbath-keeping, we naturally expect him to be an advanced National Reformer.

On Sabbath evening I preached in the Christie Chapel of the M. E. church. Bro. Rice's prayer was in point. His petition was that God's authority might be acknowledged in the Constitution of the United States, and in the constitutions of the several States; that the Lord Jesus Christ might be honored as the King of kings; and that the Bible might be taken as the only standard in moral legislation. After service an elderly lady said to me, "That was good doctrine. It is every word true. It must prevail." A deacon said, "I have believed that for a long time, but I never heard anyone express it that way. The conflict is coming. I can see it." A goodly number of young men were present. It would have done you good to see the undivided attention given: they seemed to wonder what was coming next, and where all this would lead to. Rev. John H. Kendall, my class-mate at school and roommate at college, a Covenanter to the backbone, the fiber of whose character is made up of reformation principles, was present at the service.

Francis Murphy is holding meetings in Christie Chapel this week. In the two weeks spent in Wesley Chapel he secured 4,500 signers to his pledge. He complains that the temperance people and Christian ministers of the city do not co-operate with him as cordially as they might. The difficulty is, he makes a mistake in speaking too disparagingly of temperance legislation. He wants to empty the saloons by converting the drunkards and so compel them to close up. But he cannot do it. He cannot hold his converts unless the temptation be taken out of their way. Let him preach Gospel temperance and convert the drunkards, and let prohibition close the saloons. The first cannot succeed without the second. They are the two arms of the temperance movement.

On Tuesday evening I preached in the Palestine church, Adams county. A good audience turned out. A collection was lifted for National Reform. On Wednesday evening I preached in the Locust Grove M. E. church. The large house was filled. Many were out who are not accustomed to go to church. A collection was lifted here also for the cause.

This cold spell has taxed our city charities to keep the unfortunate poor from suffering. The system of charity ought to be so adjusted that the spirit of dependence would be completely eradicated. "The world owes every man a living," is a false principle. It is true of those who are providentially helpless. But otherwise it owes no man a living unless he earns it. Shakespeare makes one of his characters say, "This world is my oyster, and it is mine to break the shell and pluck the gem." That is better. The Bible says, "If a man will not work neither shall he eat." That is the best. It is God's law.

J. M. POSTER.

A "GRAND LECTURE" CONVERTED TO CHRIST.

STEPHENSVILLE, TEXAS.

For going on two years I preached in nearly all the principal towns in Indian Territory. The Indians and whites are thoroughly subsidized by the "Secret Empire," and many of the converts of all denominations have been Masonically united to the church. I say Masonically, because when the Scripture test is applied they know next to nothing about the "finished work of Christ." Many ministers seem to use their lodge influence to increase membership. It counts big at headquarters. In my testimony against the lodge evil I have compromised no truth, but have sought to declare the whole counsel of God. The result has been considerable persecution. Thanks to God, the "Grand Lecturer for the Indian Territory," Mr. D. N. Robb, publicly renounced Masonry in the great revival meetings we held last spring at Atoka, Choctaw Nation. He is one of the leading merchants in the southern I. T., and a man of wide influence and godly character. His testimony is that Masonry is the grand medium Satan is employing to Judaize the church of God in these last days. It makes null and void the "completed work of Jesus Christ on the cross." Yours for an unadulterated Gospel,

J. E. WOLFE.

PITH AND POINT.

A GERMAN LUTHERAN PASTOR WILL WRITE.

Please accept my heartfelt thanks for the Cynosure. It is an admirable paper, and I am surprised to see that the godly testimony against the works of darkness is not confined to the Germans, as I had believed, but deeper thinking American Christians are taking a stand, too, against the blasphemous persecution of Christ and his ministers by the lodges. I will prepare an article on the Lutheran church and secret societies and if you can make use of it will send it to your valuable paper for publication. The Lord bless you and your undertaking.—F. B. KUNZ, Queen City, Mo.

THE ARMOR ON TILL DEATH.

I have been reading your paper this afternoon till my eyes gave out and I begin to think, What shall I do if I can't read it? Highly prize its sentiments, which cannot be refuted. The only defense the lodge has is to conceal and call it a lie, or "billingsgate." I frequently put up my Anti-masonic tracts in public places and they are soon pulled down. Then they say I am doing more to build up Masonry. I tell them it is a lie, or they would not pull them down. I am widely known in this part of the country as an Anti-mason, and circulate many tracts. If I was a young man and had means I would go into it with all my soul.—ISAAC J. GILBERT, Derby, Conn.

LODGE PREACHERS AS AUTHORS.

We subscribers and well-wishers are anxious to know how many of the writers of books of instruction for the secret lodges, especially of the Masonic lodge, were and are preachers in the sects and the orders they hold as ministers. Will you please give us their names and their book assigned to each?—in your next issue or soon as convenient. We wish you abundant success in exposing lodge iniquities.—H. W. SMITH.

Rev. George Oliver, D. D., of Wolverhampton, England, a Church of England clergyman, is one of the most prolific of Masonic writers. A. B. Grosch, the Odd-fellow author, was a Unitarian, and Chase, writer of the temperance lodge rituals, is a Universalist. Other clergymen whose names we do not now recall have written for the orders.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON V.—January 30.—The Call of Abram.—Gen. 12: 1-9. GOLDEN TEXT.—I will bless thee and make thy name great and thou shalt be a blessing.—Gen. 12: 2.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

From Peloubet's Notes.

Abraham was born B. C. 1996; i. e., A. M. 2008, almost exactly half way between Adam and Christ. Noah died two years before his birth.

Abraham left Ur, B. C. 1926, aged 70 years. He left Haran, and entered Canaan, B. C. 1921, aged 75. From this date is counted the 430 years to the Exodus.

He lived in Canaan and vicinity about 100 years, B. C. 1921-1822.

"Now the Lord (Jehovah) had said," The Method of the Call.—As to the manner in which the call was made we have no other clew to it than is contained in the words of Stephen, who says that "the God of glory" appeared to him; and as this phrase usually has reference to some visible manifestation of the divine glory, it is not unlikely that some display of this kind was now granted to Abram.—Bush.

The Object of this Call seems to have been to separate Abraham from all the idolatrous influences of friends and country, from which it would be almost impossible for him to escape if he remained at home. But as a stranger in a strange land, with no ties binding him to idolatrous friends and customs, he could set up the worship of the true God, and train his family in the true religion.—P.

Applications. (1) A similar command is virtually given to us. The world around us lies in wickedness, we are to come out from it and be crucified to it; we are to regard it as a wilderness through which we are passing as strangers and pilgrims to our Father's house.—Bush. (See John 17:14; Matt. 6:19-33; Rom. 12:2; 1 John 2:15, 16.)

(2) We know not at first just where we are going, when God calls us from the world to enter into his world. It is always to the land which he will show us. Life and duty and work will unfold themselves to us as we obey the call. "Gradually and slowly our destiny opens before us." No one at first can know all the meaning of his life, any more than a child studying his A B C can know the glories of the literature to which that path will lead him.—P.

"I will make of thee a great nation." This will compensate for the loss of his country. The nation to which he had hitherto belonged was fast sinking into polytheism and idolatry. To escape from it and its defiling influence was itself a benefit, but to be made himself the head of a chosen nation was a double blessing.—Murphy. "And bless thee." The place of his birth and kindred was the scene of all his past earthly joys. But the Lord will make up the loss to him in a purer and safer scene of temporal prosperity.—Murphy.

"And make thy name great." Known, honored, loved through all the centuries, and by multitudes of people.—P. It is a remarkable fact that perhaps no mere man has ever been so widely and so permanently honored.—Bush. The Mohammedans and Jews, as well as Christians, honor Abraham. Nothing could be more improbable at the time than this event; yet the prediction has been fulfilling, most exactly and minutely, during the course of almost 4,000 years.—T. Scott. "And thou shalt be a blessing." A blessing in thyself, and a source of blessing to others. It is more blessed to give than to receive, and the Lord here confers on Abram the delightful prerogative of dispensing good.—Murphy. "And I will bless them that bless thee." Abraham's cause was to be so identified with God's cause, that whosoever favored Abraham favored God and his kingdom. So far as we are the true children of God, this is true also of us.

"And curse him that curseth thee." This is the other side of the same promise. Abraham in character, works, and representative position as the founder of the church, was so identified with God that whosoever hated and opposed him hated and opposed God. God therefore would be his defence. "The good man is not alone. Touch him, and you touch God."

"All families of the earth be blessed." This promise was fulfilled (1) in the benefits which the world has received from the industry, wealth, genius, and morality of the Jewish people; (2) in the benefits which have come to the world through the Scriptures, the law, the literature, the religious spirit, and particularly the monotheism of the Hebrew people; and (3) in the blessings which have come to the world through the Messiah who was "Abraham's seed" (Gal. 3:8-16).—Todd.

"And the Lord appeared unto Abram." This is the first time that any appearance of the Deity is mentioned here though Stephen (Acts 7:2) says that God appeared unto Abram in Ur. The great majority of the fathers think that this appearance was through the Angel of Jehovah, who was Christ himself, appearing occasionally to men before his incarnation.

"Unto thy seed will I give this land." To himself God gave "none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on" (Acts 7:5). This appearance and promise seem to have been given to Abraham (1) to announce to him that this was the land he had selected for him, according to his former promise; (2) to assure him how the promise would be fulfilled, although Abram had no children, and the land was already occupied by a strong race.—P.

"And there (in Shechem) builded he an altar unto the Lord." As Jacob did afterward (28:18-20). Thus, by means of a religious act he assumed the proprietorship of the land. The sanctuary stood there in the time of Joshua (Josh. 24:1, 25, 26), and the law was proclaimed with blessings from Gerizim, and curses from Ebal (Deut. 27:12; Josh. 8:33-35). Here, also, Joshua gave his parting counsels to the people (Josh. 24:1, 25).—Pulpit Com. This altar was (1) a proof of his faith in God's promise; (2) a renewed consecration of himself as a worshiper of God; (3) a taking possession of the land in God's name; (4) a testimony to the heathen nations, concerning the one true God and his true worship.—P.

Here Abraham found (1) the comfort of the Divine presence. He was not forsaken. (2) The joy of the Divine manifestations; the assurance of sympathy, love, protection. (3) The consolations of Divine worship. He learned (1) that a saint's wanderings are of God's appointing; (2) that a saint's trials are of God's permitting; (3) that a saint's consolations are of God's sending. Whitlaw.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington, in a letter written a year before his death: "I preside over no lodge, nor have I been in one more than once or twice during the last thirty years."

President Millard Fillmore, J. C. Spencer and others: "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Chief Justice John Marshall: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned as one capable of much evil and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

John Quincy Adams: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

General A. W. Riley: "I hold that the difference between the Christian and a heathen religion is, that one has morality and the other has not. And when our churches refuse to speak of such subjects as slavery, liquor-selling and secret societies, they are becoming heathen religions; that is, religions without morals."

Charles Francis Adams: "Every man who takes a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment would be a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

Dierckx, Lord Beaconsfield: In conducting the governments of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but secret orders to be reckoned, which have agents everywhere—considered agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

General J. W. Phelps: "All secret organizations are links of one and the same chain which binds men to evil and not to good. The Masonic lodge is the parent source from which all similar modern organizations have emanated and this lodge is now in active operation in every city and considerable village of the country swaying our parties and churches; filling our offices, secular and divine, with its partisans; shaping our political destinies; and teaching a spurious and corrupting morality subversive both of the Christian religion and of free institutions."

Thurston Weed: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

A. M. Sullivan, Irish Leader: I had not studied in vain the history of secret, oath-bound associations. I regarded them with horror. I knew all that could be said as to their advantages in revolutionizing a country, but even in the firmest and best of hands they had a direct tendency to demoralization and are often on the whole more perilous to society than open tyranny."

Hon. Edward Blake, leader in Canadian Parliament, March, 1884: "I am not in favor of State recognition of any secret societies. I have never joined one, though many of my best friends are members of secret societies. But I believe the tendency of secrecy itself to be injurious. I believe that it brings with it the possibility of evil; I believe that it involves a certain amount of sacrifice of individuality and independence, and gives very great facilities for the misleading of members by designing leaders—very great and mischievous facilities for that purpose." "I believe that a great deal of the trouble, social and political, that has occurred in those countries [Europe and America] is due to secret societies."

George Washington (to Gov. Trumbull): "Masonry is a benevolent institution, which may be employed for the best or worst purposes."

Edward Everett: "A secret society so widely diffused and connected as this puts a vast power, capable of the most dangerous abuse, into hands irresponsible to the public."

Richard Rush: Hooker, personifying law, eloquently exclaims, "her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; everything on earth does her homage, the highest is not beyond her control, the least as claiming her protection." Masonry has overset this primordial system. She has dethroned this image of God upon earth. To reinstate it over so insolent a victor, we must have a political organization. There is no other way of assaulting, there is no other hope of vanquishing, there need be no other dream of humbling such a foe. It fights with desperation."

Wendell Phillips: "History shows them perverting justice, stopping at no crime to protect and conceal their mummeries; controlling politics for selfish and personal ends, and interfering with great danger in national emergencies. Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are forbidden by law and rooted out of existence."

John Hancock: "I am opposed to all secret associations."

James Madison: "From the number and character of those who now support the charges against Masonry, I cannot doubt that it is at least susceptible of abuse, outweighing any advantages promised by its patrons."

General U. S. Grant: "All secret, oath-bound political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first bring them together."

Myron Holley of New York: "Such a rebellion Freemasonry has raised. It has violated the dearest rights of nature, and the most sacred enactments of our laws, and this in a spirit manifestly treasonable, for it has done this in pursuance of solemn, deliberate and voluntary obligations to a foreign government,—I mean its own—a government far more alien to that which claims our allegiance than any which has ever afflicted mankind."

Gerrit Smith, in an address, 1870: "Masonry murdered Morgan. If it could not conceal his murderers, it nevertheless protected them. It overrode the laws of the land and ruled the courts and the ballot-boxes. Moreover, it is capable of repeating the crimes. Why then should we not read secret societies, and do what we can to bring them to an end?"

William Wirt: "If this be Masonry, as according to uncontradicted evidence it seems to be, I have no hesitation in saying that I consider it at war with the fundamental principles of the social compact, and a wicked conspiracy against the laws of God and man, that ought to be put down."

Joseph Ritner, governor of Pennsylvania, 1837: "If it be true as the lamented Colden (himself one of the initiated) declared that many a Mason became a great man but no great man ever became a Mason, how nearly does it concern the youth of our country to pause and reflect before they commit their present standing and future reputation to the keeping of a society, which for its cold-hearted and selfish purposes could immolate even the fame of Washington at the shrine of its abominations."

Levis Tappan, private journal, 1814: "Dr. Dixwell gave me lectures on Masonry at his house." "In September left the lodge." Letter, Jan. 21, 1829: "I am free to say that I henceforth renounce Freemasonry, considering it a useless and profane institution."

George Washington, to friends in 1794, quoted by Myron Holley: "The real people occasionally assembled in order to express their sentiments on political sentiments, ought never to be confounded with permanent, self-appointed societies, usurping the right to control constituted authorities, and to dictate to public opinion. While the former was entitled to respect, the latter was incompatible with all government, and must either sink into general dis-esteem, or finally overturn the established order of things."

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGE-ERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)
Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sanford Co., Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonic, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Ferry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopesdon, Ill.; Esmer, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.
Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solisbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky.; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONTRES, Andros, Greece.
C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.
The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship," the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated," the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies," a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders, from Drs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Pres. George and Blanchard

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT.—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SECY. AND GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECY. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is: "To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being leproyed, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform. FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. J. S. McCulloch, D. D.

SECRETARY.—Rev. Lewis Johnston.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres. Prof. Pickens; Sec. G. M. Elliott; Treas. Rev. C. B. Curtis, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres. L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec. Mrs. U. F. Merrill, Woodland; Treas. C. Rudock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres. J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec. Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas. C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres. J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec. H. L. Kellogg; Treas. W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres. William H. Figg, Reno; Sec. S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas. Benj. Ulah Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres. Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec. H. W. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec. D. C. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas. James Harvey.

KANSAS.—Pres. J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec. W. W. McMullan, Olathe; Treas. J. A. Torrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres. S. A. Pratt; Sec. Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas. David Manning Jr., Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres. D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y. H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres. E. G. Paine, Waseota; Cor. Sec. W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y. Thos. Hartley, Richard; Treas. Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres. B. F. Miller, Eagleview; Treas. William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres. S. Austin, Fairmont; Cor. Sec. W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas. J. G. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres. Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec. S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas. James F. French, Canterbury.

NEW YORK.—Pres. F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y. John Walla, Syracuse; Treas. M. Merriek, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres. Rev. R. M. Smith, Painesville; Rec. Sec. Rev. Colman, Utica; Cor. Sec. and Treas. Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres. A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec. N. Callender, Thompson; Treas. W. B. Bertles, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres. R. W. Laird, St. Johnsbury; Sec. C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres. J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec. W. W. Ames, Marshfield; Treas. M. R. Britten, Velaus.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD.

EDITORS.

HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 20, 1887.

A writer in the Saratoga Eagle puts down Washington, Lincoln, Adams, Gerrit Smith and other "great leaders of the people," as infidels. Kossuth speaks of such men as under "an immense ignorance." Washington was a devout worshiper of God. The Adamses were all pious; and Lincoln's piety and belief in prayer are well known. Gerrit Smith observed family prayer to the last, repeating, without reading, the Bible by chapters before he led in prayer.

A year before William Lloyd Garrison formed the first Abolition society, the United Synod of Cincinnati appointed a day of fasting and prayer for the overthrow of American slavery; and also a committee of three, Crothers, Fullerton and Graham, who issued the pamphlet from which Weld drew his celebrated "Bible Argument." Mr. Garrison's no-voting, no-Government, no-Sabbath theories, repelled religious men from the anti-slavery cause, till Phelps, Leavitt, the Tappans, and other Christian men took it up and carried it to completion.

BISHOP VAIL became the Episcopal Bishop of Arkansas while a young man. Wishing to gain the influence of Freemasons, he went to Davenport, where his friend, the rector of the Episcopal church, was a Freemason, and by dispensation, obtained by Rev. Mr. Allen, the rector, he was made Master Mason in a single night. Next day, he said to his friend the rector, "I feel distressed. My Master's oath, taken last night, binds me to conceal every crime but two, if made known to me Masonically; arson, adultery, theft, every crime but murder and treason." "I called his attention to the wording of the oath, 'be being worthy,' and that satisfied him," said Mr. Allen. That is, if a Mason tells you, on the square, that he has burned a house, or stolen a horse, he being worthy, you may conceal his crime. When these facts were given us by Bro. Allen, he was Episcopal rector in Aurora, Illinois.

NEW LAND IN AN OLD COUNTRY.—Florida, the land of flowers, is unique and sui generis. A hill an hundred feet high is a marvel. Nature has graded it for railroads, and the forests, which are pine trees without limbs, till you get to their evergreen umbrellas at the top, are ready to be sawed up into depots or laid down in ties. The ocean on three sides of the State, makes the guano beds of the islands, the barn-yards filled with bird-manure for ages, ready to fertilize the warm sand soil. Dr. Bishop, whom we have already noticed, has lately joined Sanford, the head of steam boat navigation on the St. John's river, with Lake Eustis on the West. Whoever wants a winter residence among orange groves, to make playthings of alligators, as Job did of young behemoths, to see another continent without leaving this, and to help plant a civilization without socialism, and religion without superstition, had better write for information to Dr. J. N. Bishop, Paola, Florida.

CHAS. B. KNIGHT.—We clip the following commendatory resolutions of the above gentleman from the Chicago Lever. They are by the Worcester county committee, the great inland political headquarters of Massachusetts. Mr. Knight is a Prohibitionist. He is also an American, and if a reform party including both, by dropping the secret lodges, shall carry the country in 1892, Mr. Knight will be apt to hold a prominent place in that party. This is not impossible. The lodge, like Lucifer, falls suddenly when it falls (Isa. 14: 2). The argument is so overwhelming against splitting up a party into secret squads, pledged to conceal their proceedings from each other, that the Prohibition party must quit it:

At a meeting of the Worcester county, Mass., committee of the Prohibition party, Dec. 22, 1886, the following resolution was unanimously passed:

WHEREAS, Hon. Chas. B. Knight of this city has announced his intention of leaving our county to take up his residence in the great West, and

WHEREAS, the record of Mr. Knight in this State for the past decade has been one of untiring energy and zeal in behalf of the great principles of the Prohibition party, and has made him a valued leader in the party work:

Resolved, That we, the members of the Prohibition committee of Worcester county, desire to express our regret at the departure of Mr. Knight, and to commend him to Prohibitionists everywhere as a consistent Christian gentleman and Prohibitionist, giving him our hearty God-speed wherever he may choose to labor.

THE AMERICAN HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

This great American institution is above seventy years old, and from small beginnings has now some 1,500 ministers in its service. New York and Ohio "The West" when this Society arose, and as the sea of human beings has swept across the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific coast, the churches of this Society have furnished the white-caps of its billows. Of 116 Congregational churches in the 700 miles of California, 109 have been planted by this Society; and that is but a specimen of what it has done for each State, which in turn became frontier.

The good Dr. Badger, long secretary of this great Society, said to the writer when urging him to withhold aid from slave-holding churches, "We are but the instrument in the hand of the churches." "Go to the associations. We shall act against slavery when they wish us to do so." "Brother," was our answer, "one half of the ministers in those associations are or have been your beneficiaries; and they shrink from going in advance of their employers. They wait for you and you for them; and the mills of slavery are grinding up the nation." Not very long after Dr. Badger's committee dropped slave-holding churches, unless the members who held slaves could show they intended to emancipate. And Dr. Badger rose in the General Association in Rockford, Ill., and thanked us for our "patience during our complicity with slavery."

Afterward, when the first tract was being issued to save our churches from being disintegrated by the lodge, Dr. Badger said to us, "Send the tract to me and we will supply all our missionaries with them." He died before it was done.

Will the Congress which is expected to meet soon in Chicago, prepare and furnish the secretaries of each church missionary society a tract, showing by statistical illustrations, from the South especially, that the swarms of secret orders are devouring the time and means of church members, so that when the dues are all paid nothing, or but little, is left for the pastor and his wife and children. A naked accurate statement of facts would astonish and revolutionize our churches and pastors, so that they would shout, as did the people of Mexico, who had been ground up between the York and Scotch rites: "Down with secret societies!"

The American Home Missionary Society has lately been forced to borrow $50,000 to sustain their faithful missionaries this cold winter. The men are paying the lodge dues and the women are supporting the missionary societies!

SO MANY GOOD MEN!

In 1826 the lodge in Batavia, Genesee county, New York, contained the Episcopal minister and every male member of his church. The leading Presbyterian elder was master of the lodge, and a deacon of the church was senior deacon of the lodge. This was a specimen of the lodges in the twelve western counties. If there were any "good men" in those counties, many "good men" were in the lodges. All these lodges met and agreed to lie, and did lie, all saying the same thing, that Masonry had nothing to do with Morgan's taking off, but that he was a worthless man, arrested for the larceny of a shirt and cravat. This did not appease the people. Meetings were held and resolutions were passed demanding, "Have we any government? Any protection of our lives?" "Where is the Grand Jury?" "Where the sheriff of Genesee county?"

Morgan was taken September 26th. It was now winter. The Grand Jury of Genesee county, driven by the popular rage and excitement to do something, met in their room, which was on the ground floor. That jury consisted of twenty-four men, all Masons but two and most of them had been in the lodge meetings, and shared the discussions, what to do with Morgan, and knew all about his abduction. To appease the popular rage they met in their office, and deliberately set to work to sham an investigation, and publish that they had done their best and could learn nothing about Morgan's disappearance. Samuel D. Greene had saved Miller, and broken with the lodge by various acts. To silence him the Grand Jury called him as a witness, to question him whether he knew what had become of Morgan, supposing he would not dare to tell what he knew, and if he denied all knowledge of the case it would prevent his being believed if he should come out and tell the truth.

They called him to meet the Grand Jury. The long table was moved up near the coal grate, and Greene stood up confronted [by a half-room of twenty-four] men. He stood on the side of the table next to the jury. Said the foreman, "Mr. Greene, the jury have sent for you to ask if you can throw any light on the disappearance of our fellow citizen, William Morgan!"

Relating this to the writer, Mr. Greene said, "I felt cold and hard, as if my body had been suddenly turned to stone. I thought of the horrid oaths that I had taken; of my wife and children; of the imprecations and threats I had heard from many of those before me, while Morgan and his book were under discussion; and for an instant I felt unable to move or speak. All at once I felt a hot streak about the size of a knitting needle running down my back. I instantly straightened up and said, pointing to the foreman and then to others, whom I had seen in the lodge during the discussions, 'You know what became of Morgan, and you, and you. Where shall I begin?'"

"The foreman sprang at me with the leap of a tiger, and, with clenched fist at my face, exclaimed, 'G—d— you, begin where you please!' Others rushed to me with similar expressions, when two jurymen stood up by my side, saying, 'Mr. Greene, we have taken none of their cursed oaths, and you shall not be hurt!' By this time loud talking was heard at the door of the office, and people were jamming against the door to get in. The door was opened and the jury dissolved and disappeared in the crowd."

This talk with Mr. Greene was at the hotel, Chelsea, Mass. Dr. Edward Beecher had referred the writer to Mr. Greene as a former member of his (Park Street) church in Boston. He (Greene) was then between 70 and 80 years old, strong, hale, and hearty. He talked till 2 o'clock that night. His robust frame trembled like an aspen leaf while he spoke of his meeting that Grand Jury.

APPLICATION.

1. Good men with Mason's oaths in them may think they do God service while killing Christ's disciples.
2. If there were any good men in western New York in 1826, multitudes of them were in the lodges.
3. To meet popular and political opposition, the men who gave money and sanction to Morgan's murder attempted a sham investigation and wholesale falsehood to save the lodge.
4. No enlightened man can safely vote under John B. Finch and J. N. Stearns, because they may be "good men."

THE RELIGIOUS TELESCOPE.

This paper was started fifty-three years ago (1834), when the Abolition batteries were just opening. Garrison's Liberator was one or two years old, and the first National Anti-slavery Convention had just been held in Philadelphia.

The United Brethren church was, like its great Master, born in a stable, unless "Isaac Long's Barn" is entitled to a larger name to comport with its dimensions; and as its members were in the back settlements, and away from the towns, they had to look through the Telescope to see the busy world. It was printed at Circleville, Ohio, Bro. Rhinehart, editor. It was one year old when the senior editor of the Cynosure lectured through southern and central Pennsylvania for the abolition of slavery, and the sight of a Telescope gave a thrill of joy. The United Brethren church had then nine conferences, and the Pennsylvania conference, counting locals, had ninety preachers.

Two brethren in Maryland or Virginia had, by marriage, become owners of two or three slaves. The Telescope contained this resolution: "That unless these brethren do manumit and set free such slaves within six months, they cease to be members of our church." These facts were sent to the New York Emancipator, and gave a thrill of joy to the Abolitionists throughout the Union.

The Telescope, Jan. 5, gives a charming report of Dr. Lewis Davis's speech at an Alumni meeting of the first United Brethren college, Otterbein University. We thank the Telescope for this and many other good deeds. Its editor, Dr. Hott, and publisher, W. J. Shuey, both endorse the coming Christian Congress in Chicago against the secret lodge system, of which Dr. Davis, Halleck Floyd, and Dr. McNew were among the first to issue the call; and it is hoped the speech, paper or article of Dr. Davis will have prominence in the volume which the Congress should issue, which is to voice the churches of the United States.

Meantime will not the Telescope allow the Cynosure to suggest that it treat the lodge as the fathers treated it and its twin evil, slavery, and as Drs. Davis, McCosh, Storrs, Talmage, and other best men of the country now treat it. When Dr. McCosh signed the endorsement of the call for the Chicago Congress, he said, in his pleasant Scotch, "If ye chase secret societies out of the colleges, ye'll do a good thing. We did it," with a strong emphasis.

If the Telescope will treat the lodge as it does the saloon, viz., have a weekly column against it, teaching the same doctrine they now hold, in less than a year the breach in that church would be so nearly closed that a little child could step across it. The Telescope brethren boast that they keep their children out of the lodges. Why not help keep other folk's children out? Until this is done, the salvation of that good church depends on supporting the Conservator until the two can be fused into one paper. The lodge is idolatry, gentileism, demon worship, or religion without Christ, as Dr. George proves in his Knoxville address, with great clearness. If the Telescope does not see all this, it sees enough to hate it; and if it is an evil, it should at least devote a column a week to opposing it. Otherwise men of their capacity and judgment will not be believed sincere. "We beseech you, brethren, suffer this word of exhortation."

—Bro. Hinman left Washington last week for another tour in the South, stopping first at Richmond where his conversations with colored pastors greatly encouraged him. We regret the necessity of holding the letter until next week.

—The Aurora, a bright and beautiful monthly from Knoxville College, Tennessee, contains a fine report of the late convention in that city, and notices of a sermon by Secretary Stoddard and a lecture by President C. A. Blanchard. In a late note mention was made in these columns of Miss Wallace, which might be understood as calling her the matron of the college. She is Lady Principal; Mrs. Julia Norton is matron.

—Our readers will note with regret the absence of Miss Flagg's notes from our Sabbath-school department. The illness of her mother compels her reluctantly to postpone her work in this direction. Word from her last week informs us that her mother is rapidly failing, and requires her constant attendance night and day, beside the help of a nurse. The sympathy of all who know Miss Flagg and esteem her "for her works' sake," will go out to her in this time of trial, with the prayer for the blessing of heaven's light and peace in that room of sickness and death.

—Secretary Stoddard spent the Sabbath in Berea, Kentucky, speaking three times. He expected to reach Chicago Tuesday. Just before leaving Knoxville he met the Methodist pastor, who spoke of attending the convention, and rejoiced to know that the discussion of the lodge was going on. He had been himself a member of five orders but had renounced them all. He left Masonry twenty years ago. Thus we are cheered by one more proof of the power of the truth of God.

—The Band of Hope which meets at No. 221 W. Madison street has completed its fifth year. It is probably the oldest juvenile society which teaches the principles of the Cynosure. During the past year fifty meetings of the Band have been held. The children are taught Scripture passages, religious songs, anti-secret and temperance principles, and sewing. Sixty-eight names are enrolled. The average attendance for past year has been about twenty-four. Expenses, paid by donations and collections, not including hall rent which is also donated, were about $25.00.

—Rev. Henry M. Bissell, a graduate of Wheaton in 1873 and related to our publisher and to President Stratton of Wheaton by marriage, has been engaged as missionary in Guadalajara and La Barca, Mexico, for several years. With the first of January he began the publication of a little monthly as a supplementary work to the mission. Among its departments we notice one on temperance, and Bro. Bissell writes that it is the experience of missionaries in Mexico that the secret society question must be taken up ere long. They see more of the lodge to call for condemnation there than in this country.

—Our able co-worker in the field of Christian reform, the Christian Statesman of Philadelphia, has been made the happy and deserved recipient of such a donation as lifts it entirely out of debt and puts it upon a new and substantial business basis. Through the generosity of Mr. John Alexander of Philadelphia this work has been done, a stock company formed with a capital of $20,000 and Rev. J. H. Leiper of Ohio elected business manager. Mr. Leiper lately took 400 subscribers in Western Pennsylvania.

—Circulars from Wheaton College, issued about the close of 1886, show an attendance at that time of 175 with an increase promised after holidays. The revival of a few weeks past was an untold blessing to the institution and the town. A protracted meeting is now being held by the Methodist brethren in the west part of town. For the building fund of the College $2,000 have already been pledged, and special gifts have cleared up the extra expenses of the institution for a good part of the year.

—It is a pleasure to call attention to the list of contributors to the fund for sending the Cynosure to the colored pastors of the South. But we regret at the same time that the list is not longer. Few investments for Gospel work are likely to give better returns than this. Let every reader of the Cynosure make sure that his name appears in this list during the year, and the earlier the better.

"Shall we to men benighted,
The lamp of life deny."

Let us be faithful to Christ and consistent with our profession in this matter.

—Rev. Lewis Johnson, of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, was secretary of the late National Convention in Knoxville. He was reared in the family of Dr. A. M. Milligan and educated at Geneva College, graduating in the class with Rev. M. A. Gault and Rev. J. C. McFeeters. His theological studies were pursued under Prof. Sloane in the Allegheny Seminary. He impressed us all with his candor, intelligence and piety, and when he expressed a desire to take up the work of the N. C. A. in the South, the proposition seemed to be most Providential. Bro. Johnson has been employed in teaching public school and preaching for the Presbyterian Missionary society. We hope to hear that he has perfected arrangements so that he can soon begin work for the N. C. A.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Both Houses of Congress have been occupied part of the week with private legislation, as the passage of about forty-five pension bills will show; but important public measures have also been discussed. Among these may be mentioned the great question of Interstate commerce, and the Mexican Reciprocity treaty, which is treated behind barred doors.

When the bill granting a pension of $2,000 a year to the widow of General Logan came up, a good deal was said as to whether or not the Senator's death was in any way the result of wounds or exposure in the army. Several Senators argued that it was, and Senator Mitchell mentioned that he had once heard General Logan say that he did not intend to ask for it.

About this time Senator Vest of Missouri came forward with a glowing description of the services to the Union of General Francis Blair, and proposed an amendment to increase the pension of $50 a month, now paid to his widow, to $2,000 a year. This was quite a surprise to some of the Senators, but they told Mr. Vest they would vote to increase Mrs. Blair's pension as a separate measure if he would withdraw his proposition. Mr. Vest took note of these fair promises and resumed his seat. Then Senator Berry of Arkansas, who rarely speaks in the Senate Chamber, arose to say that if Mrs. Logan was to have $2,000 a year, he did not see why every widow of every officer from Major Generals to Lieutenants should not have the same. He expressed high regard for the dead Senator, but he felt sure that General Logan himself would not desire his widow to be put on the pension roll. Shortly after this the bill passed, but the Arkansas Senator did not vote either way.

Immediately Senator Vest was on his feet again, asking to introduce a bill out of order, and offering a measure to increase the pension of General Blair's widow to $2,000 a year. The Senators were again surprised, but they were in a generous mood, and not being able to turn so quickly from the promises they had made while Mrs. Logan's pension was up, they voted as requested by the Senator from Missouri. Mr. Vest smiled complacently at his achievement and the Senate proceeded with routine business.

There are different rumors in regard to another Tariff crisis, but it is probable the question as to whether revenue matters are to be taken up in the House this session will be soon settled. "What are you going to do about the Tariff?" was asked by one of the best informed of Mr. Randall's followers. "We are going to reduce the revenue," he answered. "If Mr. Morrison does not move soon Mr. Randall will take the initiative." The definite result of the caucus held at Mr. Randall's house a few evenings since, was a decision to call up their revenue propositions, which favors a repeal of the tobacco tax, the tax on alcohol used in the arts, and certain special liquor license taxes.

A meeting of the Board of Indian Commissioners was lately held here, at which General Clinton B. Fisk, prominently mentioned as Prohibition candidate in 1888, was chairman. Reports of various churches and societies supporting schools and missions among the Indians were made. Dr. Sheldon Jackson, Superintendent of the Indian Schools and Missions in Alaska, commented on the fact that although there are over 12,000 school children there, Congress, last year, appropriated only $15,000 toward the expenses of their instruction, while this year no provision whatever is made for that purpose.

The fact that General Logan leaves only a few thousand dollars to his family after a long career in Congress, has surprised many persons who have had an idea that the United States Senate was a sort of asylum for rich men. It is true there are a good many millionaires in the north end of the Capitol, but there are more who are only comfortably well off, and some who are as poor and even poorer than General Logan. There are just fifteen members of the Upper House who are reputed to own a million or more. Senator Stanford of California, with Senators Fair of Nevada and Palmer of Michigan, are said to be twenty and thirty times millionaires, while Mr. Whithorne of Tennessee is accredited with more poverty than any other Senator. There are several, however, who have to live entirely on their salaries.

Labor is the life of the country; and he who dishonors it with this opprobrious name of "scab" is the lineal descendant of the slave driver of ante-bellum times; their community of feeling is due to almost exactly similar reasons. We believe that no periodical of the kind has paid more attention than has the Century to the labor question, or shown greater sympathy with all who work. But we shall never cease to protest against tyranny, whether exercised by combined capital or by combined labor. And we shall do all we can to hasten the day when these imported methods of keeping down laboring men to a dead level of energy and opportunity shall be utterly eliminated. The Statue of Liberty at the gate of the new world will be a shameful fraud if the first principles of individual freedom are to be defied by the very men who should most jealously guard the liberty which our Constitution guarantees to every American citizen. What the workingmen need to-day is not leaders who preach the gospel of the dead level, or flout before their eyes doubtful theories and panaceas of "reform," but rather leaders of the type of Lincoln, who study their needs, sympathize with their burdens, and illustrate in their own lives the upward path of free, honorable, and self-respectful labor. The dead Lincoln is a better leader than the live theorist or demagogue.—Century for January.

OUR POLE STAR NEVER SETS.

THE CYNOSURE FOR 1887.

The readers who have welcomed our weekly visits for 1886 will be pleased to know something of the plans maturing for their benefit during the coming year.

The star beams of the Cynosure have shone upon the portraits and the characters of twelve noble men as the months of 1886 have passed: David Bernard, George W. Clark, John G. Fee, Charles C. Foote, John B. Gough, J. R. W. Sloane, George Thompson, Samuel D. Greene, Nathan Brown, Philo Carpenter, John Dougall, George F. Pentecost, and Charles Francis Adams—each a noble life, full of such excellencies as all should imitate.

We have in preparation biographies of other men as worthy, and fine portraits are already of such statesmen as: SUMNER, SEWARD, WEBSTER, GLADSTONE, with HOWARD CROSBY, and BISHOP HAMLINE, and "JOHN BROWN, OSSAWATOMIE BROWN."

The complete list we do not wish to promise, since the changes of the year will make calls that cannot be anticipated. But the biographical department will be as full and rich as ever.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED BY "Great Men in the State," will be completed; and will be followed by the condemnations of "Great Men in the Church," of "the Public Press," and "Out of their own Mouth." The compilation of these extracts will involve prolonged and patient labor, but the work will be made as perfect as possible. A list of papers which oppose the lodge is also preparing. This is also requiring much examination.

The center of interest for the year will be in the Christian Congress. This meeting will receive the most careful attention of the Cynosure, and the most complete report may be expected in its columns. The development of the work in the South will also be closely followed, and in every possible way encouraged, as well as the lecture work in the several States.

NO GENUINE ANTI-MASON

can afford to be without the Cynosure next year. The growing list of contributors and correspondents constantly invites companionship with some of the bravest and noblest men living. Look back over the list of hundreds who have written and you may justly dread even a short separation from their estimable company.

The Christian Cynosure will be, God willing, the paper for Christian reformers in 1887. Let it have the patronage of thousands to whom it is now a stranger.

THE HOME.

"GOD BLESS OUR HOME."

We come from the fog-laden streets of the city,
From wide windy spaces where the cold has no pity,
From close darkened room, or from bleak hill and moor,
To thankfully enter the welcoming door,—
And God bless our home!

We come from the fights and the races of life,
From the fierce din of voices, the conflict and strife,
From the tempests of words that are thundered loud,
From the riot, unquiet, and stress of the crowd,
And God bless our home!

O snug little nest, in a shelter so cheery,
O place of sweet rest for the troubled and weary,
Each day has its Sabbath of prayer and of psalm
Where the church in the House is kept sacred and calm,
So God bless our home!

No spot is so near to the heart, nor is any Ignored by so few, or beloved by so many;
Where dear eyes smile on us and kind voices speak,
There find we the pledge of the heaven we seek,
And God bless our home!

Yes, God give the home his abundant good blessing,
God shelter its roof from all evil distressing,
And grant to its inmates the spirit of love
Which rules in the House of our Father above,
And so bless our home.

God make us unselfish, devoted and dutiful,
Meek, merry, and kindly, wise, tender and beautiful,
And not only hear when we offer our prayer,
But himself love our home, and abide with us there,
And so God bless our home.

—Marianne Farningham.

THE IDEAL HOUSEHOLD.

In Scripture, the unit is not the individual but the household. Adam stood for the race in Eden; Noah's family went into the ark for his sake; Lot's household was warned of the coming ruin; Abraham was called as the head of an elect family; children were recognized and sealed, as in covenant, before they could understand any moral duties or relations. God has always loved the children for the fathers' sakes, and visited the iniquities of the fathers upon the children. The family is organically a unit.

The Word of God emphasizes the household. It is the basis of church and of state, and the foretaste of heaven. It behooves us to ask carefully, what are the conditions of an ideal family relation, toward which we should direct our aims and efforts? We answer:

AUTHORITY.

I. First of all, in every true household there must be authority. Gen. 18: 19, "I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him," etc. Let us not be afraid of that strong word, "command." There is no basis of family life where there is not authority on the one hand and obedience on the other. Children need law, not simply advice or counsel or even example. It may be well often to show them the reason that underlies a command and the reasonableness of authority; but it is sometimes quite as well not to assign a reason, in order that the habit of implicit, immediate, and unquestioning submission may be formed.

The importance of such authority appears mainly in the fact that it is the natural condition of a supernatural work in the hearts of our children. The habit of implicit obedience prepares the child to submit to God. If he has been wont to yield a prompt and unquestioning compliance to the earthly father, when he becomes conscious of a heavenly Father who demands his obedience, it becomes easy and natural to transfer his habitual submission to him. What assurance have we that our children will obey God, if they have not been taught, and, if necessary, compelled to obey us?

UNITY.

II. We should cultivate family unity. There is a unity in evil, that comes without culture. (See Jer. 7: 18.) When idolatry found its way into the families of Judah, the Ishtar or "Easter" cakes were made for Astarte, and all helped in their way. The children gathered wood, the fathers kindled the fire, and the women kneaded the dough. If we are to have unity in good things, however, it must be cultivated.

There ought to be a distinct and definite plan in our household life; a noble standard set up, around which all our family forces should be rallied. From the beginning, common principles should be cherished and common habits formed. And it should be a grave matter which is allowed to invade our unity. He who introduces the first dividing element, the first centripetal force, into the household, takes a grave responsibility, and risks not only damage to the family life but divine correction to himself. To separate one's self from the church to which the family go; to marry into a family with whom there can be no sympathy and fellowship; to deliberately seek amusements known to be obnoxious to the family tastes and principles, is an unenviable responsibility, and may be the entering wedge that splits the household in twain.

SYMPATHY.

III. There should be an intimate family sympathy. It is a great mistake for parents and children to hold each other at arm's length—to associate only formally and occasionally. An occasional unbending on the part of the parent, becoming a child among children; indulging in childish sports and even romps, getting down to their level, if rightly controlled, will draw children toward the parents in tenderest love and sympathy. I know a noble man, who, as a father, goes off with his boys camping out on the mountains. There is between father and sons the fullest freedom, the most sympathetic relations; yet every look and word and act on their part exhibits the deepest filial reverence. So among the members of the family there may and should be such sympathy, as that no words should be more suggestive of intimate and loving fellowship than "brother" and "sister." How much can be done in these directions by the simple habit of consulting each other's temperament, taste and preference in all matters of family life.

PRIVACY.

IV. There is an important condition of true household life that we may call privacy. Every family has a right to a certain reticacy, which strangers and even friends should not disregard. There is a freedom of intercourse between members of one household which may be prevented if not destroyed by the frequent presence of outsiders. There ought to be hours and times when visits are an intrusion. Yet there are some families that are never alone; and some visitors are so constant that family life loses all its freedom and privacy.

One of the worst results of such invasion of family life is that misunderstandings and misrepresentations often are promoted. A husband and wife learn to understand each other. So do parents and children. A stranger may easily misconceive the spirit in which something is said or done, and carry the misconception to others, construing authority into severity, rebuke into petulance, pleasantries into discourtesy, or firmness into harshness.

Again, this intrusion of strangers brings notions into the family which are out of harmony with the teachings and laws of the parent; notions of fashion and dress, of amusements and society, and even of religion. I know a prudent and far-seeing mother who would never allow her daughters to sleep under any roof but that of home, because of the fact that she could not be responsible for what they would learn in other homes. And yet consider how especially ministers' families are invaded and intruded upon at all hours and seasons by outsiders, till, in some cases, all privacy is at an end. (See Neh. 13: 24.)

COURTESY.

V. An ideal family will be marked by family courtesy, or politeness in little things. Family freedom may become license. An inconsiderate selfishness sometimes displaces all practical regard for other's enjoyment or even improvement. Nothing promotes household harmony more than a delicate consideration for other members, their physical weaknesses, intellectual tastes, infirmities of disposition, moral preferences and principles. Children should be taught not to beat their drums or blow their whistles in sensitive ears, not to romp on the stairs and bang the doors, to the distraction of a mother whose nerves are already overstrung and overtaxed. There is no reason why any child should be allowed to pursue his pleasures to the discomfort of everybody else. I have known a young man to sit and smoke in the common sitting-room and compel everybody else to "smoke" involuntarily or leave the room, or practice on a fiddle till he drove sensitive ears nearly distracted.

PIETY.

VI. Last of all, yet first of all, we need family piety, i. e., a household recognition of God. Not simply children taught to pray, but habitual gatherings of "the church that is in the house," in recognition of God and for his worship. The simple "grace" at meals in the family, thanking God for providential mercies—the family Bible, the family praise and prayer, the family conversation about God and the soul, the family recitations of Scripture and the Catechism cannot be displaced properly by any personal, individual spiritual culture. Here is the covenant bond acknowledged and daily ratified.

Wonderful indeed is its power. Children grow up accustomed to associate every meal with devout acknowledgments of God's goodness; they see every day begin and ended with the Bible and prayer; they unconsciously breathe an atmosphere of family religion, and are often influenced by it before they are aware. Nothing is more moulding, said Arnold, in a school than the esprit du corps, or more properly the prevailing tone and sentiment which may have no formal expression. And so in the household, it is the waters of Shiloah that carry healing; not so much any one thing said, taught or done, as the invisible, inaudible, insensible something, which is, like the manhood of Chatham, finer than anything he ever said. We need God in the family, worshipped, recognized, loved, served; and more will come out of our families to love and serve him.—Dr. A. T. Pierson, in N. Y. Observer.

TWO ROOMS.

A beautiful room with tinted walls,
A bust were the colored sunshine falls,
A lace-hung bed with a satin fold,
A lovely room all blue and gold,
And enuoi.

A quaint old room, with rafters bare,
A small white bed, a rocking chair,
A book, a stalk where a flower had been,
An open door, and all within Content.

—Good Housekeeping.

THE IDEAL FAMILY.

The first great essentials of the ideal home and the ideal family are constant love, confidence, devotion, unselfishness, willingness to spend and be spent in the service of one another. The ideal home is one where the children shall say: "When we marry, and have homes of our own, we wish to love and be loved as our father and mother love each other." It is where the sons are taught respect for all women by the deference and kindness of their father to their mother; it is where daughters learn from their mother's patient example how beautiful a thing wifely and motherly affection is; learn the beauty of daily, unselfish devotion to the good of all. It is one where the atmosphere of love and kindness is so all-pervading that it softens every privation, ennobles every humble duty, and stimulates constantly all noble and unselfish aims.

